Romanian Ambassador to our country Constantin Iftodi spoke next at the meeting. He said: I assure you that the relations of warm fraternal friendship and multilateral cooperation between Romania and Korea will constantly develop for the cause of socialism, peace and progress in our two countries and the world.

The Romanian people are following with keen interest the successes made by the Korean agricultural working people in the endeavours to carry out the magnificent program of grand nature remaking and attain the 15 million tons of grain production under the wise leadership of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Il-song.

The ambassador wished the Korean people greater success in the struggle for the development and prosperity of the country and for national reunification.

LOCAL PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLIES HOLD SESSIONS

SK200340 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0332 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] Pyongyang, Aug 20 (KCNA) -- Sessions of the provincial, city and county people's assemblies were held. The sessions were attended by deputies to the provincial, city and county people's assemblies.

The sessions discussed the problem of thoroughly implementing the policy speech "Tasks of the People's Government in Modelling the Whole of Society on the Chuche Idea" made by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at a joint meeting of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

The chairmen of the provincial, city and county people's committees made reports and deputies spoke at the sessions. The reporters and speakers said that in the historic policy speech the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gave a comprehensive exposition of the mission and tasks of the people's government in modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea, the essence and historic necessity of the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, important tasks arising in socialist economic construction and the problem of defending the chajusong (independence) of the country and the nation and making the whole world independent and strategic and tactical policies arising in the building of communism and in the carrying out of the cause of chajusong and ways for their implementation.

The reporters and speakers pointed out that the great leader with an extraordinary intelligence and outstanding insight propounded a unique idea and theory on the construction of the people's government on the basis of profound principles of the chuche idea and led the people's government to powerfully wage the struggle for realising the chajusong of the working masses by enhancing its function and role in each period of the developing revolution.

They proudly pointed to the fact that under the wise guidance of the great leader and the glorious party the local power organs have been strengthened and developed into revolutionary and popular power organs firmly equipped with the unitary idea of the party and enhanced their function as power organs and their role as economic organiser and cultural educator, thereby pushing forward the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, and bringing about great changes in socialist economic construction.

The sessions stressed the need to actively struggle for implementing the policy speech of the great leader, upholding it, and thus accelerate the modelling of the whole society on the chuche idea and the final victory of our revolution, and proposed steps for this.

The sessions adopted relevant decisions.

REMINISCENCES OF KIM IL-SONG STRUGGLE PUBLISHED

[Text] Pyongyang, August 17 (KCNA) -- The publishing house of the Workers Party of Korea brought out the allround reminiscences "Forty Years of Creation and Construction Under Red Sunrays" (Vols. 1,2,3,4,5) dealing with the history of the revolutionary struggle of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song after the liberation.

The authors of the reminiscences are Comrades Kim Il, Kang Yang-uk, O Chin-u, Yi Chong-ok, Pak Song-chol, Choe Hyon, Yim Chun-chu, O Paek-yong, Kim Chung-nin, Kim Yong-nam, Chon Mun-sop, Hyon Mu-kwang, Yi [illegible]-sol and Kim Man-kum.

The first volume covers the historical period from August 1945 to June 1950, the second volume from June 1950 to July 1953, the third volume from July 1953 to September 1961, the fourth volume from September 1961 to October 1966 and the fifth volume from October 1966 to October 1970.

The first volume, covering the period of peaceful construction, recounts how the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded a revolutionary party of new type and the republic after the liberation, built modern regular armed forces, organised mass organisations and enforced democratic reforms and how wisely he organised and led the struggle for the consolidation of the democratic base and the reunification and independence of the country.

The second volume deals with the fact that he exploded the myth about the "mightiness" of U.S. imperialism and sent it downhill by leading the fatherland liberation war to victory by his original strategy and tactics and outstanding leadership art.

It is recounted in the third volume that he indicated the original line of economic construction on giving priority to the development of heavy industry with simultaneous development of light industry and agriculture after the war and wisely organised and led the struggle for its implementation, and it writes about the Chollima movement in our country and the socialist transformation of the production relations.

Dealt with in the fourth volume is the fact that he spread the bright prospect of the 7-year plan at the historic Fourth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea and led to victory the struggle for its successful fulfilment and the overseas compatriots movement.

In the fifth volume the authors write that he victoriously led the fulfilment of the historic task of socialist industrialisation, pushing aside the new war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, by accelerating economic construction and increasing the national defence capabilities in conformity with the obtaining situation, and wisely organised and led the struggle for accelerating the victory of the South Korean revolution and the world revolution.

The allround reminiscences "Forty Years of Creation and Construction Under Red Sunrays" is a textbook showing the unique idea and theory of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song giving most correct answers to all the theoretical and practical problems arising in the democratic revolution and socialist revolution and in the course of building socialism and communism and the shining successes and precious experiences attained by the Korean people in the struggle for their realisation.

KYONGHYANG SINUMN VIEWS U.S.-PRC COMMUNIQUE

[Editorial: "The Second Shanghai Communique and the Korean Peninsula -- Our Interest in the Fact that the Taiwan Question Has Become Part of China's Internal Affairs"]

[Excerpts] As the question of Berlin was an important issue in Europe after World War II, so the question of Taiwan has been among the key issues in Asian politics.

The Taiwan question stems from U.S. failure in carrying out its Asian strategy. Whenever the Taiwan question has been raised, the United States has been unable to deal with it. In the 1972 Shanghai Communique, the United States made it possible to view Taiwan as another China by politically confirming the existence of Taiwan. On the basis of the Shanghai Communique, the United States has maintained awkward relations with Taiwan. In other words, in the course of pursuing its diplomatic strategy to end the Vietnam war, the United States has tried to deal with the China question by using U.S.-Communist China relations as a fait accompli. This attempt was made to bolster U.S. world strategy by recognizing international issues involving the possibility of a dispute as a fait accompli.

The Reagan administration made it clear in the joint communique that it will not interfere in the Taiwan issue. This is understood as a step to accept the Taiwan question, whose solution is not to be found in the Shanghai Communique, as a fait accompli. This step indicates U.S. strategy toward Communist China -- regarding the Taiwan question as China's internal affair -- became official.

The question of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan no longer was a critical issue. To drive a wedge into the U.S. policy of arms sales to Taiwan as a way to deal with the China question, Beijing has made it a hot issue. This was Beijing's tactic.

The second Shanghai Communique has created another detente in relations between the United States and Red China. The new detente is expected to affect the development of relations among the United States, Red China and the Soviet Union. In particular, we must notice the effect of the new detente on Northeast Asian politics. We understand that in case any change should occur in relations among the United States, Red China and the Soviet Union, we should watch their stand toward the Korean Peninsula.

It is necessary to recall the development of ties between North and South Korea in the wake of the rapid progress of detente among the United States, Red China and the Soviets in the 1970's. In connection with the Taiwan question, which has been officially regarded as part of China's internal affairs, our major concern is focused on whether any rapid change will take place in the question of the Korean Peninsula. Our basic assertion is that the question of the Korean Peninsula should never be raised or changed in accord with the interests of neighboring powers and their need to advance detente.

As far as the question of the Korean Peninsula is concerned, it should be resolved by our own will for unification. We stress this point in connection with the second Shanghai communique.

MEASURES TO REDUCE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN SOUGHT

[Text] The government is now preparing a package of bold measures designed to reduce the chronic trade deficit with Japan, it was learned yesterday. Among the steps may be a total ban on the importation of certain products from the neighboring country, government sources said. The same sources said that the government will make public the steps within this month.

The nation can't afford to remain idle over the huge amounts of trade imbalance with Japan which have aggregated to $22.8 billion last May from 1966 when the two nations resumed diplomatic relations. The sources drew attention to the face that Taiwan has recently imposed a total import ban on many consumer products made in Japan in an effort to rectify the growing trade gap with Japan.

While Japan has recently taken a series of market-opening measures in favor of industrial countries like the United States, it shows no signs of improving the trade imbalance with developing countries, including Korea, trade officials said. Trade industry sources also alleged that Japan levies more than twice the import duties on Korean products than it imposes on products from industrial countries. Besides, the neighboring country imposes numerous nontariff barriers on imports from Korea such as import quotas and administrative guidance.

The need to reduce, and if possible, eliminate the trade gap with Japan is more strongly felt than before as merchandise exports, crucial to the Korean economy, are slumping these days. Commodity exports have been in the doldrums during the first five months of this year. Foreign sales declined during June and July, worrying the government's trade officers to a great extent. It was for this reason that the government had to modify its export goal for this year from $24.5 to $25 billion to around $23 billion. Indications, however, are that the nation will be unable to achieve even the reduced target.

Chea Sim Closing Speech

[Text] Phnom Penh, 20 Aug (SPK) -- The third session of the National Assembly ended its work today after having unanimously voted, among other things, for the law on the investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens, and the law on the protection of state property.

The presidium members included, among others, Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly; Heng Samrin, chairman of the Council of State; Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Say Phuthang, vice chairman of the Council of State; Bou Thang, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; and Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning. Also present at the meeting were members of the diplomatic corps accredited to Kampuchea.

National Assembly Chairman Chea Sim delivered a closing speech. He said:

The National Assembly has heard reports on the activities carried out since its second session by the Council of State, the National Assembly steering committee, various National Assembly commissions and deputies from various constituencies.

Although they are new to their work, the state organs and National Assembly deputies have accomplished their tasks according to the provisions of the Constitution and have achieved satisfactory successes.

The National Assembly has discussed and unanimously adopted the draft law on the protection of state property and the draft law on the examination and settlement of complaints and denunciations filed by citizens. It has also achieved some of its tasks. In adopting these draft laws, it has stressed the responsibility of cadres and the people for consolidating the basis of public finances and the national budget. State organs and economic bases must strengthen economic management with a view to improving it. Cadres and people must practice thrift and protect public property. All citizens have the duty to effect savings within the national budget.

In adopting the draft law on the examination and settlement of citizens' complaints and denunciations, the National Assembly, moreover, has enacted a complementary measure that will guarantee the citizens' legitimate right and interests in further cleansing the organs of power and eradicating the habits of intimidating and oppressing the people. These are necessary resolutions that reflect the wishes of the people.

The National Assembly has also heard and approved the report on the sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, the Kampuchean-Vietnamese agreement relating to historical waters and other diplomatic activities of the PRK.

The National Assembly is pleased with the great successes that have been achieved in all domains over the past 7 months. The situation in the country is becoming increasingly stable, its revival more marked, the revolutionary forces more consolidated and the strategic alliance among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and international solidarity are flourishing. Meanwhile, our enemies have experienced one failure after another.

Our enemies still exist. They still cherish many dreams and ambitions. Serious consequences caused by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime cannot be completely overcome in a short period of time.

To participate in achieving victory for the fatherland, as members of the National Assembly, it is necessary for us, after this session, to make more contacts with the voters and seek to understand the aspirations of the masses and the real situation in the country. We must, together with party cadres, authorities and mass organizations, strive to educate the people, develop their initiative and sense of responsibility, answer all their just proposals in a timely manner, continue to stimulate all revolutionary mass movements vigorously and achieve effectively the following great objectives during the last months of 1982:

1. We must enhance our vigilance, avoid subjectivism and negligence and foil all enemy maneuvers during the coming rainy and dry seasons.

2. We must develop rainy season production in order to increase both the cultivated area and output and successfully implement the economic, cultural and health plans. We must inculcate in cadres and people the spirit of relying on themselves and avoiding he who runs to others for help. We must develop production, practice strict economy and protect public property. More than ever, it is necessary to make everyone understand the following slogan: "To produce is to love the fatherland; to practice economy is to love the people."

3. We must make every effort to organize and strengthen state institutions, the armed forces, security forces and mass organizations so that they truly belong to the people because they are created by the people and for the people. We must strengthen the districts, communes and villages.

4. We must further develop the friendship and strategic alliance among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and strengthen solidarity with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. The Chinese expansionists-hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and reactionaries within the Thai ruling circles, are striving to undertake more perfidious maneuvers and their lackeys -- Pol Pot, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann -- have formed a so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. But they all will certainly meet with lamentable defeat.

KAMPUCHEA SCORES ASEAN CALL TO SUPPORT CGDK

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "The Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea Farce Can Deceive No One" -- date not given]

[Summary] Following liberation day on 7 January 1979, the Democratic Kampuchean regime's secret was exposed to the world, that is, the barbarous and inhuman massacre of our Kampuchean people by the Democratic Kampuchean leaders. Progressive opinion throughout the world strongly condemned the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime for this crime. On the other hand, the international reactionaries -- the hegemonist-expansionists in the Chinese leadership in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and a number of the ASEAN member countries -- have turned a deaf ear to this fact. They have sought by all means to conceal their crimes and have made every effort to muster all reactionary Khmers to return the genocidal regime to Kampuchea. "In fact, the formation of the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] by the three groups of the exiled reactionary Khmers is mainly aimed at realizing this criminal plan." The reactionary Khmers are making an all-out attempt to revive their lost influence in the international arena, particularly for the UN seat that they illegally occupy. However, this dark scheme is being exposed and condemned strongly by world public opinion.

Recently, progressive opinion in Thailand criticized the Thai Government for supporting and allowing the three reactionary Khmer groups to stay on Thai soil. They explained the danger arising from the three Khmer groups and called on the Thai Government to revise its policy of following in Beijing's footsteps.

"On 3 August, 4 days before the ASEAN foreign ministers met in Bangkok to map out plans for the so-called CGDK to retain their shaky seat at the United Nations, many Thai students demonstrated in front of Government House. They demanded that the Thai Government revise its policy of supporting the three traitorous Khmer groups. In their open letter to Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon, these students warned that Thailand has been dragged into a dangerous situation due to the policy of interfering in Kampuchea's internal affairs and threatened that they would intensify their protest." On 5 August, the Bangkok newspaper MATUPHUM pointed out that the Thai people dislike Sihanouk and the Khmer Rouge, that the Thai Government should not accept this person who used to oppose Thailand and that the Khmer Rouge murdered millions of Kampuchean people.

The BANGKOK POST carried a statement by Wong Phonnikon, former Thai deputy foreign minister, which criticized the Thai Government for supporting the CGDK. The Thai newspaper DAO SIAM pointed out in an article that Sihanouk is just a pawn that China is using to conceal the evil face of the Khmer Rouge.

The Indian newspaper PATRIOT said in a commentary that the CGDK is just a farce created by the imperialists and international reactionaries to conceal Pol Pot's evil face, to commit further genocidal crimes against the Kampuchean people and to obstruct the rebirth of Kampuchea.

During his visit to Beijing, the French minister of external affairs rejected the so-called CGDK. The Australian ambassador to the Philippines has said that his country has not yet decided to stop supporting this CGDK.

"Obviously, the formation of this so-called coalition government is aimed at serving China's expansionist policy and U.S. interests arising from permanent tension in Southeast Asia, obstructing the developing trend of negotiations and bringing about confrontation between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN member nations so that they can fish in troubled waters.

"As mentioned in the proposals of the sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, the three Indochinese countries have displayed their good will to solve regional problems through negotiations free from outside intervention. The primary measure that should be taken is that the Thai authorities must accept the proposal for the establishment of a safety zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border and disarm all reactionary Khmer soldiers.

"The statement issued in Bangkok on 7 August by the ASEAN foreign ministers which called for international support for the so-called CGDK is just useless ballyhoo aimed at protecting the Democratic Kampuchean corpse's shaky seat at the United Nations and regaining its lost seat at the Nonaligned Movement. This desperate appeal is not the solution. On the contrary, it will only create an impasse that brings about greater tension.

"The Kampuchean people totally reject this statement by the ASEAN foreign ministers' conference, strongly condemn this new attempt to interfere in Kampuchea's internal affairs and reaffirm that the PRK Government is the sole authentic and legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people."

OVERFLIGHTS, SHELLINGS BY THAI FORCES REPORTED

IENG THIRITH RECEIVES VISITING DANISH DELEGATION

BK200458 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] A Danish delegation [name indistinct] headed by Miss (Khonae Erika) and made up of six members, including (Bungaard Denieh), member of the committee for support for Democratic Kampuchea, visited our Democratic Kampuchea from 11 to 15 August 1982.

On the afternoon of 12 August, Mrs Ieng Thirith, chairman of the Democratic Kampuchea Red Cross, received and had a cordial conversation with the delegation at Democratic Kampuchean offices. Also present at the meeting were some Democratic Kampuchean cadres.

During their stay in our Democratic Kampuchea, the friendly guests visited Phum Chambak, Phum Sangke and Phum Chamka Chek. They met and talked to the villagers and our cadres in charge of the villages. They were greatly impressed by the Democratic Kampuchean Government's efforts to improve the living conditions of the Kampuchean people who could not tolerate the oppression, arrests and massacres committed by the Vietnamese enemy and fled from their hometowns to live in these new villages, or those who have returned from the refugee camps to live in Democratic Kampuchea -- their beloved fatherland.

The Danish friends were impressed by the plants and rice that our people planted on small plots in a guerrilla manner.

The friendly delegation ended its visit to Democratic Kampuchea and left safely for home on 15 August.

NOUHAK PHOUMSAVAN MEETS SRV JUSTICE DELEGATION

BK181337 Vientiane KPL in English 0910 GMT 18 Aug 82

On this occasion, N. Phoumsavan warmly welcomed the Vietnam justice delegation which has brought along to the Lao people warm sentiments of genuine solidarity and fraternal friendship. The special relations between the parties, governments, and peoples of the two countries, [which] no enemies can foil, have not only been fruitfully consolidated but have also bound the special fraternal alliance between Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea. This special alliance has contributed to the safeguard of independence of each country, noted Nouhak Phoumsavan. The first vice-premier seized this opportunity to convey his fraternal sentiments through the Vietnam justice minister to the Vietnamese leaders.

Phan Hien, in return, informed the first vice-premier [of the] success of his official visit to Laos. The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of solidarity and cordiality.

LEADERS SEND GREETINGS TO FIDEL CASTRO ON BIRTHDAY

["Text" of greetings message from Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, and Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR and the Supreme People's Council, to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba and president of the Councils of State and Ministers -- dated 13 August]

[Text] On the occasion of your 55th birthday, on behalf of the LPRP, the Supreme People's Council, the LPDR Government and the entire Lao people, we would like to extend wholehearted congratulations and warm greetings to you.

During the long period of the revolutionary struggle and the cause of socialist construction in the Republic of Cuba, the heroic Cuban people, under the leadership of the Communist Party of Cuba led by you, have recorded all-round great successes, thereby heightening the status and role of the Republic of Cuba in the international arena and contributing to strengthening the night of the socialist community.

The Lao people regard you as their close friend and a staunch internationalist. Moreover, you have performed great, meritorious deeds in your international task and given positive support to the revolutionary causes of the world's people struggling against imperialism and reactionary forces and for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

We are very happy to have observed that, thanks to your important contributions, the fraternal relations of friendship, military solidarity and close cooperation between the two parties and peoples of Laos and Cuba have been strengthened and developed with each passing day. We wish you, comrade, good health, happiness, a long life and new success in carrying out your lofty tasks.

PROTEST AGAINST SRV INCURSIONS LODGED AT UN

BK190415 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 19 Aug 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Thailand has formally charged Vietnam in a protest note to the United Nations with landing a helicopter in Na Chaluay District of Ubon Ratchathani to deliver military supplies to "communist saboteurs."

In a note submitted to UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar last week, Thailand's permanent representative to the UN, M.L. Birabhongse Kasemsri accused Hanoi of supplying assistance to pro-Hanoi communist elements in the northeast. The note said the incident was one of the three violations of Thai airspace committed by Vietnamese forces during May and June, this year. The two other incidents occurred in the vicinity of Chanthaburi and Trat Provinces on the Thai-Kampuchean border, the Thai protest note said.

Birbabhongse, acting at the instruction of the Thai Government, also charged that Vietnamese forces had more than 20 times crossed the Thai-Kampuchean border during the same period. "In many cases, the Vietnamese intruders would retreat only after having clashed with Thai forces assigned to defend the Thai territorial integrity...," he said. He said that several hundreds of artillery shells fired by Vietnamese troops from the other side of the border landed on Thai soil in 20 incidents, resulting in the losses of the lives and property of Thai villagers on the border areas.

Vietnamese-manned fishing trawlers also violated Thai waters more than three times during the period and in one of the incidents captured three Thai fishing boats, he charged. He added that the Thai fishing trawlers were still confiscated in Kampuchea, though their crew members had been released.

"These incidents constitute further evidence of blatant and premediated violations of Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity despite repeated Vietnamese statements that Thailand's border would be respected," the note said. He added that the violations showed that Vietnam is attempting to drag Thailand into the continued armed conflicts in Kampuchea. "The Royal Thai Government strongly condemns these unprovoked and deliberate acts of hostility committed by the Vietnamese occupation force in Kampuchea and reaffirms its legitimate rights to undertake all measures necessary to safeguard Thai sovereignty and territorial integrity," the note said.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach threatened during his visits to three ASEAN countries last month to support pro-Hanoi communist insurgency movements in the countries. Thai intelligence officials had earlier reported that Vietnam and Laos had supported a Phak Mai party which had broken away from the Communist Party of Thailand which is using Laotian soil as the springboard to carry out subversive activities in Thailand. Phak Nai's elements are now reportedly active in the northeast, particularly in Nakhon Panom Province, according to intelligence reports.

CLASHES, SHELLINGS CITED ON KAMPUCHEAN BORDER

BK190837 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] After being withdrawn 5-10 km from the Thai border earlier, since the end of July the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops have again moved back to the Thai border, particularly in Samraong District, Oddar Meanchey Province, and Popipot and Thmar Puok Districts, Battambang Province. This movement of Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops close to the Thai border indicates that there is a plan of action aimed against the Kampuchean resistance forces in the area. The movement of troops so close to the Thai border forces us to step up our vigilance.

Thai military intelligence has been expecting a major battle in Kampuchea since the end of July. In late July the Kampuchean resistance forces launched an attack against the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops at the camp at Ban (Soriya) and captured it. However, the next day Vietnamese troops, supported by artillery, retook Ban (Soriya). This clash at Ban (Soriya) was a major battle, resulting in heavy casualties on both sides. On about 10 August, a battalion of Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops -- about 200 men -- attacked a Kampuchean resistance command post in Choam Khsan District, which is opposite Thailand's Kantharalak District of Sisaket Province. The attackers captured many weapons. The fighting spread to the Thai border, but Thai troops were able to prevent it from spilling into Thai territory. In any event, about 50 Kampucheans fled to Thailand, where they are now under Thai custody.

In addition to these two major clashes, there has been continued small-scale fighting in Kampuchea near the Thai border since the end of July, particularly in Battambang and Preah Vihear Provinces and in Pailin.

The fighting in Kampuchea has always resulted in shells falling in Thai territory and damage to Thai property to a certain extent. Thailand has provided relief to its affected people and has protested the incidents. It has retaliated on every occasion when shells from Kampuchea have fallen in its territory. The retaliation ranged from first firing smoke shells as a warning, to mortar and artillery shelling if firing from Kampuchea persisted. Several shells from Kampuchea landed in Ban Mai Rut and Ban Khao Lan in early August.

Border Forces on Alert

[Text] Thai forces along the Kampuchean border have been ordered on the alert to prevent any skirmish between the Heng Samrin troops and Pol Pot's Khmer resistance forces from spilling inside the Thai border, Assistant Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek said yesterday. He said the encounters between the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin forces and Khmer Rouge guerrillas led by Pol Pot along the Thai-Kampuchea border have escalated considerably of late. Heavy fighting between the two Khmer factions was reported at Phnum Mak Houn.

Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani and Gen Athit visited army camps in Prachin Buri on Monday. Gen Athit, who is acting commander of the First Army Region, reported that several houses near the border were hit by mortar shells which caused extensive damage. He added that about 200 to 300 Kampucheans fled the area and entered Thailand at Ban Khlong Namsai. Gen Athit said, however, that the situation there was under control because the Thai troops were on alert and prepared to keep the two warring Kampuchean factions inside their border.

According to a recent report the Soviet Union had been stepping up its shipment of arms to Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea.

Khmer Rouge Group Pushed Back

[Text] More than 200 armed Khmer Rouge soldiers entered Thai territory in order to join Sihanouk's forces, according to our interrogation. I believe the NATION REVIEW report says the number of the Khmer Rouge was about 100, but actually the number was more than 200.

We could not allow them to transit our territory because it is our policy not to be involved in any way in the fighting or to support any Khmer group and we therefore pushed them back across the border. Those that had already entered our territory were disarmed and pushed out of the country. They can use routes inside Kampuchea to go wherever they want to go.

Khmer Serei Camp Attacked

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- A Kampuchean villager was killed and four others wounded when a Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin force attacked a Khmer Serei camp some 20 kilometres south of Ta Phraya Wednesday morning. Stray artillery and mortar shells which landed in the middle of a Thai border village of San Sa-Ngae also wounded a Thai villager and caused damage to several houses.

A Thai military source said there were about 20,000 people in the Khmer Serei camp at Ban Kralo on the Kampuchean side of the border opposite to Ban Sa-Ngae during the time of the attack which started about 10 a.m. The camp was under the command of Son Sann, one of the three Kampuchean resistance coalition leaders.

One of the Kampucheans in the camp was killed and four others wounded when one of the shells from the attacking force landed and exploded in the camp about three kilometres away from the Thai border. The wounded were later sent to a hospital operated by Italian medical staff in Ta Phraya District, the source said.

More than 250 Thai villagers at Sa-Ngae had to temporarily evacuate their homes when several stray artillery shells landed in their village, wounding one male villager and killing a number of their livestock. The explosions also caused a fire which destroyed one house and damaged seven others. Local military and police authorities and district officials led by Ta Phraya District Officer Phalakon Suwannarat later visited the villagers and provided them with relief supplies.

'BLACK AUGUST' MOVEMENT TARGETS LEADERS

BK190704 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 18 Aug 82 p 12

[Text] A highly placed source in the army told MATICHON that the "Black August" movement [not further identified] has targeted the following three government leaders: Gen Prem Tinsulanon, Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek and Commander of the 1st Army Division Maj Gen Phichit Kunlawanit. The government has issued a confidential order for stepped-up security for these three persons.

The source said that the "Black August" movement does not want to take the three men's lives but wants to discredit them because they control the nation's major forces. The movement wants to show that the strong security measures for those people are not an obstacle to their operations.

ATHIT VIEWS ARMY APPOINTMENTS, GRENADE INCIDENT

[Text] Assistant Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek said yesterday that "nobody is aware just yet" who will be named army commander-in-chief. "It's all up to the superiors to decide," he said.

Gen Athit, who has been strongly tipped to assume the top post in the army as of Oct 1, this year, was asked what he thought about the qualifications of Army Chief-of-Staff Gen Pamot Thawonchan, who is known to be a possible candidate for the top army slot.

Athit replied: "I have said it many times. And I'll say it again: The decision is up to the superiors. I personally think Gen Pramot is a good and suitable person. As for myself, I am simply performing my duty to the best of my ability."

Gen Athit, asked by reporters about a BBC commentary that the grenade-throwing at Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon's residence Sunday night might have stemmed from the contest for the top army post, said: "How could a foreign broadcasting commentator know better than us Thais? The Thai mass media haven't even mentioned that point. How could people outside the army know better than those in the army? It's all up to the supreme commander, the army commander-in-chief and the defence minister."

Gen Athit said that the investigation into the grenade-throwing incident is being conducted by police "while the army is providing assistance in the form of feeding the necessary information." Asked about the accusation that he might have been behind the incident, Gen Athit appeared angry. He declared: "That's a very crazy accusation. Why should I do it? But I'm not the least bit concerned about those allegations."

Gen Athit, meanwhile, reported that the crime rate had been on the decline since the joint military-police patrols had been initiated in Bangkok. Gen Athit, in his capacity as Bangkok's peace-keeping director, said that he is in support of the proposal to amend existing laws to strictly control the possession of war weapons.

NATION REVIEW Editorial

[Editorial: "One Theory We Hope Will Be Proved Wrong"]

[Text] Former Prime Minister Kriangsak Chamanan might have been indulged in too simplistic an analysis in urging that Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon should name the new army commander-in-chief as soon as possible to "defuse the ongoing tension." But then, he might have hit the nail on the head, what with his thorough background in the military establishment.

Either way, the implication from the former premier was that Sunday night's grenade-throwing at Gen Prem's Si Sao Thewes residence was somehow directly linked to the imminent annual military reshuffle, a line of speculation which has been raised by people from certain circles. Premier Prem himself has not dismissed that theory outright although political and military motives could hardly be separated in this hotchpotch of interlinked personality conflicts and pressure groups.

It would, however, be a sad reflection of the country's state of affairs indeed if Gen Kriangsak's theory proves to be valid. It would have meant that we had come to accept the fact that the post of army commander-in-chief is so much sought after and is related to so much power that it becomes the centre of revenge, lobbying, secret manipulation and even outright violence, on almost an annual basis. Somehow, we have allowed the mentality of the country's power being centered on one particular army position to prevail in the society. It has, in fact, become a source of political and military instability in the past few years -- so much so that coups were plotted and crushed over the person who would be taking over that post.

Why should the whole country's fate rest with one single position in the army? The answer lies in the traditional mistake of over-concentration of powers within the army hierarchy. Like most government agencies, few people want to suggest changes in the status quo simply because the powers are simply overwhelming and the temptations are too strong to resist to keep things the old way, despite all the weaknesses and drawbacks that have haunted the system.

We shudder to think that the annual military reshuffle has again caused jitters and subjected the people of this country to the threat of deafening violence over this shameful and reckless jockeying for powers.

After the sound of the grenade explosion died down, some people started to talk about how foreign countries would view Thailand in a negative way. Forget about how others would look at us. Let's take a good, long look at ourselves and ask this very vital question: Why attach excessive importance to the army top post when we have been calling for de-centralization of powers from every other government agency?

DEFECTOR'S HELICOPTER RETURNED TO LAOS

[Text] Thailand has returned to Laos a Soviet made ML-8 helicopter flown to a northeastern Thai airbase by a defecting Lao pilot last May. A Lao team arrived in Ubon Ratchathani Province on Monday to claim the seized helicopter and fly it back to Laos.

A Thai military officer says that Thailand decided to return the seized helicopter to Laos in an attempt to help improve relations between the two countries. He, however, says that the Lao pilot who flew the helicopter to Thailand will be detained for illegal entry because he has sought political asylum in the country.

FOREIGN MINISTER SITTHI POSTPONES TRIP TO MANILA

[Text] Foreign Minister of Thailand Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila has postponed his trip to the Philippines as his counterpart Carlos Romulo has taken ill. The Thai foreign minister was originally scheduled to visit the Philippines for talks with Romulo and other senior Philippine Government officials on the Kampuchean problem during 18-20 August. The visit would be arranged at the invitation of the Philippine foreign minister.

One of the topics to be discussed during his planned visit is how to cope with the visit of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to the Philippines. Nguyen Co Thach is tentatively scheduled to visit the Philippines and Indonesia in October. He had earlier toured the three ASEAN countries of Thailand, Malaysia and Singapore.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN: CGDK TRYING TO 'REVIVE CORPSE'

BK191041 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] Beijing and Washington, together with other bad elements, are now trying to revive the political corpse of the Khmer reactionaries by forming the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK]. Their corpse-reviving scheme was designed to deceive public opinion into believing that the political corpse was really coming to life and to conceal the real face of the coalition government, which in fact is under the leadership of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique.

In this scheme, they also boast about the so-called unity among the Khmer reactionary factions as if they were not competing for power over the Kampuchean people. The scheme is also aimed at giving a cosmetic face lift to the Pol Pot genocidal clique in hopes of keeping the Kampuchean people's seat in the United Nations for it.

Beijing and Washington, together with their colleagues, hope that their propaganda campaign for the ghost government will gain more support for Sihanouk, who sold himself to the Pol Pot genocidal clique during 1975 and 1978, and make him look like an important person among the Kampuchean people. However, all of Beijing and Washington's tricks and schemes deceive no one. No magic power of China and the U.S. imperialists or other international reactionary forces can conceal the real face of the reactionary clique.

Public opinion is aware that the so-called tripartite coalition government was set up under Beijing's expansionist policy. Without money and weapons from Beijing, Sihanouk's ghost government will fall apart, and animosity will return to the three factions. Sihanouk is merely a leading star in the farce.

According to the FRG's DPA news agency, public opinion has correctly assessed Sihanouk's role as a roving ambassador of the Khmer Rouge. Indonesia's MERDEKA newspaper noted that the so-called Kampuchean Coalition Government was set up by comedians who have been trying in vain to form a military alliance for the Khmer reactionaries in order to distort the political situation and create more tension. Beijing, Washington and the ASEAN countries have colluded with each other to form, support, arm and try to legitimize the coalition government to wage a new type of war in Indochina by using it as a trump card against the Kampuchean people.

New clothes will not do the corpse any good. Those who are thinking of depending on the CGDK can never change the true nature of so-called Democratic Kampuchea, although they pretend to give Sihanouk power and call it a coalition government.

The Kampuchean situation is irreversible. At present, the People's Republic of Kampuchea has its own parliament and government elected by the people. The Kampuchean people's livelihood is being improved, and the revolution in Kampuchea is quite stable and cannot be destroyed by any power. This is the truth that has been accepted by those West Europeans who have visited Kampuchea.

The formation of the so-called coalition government by Beijing, Washington and ASEAN reactionaries is only a reaction to their defeat over the past 3 years and is a scheme to maintain the tense situation so that they can easily penetrate deeper into this region to destroy the peace, stability and security of all countries in this part of the world.

NHAN DAN MARKS AUGUST REVOLUTION ANNIVERSARY

[NHAN DAN 19 August editorial: "The Spirit and Will of the August Revolution"]

[Text] Regaining national and human dignity is the greatest achievement of revolutionary struggle. The commemorative day 19 August marks the decisive tuning point in Vietnam's history which led to an unprecedented change in the life of every Vietnamese. We spent thousands of years writhing under feudalism and almost a century under colonialism before we could stand up and smash those yokes and regain our national independence and people's democracy. The party of the Vietnamese working class had to spend almost 2 decades in revolutionary struggle before it could master the science and art of leading the uprising to win power and carry out the model people's national and democratic revolution triumphantly in a colonial and semifeudal country.

Experiences drawn from the August general uprising were valuable lessons in the struggles against the French and U.S. imperialists and the heroic struggle against the Chinese expansionist aggressors. Every step of our revolution has always encountered the strong opposition of our enemies from within and without.

The dynamic and creative August revolutionary offensive spirit encouraged our entire party, people and armed forces to maintain their correct line and indomitable force which enabled them to overcome numerous difficulties and ordeals to protect and develop the revolutionary gainstand defeat the forces of the leading, violent and cruel aggressors. The history of our nation has recorded these great and historic victories which have provided a new and unprecedented opportunity for the development of the Vietnamese people.

After the August revolution, our people spent 3 more decades in heroic and bloody struggle to fulfill the complete liberation of the nation and the unification of the fatherland. The cause of liberation could only be gained by flesh and blood. Millions of our beloved compatriots and cadres in many generations took turns in bravely sacrificing their lives for national independence and for leading the country toward socialism. Their struggle was imbued with a rising impetus which advanced viorously despite hardships and sacrifice. This impetus developed further into an imvincible force which could fulfill our just cause -- the cause that brilliantly shines forever. This great impetus was displayed in the August general uprising, in the two struggles for national liberation and in the war to defend the fatherland. It is now being maintained and developed for the cause of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland and to cope with new difficulties and ordeals to lead the country to further advance.

The VCP and the Vietnamese people have undergone many ordeals and gained ample experience. When the revolution is obstructed by strong waves of opposition, they must close their ranks singlemindedly. This is the most vital factor for victory. Worry, fear and agitation are signs of weakness and causes of failure. This lesson and impetus has helped us to integrate ourselves in struggle and production in order to triumphantly implement the Fifth VCP Congress resolutions.

The socialist revolutionary line set forth and developed by the two recent VCP congresses is the sole and correct line guaranteeing all victories for our nation's revolution in the new stage.

Carrying out the party's line and turning it into the people's line, turning the VCP congress resolutions into reality and overcoming all erronous phenomena are the main tasks for all of us.

In our party's current political activities drive, each locality, sector and grassroot unit must carry out profound criticism and self-criticism concerning their tasks and and concretize their duties and objectives in order to implement the party congress resolutions successfully, especially the economic and social plan for the immediate future. They must satisfactorily exploit available capabilities and potentials, overcome obstacles in organization and management, integrate all forces to develop production, practice thrift and effectively solve various urgent problems involving the people's daily life. These are emulative targets for all sectors, localities, units and individuals.

Acute difficulties await us. Progress and new factors, however, have been recorded in various aspects. Grain production has been vigorously accelerated and new impetus has emerged in the rural areas. Initial progress has been achieved in industry and many other tasks are advancing along the correct line.

Under the slogan "All for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness," and with the indomitable impetus of the August revolution, let the entire party, people and the armed forces surge forward heroically to help our socialist revolution overcome numerous temporary difficulties and advance toward new victories.

Formerly a colony under imperialism, under the party and great esteemed President Ho Chi Minh's clear-sighted leadership our people have regained independence and freedom and have become masters of an independent, unified nation with rich and multifaceted natural resources. With the wholehearted support and assistance given by fraternal and friendly countries, we are absolutely certain we will be able to build a new and splendid life and firmly protect our national independence, thereby contributing vigorously to the cause of building the socialist force and maintaining world peace.

With the determination to develop the traditional August revolution and turn the Fifth VCP Congress resolutions into reality, let us stir up a seething revolutionary movement and mobilize tens of millions of people to exploit the creativeness and the noble virtue of the working people in order to develop the combined strength of the socialist collective mastery system. We are sure to achieve success.

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION FOR LAOS REPORTED

AMBUSH ON SURVEY TEAM IN EAST JAVA REPORTED

BK191103 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0954 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] Jayapura, Aug 18 (ANTARA) -- A geological survey team of the Department of Mining and Energy was ambushed by a band of "GPK" -- insurgents in the interiors of Irian Jaya last Thursday (August 12) in which one security guard escorting the team was killed while four team members, including one Australian national, were tortured and injured.

Deputy head of the Mining and Energy Department's regional service here, Oddy Soleh, disclosed to ANTARA Wednesday that the team comprising six Indonesians and four Australians plus one indigenous security guard had been conducting a geological survey of mineral deposits in the basin of Nambramo River, Retaf Kecamatan [subdistrict] since August 4. The ambush occurred only moments after the team landed in a region near Biri River, a tributary of Mambrano, located in Irian Jaya hinterland. Soleh did not mention the size of the GPK band which staged the ambush, only saying that all the eleven people in the team were taken into the jungle.

They were released on Saturday (August 14) but the security guard, who was not identified, was killed. During their captivity, four members of the team, including Christ J. Pigram (an Australian), had been tortured. Pigram was flown to Jakarta Tuesday (August 17) for further treatment while the three other Indonesians who also suffered injuries were still being treated at a clinic at Sarmi Kecamatan.

The joint Indonesian-Australian geological survey team to conduct a survey of mineral deposits in Irian Jaya was led by Nana Ratman with members consisting of Aminuddin, Dwiatmo, Sufni Hakim, Sahat L. Tobing and Temon Suwano (on the Indonesian side) and Duncan B. Ow [as received], R. Peter William, Christ J. Pigram and Peter E. Pieters (the Australian side).

The GPK band consisted of local rebels who used to call themselves members of the so-called "Organisasi Papua Merdeka" (Papua Independence Movement).

Meanwhile, the commander of the 17th military area which covers Irian Jaya, Brig. Gen. Sembiring Meliala, confirmed the occurrence of the incident. He regretted, however, that the dispatching of a team to the interiors of Irian Jaya for geological survey activities had been done without coordination with the local regional security agency (Laksusda). The incident would unlikely have taken place if the Irian Jaya Laksusda had been duly contacted for security coordination, he said. In spite of that the commander said he would provide security troops to the team to ensure that it could continue its surveying activities safely.

POLICE CONFIRM 'TOUGH' ACTIONS IN EAST JAVA

[Text] Jakarta, Aug. 18 (AFP) -- The Indonesian police have officially confirmed that the military and police in East Java have shot 67 "criminals", of whom 12 have reportedly died, in "tough" joint operations, according to press reports here today. East Java Police Commander Major General Pamuji said that the criminals had been shot since last January, and the figures might increase, but he denied that it was revenge and dismissed allegations that operations were also directed against witchdoctors, press reports said. Informed sources said, however, that some 40 bodies had been found in recent months in the area.

General Pamuji said increased atrocities in East Java, particularly in the Jember and Bondowoso Districts, had obliged him to take "tough" measures. But he emphasized that the operations did not constitute revenge by the authorities. He said the most daring "crime" took place at the Kencong village in Jember where 10 criminals resisted the authorities and killed one soldier and badly wounded a policeman. "Soft action can no longer be used to deal with these criminals who have stepped up their atrocities," he said, adding according to one newspaper: "I am responsible for the deaths of these criminals."

The KOMPAS daily reported that people in the area of Jember "adopted a kind of shut-mouth attitude, though one and two villagers said that they had been given a target of 15 criminals to be wiped out in their village." The villagers fled on seeing strangers in their village, the paper said, adding that there men cutting grass fled when they saw the reporter approaching them.

'PETITION 50' GROUP RENEWS ATTACKS ON GOVERNMENT

[Text] Jakarta, Aug. 18 (AFP) -- The Indonesian Government has come under renewed attacks from the prominent opposition group "Petition 50" which charged that the implementation of the people's sovereignty was "regressing." In an underground leaflet releasdd here yesterday evening coinciding with the 37th anniversary of independence, a "statement of concern" addressed to the head of Parliament urged that this principle be given due attention.

The statement, signed by former Jakarta Governor Ali Sadikin on behalf of the eight signatories of the working group of Petition 50, charged that "there has been no progress in the "implementation of this principle of the people's sovereignty after 37 years of independence, 16 years of new order regime and three general elections." "An obvious regression has even occurred," the statement added, quoting the May 1982 general elections as an example.

In a previous petition, the group rejected any form of participation in the May 1982 elections alleging that they were unconstitutional because the sovereignty of the people was not respected in their representation in Parliament. Ninety-four of the 460 members of Parliament (DPR) are appointed by the president and the supreme body, the People's Congress (MPR), which can change the Constitution with two-thirds of votes, has only 40 percent of its members elected.

The so-called "national consensus" gives President Suharto the right to appoint a number of DPR and MPR members to prevent any change in the Constitution. The opponents thus accused the Parliament and the People's Congress, paralysed by the system, of acting as a mere rubberstamp of government decisions.

The Petition 50 groups, founded in 1980 and comprising some former top government officials, including a number of ministers, calls for a revision of the law which, it claims, is moving further and further away from the 1945 Constitution. However, its influence has been limited by the ban on publication and its signatories were said to have been harassed privately.

["Meet the Press" program with Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos -- live]

[Excerpts] Good evening, I'm (Tina Monson) and we would like to welcome you to the premier telecast of "Meet the Press," the presentation of the National Press Club of the Philippines, in cooperation with (Maharlika) Broadcasting System Channel 4. After an absence of almost a year, "Meet the Press" is back on the air. Tonight on this program, which is also aired nationwide on radio, we are very privileged and honored to have as guest His Excellency the President of the Philippines Ferdinand Marcos to share with us his views on affiars of national and international concern. The members of the panel are Ben Rodriguez, editor of BULLETIN TODAY and president of the National Press Club; we also have (Vick Teneda) of the TIMES JOURNAL, president of the Malacanang Press Corps; and we have (Teddy Benigno), bureau chief of the AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. Before our panelists start asking questions, may we have an opening statement from the president.

[Marcos] Well, I personally want to congratulate the National Press Club for resurrecting this [word indistinct] from the ashes of the past. Now, let me talk about the subjects that will probably be of greater interest to our people. First, what actually is my feeling; what do I feel after all these announcements about a supposed effort or plot, conspiracy to take over the government in 1983 and the preemptive actions taken by government. I say, after all the steps taken by government, I am confident that the threat against the stability of the government has been aborted and completely dissipated. Now planning and conspiring is one thing, and implementing is another thing.

Secondly, the subject of succession. Actually, if it were not for Presidential Decree No 1514, which I issued after the approval of the ratification of the constitution some time back, it would not be necessary to approve any legislation on succession. But under that decree I did refer to the possibility under section 7 of Article 7, to the effect that in case of the disqualification, death or resignation of the president, the old setup was for the speaker to take over. Now, in view of the new provisions of the constitution, you have a conflict; you therefore, have a conflict between an administrative presidential decree and a constitutional provision. It is necessary that the legislature and the lawmaking body or the president now clarify this conflict. I would prefer that that Batasang Pambansa does the clarifying. And I am very happy that the deputy prime minister, who is majority floor leader of the Batasan, has called a party caucus in chambers and they have created the body headed by the political minister, Minister Leonardo Perez, to work out a clarification of this matter.

Now, the economic situation of the country. Yes, there are many difficulties, and there is not much expectation of any sudden changes in the crisis. We have been able to maintain our unemployment at a very low level overall in the entire country, but the unemployment level in Manila is increasing. There was one time when the unemployment level rose to 30 percent in the city of Manila. It has come down to 12 percent, but is averaging 15 percent, and this is one of the highest that we have ever reached in the history of the Philippines. We now must do everything in order to encourage further employment or self-employment. And of course I speak of the fact that while we are attending to the difficulties of the big corporations, we are not forgetting the small ones. In the last survey conducted by my useful survey team, monthly, one of the reports coming back was to the effect that they don't see through the media anything about any action taken by government to help the small industries. I would like to inform you that the support given by government to small industries constitutes a major segment of budgetary expenditures; exactly 800 million pesos for instance goes into small and medium-scale industries.

All this, and now the KKK [Kilusang Kabuhayan at Kaunlaran -- national livelihood program]. We speak of the KKK starting off with 700 million pesos; actually it is 1 billion plus another 700 million, and probably another billion, and all that is going to the hands of small merchants, traders and industrialists. We are encouraging all kinds of small enterprieses. Our ultimate objective of course is a balanced agroindustrial economy. We will proceed with big industries, but we must maintain our (?pressure) and momentum also in agriculture, and that is why we are all happy about the present development in increasing rice production, and perhaps now what we see on the horizon a success in the production of corn. All our targets are going to be attained.

But what of the bad news. Of course, exports have gone down 27 percent. We have to make up for this, and to do this we must create a domestic market for some of our products, and I therefore hope that we will be able to tie up the various markets in the private sector as well as in the public sector, and this is one of the targets apparently which the Human Settlements Ministry is working on.

By and large, we are moving forward and succeeding much more than we expected considering the obstacles that we are facing. So we look to the future with great optimism. There is darkness all around us, but this is the prelude only to the dawn we expect in the immediate future. When this is going to be, of course, is dependent upon many factors and one of them is the termination of recession in such countries like, especially like the United States. It is enough to note that the interest rates in the United States have come down from 18 1/2 to 14, and the activity in the New York Stock Exchange. I was surprised yesterday to discover that there has been quite a spurt in the buying of shares and stocks in New York. And therefore, we proceed with our plans, and I must just say that the present political setup with the Executive Committee has taken over much of the powers of the president, and is working very well, and for this I congratulate the prime minister, deputy prime minister, and the members of the Executive Committee and the Cabinet who are present here; I think, most of whom are attending this particular opening of the newly-resurrected "Meet the Press." Now, I am ready for the questions.

[Moderator] Thank you, Mr President. The first question will be asked by Ben Rodriguez.

[Question] Mr President, may I thank you for praising the [words indistinct] and may I also add that for one approaching 64 you look trim and healthy and should be able to carry the burdens of the presidency many, many more years.

[Answer] Thank you, thank you for the, that's a commercial, isn't it? [laughter]

[Question] However, Mr President, you must be aware of speculation going around concerning your health. I think it was revived recently when the Batasan suddenly became interested in trying to clarify rules on succession.

[Answer] One of the reasons I accepted your invitation to this "Meet the Press" was because I wanted to appear before television to squash these rumors to the effect that Deputy Prime Minister Rono has confidential information about the health of the president [laughter] and therefore has called suddently a caucus of the party. Were you going to ask me another question?

[Answer] Well, I have just come through an executive checkup, that's what I call it, isn't it? Have you ever come through this massive thing? They don't feed you for 24 hours and they put all kinds of things into your innards [laughter], but I came out of it with flying colors; I understand they found nothing wrong with me, and they found my organs in normal order; I am supposed to be healthy enough to be able to operate normally, unless stricken suddenly with some injury or wound. I exercise regularly. In fact, if it were not for this I would be playing golf right now, but every morning I still go through my regimen of gymnastics and jogging of 30 minutes, which I did this morning. They take my blood pressure 3 times a day -- it was 116 over 78; just before I came here, it was 114 over 76.

It is quite true that the health of the president is important, I agree. I have no doubt that there are some people, some of my enemies, are praying for my illness and worse, but I guess man proposes, God disposes. Whatever we may brag about, the thing is, I suppose God knows best; if God wills that I live long, I will live long. As of now, I feel like I will.

[Moderator] Mr (Benigno).

[Question] Mr President, I would like to switch the conversation to the subject of succession. You recently appointed Madame Imelda Marcos as a member of the Executive Committee together with three other personalities. The speculation is gaining ground, Mr President, that the appointment of Madame Marcos as a member of the Executive Committee is just one step away from eventually designating her as the prime minister of the republic, and that consequently, if anything should happen to you personally, then she would be in the most favorable position to succeed to the presidency. Would you kindly grant us your insight on the subject, Mr President?

[Answer] This is the first time I hear it; in fact, you are the one who is articulating it, but I presume that you are articulating something that is in the minds of some people. Now, look, if you will study this whole thing you will find that I have refused to appoint the first lady to the position that many of the members of the ruling party wanted her to be appointed to. From the very beginning, the KBL [Kilusang Bagong Lipunan] insisted that the first lady be appointed prime minister, and I refused. You remember that there was a big row, and who was it, Governor (Otela), Minister (Ingles), the Batsan and others stood up and practically took up the whole caucus insisting that she be designated immediately as prime minister, and I told them, no, it is not our intention to designate or appoint the first lady as prime minister, and I stood back and insisted that the prime minister appointee, now Minister Cesar Virata, be chosen, and which was seconded also by the first lady, and we won.

Now, I also insisted that the first lady be not included in the membership of the Executive Committee. Why? Because the Executive Committee is supposed to be the training ground of the new generation of leaders. Now, the first lady is getting training directly from me [laughter], she lives with me, she knows all my thoughts and ideas; she doesn't need to be a member of the Executive Committee to get any training for leadership, because she practically knows what is happening in my office, and therefore I did not believe it was necessary for her to become a member of the Executive Committee. But the KBL thought that perhaps it was necessary that the women's group, this side of our society, should be represented, and so they insisted and adopted a resolution, you know, and the caucus mandates and orders, and even the president cannot refuse such a mandate. This is one thing that our people must learn: We are now in a modified parliamentary system of government. We talk about decisionmaking; we talk about the president making decisions and all that, but the truth of the matter is that decisions are made in a consensus through a caucus.

I believe that the plan is to appoint more and more young men and more women into the Executive Committee. The plan is to stagger the ages of the Executive Committee and develop various echelons of leadership, and we will then rotate the members in the Executive Committee.

[Question] Mr President, since the law on succession is prescribed in the Constitution, and the Constitution is the organic and fundamental law of the land, what is the point in having the law on succession restudied by the Batasan?

[Answer] Because, if the Supreme Court is called upon to interpret on Presidential Decree 1514 and Sections 4 and 7 of Article 7 of the Constitution, you might have a conflict between legislative intention and Supreme Court interpretation; and you know that from my point of view, legislative intention should be supreme. The legislative intention should always be clarified. Remember, this is not the original provision of the Constitution, so now the question that arises is what was the intention of the party in power when is amended the Constitution? And this is something to be clarified, therefore, by the party in power. Through what? Through the president issuing another decree amending or replacing Presidential Decree 1514? No, it must be legislation and approved by the Batasang Pambansa. At least I would prefer it that way. But, if the caucus or the legislature insist, I will, because we have to clarify the intention in amending the Constitution. For instance, what are the powers of the Executive Committee when it takes over in case of death, disqualification, removal or resignation of the president? Are they caretaker powers? Are they interregnum government powers, or can they change policies? For instance, can they rescind treaties, agreements? Can they declare martial law? You cannot answer that by just reading the Constitution. You have to look through the interpretation, and for how long, and who exercises it, and what vote? Suppose many of them refuse to participate in the voting, and out of the 11 only 5 attend the vote, what happens? Now all of this [words indistinct] regulations, otherwise, you will be in limbo and you will have public chaos, conflict and possibly violence.

[Question by unidentified person] There seems to be growing concern about the possibility of a second round of martial law. I think it was heightened by the recent arrests of labor leaders following the discovery of a plot to overthrow the government by violent means in 1983. My question, Mr President, is do you think these events now pose a clear and present danger for you to think seriously about the imposition of martial law?

[Answer] No, I don't think so. I said in my opening statement that with the preemptive action taken by the government and with the counteraction that has been adopted, plus, of course, the fact that we have the powers provided for under amendment No 6 of the amendment of October 1976, which provides the president in case of any emergency [words indistinct]. I don't think there is any need for the imposition of martial law. First of all, let me go back to my opening statement. I said we have, I believe, aborted and dissipated the threat, if it existed at all, against the stability of the republic. Now that's quite clear, and I say it in quotes. By taking preemptive action, There's no [word indistinct] action at all, and by announcing the fact that we know there is a plot, and we know more or less who are in that plot, since we have aborted it. Now I would like to see how strong the characters of these men are who think that they can participate in a coup or in a plot knowing very well that some of their co-conspirators have already squealed on them.

[Question] In connection with this, Mr President, there was mention when Olalia was arrested that there was some business link or so in the conspiracy. How strong is the evidence against these people?

[Answer] We will not talk about it because this is a [words indistinct] affair pending, I'm afraid that we will be talking of matters that are up in the air. There are evidences connecting some businessmen, some clergymen, some, and when I talk of clergymen of course you know already about some of them -- Father Dilatori and the rest of them -- and so for the businessmen, you already know the fact that some of them are already facing, what is this, arson and the like, and some of them in the media, some are businessmen, but their companions were still operating, but we will not go into that now; we shall not identify them because thematters are pending before not only the judiciary but also before the investigating officials, and we would be undermining the power and authority of these officials if we spoke about this, especially the president. But the evidence is there, it is there.

[Moderator] Mr (Benigno).

[Question] Mr President, on the same subject, but with a slightly different aspect, the nonviolent traditional noncommunist opposition in the Philippines largely represented by the united democratic organization have often accused you of dictatorship, with the companion charge that even though you lifted martial law on January 17, 1981, [words indistinct] political polarization, that you have effectively [word indistinct] or discouraged their participation in the governmental affairs of the republic and that they say that consequently there is only one way open, only one alternative -- that of violence and probably the eventual accession of the Communist Party and the NPA to power. Could you kindly give us an insight on this?

[Answer] If that is true, why is there opposition in the Batasang Pambansa? If that is true, why is there opposition in the local government? All these people are living in a fantasy world, dreaming of running a country. They cannot even run their families. [laughter] Running a country, this is so ridiculous; talking about polarizing the people, they are the ones who want to be polarized.

I wish I could tell you what evidence we have in our possession about their operations. Some day I will; some day I will write about what they have been doing; some day I will bring out videotapes and tape recordings of their conversations with terrorists and subversives; some day I will write a book about the plots and conspiracies that have been undertaken by these men who claim to be peaceful men; and some day we will let our people judge as to whether they are even qualified to be considered for [words indistinct] or whether they should be thrown into the dustbin of history.

They organized a plot. Now why have they not been able to organize an opposition body? Why don't they go into the provinces and barangays, stay with the people in the villages, as we did when we were in the opposition. I was in the opposition for a long while. We lived with our people. Why can't they do that? They are living right here in Manila, on Roxas Boulevard, probably in some private dwelling, with some fascinating party, perhaps. I'm afraid that they are blaming us for their vices, their personal vices. Perhaps they should listen to their consciences rather than to me or to anybody else. All I can say is this: If I were running the opposition party, I would not be here complaining what Marcos is doing. I would be out there in the boondocks organizing, because everywhere you go there is some kind of a grievance against authority and against government. I don't need to tell you that in a developing country there is always deficiency. It is a legitimate part of the political opposition to organize the grievances of our people and utilize it as a weapon against the party in power. Well now, need I say more? Shall I write a book on how to organize an opposition party?

If they think that they can use the Communist Party or any militant subversive organization as an instrument to return to power, let me point to all the countries where the rightists and the supposed pseudointellectuals and the affluent members of society have tried to use the leftist elements, to be liquidated when they won the revolution.

[Question] In the light of that statement, Mr President, can we assume that the opposition enjoys as much protection as the ordinary citizen?

[Answer] Not only as much protection, they are given more protection, because we know that some of them are guilty of participating in subversive action and yet we have not touched them. So they are protected more than the ordinary citizen. I wish I could tell you the secrets that I know and the secrets many of us in the ruling party have, but this I can tell you: Some of these people in the opposition, the supposedly legitimate opposition, are in collusion with subversive elements, but we have not touched them, on my instructions, that they be protected.

[Answer] Of course. Look at what happened in Region 7 -- which is supposed to be one of the regions which was a stronghold of the KBL -- not a single member of the assembly of the KBL won. All the members came from the (?Bisu Visaya). If they organize, I am sure that they will win more seats in the coming elections for the Batasang Pambansa. But [words indistinct] need encouragement. [laughter]

[Question] On another subject, Mr President, are there any compelling reasons why the judiciary reorganization after 1981 has not been implemented; for instance, the retirement of unfit judges, abolition of courts?

[Answer] Yes, well, actually we are about ready now to appoint. The problem was of course that we got caught up by all these other problems like this conspiracy, and I am not in the habit of appointing people whom I do not know, and I have to review every name.

[Answer] [laughter] Why don't I just read the report submitted to me? Quote, the Cardinal alleged that he knew nothing about the case and urged that he not be involved in it. He further charged the elements who were trying to make the church and the state quarrel. I am not one who is questioning the statement of the cardinal. Anyway, I say that from my viewpoint the church and the state have no quarrel. They are aiming at one same thing, that is, the stability of our society. The church seeks to maintain the moral basis of our society. We have no quarrel with the church. We have a quarrel with individuals in that church who have turned subversive, because from our point of view they no longer belong to the church.

[Question] May I have a followup question, Mr President, about my earlier question on the opposition? Reports say ex-Senator Benigno Aquino has several times indicated his desire to return to the Philippines, but each time he turns back because of the period of [words indistinct]. Supposing that Benigno Aquino should return to the Philippines without the benefit of amnesty or an assurance thereof, what steps would the courts take?

[Answer] Suppose you were in my place. Would you ask, how would you answer such a silly question? [laughter] You don't announce policy on, say, something, suppose Aquino says, I [words indistinct] talking about giving me amnesty, this doesn't have anything to do with whatever it is. You are going to put me in an awkward situation. No, no, no. Let's look at it this way: If he were serious about all of this, he knows how to communicate with me because he has communicated with me many times, and when he wanted to extend his visa he know how to communicate with me. I extended it, so, why, why all of this talk now? Let us attend to it when it comes.

[Question] On law and order, Mr President, [words indistinct] the procedure of hiring marshals to protect the riding public from hold-up men, as we all know, human nature is frail, or open to temptations, some of these marshals may commit precisely the crimes that they are supposed to prevent. Now Mr President, who will protect the public from marshals who commit abuses?

[Answer] Ah, but they know that they are being supervised by other secret [word indistinct] because they have been told. Of course they don't know who are watching them, but they know there are supervisors, there are a double set of supervisors and senior officers moving around watching them. Now, talking about authority and its abuse, any kind of authority can be abused, but at the same time it is a matter of the quality of the men that we use, and let us not degrade our people that much. You know, the life of a policeman and a militaryman is not all that joyful. Every time you go out of your house as a policeman, you don't know if you are going to be buried, carried home, maimed or not. And yet we are in the habit of suspecting many of these policemen; of course, there are many scalliwags among them, and I have no mercy for people like that. But let us not generalize and say all of them are scoundrels. There are heroes among them, and let the heroes be honored.

[Answer] [laughter] Of course, I wish it were really timid so I would not have to bother about reading the columns of the bulletin which keeps on niggling, [laughter]. No, I don't think it's timid, it's a matter of quality; it's a matter of saying the right thing at the right moment. Criticism has many faces. We are now at the point of reviewing many of our policies. Perhaps one suggestion that I can make is when you make a critical observation, perhaps you can help us by indicating the persons involved, when it occurred, so that we can immediately take action, instead of a general statement which is not supported by facts, or perhaps you could have somebody call up the public officer involved before you publish something derogatory about him. That's all that we are asking: About the public officer, is it true that he stole 200,000 pesos from the kitty? Instead of publishing something without first verifying the facts. [sentence as heard] I don't say that it has been done very often, but it has been done. Now, about the media being very timid. I doubt it; on the contrary, my complaint is that the media has published what -- interviews with Horacio Morales when he was still at large, interviews with Dante [words indistinct]; this is certainly not timid. Just explain, tell them what the truth is; the truth will prevail.

[Question] This morning in your meeting with the members of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce you said that you are going to Washington on a state visit and as an invited friend, but you also complained about the declining trading relations between the Philippines and the United States. Can we assume now that you are going to take up this complaint with President Reagan?

[Answer] No, we are good friends. How should we put it? When brothers have matured enough, you can look at each other and accept the fact that you are both deficient in many ways and be objective about it. We're not hysterical; we don't have any bitterness. Accept the fact that you owe your brothers many favors. We owe the Americans, for instance, some things. We owe them a national educational system; we owe them a consensus liberal type of democracy; we owe them the beginnings of the plantation type of agriculture; we owe them also the beginnings of industrial development. We also owe them the problem of the south [laughs], since they entered into a treaty with the sultan of Sulu and treated the Muslims as a separate race.

We are now old enough to know that we have been released from what influence [words indistinct], so we can talk to each other as brothers. Really, we are mature enough to say, hey, by the way, brother, you know, you can't keep on exploiting me like this; you better give me a bit of support for all these things that you are getting from my country. That's what I meant.

Before, we used to look to the American, think of him as some kind of a miracle man, or God, but now he is our equal, because we are now mature, that's what I meant. So we can deal with each other frankly.

[Question] Is there any agenda for the state visit, Mr President?

[Answer] [laughs] For me, I go there on a friendly visit. I have no [words indistinct]. I'm just talking about a friend.

[Question] Mr President, you said you are going to have talks with President Reagan and also some ranking members of his Cabinet. Could you let us know the topics you will take up? Do you expect to conclude any agreements during your state visit to the United States?

[Answer] I really do not know what agreements [words indistinct]. Yes, some of my mission is to enter into some tax agreement, the updating of some of our agreements on, we hope, trade, but it doesn't, it isn't in my agenda. I am on a friendly visit; I intend to meet a friend. My friend has written me. It is my diplomatic obligation to visit him because he visited with me sometime back. He represented the president of the United States and inaugurated the cultural center when he was governor of California. I met him in California and he told me I should pay him a visit, and I admit the fact, I owe him a visit. [words indistinct] There are certain obligations, but this is a pleasant obligation for me.

[Answer] I don't see any problem between the United States and the Philippines that cannot be settled by conversations between representatives. Certainly there are some difficulties which each country is facing. The United States is facing serious economic difficulties; it has many diplomatic problems. It has just finished its problem with the People's Republic of China on the Taiwan issue. It is negotiating a cease-fire and withdrawal of the PLO in Lebanon. I would presume this would lead to a Middle East overall lasting arrangement. I am told it is meeting some problems in its internal policies. Its unemployment has gone up, but they have brought down their rates of interest from 18 1/2 percent to 14. And there are things like this, you know, not for us to bother about. (laughter) I am going there knowing I am a visitor, and we're going to talk about how well he rides a horse and [laughter] well-cut his jodphurs are, whatever it is that he is wearing. The disagreements, these are left to the members of the mission.

[Moderator] Mr President, we are now about to wind up the show. With your permission, you have a closing statement to give before we finally close, sir?

[Answer] Ok, I have no closing statements. Do you want to ask any further questions? Let's see, probably on the economic situation, I intend to call a Cabinet meeting and a meeting perhaps even of the party before I leave for the United States. I would like a review of the basic policies, and these include the reorganization plans for government. You know we've been talking about the judiciary reorganization, but I have actually been working on the reorganization of government. This includes the elimination of some corporate entities and some agencies, some offices. I'm reorganizing also the offices of the president and the prime minister, because we have to exchange personnel. I also want to define more specifically the powers that are delegated to the Executive Committee, because I was reviewing the various decrees or letters of instruction and I found them inadequate to determine the parameters of activity, and I notice that the Executive Committee is spending a lot of time, too much time, on contracts. The contracts now are being reviewed by the National Economic Development Authority, they are being reviewed by a technical committee of the presidential management staff, and then are being reviewed by my office. And yet, it's still being reviewed by the Executive Committee. We are wasting a lot of time on this. Probably it is time to now appoint a single technical committee to review all these contracts and take them out of the hands of the Executive Committee, because its's wasting their time. The Executive Committee should be engaged in policy determination, and I think [laughter] that members of the Executive Committee are now getting bored with their job because of this. At the same time, I think that the finance managers, those belonging to the state financing corporations, should participate in certain instances when the Executive Committee meets, and we should authorize this.

Next, we reorganized by creating regional offices, and we are supposed to delegate authority from the ministry to the regional offices, but we are in limbo. We don't know whether there has been any delegation of authority? There is such long delay in decisionmaking. The people are still complaining, they still have to come to Manila, and that was one of the reasons why we reorganized! Now we have to go into this.

Some of the ministers also say that they are overloaded, that they are doing nothing but attending meetings and they cannot do any work at all. Now I think we should review the work of the ministers, and we should now start budgeting the time of the ministers, and some time should be allotted to meeting the public. Even my time, for instance, should be properly allotted in this manner.

Now let me close up with some of the economic indicators which are pertinent to our present situation. Do you know that the gross national product, which in 1972 was only 55 billion, in 1982 became 192 billion, at constant prices 269 billion, at current prices 97 billion. [Figures as heard] If you were to compare 1965 to 1981, the jump would be eight times. The per-capita income in 1972 was $240, in 1980 it became $755, and in 1981 it became $780, or 6,335 pesos. In January 1982 it was $862 or 7,157 pesos. [Passage on economic statistics omitted]

BULLETIN TODAY DETAILS ANTIGOVERNMENT PLOT

HK191403 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 19 Aug 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] Military investigators said yesterday that radical labor leaders, in concert with other subversive elements, plan a forcible takeover of the government by 1983, starting with nationwide strikes, sabotage, and acts of terrorism next month.

They said agitation in the labor sector is to be led by the Kiiusang Mayo Uno (KMU), an umbrella group of several workers organizations, under the plan. They identified the KMU as a front of the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army.

The founder and chairman of KMU, Felixberto Olalia, Sr., is under detention at the Camp Crame stockade, on a presidential commitment order. He has been charged with inciting to rebellion and inciting to sedition.

Authorities dismissed the reported denials made by Olalia during an interview with newsmen at the Quezon City Fiscal's Office where the inquest is being held. They said enough evidence had been gathered to prove the government's case against him including records seized in his house and offices showing his involvement with the Communist Party dating back to the 1940's.

The evidence shows a definite link between industrial unrest in Metro Manila and other cities and stepped-up terrorist activities by the dissidents in the countryside, the military authorities said. The object is to trigger off widescale disorders, accompanied by bombings and assassinations, culminating in the overthrow of the government and its takeover by next year, they added.

Disgruntled labor leaders who were being enlisted into the plan have offered evidence to authorities showing that agitation in the labor ranks was intended not to secure economic benefits for workers but to paralyze the national economy, the authorities said. They pointed to instances when other industrial enterprises had to close down and lay off workers because of unreasonable demands. This situation, they said, is part of the overall strategy to force the closure of factories, scare away foreign investors, create unemployment, and promote worker unrest.

The jobless workers in turn are mobilized to participate in demonstrations, rallies, and other disruptive mass actions, the labor leaders were quoted as saying.

Although the KMU does not collect dues from its affiliates, it is well-funded and enjoys financing support from non-labor sources, including contributions from abroad, it was reported.

In seminars and teach-ins sponsored by the KMU and the Pagkakaisa ng Manggagawang Pilipino (PMP), participants from as far as the Visayas and Mindanao were reportedly flown in free. Busloads were also brought in from Mariveles, Bataan, where Olalia's group staged strikes that paralyzed operations at the Bataan export processing zone for several days last June.

Olalia and other labor leaders agitated during these gatherings for two-hour daily strikes nationwide beginning in September. These stoppages were to escalate into an all-out general strike, to be accompanied by a campaign of terror by subversives, the military authorities said.

STATEMENT ON TEXTBOOKS DUE 'BY END OF NEXT WEEK'

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 21, KYODO -- The government will iron out differences among its ministries by the end of next week to issue a statement to defuse the current textbook dispute, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said Saturday. He earlier said the government will produce a "unified view" on the dispute, involving Japan, China and South Korea, by next Friday when Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi leaves for New Delhi on a four-nation tour.

Speaking for NHK TV's discussion program, Miyazawa said the government statement will focus on its intention to "correct what should be corrected (in the controversial Japanese textbooks) within its own policy and responsibility." The government will also assure China and South Korea that Japan still feels responsible for what it did to the two countries before and during World War II.

Meanwhile, the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) decided to send two LDP delegates to South Korea for talks with Seoul government officials on the textbook controversy. LDP Lower House members Hiroshi Mitsuzuka and Yoshiro Mori, both experts on education, will leave for Seoul Sunday evening, according to party sources. Originally, the two LDP leaders were to visit Seoul Saturday virtually as government envoys. But the plan has been changed and they will now visit South Korea solely as LDP delegates. The change was necessary because the Foreign and Education Ministries are still locked in a showdown over how to deal with Chinese and South Korean requests for the correction of "distorted" descriptions in Japanese school textbooks about Japan's military actions before and during World War II.

Sakurauchi Remarks

OW220800 Tokyo in English 0746 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Excerpts] Nemuro, Hokkaido, Aug 22, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Sunday repeated an indication that the government will announce its basic view on the current diplomatic row with China and South Korea over the Japanese school textbook historical descriptions before he leaves Tokyo for an overseas tour on Friday.

Sakurauchi said he hopes the basic view will be worked out before his coming tour abroad, based on a statement on the matter to be released by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki at a press conference on Monday and the reports to be made by two Liberal-Democratic Party delegates after their visit to Seoul. Asked by newsmen, the foreign minister said the government is making efforts for a quick and simultaneous settlement of diplomatic rows with Seouland Beijing over the issue. The Foreign Ministry has a strong expectation that the LDP delegates' visit to Seoul would pave the way for an early solution to the textbook row with South Korea, Sakurauchi said.

Sakurauchi made these remarks in a press conference here after inspecting the Soviet-held northern islands aboard a Japanese patrol boat earlier in the day. He also expressed a strong desire to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko when they attend the U.N. General Assembly in October and to have an exchange of frank views with Gromyko over the territorial issue and other problems. Sakurauchi said he would spare no efforts to obtain the Soviet permission on the resumption of seasonal visits by former Japanese islanders to family graves on the northern islands. Moscow now refuses such visits for military security reasons.

Descriptions To Be Restored

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Aug 22 KYODO -- Headlines in Sunday's morningers:

-- Education Ministry to Rewrite School Textbooks.

In an effort to settle the diplomatic dispute with South Korea and China over Japanese school textbook inspections, the Education Ministry Saturday decided to restore such descriptions as Japan's wartime "invasion" instead of "advance" into China and the South Korean "independence movement" instead of "riots" against Japan when the ministry screens school textbooks for use from fiscal 1984. (YOMIURI)

Rally Protests Revisions

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 21, KYODO -- About 300 citizens and students held a rally and demonstration march to the Education Ministry Saturday afternoon to protest the school textbook inspections in which they claimed the ministry distorted Japan's wartime actions in China and Korea. It was the first demonstration against the ministry by Japanese citizens since the textbook issue surfaced last month. The protest rally was organized by eight activist groups, including the citizens' society on the textbook problem and the Society of Asian Women.

At the rally, Prof Masami Yamazumi of Tokyo Metropolitan University harshly criticized the ministry for mishandling the textbook inspections. South Korean Christian leader in Japan, Yi In-ha, told the rally that the Chinese and South Koreans are now protesting the textbooks based on their desire to promote true friendly relations with Japan. The Japanese should pay heed to the real meaning of the Korean and Chinese protests, he said. Junior high school teachers called on other teachers to stand together in the campaign against the inspection system.

SAKURAUCHI VISITS USSR-OCCUPIED NORTHERN ISLANDS

[Text] Nemuro, Hokkaido, Aug 21, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said here Saturday he could appeal to the United Nations this fall for Japan's long desire for restoration of the four Soviet-occupied islands east of Hokkaido. In a meeting with Japanese repatriates from the four islands, the foreign minister said he would repeat the Japanese claim to the so-called northern territories at the U.N. General Assembly in October.

Sakurauchi arrived here Saturday afternoon for this first inspection of Habomai, Shikotan, Kunashiri and Etorofu Islands Sunday.

The islands were occupied by the Soviet Union after the end of World War II. Sakurauchi's two predecessors -- Masayoshi Ito and Sunao Sonoda- also sought understanding of the Japanese claim to the islands from U.N. member nations at previous General Assemblies.

The former islanders requested that Sakurauchi strive to win Soviet permission for them to resume visits to graves on the islands, suspended since 1976 because of Soviet demands that would-be visitors have visas. The foreign minister said the Soviets disallow such missions from a military viewpoint, and emphasized that it is really a humanitarian problem. He said he would seize every chance to appeal for Soviet acceptance of such visits.

The foreign minister also denounced Soviet reinforcement of military facilities on Kunashiri and Etorofu Islands as rubbing salt into the wounds of former Japanese islanders.

Yosue Suzuki, one of 32 fishermen seized by a Soviet patrol boat near the islands in May last year and the only one to be released, appealed to Sakurauchi to win freedom for the other fishermen, including her husband. The foreign minister pledged his all-out efforts to gain their release.

[Text] Nemuro, Hokkaido, Aug 22, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi sailed close to the Russian-occupied northern islands Sunday on the first inspection of the territory in his present post. "When I saw Etorofu and other northern islands from a distance, my resolve for the return of the islands to Japan was strengthened," he later told newsmen.

Sakurauchi, who arrived at Nemuro on the eastern tip of Hokkaido Saturday, made the two-hour inspection aboard the patrol boat Mashu of the Maritime Safety Agency. Ichiro Nakagawa, state minister and head of the Science and Technology Agency, joined him in the inspection. Aboard the boat, Sakurauchi watched tensely the approach of two Soviet patrol ships on radar.

This was the fourth inspection of the northern islands by a foreign minister since Masayoshi Ito's visit in October 1990. Japan continues its territorial claim over the four islands occupied by the Russians just after World War II. The Foreign Ministry describes such an inspection as a demonstration of Japan's strong determination for the return of the islands to Japan.

Sakurauchi's visit here, however, drew an advance by the Soviet TASS News Agency which on Saturday criticized it as an anti-Soviet action.

DIET ENDS LONGEST-EVER SESSION 21 AUGUST

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 21, KYODO -- The Diet (Parliament) ended its 96th ordinary session Saturday, longest since parliamentary law was revised in 1958. The session originally opened on December 21 last year but was extended 94 days on May 20, the day it was supposed to end.

During the extended session which ended on Saturday, the Diet passed a law revising elections of members of the House of Councillors running from the national constituency.

Another major issue -- proposed revision of a law concerning testimony of witnesses called into Diet committee hearings -- was carried over into the next parliamentary session. This issue is mainly concerned with persons reportedly implicated in the 1976 Lockeed payoff scandal.

BRIEFS

HELICOPTER TEST FLIGHTS -- Osaka, 16 Aug, KYODO -- Kawasaki Heavy Industries Ltd. Monday announced the start to test flights for the first Japanese-developed helicopter aimed at obtaining type certification. The BK 117 helicopter, equipped with two 592 horsepower engines, has been developed jointly with Messerschmitt Boulkow Blohm, a West German aircraft maker. The utility helicopter, capable of carrying 8 to 11 persons, has a maximum cruising speed of 257 kilometers. It is the first helicopter ever developed in Japan, although its development was assisted by the West German company. Kawasaki said it has already received orders for 20 units of the helicopter while Messerschmitt has orders for 110. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 1604 GMT 16 Aug 82 OW]

U.S.-S. KOREA COMMAND POST EXERCISE DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang, August 22 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors and South Korean military fascist clique scheme to stage soon a provocative joint military exercise called "annual command post training of the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command", according to a report.

The "South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command" announced on August 20 that it would stage the war exercise codenamed "Ulchi-Focusland 82" [as received] within this month. This exercise, the seventh of its kind, will reportedly be participated in by 6,000 men of the naval and air force command, U.S. Armed Forces Command and the U.S. Eighth Army command occupying South Korea under the "South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command."

They blare that this military provocation is aimed at rehearsing and assessing joint operations of the "South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces" against "an accidental event."

The U.S. imperialists are commiting the criminal acts of aggravating the tension, frequently staging provocative war exercises, in defiance of the unanimous demand of the Korean and world people for the withdrawal of their aggression troops from South Korea.

VRPR Commentary

[Text] On 21 August, a spokesman for the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command disclosed that a large-scale "Ulji Focus Lens '82" exercise would be staged to prepare against accidental occurrences throughout the whole of South Korea beginning the end of this month. In its aftermath, under the pretext of preparations against surprise attacks from the enemy in case of a so-called emergency, war games have been waged around Seoul. A fearsome scene was created in which the roads were closed both to vehicles and pedestrians for some time.

Prior to this, the Chon Tu-hwan ring carried out firing exercises on the sea off the Kojedo in the South Sea on 7 and 8 August and conducted similar firing drills on the sea off the west coast for 4 days beginning 11 August.

Before this, a large-scale counter-guerrilla infiltration drill was waged, arousing denunciation from within and without. These war exercises being conducted repeatedly by the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their stooge Chon Tu-hwan ring in recent days are very ominous, thus attracting great attention at home and abroad.

This shows that their schemes to prepare for a war have reached a dangerous and reckless stage. These exercises being conducted by the Chon Tu-hwan ring are part of the ring's racket of endlessly waging war games to prepare for a northward war on the orders of the U.S. imperialists; they are premeditated and undisguised war schemes aimed at inspiring the North-South confrontation and aggravating the tense situation. Such reckless rackets of the Chon Tu-hwan ring are the direct result and continuation of the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression against the Korean Peninsula.

It has been well known to the world that in order to accelerate the preparations for a new war against the North while continually hanging onto South Korea as a colony and military base, the United States has been supplying the Chon Tu-hwan group with weapons and military equipment and inspiring the group to war confrontation against the North.

This war exercise is being conducted upon orders by the United States to the brains of the South Korean Armed Forces to speed up preparations for a northward war, summoning them to Washington, with violent remarks that in case of an outbreak of a war in the Korean Peninsula, the U.S. forces would immediately intervene.

At a time when it is urgently demanded for the times and the nation to ease tension, maintain and consolidate peace and realize the country's independent and peaceful reunification, the group, keeping in tune with the U.S. aggressors, has repeateedly kicked up the racket of waging war games against compatriots. This can be described as an intolerable treacherous act against the nation, which is running counter to the peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. imperialists and their stooges' frantic war games are aimed at squashing the ever-mounting anti-U.S. and pro-independence sentiment and eradicating the anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle by distracting public attention. The war games are designed to inspire North-South confrontation and realize their wicked ambition for aggression.

Because the Chon Tu-hwan ring has been isolated and cornered at home and abroad owing to its flunkeyist and nation-selling policy, its military and despotic rule, the ring has been inspiring the zeal for war by kicking up a racket of playing with fire almost every day while desperately trying to seek a way out through military adventurism. However, this is nothing but a silly, wild dream.

Our people will never pull down the banner of struggle against the United States and for independence, against dictatorship and for democratization, which they have already raised high. They will wage a more strenuous struggle to drive the U.S. aggressors out of this land and to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan fascist group.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan ring should immediately stop the reckless racket of preparing for a northward war and step from power without delay in conformity with the unanimous demand of people at home and abroad.

JOINT U.S.-JAPAN MILITARY MANEUVERS CRITICIZED

SK221138 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korea 0900 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] A dangerous war exercise racket is being strengthened in Japan with each passing day. According to a report, on 17 August, the Ground Self-Defense Force of Japan started conducting a map exercise -- the largest one since the war -- at its 50 bases throughout the country. The map exercise, participated in by some 4,000 troops, is a cooperative operation between units, simulating an emergency, the report said.

On the other hand, a Japan-U.S. joint antisubmarine operational exercise is being conducted on the sea off Akita Prefecture. The aircraft carrier Midway of the U.S. 7th Fleet is also participating in this exercise.

According to an announcement, a Japanese-U.S. joint air force operational exercise will be conducted at Misawa air base in Aomori Prefecture from 23-27 August. For the Japanese Self-Defense Forces to simultaneously stage such military exercise rackets with the participation of the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression is an extremely dangerous design to lead Japan to the road of aggression and war again.

ALLEGED U.S. BW TESTING IN S. KOREA DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang, August 21 (KCNA) -- Recently TBS television Broadcasting of Tokyo, screening a documentary film, said that during the Second World War at least 3,000 Koreans and Chinese were killed by the Japanese army through the experiments for bacteriological warfare.

Noting that the ill-famed bacteriological experts of the Japanese "Imperial Army" killed Koreans by pest, cholera and typhoid infection, the film said that bacteriological weapon experiments were conducted at that time at a secret concentration camp in "Manchuria" under the occupation of the Japanese imperialist aggression army.

It further said that after the Second World War U.S. Army intelligence officers, informed of the study of bacteriological warfare, heard an explanation from Japanese who had connections with it and took over the results of the study, and that the U.S. imperialists kept in the dark the Japanese imperialists' criminal bacteriological weapon experiments.

Ringleaders of bacteriological warfare of the Japanese "Imperial Army" who should have long been punished for their vicious crimes now raised their heads again under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists and are making preparations for bacteriological warfare together with their U.S. imperialist masters against the Korean people.

It is an open secret that the inhumane bacteriological warfare committed by the U.S. imperialists during the past war of aggression in Korea had been prepared with the active backing of the Japanese imperialist war criminals and the virus of epidemic hemorrhagic fever now being spread by the U.S. imperialists, taking the South Korean people as human guinea pigs, was nursed by the notorious bacteriological "Unit 731" of the former Japanese imperialist aggression army.

Now many war criminals of the former "Unit 731" are making study of bacteriological weapons at "Unit 406", a bacteriological weapon laboratory of the U.S. imperialists stationed in Sagamihara, Kanagawa Prefecture of Japan, in an attempt to realise their old, anachronistic dream.

VRPR DECRIES CHON'S VISIT TO AFRICA, CANADA

[Dialogue from feature program "Focus on Topicism"]

[Text] [First speaker] On 16 August traitor Chon Tu-hwan embarked on a trip to visit four African countries and Canada. People at home and abroad have unanimously defined this visit as one conducted by a puppet in accordance with a scenario prepared by his U.S. master. In this hour we will talk about it with Madam Yun of this broadcast station. How are you, Madam Yun? On 16 August Chon Tu-hwan departed for four African countries and Canada. At a seeing-off ceremony held at the airport on that day, he issued a departure statement. I would like to briefly review this statement first.

[Second speaker] On 16 August Chon Tu-hwan left for four African countries and Canada, accompanied by his confidants, such as the vice prime minister, the foreign minister, the minister of commerce and industry and the presidential secretary general. At a pre-farewell ceremony at the airport, he issued a departure statement. He babbled verbosely about the aim of his visit -- that is, the strengthening of friendly and cooperative relations with these countries in accordance with a scenario prepared by his U.S. master, the consolidation of South Korea's position in international society and the development of favorable world attitude for peaceful reunification.

Coinciding with this, government-sponsored warmongers and trumpeters clamored that this visit was the fruition of independent diplomacy, would demonstrate South Korea's national strength and would pave the way toward cultivating new relations between South Korea and Africa on an equal footing. This is very brazen.

[First speaker] Right. Chon Tu-hwan said his plan to visit Africa is the product of independent diplomacy. As a matter of fact, this visit is one conducted by a puppet in accordance with a schedule and scenario prepared by the United States.

[Second speaker] That's right. Chon Tu-hwan's visit to five countries is one designed to conceal his true color as a colonial U.S. puppet. He defined his visit as one reflecting independent diplomacy. This is very shameless. It is unbecoming for a colonial puppet to clamor about independent diplomacy. It is a matter of common knowledge that South Korea is a U.S. colony. South Korea is a typical colony in which U.S. neocolonialism has been directly introduced. It is a puppet regime resembling puppet Manchuria in the era of Japanese imperialism. In South Korea there are the National Assembly, political parties and a government. They are tools designed to maintain colonial U.S. rule. Like successive puppet regimes, the Chon Tu-hwan regime is in fact a scarecrow, puppet regime that is devoid of power and sovereignty and is designed to maintain U.S. neocolonialist rule. No matter how eagerly such a colonial puppet may clamor that it strives to achieve independent diplomacy, no one will believe it.

[First speaker] In light of the nature of this puppet regime, which cannot formulate any policy and budget without approval and sanction from the White House, we can figure out how Chon Tu-hwan arranged this visit.

[Second speaker] As you know, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, executor of U.S. policy for the Korean Peninsula, has received detailed directives from the United States through the U.S. ambassador in South Korea. Defining the Chon Tu-hwan regime as a colonial U.S. puppet regime, as a marionette regime mastermined by the United States, as a murderous regime that has cruelly slaughtered its fellow countrymen and as a fascist regime, our people, overseas compatriots and international society have unanimously denounced and rejected the United States and this regime. To mislead public opinion at home and abroad, the United States, facing this denunciation, has had puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan -- the worst of its confidants -- embark on overseas visits. This is the background of the U.S. arrangement of these visits, that are meant to show that Chon Tu-hwan is not a U.S. puppet receiving instructions from the United States. Chon Tu-hwan babbled about independent diplomacy in his departure statement.

Arriving in Kenya on 17 August, Chon Tu-hwan clamored about the trend of the struggle against (?colonialism), pretending that he has become an anti-imperialism fighter. This is a trick designed to create an impression that South Korea is not a colony and that he is not a colonial president. No matter how eagerly Chon Tu-hwan may try to create the illusion that South Korea is not a U.S. colony and that he is not a puppet, the world's people as well as our people will not be deceived by the show. The more impatiently he tries to conceal his nature as a colonial puppet and that of South Korea as a colony, the more vividly he will reveal his dirty appearance.

[First speaker] As indicated by his remarks in Kenya on 19 August and his speech delivered prior to his departure for these countries, the purpose or intention for his trip is clear.

He seeks to educate these countries on the splittists' policy so as to make two Koreas an established fact and then have it recognized in the international community. This can be found in his prattling about the 12 January proposal and the 5 June proposal and also about splittist policy under the pretext of creating conditions in the international community for peaceful reunification.

As you may know, Chon Tu-hwan's 12 January and 5 June proposals, replicas of Pak Chong-hui's 23 June special statement that centered on a simultaneous admission of the North and South into the UN but revised for the worst, are all false proposals designed to mislead public opinion at home and abroad. For this reason, public opinion at home and abroad have unanimously been denouncing and rejecting Chon Tu-hwan's proposals as splittist ones running counter to reunification and as false proposals for reunification, the purpose of which is to perpetuate the present state of division.

Nevertheless, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique is now maneuvering to win support for its hackneyed proposals for reunification from those countries. In short, the clique's purpose is to perpetuate division by fabricating two Koreas at any cost.

[First speaker] Yes. In fact, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is not interested in reunification. It is intent on fabricating two Koreas. [passage indistinct]

[Second speaker] As I said just now, Chon Tu-hwan is a puppet whose strings are pulled by the U.S. imperialist colonialists. Assuming the role of a spot errand boy executing the U.S. policy toward the Korean Peninsula, which is designed to perpetuate division and make two Koreas a fait accompli in the international community, Chon Tu-hwan made an appearance even in Africa. In Kenya, Chon Tu-hwan, without even mentioning the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, has once again exposed himself as a truly faithful dog executing the U.S. policy for fabricating two Koreas by prattling about dialogue and reunification. Although he is trying to mock the people at home and abroad by such a foolish act, he will fail.

[First speaker] Yes. Chon Tu-hwan babbled about cooperation and partnership in his current trip. I think these words can be uttered only by such an ignominious imposter as Chon Tu-hwan.

[Second speaker] Right. We can call Chon Tu-hwan an ignominious imposter or a little idiot. He is indeed a sad man, like a parrot who only mimicks what is dictated by the United States without ever saying what he really wants to say. He is raving about partnership. Whether he uttered such remarks because he did not know the true meaning of the workds or if he made such remarks in a bid to cover up the real nature of South Korea -- a colony of the United States -- is hard to tell. At any rate, the puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a colonial puppet [word indistinct] that cannot live even for a moment without U.S. aid and protection.

How dare such a guy travel around the African countries under the pretext of a state visit? All this shows that he is fulfilling his duty as a shock brigade and perpetrator, executing U.S. strategy toward the Korean Peninsula and toward Africa. Chon Tu-hwan's visit to 5 countries is a puppet traitor's trip being carried out in accordance with the U.S. scenario and clearly showing that it is meant to fabricate two Koreas.

What I think of him is that whatever tricks he may employ, Chon Tu-hwan will never be able to cover up his dirty nature as a colonial puppet.

[First speaker] Right. He can never cover up his nature. Our masses will never forgive the crimes of the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, which, on orders from the United States, is attempting to fabricate two Koreas even in the international community, turning his back on reunification -- the supreme hope of the masses.

Backed by the United States, Chon Tu-hwan is running down the road of flunkeyist and nation-selling crimes and, in exchange for this, is foolishly attempting to achieve secure power and entrench himself in office, while enjoying comfort and power. He should abandon such a scheme and step down from power without delay. Under the banner of anti-U.S. struggle for independence -- a trend of the times, our masses will have to firmly unite to force the U.S. troops to withdraw from South Korea, to put an end to U.S. colonial rule, and to overthrow the puppet Chon Tu-hwan regime. I believe they should wage a tenacious and holy anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation.

[First speaker] We now must finish this program for today. Thank you for speaking.

[Second speaker] Thank you.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES JAPANESE TEXTBOOK REVISION

SK220348 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2240 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] The voices of people at home and abroad protesting and denouncing the Japanese reactionaries' act of distorting history have been getting louder with each passing day.

Touching on the Japanese authorities' distortion of textbooks at a press conference, Ichio Asukata, chairman of the Japanese Socialist Party [JSP], pointed out that this important issue is linked to the basic attitude of Japan since the war. He stressed that the JSP will work with other opposition parties to call the Suzuki Cabinet to account.

On the same day, at a press conference famous Japanese scholars warned that the textbooks, in which the Japanese imperialists' history of aggression had been distorted and falsified, would have a bad effect on the youths and students who did not experience the war. They resolutely denounced the Japanese authorities for revising the textbooks, saying that the authorities' way of thinking is like that of the old government-general in Korea, that the textbooks, which conflict with historical facts, are a fraud and that the distortion of textbooks if accelerating Japan's turn to the right. The former corps commander of the Chinese 4th Crops of the northeast anti-Japanese combined forces said: The Japanese Education Ministry has changed the word "aggression" in China to "advance" in authorizing the textbooks. This is an effort to beautify Japanese imperialism. Igniting a frantic war of aggression against China, the Japanese militarists occupied the vast land of China. How can this be described as a peace mission advancing into a country in a friendly fashion? This is brutal aggression; the so-called "advance" is a brigandish fraud.

He stressed that the Chinese will never forget the disaster and hardships inflicted by Japanese militarism.

In an editorial, the Thai paper BANGKOK POST strongly denounces the Japanese imperialists' schemes of aggression against Thailand. A Singapore paper in an editorial entitled "Is Japan Going Back to the Past?" revealed the Japanese authorities' act of falsifying history and their schemes of militarism.

It is very just that the people in Asia and the world, including Korea, China and Japan, harshly denounce and reject the Japanese authorities' manuevers to distort and falsify Japanese imperialism's history of aggression and criminal acts.

The Japanese imperialists are aggressors and plunderers who have invaded and plundered other peoples since the early days. They are truculent enemies of the Asian people.

About 80 years ago, they deprived our country of all authority and power with guns and bayonets. They imposed a harsh colonial slave rule on Korea and inflicted disasters and hardships on our people by illegally occupying Korea for 36 years.

The Japanese imperialists made inroads into China and occupied the vast Chinese land, including Manchuria. Pursuing the silly dream of becoming the leading power in Asia, they also committed a large-scale war of aggression against the Southeast Asian countries. During World War II, they occupied most of the countries in Southeast Asia -- Thailand, the Philippines, Singapore, Burma and Indonesia -- by force. They committed atrocious criminal acts of indiscriminately plundering and killing people in these areas.

As shown by the facts, the aggressive criminal acts which the Japanese imperialists committed wherever they went in Asia, including our country, are stern historical facts which no one can deny. The people in Asia and the world will not forget the Japanese imperialists' criminal acts.

The Japanese imperialists' criminal acts were clearly pointed out in the documents of the international trial held 34 years ago.

The Far East military court, composed of judges from 15 countries, decided the Japanese imperialists' had waged a war of armed aggression in Asia, including our country. With objective and scientific materials including the minutes of a Japanese meeting held in the royal presence, the minutes of a Cabinet meeting, the minutes of a meeting of ministers held in the royal presence, the documents of the Foreign Ministry of Nazi Germany and statements by war criminals who participated in making inroads into a continent, the court revealed that the Japanese imperialists had prepared and carried out a war of aggression in Asia.

This notwithstanding, the Japanese authorities are going to shamelessly distort and falsify the history of aggression of Japanese imperialism. This is an intolerable act mocking history. This is nothing but an act to beautify past Japanese imperialists' crimes and follow in their steps.

The Japanese paper TOKYO SHIMBUN has revealed that the Japanese authorities' revision of textbooks originated from the nature of the government and the Liberal-Demo ratic Party, which are trying to beautify the past wrongdoings, cover up things that occurred before the war and revive militarism.

The Japanese reactionaries' distortion of textbooks has been arousing the indignation and denunciation of people at home and abroad. This is linked to the fact that they have revised the Japanese imperialists' crimes, running counter to the historical facts. What is more important is that the goal they seek to attain through historical distortion is very dangerous.

As pointed out unanimously by the broad political, social, press circles and publications in Asia and throughout the world, the Japanese authorities are trying to inspire a militaristic spirit and aggressive ideology in the youths and children to lead them to the road of war of aggression by praising the history of aggression of the Japanese imperialists. They are scheming to justify their militaristic line and expansionist policy, thereby realizing their old dream of the Greater East Asia Coprosperity Sphere.

The Japanese reactionaries' distortion of textbooks is dangerous. This is well known. Their distortion of textbooks is linked to the fact that they have worked out a new 5-year plan for a military buildup to rearm the Self-Defense Forces with modern offensive weapons and equipment. They have intensively kicked up rackets of waging war games which are provocative in nature to oppose the Korean and Asian peoples. They also have been speeding up work on an emergency law to prepare for an overseas invasion.

This reveals that the Japanese authorities' distortion of history is part of their schemes to realize the ambition for militarization and overseas expansion.

These facts make the peace-loving peoples of Asia and the world heighten their vigilance against the Japanese reactionaries' schemes to prepare for a new war of aggression.

If the Japanese reactionaries should forget the lessons of history and set out again on the road of aggression and war against the Asian peoples with a wild dream for realizing the old dream of the Greater East Asia Coprosperity Shere, they cannot escape the miserable fate of their predecessors.

EVENTS, MESSAGES MARK ROMANIAN ANNIVERSARY

Kim Il-song Greets Ceaucescu

[Text] Pyongyang, August 23 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings on August 21 to Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party and president of the Romanian Socialist Republic, on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the victory of the socio-national liberation revolution against imperialism and fascism in Romania. The message reads: On the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the victory of the socio-national liberation revolution against imperialism and fascism in Romania, I, in the name of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people and in my own name, extend warmest felicitations and cordial comradely greetings to you and the Central Committee of the Romanian Communist Party, the Government of the Romanian Socialist Republic and the fraternal Romanian people.

After the revolution was led to victory by the self-sacrificing struggle of the Romanian Communists and patriotic people, your people ushered in a new era for the building of a new life and national prosperity in the land of Romania, once backward.

The Korean people are sincerely rejoiced over the great successes the Romanian people have made under the guidance of the Romanian Communist Party headed by you in the endeavours for building a multilaterally-developed socialist society, adhering to chajusong (independence), and extend firm solidarity with your efforts for ensuring peace and security in Europe and the world.

The Korean and Romanian peoples have formed solid bonds of friendship through the common struggle for the victory of the cause of peace and socialism.

I express the belief that the friendly and cooperative relations between our two parties, two countries and two peoples will continue to grow stronger and develop in the future in accordance with the spirit of the agreement reached in the significant meeting with you in Pyongyang in April last and the joint statement made public at that time.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I sincerely wish you and your people success in the work for implementing the decisions of the 12th Congress of the Romanian Communist Party.

Yi Chong-ok Greets Dascalescu

[Text] Pyongyang, August 23 (KCNA) -- Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Administration Council of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings to Romanian Premier Constantin Dascalescu on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the victory of the socio-national liberation revolution against imperialism and fascism in Romania.

In the belief that the excellent relations of friendship and cooperation existing between the two countries will grow stronger and develop in the future in the spirit agreed upon at the talks between the heads of state of the two countries in Pyongyang in April, the message sincerely wished the Romanian premier great success in his responsible work for the social and economic development of Romania.

O Chin-u Greets Olteanu

[Text] Pyongyang, August 23 (KCNA) -- General O Chin-u, minister of People's Armed Forces, sent a message of greetings to Lieutenant General Constantin Olteanu, minister of national defence of the Romanian Socialist Republic, on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the victory of the socio-national liberation revolution against imperialism and fascism in Romania.

Believing that the friendly and cooperative relations between the Korean and Romanian peoples and armies will be further consolidated and developed day by day, the message sincerely wished the minister of national defence and officers and men of the Romanian Army greater successes in their future work for implementing the decisions of the 12th Congress of the Romanian Communist Party.

Pyongyang Rally

Addressing the meeting first, Sin Ki-chon, vice-chairman of the Korea-Romania Friendship Association, said that the Romanian people, after the liberation of the country from the fascist yoke, established a genuine worker-peasant government, enforced democratic reforms and successfully carried out the tasks of socialist revolution and construction of the foundation of socialism.

The Korean people rejoice as over their own over all the successes made by the fraternal Romanian people in socialist construction and external relations and warmly hail them, he noted.

Expressing satisfaction over the friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries favorably developing day by day under the direct care of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, the respected leader of the Romanian people, our people will struggle in firm unity with the fraternal Romanian people to win the final victory of the cause of socialism and defend peace and security of the world under the uplifted banner of anti-imperialism and independence, he stressed.

Romanian Ambassador to our country Constantin Iftodi spoke next. Declaring that Romania actively supports the new initiative of Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on reunifying the country in an independent and peaceful way through the founding of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, he said that the "two Koreas" plot must be opposed, all the foreign troops be withdrawn from South Korea without delay and the Korean armistice agreement be replaced with a peace agreement.

The Romanian people sincerely wish the fraternal Korean people greater successes in the struggle for implementing the decisions of the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea and achieving national reunification, he said.

The meeting was attended by Yi Chong-mok, vice-minister of foreign affairs; and Yi Hyong-chom, secretary of the Pyongyang Municipal Committee of the Workers Party of Korea.

KPA Unit Meeting

[Text] Pyongyang, August 22 (KCNA) -- A soldiers meeting was held at the unit of the Korean People's Army to which Comrade Chon Mun-uk belongs on August 20 on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the victory of the socio-national liberation revolution against imperialism and fascism in Romania.

Speaking first at the meeting Cho Yong-kun said that the victory of the anti-imperialist, anti-fascist armed uprising in Romania was a brillian fruition of the courageous struggle of the Romanian communists and patriotic people for freedom, national independence and chajusong (independence) and a momentous event that opened a new epoch in the history of the Romanian people.

Today the Romanian people and soldiers, he said, are waging an energetic struggle for consolidating the country's independence and sovereignty and carrying out the decisions of the 12th congress of the party under the leadership of the Romanian Communist Party headed by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu.

We who value the friendly and cooperative relations with the fraternal Romanian people and soldiers will, in the future, too, make all efforts to consolidate and develop the friendship and solidarity between the two armies and fight on shoulder to shoulder with the officers and men of the Romanian Army for the victory of the cause of socialism and communism against imperialism, declared the speaker.

Speaking next, Constantin Anghel, military attache of the Romanian Embassy in Pyongyang, referred to the friendly and cooperative relations between Romania and Korea. He said: The meetings and successful talks held in Bucharest and Pyongyang between Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party and president of the Romanian Socialist Republic, and Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, have played a very important role in expanding and strengthening the relations of fraternal friendship between our two parties, two countries and two peoples.

The Romanian Communist Party and the Romanian Socialist Republic, he declared, invariably express firm solidarity with the realistic and constructive reunification programme of the Workers Party of Korea for reunifying the country by the efforts of the Korean people themselves without outside interference and extend full support to the Korean People's struggle for realising their desire to live in a prosperous reunified country.

Ambassador Constantin Iftodi and officials of the Romanian Embassy and cultural attaches of various embassies in Pyongyang were invited there.

Speeches were exchanged at the ceremony.

The attendants appreciated a Romanian feature film. Romanian feature films will be screened in Pyongyang and local cinema houses during the week.

VRPR ON KIM CHONG-IL STANDARDIZING KIMILSONGISM

[Text] [First speaker] As is known, brilliantly inheriting and making the chuche revolutionary cause resplendently blossom, the gifted leader Comrade Kim Chong-il led the revolution and construction through outstanding ideological and theoretical activities and energetic leadership. He has thus attained proud achievements which will shine forever in the history of mankind. There are many episodes of the achievements of the dear leader in inheriting the chuche revolutionary cause. In this hour, I would like to talk with you about the achievements he has attained in glorifying the great leader's revolutionary idea.

[Second speaker] A most proud achievement the dear leader comrade has attained on the road of the struggle to inherit and develop the chuche revolutionary cause is that he has standardized, developed and enriched the great Kimilsongism, the great leader's revolutionary idea.

[First speaker] The work of standardizing the leader's revolutionary idea is very difficult. This work cannot be done by everyone.

[Second speaker] Right. The work of scientifically and theoretically standardizing the leader's revolutionary idea is a very difficult and important work. This historic work cannot be done by everyone. I think the man who is endlessly faithful to the leader's revolutionary idea and cause can carry out this work. It is more difficult to standardize as a leading revolutionary ideology representing the present era the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary idea, which occupies the highest position in the history of the ideologies of mankind in its philosophical profundity, meeting the trend of the times, and to declare that the leader's revolutionary idea keeps pace with the revolution of mankind. While admiring and sympathizing with the respected and beloved leader's great revolutionary idea, we were distressed because we failed to delineate the aim of this idea.

[First speaker] The dear leader comrade has brilliantly fulfilled the ardent desire of our fellow countrymen and the world's progressive people to link the great leader's revolutionary idea to his name. Would you explain this?

[Second speaker] The man who has brilliantly accomplished the task assigned by the times as you have just noted is none other than the gifted leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. While superbly displaying pure, flawless loyalty to the great leader and striving to brilliantly accomplish the chuche cause, the dear leader comrade has mastered the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary idea perfectly through energetic, ceaseless study. While leading various sectors of the revolution, he has taken the lead in the work of standardizing the leader's revolutionary idea through creative meditation and untiring study.

[First speaker] With the brilliant fruition of lofty loyalty to the fatherly leader and ceaseless, creative meditation and study, he has finally standardized the great leader's revolutionary idea into the great Kimilsongism. Would you explain how he defined Kimilsongism?

[Second speaker] The sagacious comrade leader has elucidated that, both in terms of its current characteristics and historical status and of its ideological and theoretical contents and structural system, the great leader's revolutionary ideology is an original (?ideology) and theory that is fundamentally different from other theories. Therefore, having elucidated that ideology as the great ideology that can be linked only to the leader's (?name), he has standardized Kimilsongism in a classical fashion.

The dear comrade leader has said: Kimilsongism is the great leader's new, original ideology illuminating the road of the chuche era. Kimilsongism is, in short, a systematic way of developing and enriching the chuche idea. In other words, it is the monolithic system of the theory and method of revolution and construction, as well as an elucidation of the chuche idea and (?its foundation).

We can say that the dear comrade leader's classical standardization -- that Kimilsongism is the monolithic system of the theory and method of revolution and construction on the basis of [words indistinct] -- is a completely new and original truth, unprecedented in the history of scientific standardization.

[First speaker] The classical standardization of the great leader's revolutionary ideology, in reality, is the immortal achievement made by the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. It is a brilliant fruition of his excellent ideology, [word indistinct] and wisdom. We can say that it is a manifestation of his pure loyalty to glorify the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary ideology generation after generation. With the dear comrade leader's classical standardization of the great leader's revolutionary ideology, our nation and all mankind can enjoy the honor and happiness of linking the leader's revolutionary idea to his name forever.

[Second speaker] Right. The great leader's creation of the immortal revolutionary ideology was for the (?liberation) of mankind and a big event that has opened up a new stage in the history of mankind's development. We can say that the dear comrade leader's standardization of the great leader's revolutionary idea into Kimilsongism is the brilliant realization of the people's (?ardent wishes) to regard the chuche banner as the (?banner of mankind), while there also arises a (?demand) by world history to make the chuche idea the guiding principle for us to live by.

[First speaker] By the way, putting forth numerous new, original ideologies through energetic ideological and theoretical activities while standardizing the leading ideology of the times -- which cannot be done by everyone -- the sagacious dear comrade leader has been improving and developing, on a wide scale, all sectors in the ideology and theory of chuche.

[Second speaker] Yes, you are right. The dear comrade leader -- the thinker and theoretician of the great Kimilsongism -- has been endlessly developing and enriching Kimilsongism through energetic ideological and theoretical activities. Thanks to his original ideological and theoretical activities, the great leader's revolutionary ideology is being further developed and enriched. In recent days, he has greatly contributed to enriching the chuche idea by issuing a treatise on the chuche idea that theorizes, on a wide scale, about the [word indistinct], philosophical principle, [word indistinct] history principle, guilding principle and [word indistinct] of chuche Korea.

[First speaker] When we discuss the historical achievements made by the dear comrade leader in his sacred efforts to brilliantly consummate the revolutionary cause of chuche pioneered by the great leader, we can talk with pride about his outstanding ideological and theoretical activities. We feel great pride in thinking that his achievements will shine in parallel with the history of mankind.

[Second speaker] Thanks to the presence of the respected and beloved leader, mankind has been given the great chuche idea -- Kimilsongism -- which is the only guiding ideology for revolution and construction; with the presence of the dear comrade leader, Kimilsongism has become an ever-victorious, mighty and practical weapon, for the world, which guides mankind toward the consummation of the chuche cause.

[First speaker] Yes. I think that our South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic masses of all walks of life should be more resolute in the sacred battles against the United States and for independence, keeping deep in their heart the national pride in carrying out revolution under the banner of the great Kimilsongism while holding in high esteem the sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song and the giant guiding star [hyangdoui kosong] Comrade Kim Chong-il. Let's conclude here. Thank you.

JAPANESE DIETMEN HOLD TALKS ON TEXTBOOK REVISIONS

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 23 (YONHAP) -- Two Japanese lawmakers from the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) Monday held a detailed discussion on the proposed correction of revised Japanese history textbooks with the Korean members of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians Union here.

Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, chairman of the LDP's subcommittee on the textbook controversy, and former vice-chairman of the party's Education Department Yoshiro Mori visited Rep. Yi Chae-hyong, Seoul-side chairman of the union, to convey the Japanese stand on the controversy. The substance of the talks was not known immediately, but sources said both sides are committed to an early solution to the controversy and they indicated some proposals now under the Japanese Government's consideration.

The sources said the Japanese suggested the inclusion of "correction cards" in the revised editions, or sending similar cards to schools for reference after the commercial publication of the editions in September this year. The cards would be used until the next screening session of the "distorted" parts. The sources said the Japanese lawmakers also suggested the formation of a joint research committee to study the "distorted" historial accounts regarding past Korea-Japan relations and their correction. In addition, they asked Korean lawmakers to arrange meetings for them with Korean Education Minister Yi Kyu-ho and other high ranking Korean Government officials, sources said.

Korean representatives reportedly reconfirmed Korea's earlier stand calling for the immediate correction of the books and asked the Japanese side to disclose its official stand at an early date.

An attache who accompanied the Japanese lawmakers said Mitsuzuka and Mori visited the Korean Foreign Affairs and Education Ministries Saturday to discuss the issue. The attache added that Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki will announce the Japanese Government's official stand on the controversy in a news conference Thursday after being briefed by the two lawmakers about the results of their Korean visit.

Acting Prime Minister on Issue

[Text] Acting Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop stressed yesterday that the country needed to build up its national strength so as not to be despised by foreign nations.

Referring to Japan's recent distortion of historical facts about Korea in textbooks, he continued: "I think it is more important and urgent to rectify the Japanese standpoint than merely to make them correct a few words in their perverted textbooks." He made the remarks during a luncheon with presidents of universities and deans of colleges after their regular meeting at the Sejong Cultural Center under the sponsorship of the Education Ministry.

Indicating that excellent manpower was the only asset of the nation, poor in natural resources, he went on: "For our country to continue its development toward an advanced state, higher education institutions should play the role of fostering high quality manpower, which is essential to an industrial society."

KOREA HERALD VIEWS TIES WITH AFRICAN NATIONS

[Editorial: "Korean Ties With Africa"]

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan's current tour of Africa is remarkably expanding the avenue for cooperation between Korea and that continent in general and in particular, the countries he is visiting.

His talks with the leaders of Kenya and Nigeria, including President Daniel T. arap Moi and President Shehu Shagari, during the past week have provided a rare momentum for strengthening not only their bilateral ties but also cooperation between developing nations as a whole.

Korea and those African countries share a common colonial background which all the more intensifies their respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of nations. In fact, this respect is the very basis, as aptly confirmed by the Korean and African leaders at their summit talks, for international peace and security. Their firm commitment to this principle for national independence will continue to enhance the relationships to be developed between Korea and the African nations in the future.

As a matter of principle, cooperation between the developing countries is becoming increasingly important today; it certainly is as important as cooperation between the developed and the developing. It has been evident in the recent past that developing countries can share with each other more easily the experiences acquired in the course of their development than the developed nations can with the developing countries. In this regard, the developing nations will do well to redouble their endeavors to complement each other's development, while cooperation between the developed and the developing has to be continually stepped up.

It is gratifying that President Chon and his African counterparts went farther to explore some specific fields in which Seoul and the African nations can join hands for mutual benefit. In Kenya, the two presidents agreed to broaden and accelerate technical and economic cooperation in such areas as agriculture, livestock industry, fishing, education and science and industry, among others, through the exchange of experts and technicians. They also agreed on the need to continue regular consultations between Seoul and Nairobi in order to explore additional areas of cooperation.

Prospects for deeper Korean-Nigerian cooperation are now much brighter as a result of the cordial talks President Chon held with President Shagari during the last few days. Indeed, their warm and friendly discussion on a wide range of issues, including the prospect of political and economic cooperation between Korea and Nigeria, to all appearances outmatched the two short years of official ties between the two countries.

An agreement signed by the foreign ministers of the two countries on economic, science and technological cooperation between Korea and Nigeria will pave the way for their joint venture businesses and other industrial undertakings. Korea will be able to take part in Nigerian development programs to the extent that its experiences and know-how are useful in carrying them out. The summit discussion between President Chon and President Shagari indicates that the chance is good for the two countries to develop complementary ties in the course of their national development.

The rest of President Chon's African itinerary are also expected to be fruitful since Korea on one hand and Gabon and Senegal on the other are eager and sincere to expand their budding cooperation in various fields.

TONG-A ILBO SCORES PROPOSAL ON CAMPUS FUNCTIONS

Delivering a speech at a conference of presidents and deans of universities held on 20 August in Seoul, Minister Yi Kyu-ho emphasized the importance of maintaining an academic atmosphere on campus, saying that the creation of an academic atmosphere at colleges and universities constitutes the cultivation of national strength and a strong answer to challenges from neighbors, and recommended to the presidents and deans that from next year, universities and colleges prepare new schedules to hold campus functions, festivals and examinations after the semester ends so that possible lecture recesses due to such school activities can be prevented.

According to Minister Yi's idea, only lectures should be conducted and no students' functions, festivals and examinations are allowed during a semester and these functions, festivals and examinations are to be held during school vacation.

This idea may in a sense be regarded as one to enhance the academic atmosphere at schools. However, in light of the fact that students' functions, festivals and examinations on campus have been regarded as part of academic activities and as part of learning, Minister Yi's idea is hardly understandable. We are afraid that this idea, if adopted, would result in depriving students of the romantic atmosphere they are enjoying on campus.

Through such functions and festivals, students can mobilize their wisdom, promote mutual understanding and learn to unite among themselves. They can learn about society. Through sports activities on campus, students can temper themselves. Through examinations, they can compete with each other. Thus, these activities have been regarded as practical education.

It is not wise to recommend to universities and colleges to uniformly hold these functions only during vacation. However, it would be desirable to prepare the programs for school functions and festivals more constructively and freshly.

No one is opposed to enhancing the academic atmosphere. In the 1960's and 1970's, our universities and colleges had to face many trails. Almost annually, from the beginning of a new semester, various forms of disturbances took place. As a result, lectures had to be recessed. When a student who led a disturbance was arrested and punished, fellow students triggered another disturbance to protest this. Such chronic campus disturbances led only to the creation of hate and distrust on the campuses.

Minister Yi's remarks emphasizing the academic atmosphere in connection with the distortion in Japanese textbooks is regarded as very opportune. However, the point is whether an academic atmosphere among students can be created merely by the education minister's emphasizing it. An academic atmosphere among students cannot be created by the enforcement of an administrative order or by the education minister's administration of school affairs. An academic atmosphere imposed from outside cannot last long nor is it regarded as valuable.

We have often witnessed the fact that the Education Ministry's efforts to bind universities and colleges and to uniformly control students with the strength of administration resulted in many ill effects.

We are afraid the education minister's recommendation for holding school festivals and examinations during vacations will lead people to suspect that another intent lurks in the proposal instead of its being understood as Minister Yi's idea for enhancing the academic atmosphere.

We think that true and sincere campus functions and festivals will contribute to enhancing the academic atmosphere instead of damaging it.

WORKERS' RALLY PROTESTS UIM 'INFILTRATION'

SK200210 Seoul YONHAP in English 0204 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] Changwon, Korea, Aug. 20 (YONHAP) -- A large number of workers rallied Thursday to protest the Urban Industrial Mission (UIM), a labor rights organization, for its "harmful infiltration" into businesses in this industrial complex in southern South Korea.

About 1,100 employees of the Dongyang Machinery Corp., a major auto parts and machine tool maker in the complex, staged a rally on their firm's premises to call for an immediate stop to recent UIM activity in Korean businesses.

In the meeting, the workers adopted a three-point resolution calling for the elimination of the UIM and the creation of cooperative labor-management relations.

Yi Kwan-hi, 40, a leading member of Dongyang's trade union, told participants of the rally that UIM should be deterred to save the company and prevent a repetition of the incident at Control Data Korea (CDK).

CDK, a semiconductor maker affiliated with Control Data of the United States, was permanently closed down July 20 partly due to frequent labor-management disputes triggered by workers who were "inspired by UIM elements."

Later in the day, 1,700 workers of the KIA Machine Tool Co., Ltd. and 400 others of the Tong Myung Heavy Industries Co., Ltd. demonstrated for similar purposes in their respective companies' compounds.

Thursday's rallies were the first anti-UIM activities in this industrial complex, one of Korea's largest industrial centers. Workers of other companies housed in the industrial complex also gathered Friday to criticize the UIM. In Changwon, about 36,300 workers were employed in 122 companies as of the end of June.

[Text] At 1530 on 20 August, at the former Royal Palace, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly, signed the document ratifying the laws on resolutions unanimously approved by the National Assembly in its third session.

Among those attending this ceremony were Comrade Heng Samrin, chairman of the Council of State; Comrade Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Comrade Say Phuthang, vice chairman of the Council of State; Comrade Bou Thang, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Comrade Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Comrade Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; and all members of the National Assembly.

Contentions, Property Laws

[Text] Phnom Penh, 20 Aug (SPK) -- A ceremony was held this afternoon at the former Royal Palace in Phnom Penh at which Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly, affixed his signature on the texts of the law concerning the investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens, and the law on the protection of state property.

Present at this signing ceremony were Heng Samrin, chairman of the Council of State; Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Say Phuthang, vice chairman of the Council of State; Bou Thang, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defense; Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; and Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning. Members of the diplomatic corps accredited to Kampuchea also attended this signing ceremony.

The law on the investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens enables citizens to participate in the management of the state and society and to share in the supervision of all the activities of cadres, employees, workers and combatants serving in the various public services in order to defend the interests of the state and the collective as well as their own interests.

This law is designed to guarantee the right of all citizens to present petitions and denunciations and to increase the sense of responsibility of our leaders and cadres in the public services with regard to the examination and settlement of complaints and denunciations deposited by the citizens. This law stipulates that competent services are obligated to examine and resolve such depositions.

The other law is designed to protect the material bases of the state in order to develop the national economy. Its objective is to raise the sense of responsibility of cadres, workers and citizens with respect to management and correct and efficient use of state property. This law stipulates that all citizens have the duty of protecting state property and should pay particular attention to increasing their sense of responsibility with regard to state property.

Reception Marks Assembly's End

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Aug (SPK) -- A reception was held on the evening of 20 August in Phnom Penh to hail the success of the third session of the National Assembly, first legislature, which ended its work on that day.

Heng Samrin, chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly; Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Say Phuthang, vice chairman of the Council of State; Bou Thang, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of defence; Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; and other personalities were present.

In his speech, Chairman Heng Samrin recommended that all deputies make every effort to satisfy the aspirations of the people and the requirements of the fatherland, and defend the revolutionary gains scored by the entire people in difficult circumstances so as to build an independent and democratic Kampuchea.

The work done during the past 6 days reveals the great importance of the defense and building of the country, in particular the building of our new society, said Heng Samrin. All deputies were involved in this, having made great efforts to improve state institutions with the aim of building a new, just and prosperous society, free of any oppression.

Our enemies continue to hamper our progress and our rebirth in the hope of plunging us once more into disaster and genocide. We are determined, under the leadership of the party, to closely unite with each other -- and especially to join together with Vietnam and Laos -- to attain our goal. Our enemies can never reverse the situation in Kampuchea.

After the reception, the deputies watched an art performance.

RADIO HAILS 'SUCCESSES' OF NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SESSION

BK220918 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Station editorial: "Brilliant Success of the Third Session of Our National Assembly's First Term"]

[Summary] The third session of the National Assembly, which was held from 15-20 August 1982, has successfully concluded with brilliant results.

"During this third session, the members of the National Assembly attentively listened to reports on the activities of the Council of State and the work of the National Assembly since its second session, reports on the international situation and the diplomatic work of our party and state, as well as the situation during the first half of 1982 in various provinces and municipalities. The National Assembly also listened to and welcomed the report on the sixth conference of foreign ministers of the three countries -- Kampuchea and Vietnam. These reports witnessed the great successes and achievements scored in all fields by the entire party, army and people.

"In particular, during this session the National Assembly examined and unanimously adopted two laws -- the law on the protection of state property and the law concerning the investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens.

"The law on the protection of state property aims to raise the sense of responsibility of cadres, employees, workers and citizens to protect state propterty against destruction by the enemies, all unhealthy phenomena and abuse of power to violate state property." State property belongs to the entire people and is managed by the state. It is an important material base of the state for developing the national economy.

"The law on the investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens enables citizens to participate in the management of the state and society and to share in the supervision of all the activities of employees, workers and combatants serving in various state and social organizations in order to defend the interests of the state and the collective as well as their own legitimate interests.

"This law is designed to guarantee the right of all citizens to present petitions and denunciations and to increase the sense of responsibility of leaders and cadres of state, social and KPRAF organizations with regard to the examination and settlement of complaints and denunciations filed by the citizens."

The adoption of these two laws can guarantee the implementation of the KPRP political line and the improvement of relations between the party, state organizations and the people.

Our people have been very elated and have firm confidence in their brilliant future under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP when informed of the reports presented to the National Assembly. The great revolutionary gains recorded in all fields are efficient weapons to smash all the poisonous tricks of the Beijing Chinese expansionists colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces against the revolution and the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. Although they have created their so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea gathering the three Khmer traitorous groups led by Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, they can never obstruct the advance of the Kampuchean revolution.

"Under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the KPRP, our entire people are determined to correctly implement the laws adopted by the National Assembly, to increase solidarity with all the people, strengthen international solidarity and, in particular, to develop the militant solidarity between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos in order to defend and construct our prosperous Angkor fatherland through the transitional period advancing step by step toward genuine socialism."

KAMPUCHEA WELCOMES DECREE ON MARITIME ZONES

[Text] Since the historic great victory on 7 January 1979, the great achievements made successively in all fields -- military, political, economic, cultural, social and diplomatic -- by our people who have become masters of their land and waters are undeniable and clear. This reflects the genuinely powerful strength of our revolution in carrying out the cause of national defense and reconstruction, advancing from one victory to another and enabling the PRK to develop firmly and constantly.

The decree on delimiting the maritime zones and continental shelf of the PRK promulgated on 31 July 1982 by the PRK Council of State reaffirms the role and full rights of the PRK which is fully capable and competent to determine and exercise its legitimate sovereignty appropriately.

It is well known that no previous Kampuchean regime ever issued any official law which clearly defined Kampuchea's maritime zones and continental shelf. Such an uncertain situation permitted the enemy to use Kampuchean territorial waters in opposing the just cause of our people. Particularly, in the past more than 3 years since the liberation of our country, the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and Bangkok authorities violated our territorial waters and stealthily channeled weapons, ammunition and food supplies to the remnants of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and other reactionary Khmer groups. This was done to serve their aggressive ambitions. The Bangkok ruling circles have often committed illegal acts in our territorial waters by sending their trawlers and vessels to steal our fish and commit piracy, thus causing great losses to the lives and property of our innocent Kampuchean people. They also carried out provocations against our Kampuchean revolution.

The decree on the maritime zones and continental shelf of Kampuchea -- a legal document of Kampuchea -- has been issued in order to increase the PRK's effectiveness in defending its sovereignty and other rights with regard to its territorial waters in conformity with the KPRP's peaceful foreign policy and with the prevailing trend of the international law of the sea and law on international shipping.

Article 1 of the decree clearly defines that the full and complete sovereignty of the PRK extends beyond its territory and internal waters to a maritime zone adjacent to its coasts and its internal waters, designated by the name of the territorial waters of the PRK. This sovereignty also extends to the airspace above the territorial waters of the PRK as well as to the seabed and subsoil of these waters.

The decree clearly defines the PRK's internal waters, maritime zones, contiguous zone, exclusive economic zone and continental shelf. The maritime zones and continental shelf are of strategic significance in the defense of our fatherland against the sabotage schemes and aggressive acts of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists and other reactionary imperialist forces. At the same time, they are zones full of highly valuable natural riches which will play a significant role in rehabilitating the national economy and ensuring that the building of our country will progress rapidly.

The PRK has full rights and complete sovereignty over the maritime zones and continental shelf clearly defined in the decree dated 31 July 1982. Any passage by foreign vessels, the exploitation of natural resources in any form or scientific research in these areas must receive prior authorization or agreement from the PRK. The PRK exercises necessary control over these areas in order to oversee its security and to prevent and suppress violations of its customs, fiscal, health and emigration and immigration laws. All the reactionary forces must immediately end their illegal adventures in the Kampuchean territorial waters. Such activities are regarded as provocations which run totally counter to the principles of international law and violate the sovereignty and territorial integrity of an independent and sovereign state. The reactionary forces must bear full responsibility for any untoward incident arising from their obstinate and irresponsible activities.

All Kampuchean people warmly welcome and enthusiastically support the decree delimiting the PRK maritime zones and continental shelf which are of great significance in political and economic fields and in national defense. In close unity with all state institutions and the armed forces in charge of defending our territorial waters, all of us pledge to defend our national sovereignty and security and ensure the effective exploitation of the natural resources in our maritime zones and continental shelf, thus successfully serving our mission of defending and building our fatherland and improving the people's livelihood.

On the basis of this legal document, the PRK continues to strengthen and develop the firm bonds of Kampuchean-Vietnam friendship and cooperation, particularly to correctly implement the agreement on the historical waters signed between the PRK and the SRV in Ho Chi Minh City on 7 July 1982. This will protect the genuine interests of our two fraternal nations and accelerate the cause of defending and building our socialist fatherlands on the road of victory, thus contributing actively to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

VODK SCORES CONTINUED VIETNAMESE TROOP PRESENCE

[Text] From the beginning of this rainy season, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors have issued their tricky propaganda noting that they want to restore peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

They have said that they want to live peacefully in Southeast Asia and to have good relations and cooperation with countries in the region. Concurrently, the Vietnamese staged the Ho Chi Minh City maneuver by proposing that an international conference be convened on Southeast Asia and a safety zone be created on the Thai-Kampuchean border. They stated that they partially withdrew their troops from Kampuchea in order to express what they called their good will toward Thailand and ASEAN. Nguyen Co Thach, the chief diplomatic liar of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies, travelled to Southeast Asia to stage the tricky diplomatic maneuver of selling these intrigues.

But everybody already knows that the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies do not have any good will toward a solution to the Kampuchean problem. These Vietnamese proposals which were put forth in Ho Chi Minh City are the same as their previous succession of overtures. They are all tricky maneuvers to hide their crimes to invade and occupy Kampuchea, to commit genocide against the Kampuchean people and to destroy peace and stability in Southeast Asia. They were staged to appease the anger and to ease the pressure of the world in order to avoid the implementation of the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and to dupe the world to accept their aggression in Kampuchea as a fait accompli and to let them occupy Kampuchea forever.

The peoples of the world, especially the Southeast Asian peoples, clearly realize these dirty tricks of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies. Therefore, they have firmly denounced and rejected these maneuvers. What are the facts on the issue?

Up to now there has been a great deal of evidence to clearly show that the Vietnamese are not ready to withdraw their aggressor troops from Kampuchea as called for by the world community and in accordance with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly. But they are preparing to increase their war of aggression in Kampuchea. They are making preparations to continue to occupy Kampuchea and to advance southward in conformity with their own aggressive and expansionist strategy and those of their Soviet masters in Southeast Asia.

First, when their propaganda machine and Nguyen Co Thach stated that the Vietnamese have partially withdrawn their troops from Kampuchea, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors sent more and more of their fresh reinforcement troops from Vietnam to the Kampuchean battlefield. On 10 June, the Vietnamese enemies transported fresh soldiers in 15 trucks from Vietnam to Ponhea Krek District, Kompong Cham Province. But while the trucks were stopped these soldiers fled and returned to their country. From 20 June to 13 July, the Vietnamese enemies sent 4,300 troops in 190 trucks from Tay Ninh in southern Vietnam to Siem Reap and Battambang battlefields. On 13 July, the Vietnamese enemies transported 2,500 soldiers in 70 trucks from Moat Chruk on Route 2 in Takeo Province northward. On 15 July, the Vietnamese enemies sent 400 reinforcement troops to Phnum Srok District, Battambang Province. On 16 July, they transported 200 fresh soldiers from Vietnam to Kompong Trach. On 23 July, they sent 160 reinforcement troops to Vat Prasat, Puok District, Siem Reap Province. On 28 July, they transported 400 soldiers to Kratie town. These are only some examples of the concrete evidence.

Secondly, the Soviets — who have been the masters, supporters and accomplices of the Vietnamese in their aggression in Kampuchea since the end of 1978 — have sent more weapons, tanks and armored vehicles to the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies' troops in Kampuchea.

Thirdly, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors are sending troop reinforcements, tanks, artillery and antiaircraft cannons to the Kampuchean-Thai border, which they suggested should be a demilitarized zone, or their safety zone.

Fourthly, during his visit to Southeast Asia, Nguyen Co Thach acted to divide the ASEAN countries. He lied, cheated and threatened the ASEAN countries.

He directly threatened ASEAN when he said: The Vietnamese can organize guerrillas in the ASEAN countries, the Vietnamese have the right to retaliate against these countries; they have the right to attack Thailand in self-defense; the Vietnamese are ready to struggle against ASEAN for 5-20 years, and so forth. Concurrently, the Vietnamese have used the influence and strength of their Soviet masters to threaten everybody, such as when Nguyen Co Thach said that the Vietnamese could appeal to the Soviets to establish military bases in Vietnam. In fact, everybody realizes that the Soviets set up their military bases in Vietnam several years ago. Soviet warships and submarines, which conduct activities in the South China Sea, around Southeast Asia and in the Strait of Malacca, use naval bases in Cam Ranh Bay and Da Nang in Vietnam and in Kompong Som and Ream ports in Kampuchea.

These real events and lies, tricks and threats clearly show the most aggressive, expansionist, insolent and barbarous nature of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies. These facts indicate that the Vietnamese are not ready to withdraw their aggressor troops from Kampuchea. They do not want to live peacefully with neighboring countries in the region. They always maintain their aggressive and expansionist ambition in Kampuchea and Southeast Asia.

The Vietnamese are stubborn in maintaining their aggressive and expansionist stand with Soviet support by continuing to wage their war of aggression in Kampuchea and by implementing their expansionist strategy in Southeast Asia in order to fulfill their expansionist ambitions and those of their Soviet masters. Therefore, all nations and peoples in this region must unite with each other and with other peace and justice-loving countries in the world to stand firm on the principle of the UN Charter and the resolutions of the three sessions of the UN General Assembly, as well as the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea. They must call on and bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they immediately and unconditionally withdraw their aggressor troops from Kampuchea. They should continue to assist and support Democratic Kampuchea and the Kampuchean people who are fighting the Vietnamese aggressors until they become more active and effective.

The Vietnamese cannot be pressured to withdraw their troops in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the world's pleas, peace cannot be restored in Kampuchea and Southeast Asia cannot be peaceful and stable for a long period unless peace- and justice-loving forces maintain their principled stand and take these above-mentioned firm and tough measures in conjunction with the Kampuchean people's struggle on the battlefield itself.

VODK: SRV WITHDRAWAL KEY TO PEACE IN KAMPUCHEA

[Station commentary: "The Kampuchean Problem Cannot Be Correctly Solved as a Contribution to the Defense of Peace and Stability in the Region and the Entire World Unless Pressure Is Brought To Bear on the Vietnamese to Withdraw All Their Troops From Kampuchea"]

[Excerpt] In his address to the Indonesian Parliament on 16 August, President Suharto of Indonesia emphasized that with respect to the Kampuchean problem Indonesia's stand is the same as that of other ASEAN countries -- support for the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. As people of a sovereign state, the Kampuchean people must have the right to determine their own destiny by themselves without outside interference.

The Democratic Kampuchean state is an independent and sovereign state and is a member of the United Nations.

The war of aggression waged by the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy against Democratic Kampuchea since the end of 1978 is a most flagrant and barbarous violation of the fundamental principles of the law on international relations and the UN Charter, in particular the principles of respect for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of other countries, the principles of non-aggression and non-interference in other countries' internal affairs, as well as the principle of self-determination for peoples of all countries without external interference and pressure.

Such a violation of legal principles can never produce legitimate results. Therefore the international community rejects and does not recognize the Vietnamese aggressors' administration in Phnom Penh. All sessions of the UN General Assembly convened since 1979 have recognized the Democratic Kampuchean state as the sole legitimate and legal state of Kampuchea. Every year they also have adopted resolutions calling on the Vietnamese -- who are the aggressors in Kampuchea in violation of the principles of international law -- to promptly and unconditionally withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea and let the Kampuchean people exercise their sacred right to determine their own destiny by themselves without outside interference.

The declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea in July 1981 stressed that the basic way to correctly and permanently solve the Kampuchean problem is for the Vietnamese aggressor troops to be completely withdrawan from Kampuchea, the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Kampuchea restored and all countries guarantee not to interfere in Kampuchea's internal affairs. Such a political solution to the Kampuchean problem can make Southeast Asia a peaceful, free and neutral region.

The fact that all peace- and justice-loving forces in the world are continuing to make every effort to solve the Kampuchean problem by bringing pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they respect the principles of international law, the UN Charter and implement the resolutions of the UN General Assembly by completely and unconditionally withdrawing their troops from Kampuchea is not only a necessary measure to achieve a just and permanent solution to the Kampuchean problem, to restore peace in Kampuchea and let the Kampuchean people exercise their right to self-determination but is also a necessity to maintain and defend peace and stability in Southeast Asia and to guarantee peace and order in the entire world.

VODK: SRV TROOP REINFORCEMENTS SENT TO KRATIE

[Text] On 6 August 1982, the Vietnamese enemy sent 200 troop reinforcements from Vietnam to Prek Prasap District, Kratie Province. Most of these troops are students who were forced out from school by the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy. They were given arms and sent to fight and die for the Le Duan clique.

This is the reality of the partial Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea that Nguyen Co Thach sold in an attempt to cheat everybody in Southeast Asia recently. Since they announced that they had withdrawn part of their troops from Kampuchea, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy have successively sent hundreds and thousands of reinforcements from Vietnam to all battlefields in Kampuchea.

The world now clearly realizes that when the Vietnamese say they are withdrawing their troops it means that they will send in more reinforcements. If they say that they want peace it means that they are preparing for an expansionist war against neighboring countries.

PANEL VIEWS KAMPUCHEA ISSUE, SRV-USSR RELATIONS

Mr Thanu said that following the delivery of the tanks and long-range cannons, Hanoi had launched a new offensive on August 11 which aimed at annihilating the Kampuchean resistance forces. This had coincided with an intensified campaign by the resistance and had triggered skirmishes along the entire Thai-Kampuchean frontier, Mr Thanu said. He said that in the past six months Hanoi had committed about 10,000 troops to launch a summer offensive against the resistance forces. But the blitz was a fiasco and had resulted in about 3,000 Vietnamese troops being killed or injured. Kampuchean resistance forces had suffered about 1,000 casualties during the campaign.

He put the combined strength of the three resistance factions at between 50,000-60,000 men under arms: 40,000-45,000 Khmer Rouges; 9,000-10,000 troops loyal to Son Sann; and 3,000-5,000 Sihanoukists.

Mr Thanu said that the Kampuchean administration was controlled by a central organisation known as B-68 which was almost completely staffed by Vietnamese. The B-68 is divided into two sections: The A-40 which oversees the administration of the Heng Samrin regime and national strategic problems and the A-50 which is responsible for the Phnom Penh area. "Therefore, to negotiate for a peaceful solution in Kampuchea, one has to talk to the Vietnamese," he said.

Mr Thanu said that a conflict had developed between the Soviet Union and Vietnam over Kampuchea, of which obvious evidence was Moscow's move to provide aid directly to the Phnom Penh regime instead of channeling it through Vietnam as before. In the past three years, the Soviet Union had poured aid worth about US$1,000 million into Kampuchea via Vietnam while assistance from the international agencies totalled about US$860 million. Vietnam had siphoned off about half of this aid for its own use, Mr Thanu said.

Another panelist, Foreign Ministry Spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun, said that the Soviet Union wanted to expand its influence in Laos and Kampuchea directly instead of through Vietnam. Mr Chet said several Kampucheans and Laotians had been sent to the Soviet Union for training and the move had worsened the conflict between Moscow and Hanoi.

On the Kampuchean Coalition Government, Mr Chet said its president, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, had earned widespread support and acceptance from Khmers -- many of whom had held reservations about the formation of the Democratic Kampuchea coalition because of their hatred of the Khmer Rouge. He also said that about 600 Heng Samrin troops recently deserted their units to join the Sihanoukists.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Hanoi still held a grudge against ASEAN for what it alleged was the five's meddling in helping the three Kampuchean factions to set up a coalition government. However, Mr Chet said he was optimistic that the Kampuchean problem could eventually be resolved through peaceful means. He also asserted that the ASEAN nations had never and would never provide arms to the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government, nor had they ever conspired with China or the United States against Vietnam.

Further Report

[Text] China and ASEAN knew beforehand that Vietnam intended to invade Kampuchea in December 1978, but China took no action because it wanted Vietnam to fall into a no-win situation and also bleed economically.

This was reportedly disclosed by Mr Chet Sucharitkun, spokesman of the Foreign Ministry, at a panel discussion at the Central Security Command on Friday. Chet, who was then ambassador to Singapore, said he constantly maintained contact and carried out consultations with Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew about the important developments in Vietnam and Kampuchea and also about the imminent invasion. Some of the ominous developments pointing to Vietnamese intentions during that time were: The defection of Heng Samrin, then a Khmer Rouge officer on Kampuchea's eastern border, to Vietnam; the eventual formation of the United Front of National Salvation of Kampuchea led by Heng Samrin; and the signing of a friendship and cooperation treaty between Vietnam and the Soviet Union in November 1978.

Chet said ASEAN governments sounded out the opinion of China about the imminent invasion and were told that China was also aware of it, but that it would not try to interfere because it would like to see Vietnamese forces bogged down in Kampuchea and also suffer economically. Then on December 25, 1978, as anticipated, about 120,000 Vietnamese invasion troops marched into Kampuchea, he said.

Chet also reportedly said that China's strategy on Vietnam was to allow the Vietnamese to move ten steps ahead, then she would move just one step and when Vietnam became too arrogant and aggressive, she would teach Vietnam a lesson from time to time. He told the audience that the current situation in Kampuchea proved to be exactly what the Chinese had anticipated. He pointed out that it has been more than three years since Vietnam invaded Kampuchea and still it could not subjugate the Kampuchean people.

TALKS ON RETURN OF AN-26 TO SRV CONTINUE

BK201443 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] Negotiations are continuing between the Thai and Vietnamese authorities over the return of the Vietnamese Antonov-26 which crashlanded in Prachin Buri Province earlier this year. Thailand has asked Vietnam to pay 500,000 baht to cover the expense for disassembly and transporting the plane to Don Muang International Airport. The Thai authorities have also insisted that a commercial plane be sent to pick up the disassembled parts. Thailand has also asked Vietnam to assist in decoding the Russian script on various parts of the plane. However, Vietnam has maintained that they only want 10 parts of the plane and that they want to send a military cargo plane to U-Taphao airbase to pick up the parts.

Following the crashlanding of the plane in Sa Kaeo District of Prachin Buri, 12 Vietnamese soldiers were returned in May.

GOVERNMENT CONSIDERS MAIZE EXPORTS TO SRV

[Text] The government is considering allowing exporters to sell maize to Vietnam through the Soviet Union which will pay for the goods in cash, an informed source said yesterday.

The sale of Maize, the quantity of which is yet to be determined, will be similar in manner to rice sales to Vietnam which has already been approved by the government, the source said.

A ban on direct sales of rice to Vietnam was imposed two years ago after a Vietnamese incursion into eastern Thailand.

Exports To Be Increased

BK200929 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] Thailand will increase export volume of Thai products to Vietnam to promote trade relations between the two countries. The Business Economics Department says that export items which have bright prospects include facial tissue, fresh chicken eggs, medicine and textile products. Thailand has gained trade surplus with Vietnam for the past 5 years, with the highest amount of 423 million baht in 1979, but last year the surplus amount decreased by 99 percent when compared with that of the preceding year. This is due to the decrease in export volumes of Thai products to that country.

LOCAL CHINESE RADIO STATION ORDERED TO SHUT DOWN

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon has approved the closure of a Chinese-language radio station set up 26 years ago to counter communist propaganda.

The station, operated by the Thai Rediffusion Co. Ltd, was a state enterprise under the Public Relations Department (PRD). Its closure was recommended by the National Security Council after the move received unanimous support from the under-secretaries of various ministeries and the chiefs-of-staff of the three armed forces.

National Security Council Secretary-General Sqn-Ldr Prasong Sunsiri said that the station, which sometimes leaked into telephone lines, had outlived its usefulness. Sqn-Ldr Prasong said that there had been a steady growth in the mass media, including Chinese-language newspapers, since the station was set up. He said that because of the increasing number of Thai-Chinese who spoke Thai the station's audience was limited only to elderly Chinese. Its operation had resulted in a heavy debt burden on the PRD.

Sqn-Ldr Prasong said that the decision to order the station's closure had come as a private company had offered to take over its operation. The company was prepared to invest six million baht in the station. It is believed that the approach was rejected because it was considered difficult to prevent the station from being used for political propaganda and subversive purposes.

NHAN DAN URGES CONTACTS WITH PRC FOR RENEWED TALKS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 23 -- NHAN DAN today carries an article entitled "Our Consistent Stand on Relations With China." The article says:

A tension has existed for a long time in the relations between Vietnam and China, in spite of our unswerving goodwill and ceaseless efforts. The sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam held in Ho Chi Minh City from July 6-7 once again called on China to positively respond to the proposal of January 28, 1981 by signing unilateral or multilateral treaties of peaceful co-existence with Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. Laos and Kampuchea, as clearly stated in the conference's joint communique, fully support the goodwill proposals made by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for a resumption of the Vietnam-China talks to settle problems in their bilateral relations. In the immediate future, it is necessary to organize contacts between the two countries in preparation for the resumption of these talks.

Vietnam's sincere proposals, however, have not yet been met by China. The relations between Vietnam and China, good or bad, not only are important to the immediate and longterm interests of the people of each country; they are decisive to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

With regard to the People's Republic of China, a nextdoor neighbor, the Vietnamese party and state persistently pursue a correct, principled policy. The Vietnamese people are determined to defend their independence and sovereignty and protect every inch of their sacred territory. At the same time, they treasure the close time-honoured Vietnamese-Chinese friendship, a valuable asset shared by the two peoples. Vietnam stands for establishing friendly ties with China on the basis of respect for each other's independence and sovereignty and solving through negotiations all problems bequeathed by history and all other disputes. This unchanging policy has been many times expressed by Vietnam in official documents, in party and state leaders' statements, in constructive initiatives and practical deeds.

In the political report to the Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam on March 27, 1982, General Secretary Le Duan said: "The Vietnamese people resolutely struggle to defeat all aggressive and annexationist schemes of the Chinese authorities against our country, but we maintain intact our friendly sentiments towards the Chinese people. Maintaining the policy of friendship and good neighbourhood with the Chinese people, we stand for the restoration of normal relations between the two countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful co-existence, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and settlement of disputes through negotiations. We have repeatedly proposed a resumption of the talks which have been unilaterally suspended by China, but the Chinese side has adamantly turned down our proposals."

Reality has substantiated Le Duan's words. Looking back at what has happened in the Sino-Vietnamese relations over the recent years, one can easily see an irrefutable truth: Vietnam has not done a single thing to worsen relations between the two countries or to cause confrontation with China, and in fact, the Vietnamese people, and the Vietnamese people alone, have shown a sincere desire to settle all differences through peaceful negotiations, and have done everything for this end. Vietnam has consistently tried to take the initiative in creating favourable conditions for negotiations and to ensure their success.

Facts have also shown that contrary to Vietnam, China has shown no desire for peaceful negotiations and has never put forth any fair, logical solution to disputes between the two countries. China has tried to avoid negotiations, and whenever it had to negotiate, it made unreasonable demands with too many strings attached -- demands which cannot be accepted by any independent, sovereign country -- in an attempt to undermine talks or use them to attain what it had failed to obtain by other means.

Mention should be made of some typical cases: The FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW, dealing with Vietnam's desire to settle through peaceful negotiations the clashes initiated by the Pol Pot clique against the Vietnamese people, and exposing Beijing's part in these acts of war by the genocidal regime of Democratic Kampuchea, writes in its December 25-31, 1981 issue: "There is inescapable evidence that from the beginning he (Pol Pot) was supported and encouraged by China -- though this backing only became overt in 1978... Nevertheless, Hanoi showed restraint, continually appealing for a ceasefire."

It is still remembered that in reply to the Vietnamese constructive proposal on February 5, 1978, the Pol Pot clique, banking on Beijing's support, declared that it would sacrifice two million more Kampucheans to fight Vietnam for another 700 years in order to wipe out the 50 million Vietnamese (Phnom Penh radio, May 10, 1978).

On February 17, 1979, China sent 600,000 troops to invade Vietnam. The Vietnamese people and their armed forces fought back resolutely, delivering due counter-blows and driving the enemy back across the border. Even so the Government of Vietnam persisted in a policy of peace and negotiations. On March 2, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese side saying: "...After the complete withdrawal of Chinese troops to the other side of the historical border-line, which the two sides have agreed to respect, the Vietnamese side will be prepared to enter immediately into talks with the Chinese side, at the level of vice-minister of foreign affairs, on the restoration of normal relations between the two countries."

Its armed aggression failing, China had to enter into negotiations. Vietnam, prompted by its constant desire for neighbourly relations with the People's Republic of China, tabled an equitable, fair, reasonable three-point proposal aimed at solving urgent problems to ensure peace and stability along the Sino-Vietnamese border and to facilitate the settlement of dispute between the two countries.

In reply, China advanced an eight-point proposal, impudently demanding that Vietnam give up its policy of independence and sovereignty and follow the Chinese policy on opposition to the Soviet Union, to the socialist community as a whole, to fraternal Laos and Kampuchea, and to peace and revolution in the world. Then, unable to get the better of Vietnam through negotiating, China unilaterally broke up the first and second rounds of talks. More than two years have gone since, and the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry has ten times officially asked China to keep its promise to start the third round. But China has turned down this demand with its customary overbearing attitude. At the same time China has intensified its war of general sabotage against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam while continuing assistance to the genocidal Democratic Kampuchea and other elements who have been overthrown by the Kampuchean people to oppose the People's Republic of Kampuchea and Vietnam. China also tries to sow discord between the AEAN and Indochinese countries, pit them against each other, and prevent and undermine the trend for dialogue between the two groups, a trend which is very important to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

"Our people, despite all the atrocities committed against them by the Chinese aggressors, can clearly distinguish friends from foes. We always strive to preserve our friendship with the Chinese people and maintain neighbourly relations with the People's Republic of China." This was stated by President Truong Chinh while opening the fifth session of the Sixth National Assembly on May 28, 1979, recalling the three-point proposal made by the Vietnamese Government delegation at the first session of the first round of the Sino-Vietnamese talks on April 18, the same year.

The clear-cut, practical, correct and principled stand of the Vietnamese party and government regarding the Sino-Vietnamese relations has won world-wide support and sympathy. There are only the reactionaries in the Chinese ruling circles who are hostile to friendship between the Chinese and Vietnamese peoples, and who have avoided sincere negotiations to solve disputes and restore neighbourly relations between the two countries. Their sinister designs run counter to the interests of the Chinese people and to peace and stability in this region, and have, therefore, been condemned even in China.

Vietnam's sincere proposals which were reiterated at the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference in July last, still stand. The thing to do now is arrange for contacts in preparation for the resumption of negotiations.

RADIO CONDEMNS SINO-U.S. JOINT COMMUNIQUE

OW222354 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] On 17 August, Beijing and Washington simultaneously announced the Sino-U.S. Joint communique on the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. Western newspapers and publications call it the second Shanghai communique.

The Beijing authorities had various reactions to the United States' handling of the Taiwan issue during the past several months but the issue still could not be solved. The U.S. ASSOCIATED PRESS commented that in order for both sides to save face, the United States and China compromised on the Taiwan issue. However, people can clearly see from the communique that the United States will continue to sell weapons to Taiwan and use the Taiwan Relations Act enacted by the U.S. Congress to carry on its "two Chinas" policy. The UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL reported that Reagan delivered a speech on U.S. arms sales to Taiwan in which he reiterated that the U.S. policy as mentioned in the joint communique fully conforms to the Taiwan Relations Act.

The Beijing authorities, after a period of noisy hue and cry raised by Deng Xiaoping, will accept the neocolonial rule of Taiwan by U.S. imperialism. As U.S. Senator Goldwater pointed out, the U.S.-China joint communique on the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan was nothing but an ambiguous and totally false statement. AFP pointed out that the United States, by using this ambiguous statement, could raise the quantity and quality of its arms sales to Taiwan. For a long time, world public opinion had already noticed that Deng Xiaoping's reactions to the Reagan administration on the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan were nothing but hypocritical moves to deceive public opinion and alleviate the internal struggle among the Zhongnanhai authorities.

In fact, the common strategic interest of China and the United States, as claimed by Deng Xiaoping, is to oppose the Soviet Union and the fraternal community of socialist countries. China's future depends entirely on the pledges of the United States and Japan.

In his visit to the United States last year, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua said that the Taiwan issue was but a small problem which would not affect the developing good relations between China and the United States.

If the Beijing authorities are really concerned for the national interests and the future of their country, they should take necessary steps to recover Taiwan. Why should they bargain with the United States on this issue? It is quite apparent that the concession made by the Beijing authorities on the Taiwan issue is primarily to seek an all-out alliance with U.S. imperialism in opposing the Soviet Union, Vietnam and the fraternal community of socialist countries. As the Hong Kong magazine LOOK pointed out, Deng Xiaoping considers his "interests" as a top priority. The "interest" of Deng Xiaoping and his followers is to unite with U.S. imperialism in opposing world revolution. This runs totally counter to the genuine interest of the Chinese people.

AFP: HANOI DENIES PRC REPORT ON OPIUM SALES

[Text] Hanoi, Aug 19 (AFP) -- Hanoi has categorically denied China's accusation that Vietnam sells opium to Chinese at the two countries' border hoping to poison the Chinese people.

The report broadcast recently by Beijing radio "was an invention aimed at blackening Vietnam's reputation," authoritative Vietnamese sources said today. China had (?charged) that Vietnam had made massive efforts to increase opium production to solve the country's economic crisis.

THAI CHARGES ON BORDER INCIDENTS REBUTTED

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 20 -- According to Western reports, the Thai Foreign Ministry recently sent a note to United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar slanderously charging that Vietnamese aircraft and fishing trawlers had violated Thailand's airspace and territorial waters in May and June last.

VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to decalre that this is sheer fabrication and that Vietnam always respects the sovereignty, security and territorial integrity of Thailand. The above-mentioned fabrication and slander only do harm to the atmosphere of dialogue between Vietnam and Thailand reached through the meeting between the foreign ministers of the two countries late last month.

PARTY, STATE LEADERS GREET ROMANIAN NATIONAL DAY

It says: Over the past 38 years, the Romanian people under the R.C.P. leadership have brought about profound changes in their country. Starting with a backward agriculture and an underdeveloped industry, and devastated by fascist war, Romania has become a socialist country of modern industry, developed agriculture, advanced culture and science, with a higher and higher living standard.

The message says that the Vietnamese people rejoice at these great achievements of the fraternal Romanian people. It wishes the Romanian people under the leadership of the R.C.P. led by General Secretary Nicolae Ceausescu greater success in the important tasks set by the 12th R.C.P. Congress. It wishes for further consolidation and development of the friendship and cooperation between the two parties and governments in the interests of the two peoples, for socialism and world peace.

SPECIAL ENVOY VO DONG GIANG VISITS TANZANIA

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 20 -- Vice Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang, special envoy of President of the Council of State Truong Chinh, was received on Monday by Tanzanian Prime Minister Cleopa Msuya on his four-day official visit to the United Republic of Tanzania ending on August 17. He asked the Tanzanian prime minister to convey a letter from President Truong Chinh to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere on the seventh non-aligned summit.

Prime Minister Cleopa Msuya expressed the Tanzanian Government's approval of Vietnam's view on the necessity to coordinate all efforts to maintain and promote the unity of the Non-aligned Movement against the frenzied opposition of imperialism, old and new colonialism, Zionism, apartheid and other hegemonist forces, and to step up the struggle for peace, international security, independence, sovereignty and development of all nations.

Prime Minister Cleopa Msuya also shared Vietnam's view that the aggressive war launched by the Israeli Zionists in Lebanon to exterminate the Palestinian Resistance forces is the most blatant challenge not only to the Palestinian people and progressive Arab nations, but also to the Non-Aligned Movement and all peace and justice-loving forces throughout the world. Therefore, the Non-Aligned Movement should do its best in coordination with other peace- and progressive forces to help the Palestinian people overcome their hard trial at present and win victory for their just cause.

Prime Minister Cleopa Msuya highly appreciated the three Indochinese countries' initiative for dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries to settle their differences and make Southeast Asia a zone of peace, stability, and cooperation. This is beneficial not only for the development of each country in Southeast Asia, but also for the increase of the strength of the Non-Aligned Movement in the common struggle against imperialism and hegemonism. He asked Vice Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang to convey the friendly feelings and warm solidarity of the people and Government of Tanzania to the Vietnamese state leaders and people.

Earlier, the Vietnamese special envoy had been received by Tanzanian Foreign Minister Salim Ahmad Salim. The two sides held talks in an atmosphere of cordiality and mutual understanding on the seventh non-aligned summit.

NHAN DAN ON VIGILANCE OF PUBLIC SECURITY FORCE

[NHAN DAN 18 August editorial: "Sharpen Vigilance in Maintaining the Fatherland's Security"]

[Text] The August 1945 general uprising was a revolutionary storm which swept away the ruling machinery of colonialism and feudalism in our beloved Vietnam, and which led to the establishment of the revolutionary administration of the working class, peasants and the working people. During this period, all of the predecessors of the People's Public Security Force such as island self-defense units, worker-peasant self-defense units, scout units and anti-vice honor guard units fought heroically side by side with the revolutionary armed forces against the enemies from within and outside the country with a determination to defend the revolutionary administration -- which was then still in a state of infancy -- to protect the revolutionary gains and to safeguard the people's lives and property.

During the two wars of resistance against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists, the People's Public Security Force was an army directly involved in the struggle against the emeny's spies and scouts and the reactionaries and criminals in order to exercise the state's dictatorial rights against the enemy and to ensure democratic liberties for the people. Thousands of scouts and spies which the enemy sent to our country by air, by boat or through cross-border land routes were captured by our people, People's Armed Forces and People's Public Security Force. Most recently, spy Vo Dai Ton, who had intended to carry out an extensive plot, was captured before he could do anything. With these achievements, the People's Public Security Force contributed greatly to the people's struggle for national liberation and unification.

After 30 years of suffering from war devastation, our people had no greater desire other than to live in peace in order to rebuild their country. However, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, waged a war of aggression against our country.

Under the correct leadership of the VCP, the People's Public Security Force once again upheld the nation's heroic tradition by joining with the People's Armed Forces and the people of various strata in a persistent and indomitable struggle which defeated the enemy's two wars of aggression, thus firmly defending the country's southwestern and northern borders and maintaining political security and public order and safety.

With the aim of annexing our country, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have resorted to every malicious trick to weaken our revolutionary administration before carrying out [word indistinct] activities. They have sought to use some naive or dissatisfied persons, a number of reactionaries among certain ethnic minority groups and various bad elements in combination with the U.S. intelligence network to create new reactionary organizations in the country and abroad. They have continued sending many scouts to our country to reconnoiter and study the situation and establish contacts and bases among the people of various nationalities in the border areas while using the Hoa people to conduct propaganda distorting the situation, slandering the local authorities and sowing division among the people in an attempt to weaken our people's confidence in the party and revolutionary administration. They have taken advantage of the time when our people are facing difficulties in their economic and daily life to speak ill of our leadership organs and revolutionary administration in the hope of making a number of our people suspicious and less vigilant. They have reintroduced and aroused a debauched lifestyle in an attempt to degenerate our youths.

The Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have also colluded with the U.S. imperialists in sabotaging our economy. They have used their henchmen to carry out speculative, smuggling and [word indistinct] activities, and circulate counterfeit money and fake goods in order to disrupt the market, thus making the people's livelihood even more difficult. All these tricks are part of their strategy to expand the war against Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea on numerous fronts -- military, economic, political, cultural and diplomatic -- to create favorable conditions for inciting rebellion to overthrow the revolutionary administration and pave the way for launching a large scale war of aggression.

As a key strike force on the front to maintain political security and public order, the People's Public Security Force must make careful studies to foil the enemy's cunning schemes in the new circumstances. They must propagate, educate and motivate the people to heighten vigilance against these enemy schemes with a determination to defend the revolutionary administration and to safeguard the country's security and the people's lives. On the basis of firmly grasping the idea of proletarian dictatorship and developing the working people's collective mastery, the People's Public Security Force must steel itself to become clean and comprehensively steadfast, capable of defeating the enemy's multi-faceted war of destruction.

One of the decisive factors for the success of the People's Public Security Force's task is to develop the mass movement to safeguard the fatherland's security vigorously and widely among various enterprises, worksites, cities, hamlets and villages. Led by the party, the People's Public Security Force must unite and cooperate closely with the People's Armed Forces and various mass organizations so a combined strength can be developed to foil all the schemes and actions of the enemy's intelligence agents and spies as well as of the reactionaries and other kinds of criminals.

Sharpening vigilance and readiness to destroy any reactionary or aggressive force which dares to attempt to overthrow the revolutionary administration or to invade our beloved fatherland is the steel-like determination of the entire party and people. These are also the indomitable characteristics of the heroic People's Armed Forces and People's Public Security Force.

[Text] [Prime Minister] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed and his Singapore counterpart, Mr Lee Kuan Yew, reviewed bilateral relations, especially economic cooperation, in Kuala Lumpur this morning. The two prime ministers met without any officials present. They will continue discussions over a working lunch.

Ministers and senior officials of the two countries held talks separately. The Malaysian side was led by Acting Foreign Minister Mr Adam Adib; Minister of Labor and Manpower Datuk Mak Hon Kam; and Deputy Minister of Defense Abang Abu Bakar, with other senior officials. The Singapore side was led by Minister for Foreign Affairs and Culture Mr Dhanabalan, Minister of Defense Mr Goh Chok Tong, two other ministers and officials.

FOREIGN MINISTRY SEEKS TO IMPROVE IMAGE OVERSEAS

BK191045 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] The Ministry of Foreign Affairs will take steps to improve its external information activities. An overall review of the existing information system will be carried out and ways of improving it will be looked into.

The parliamentary secretary to the ministry, Mr Abdul Kadir Shiekh Fadzir, told newsmen this was necessary in view of evidence that various antigovernment and opposition groups were trying to subvert Malaysian students overseas in various ways. He said the government took a serious view of this and steps would be taken to ensure that they did not fall prey to these groups.

Mr Abdul Kadir said he had recently met representatives from the College and University Malaysian Students Association in Canada. The target groups on the review would be Malaysian students, Islamic international organizations and Islamic countries.

The ministry would provide up-to-date information on current issues, especially those concerned with the internal security act and labor activities.

Mr Abdul Kadir said he had been informed by the representatives that the Federation of UK and Eire Malaysian and Singapore Students Organizations had approached Malaysian students in Canada to join in antigovernment activities. However, they did not receive any response from Malaysian students there.

PRC AGREES TO IMPORT MALAYSIAN PLYWOODS DIRECTLY

[Text] China has agreed to import plywoods direct from Malaysia. The leader of the visiting Chinese trade delegation, Mr Chen Jie, promised this when the delegation met officials of the Malaysian Plywood Manufacturers Association.

Mr Chen Jie, who was representing the minister of foreign economic relations and trade, said this was in line with China's intention to establish a long-term direct trade with Malaysia. It could also help to stabilise and reduce prices. He said that one of the purposes of their visit to Malaysia was to buy plywoods.

The association's president, Mr (Chai Fuk Ling), said China had a big market for plywood and Malaysia had the capacity to fulfil the need. He recalled that China bought 300,000 cubic meters of plywood last year from Malaysia. However, a large portion of that country's import was done through third parties in Singapore and Hong Kong.

Mr (Chai) explained that the product was sold at higher prices directly than those being sold in Singapore and Hong Kong as overseas agents dealt in many products and were also involved in barter trade. Malaysia, on its part, was offering better quality plywood.

DEVELOPMENT LOAN SIGNED WITH BANKING CONSORTIUM

BK181521 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] Malaysia today secured a 2.3 billion ringgit loan from a consortium of 70 international and local banks to finance its development projects. The loan is the biggest yet raised by any country in the whole of Asia. The minister of finance, Tengku Razaleigh Hamzah, signed on behalf of the Malaysian Government.

He says the participation of so many international banks in this loan reflects the great confidence of the international banking community not only in the government's economic and financial management, but also its economic prospects.

Tengku Razaleigh adds that the country has a reserved balance of 9.1 billion ringgit, which is equivalent to 4 months import based on current prices. The government had been able to register this figure, even though the country faced a deteriorating trade balance in the first 6 months of this year.

The minister is confident the country will be able to [words indistinct] reasonable rate of economic growth next year. He says, next budget will be a mildly expansionary one. He hoped the private sector will supplement government efforts toward this need.

FINANCE MINISTER PREDICTS ECONOMIC GROWTH IN 1983

Tengku Razaleigh adds that the nation's reserves are expected to be around 9.1 billion ringgit at the end of the year, equivalent to 4 months retained import at current prices. He says the Malaysian economy is strong and has the resilience to weather the storm. Measures to maintain economic activities at the same tempo as in the past should achieve a reasonable rate of growth next year.

The minister also says the 1983 budget will be mildly expansionary.

On the 2.3 billion ringgit loan, Tengku Razaleigh says it will be drawn down progressively as and when required. He says the government will continue to seek foreign loans to supplement domestic loans for development purposes.

NEW ASSAULT RIFLE, LIGHT MACHINEGUN DEVELOPED

BK191417 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 18 Aug 82 p 13

[Excerpt] Many Singaporeans who watched the National Day parade may not have noticed, but some of the marching soldiers carried a brand new assault rifle developed locally. Also on parade by the Second Singapore Infantry Brigade was a light machine-gun, Ultimax-100, also designed and developed here. Both are developed and manufactured by a MINDEF [Ministry of Defense]-owned company, Chartered Industries of Singapore (CIS) in Jurong. They are the first to be produced by the armament factory and have been hailed as major breakthroughs for the company.

The final design for the 3.7 kg assault rifle, the Sar-80, which is cheaper, just as accurate and safer than the standard issue M-16 used by the Singapore Armed Forces (SAF), was conceived after about five years of research and testing. The model is based on two prototypes from Britain's Sterling Armament Company.

The Ultimax-100, which can fire 520 rounds per minute, was designed and developed in early 1980 by CIS as an infantry section automatic weapon. It is understood that about 1,000 Sar-80's were delivered to the SAF between late 1980 and early 1981 while an order for the Ultimax-100 machine-guns has also been placed.

Both weapons won high praise from authoritative defence journals abroad.

MARCOS HOSPITALIZED FOR PNEUMONIA 21 AUGUST

HK220010 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] President Marcos was admitted to the Veterans' Memorial Hospital yesterday because of chills, fever and cough. Dr (Eduardo Hamora) a chest specialist, was called in consultation by his personal physician, who strongly advised hospitalization because of the possibility that the president had pneumonitis. The doctors also believe that the recurrent cough is due to chronic asthmatic bronchitis. The president was advised to have complete rest without visitors until further medical advice.

Cendana's Comments

[Text] President Marcos is afflicted with slight pneumonia but is getting better. Doctors at the Veterans' Memorial Hospital, where he is confined, said they expect the infection to clear up in a week's time. In the meantime they have advised the president to take a complete rest. More on the president's condition from Information Minister Gregorio Cendana:

[Begin Cendana recording] The president's condition is improving and he is feeling better. There is some improvement in his [word indistinct] cough, according to the attending physician. The preliminary tests and chest X-ray indicate that the president has mild pneumonia. Barring any complications, Dr (Eduardo Hamora), who is the chest physician, specialist, expects the infection to resolve and clear up in a week's time. In the meantime the president is advised to continue complete rest. The response to his prescribed therapy will determine the future activities of the president that the doctors may allow. MARCOS ORDERS DECENTRALIZATION OF POWERS

[Excerpt] President Marcos has directed ministries to start delegating some functions to the regional offices and bureaus. The president said that decentralization is part of the government reorganization plan to speed up services and projects. He issued a letter of instruction to Prime Minister Cesar Virata to study how best the ministries can delegate authority.

In his letter, the president noted that many of the ministries have failed to appreciate the meaning of regionalization and delegation of authority to regional and bureau directors. Instead of delegating powers to these regional offices and bureaus, the president said, some ministries have even taken over their functions, converting these regional offices and bureaus into mere staff support offices. President Marcos stressed that this has resulted in the loss of efficiency and in the failure or delay of some of the projects.

MARCOS CALLS ON MEDIA TO STAMP OUT GRAFT

[Text] The president yesterday called on Philippine media to help stamp out graft and corruption in the government. The president said that the media must be specific in raising their charges by pinpointing erring public officials and the irregularity they are committing. By being militant, the president said, media could be a partner of government in its on-going reforms. However, the president told newsmen covering him that they should not make general statements that are not supported by facts. Media could specify details like time and place of the commission of venalities, if media representatives are restrained by ethical practice or by libel laws.

The president also admonished some members of the media for some derogatory articles written about prominent citizens and ranking public officials. Victim of these adverse write-ups include businessmen (Antonia Florendo) and (Manuel Elisande) Jr, also a Cabinet minister. Even the prime minister, the president pointed out, has not been spared by irresponsible press reports.

Cendana Hits Western Media

HK220022 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] Media Affairs Minister Gregorio Cendana has charged the Western media for its one-sided tendency to report what it sees only wrong about the Philippines. However, he said, the Western media fails to record the Philippines' efforts in overcoming such deficiencies. Cendana also deplored the Western media's bent on carrying out an anti-Filipino campaign. The recent example, he said, is the TV documentary produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation, which based its commentary on the views and opinions of embittered members of the opposition.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE POWERS STUDIED BY BATASAN

[Text] President Marcos in the "Meet the Press" program cited the importance of defining the scope of the Executive Committee as a caretaker body. Otherwise, he said, confusion, conflict or even violence might arise. The bill will be given special attention by the Batasan, assuring it of swift passage, possibly by the second week of September. Added details from (Archie Reyes):

[Begin (Reyes) recording] In a discussion the other day, the special committee reached a consensus that there are loopholes in such provisions which empower the Executive Committee to exercise the duties of the president in case of permanent disability, death, removal from office, or resignation. Leonardo Perez said these loopholes or issues would have to be resolved to ensure a smooth and orderly assumption of the presidential powers in case the president is disabled or incapacitated. The bill will be submitted to the prime minister for his approval on Monday and eventually presented to the assembly and subjected to full consideration. MANILA COLUMNIST COMMENTS ON SUCCESSION ISSUE

[Article by Apolonia Batalla: "Thoughts on Succession"]

[Text] Perfectly valid questions were raised at the caucus of KBL [Kilusang Bangong Lipunan] assemblymen.

Because of the importance of succession, there must be a law to plug the holes in the constitutional provisions. As pointed out in the caucus, it should be clear who should preside in the Executive Committee in the absence of the prime minister, whether the committee can function without the prime minister in the event of succession, and whether the committee can function in the absence of a majority of its members.

These and other important questions should be resolved by a law, especially because there are no precendents to guide action in the event the Executive Committee takes over the functions of the president.

The caucus of the KBL assemblymen and the creation of a special committee on succession seem to stress the seriousness of the administration in maintaining the tradition of orderly succession.

The implication is the ruling party, if not the president, would not countenance the use of force in the event something untoward happens to the president. For if the constitution and the laws are not clear on the details about succession, disorder might occur and force has to be used in order to reinstate law and order.

If, when succession becomes necessary, there is a deep polarization of the political forces, it may be difficult to maintain order if the constitution and the laws governing succession are defective. If there is still time but the defects are not corrected, those in power are to be blamed for the disastrous consequences in the future. For that reason the present move ought to be appreciated.

There are special circumstances that must have been taken into account by the ruling party. It must have considered the present activities of the armed dissidents, the outlawry in some provinces in Mindanao, the anti-administration agitation in some quarters, the charge that there is one-man rule and the desire of the overwhelming majority of the people for political stability under the present form of government. That mix of factors makes the matter of succession all the more important.

If the loopholes in the constitution are plugged, to grab government power by the utilization of the armed forces will no longer be a strong temptation.

Incidentally, one thing ought to be clear by now. In the event of a power vacuum it will not be the military that will assert power over the civilian leaders because the military are not trained to assume political leadership, unlike in some countries. It is rather some political leaders that are likely to use the military or some segments thereof to assume supreme political leadership.

That can be done if there is some defect in the constitution. It has been well-stated elsewhere that rarely does a leader emerge to assume supreme power without some justification in law, since he has to reckon with the minds of the people, who either condone or oppose.

Traditionally, the military have never been a factor in partisan politics. The politicos fight for ascendancy in the limited fashion of true civilian leaders, and the equation is fairly simple.

In countries where the military play a role in partisan politics, the variables are multiplied, the political equation becomes complicated, and political stability can be had only at a premium.

For the inclusion of the military in the equation implies the use of force. Politics is raised to the ultimate sense. It is not farfetched to suppose that the KBL is now actively plugging the legal loopholes to convey the message that such a scenario is not to be the fate of the people.

OPPOSITION RALLY IN MANILA 22 AUG SCORES MARCOS

Mr Laurel, 52, president of the United Democratic Nationalist Opposition (UNIDO), said at the labor rally that "martial law does not have to be reimposed here because it was never in essence lifted." He added that Mr Marcos had admitted in a televised interview last Tuesday that he was bugging and surveilling oppositionists.

The "Free Olalia rally" was held in a Roman Catholic church compound and other speakers called for the release of arrested labor leaders and a stop to government "harassment" of labor. Opposition and labor leaders called on the workers to "keep calm" and "not play into government hands" by doing anything rash. Mr Laurel said Mr Marcos' most serious admission during that nationwide telecast interview was that he had tapes of alleged conversations between "opposition leaders and terrorists." He took issue with Mr Marcos' statements that he was in fact "protecting" oppositionists, saying "all the important opposition leaders are in jail, in hiding, or in exile abroad." But Mr Laurel said the opposition party was "moving and organizing" and not staying in the comfortable confines of Manila as Mr Marcos said.

Former Senator Lorenzo Tanada, 84, said the Philippine economic and political situation was "critical" and urged workers to continue organizing quietly so they may be "ready at the right time."

MANHUNT FOR ESCAPED COMMUNIST LEADER ORDERED

[Text] A massive manhunt has been launched by the Ministry of National Defense for the capture of Jose Luneta, a top-ranking communist leader who escaped from his escort last Wednesday. Luneta is among the top CPP-NPA [Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army] personalities accused in the (Karagadan) arms smuggling case. The full story from correspondent (June Francisco):

[Begin (Francisco) recording] Reports said he was with his prison escort, identified as a Top Sergeant (Avalino Tenco) of the PC-INP [Philippine Constabulary-Integrated National Police] jail in Bagum Diwa for a dental appointment, when Luneta [words indistinct] that they drop by their house in Manila. It was there that the communist leader escaped. With the escape of Luneta, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has been prompted to order thorough review and strict implementation of maximum security measures in the handling of detainees, particularly top public order violators. In a directive to deputy defense minister for civil relations and concurrent chief of the office for detainee affairs, Carmelo Barbero, the defense chief among others ordered the suspension of the grants of passes unless impelled by reasons of extreme necessity, and that only the president or the defense minister can give the corresponding authority in case the detainee has to move out.

For his part, Minister Barbero immediately created a five-man committee to come up with the most efficacious security measures in implementing the directive of Minister Enrile.

Meanwhile prison escort Sergeant (Tenco) has been arrested and placed in the stockade. He faces charges of (?infidelity) in the custody of a prisoner. [end recording]

SUZUKI DISCUSSES TEXTBOOK ISSUE AT PRESS CONFERENCE

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Aug 23, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday the current textbook dispute involving Japan and China will be settled "without fail" before his scheduled visit to Beijing late next month. "We are now making efforts to settle (the diplomatic row) in a way satisfactory to both our parties," Suzuki said at a press conference.

Asked if the government will comply with the Chinese request, Suzuki said: "We have been exerting our utmost efforts to make the textbook descriptions better and more appropriate." "We'll take concrete action without delay," he added. "We'll achieve a settlement (of the dispute) without fail before my visit to China."

Suzuki also said at the nationally-televised news conference: "I'm prepared to make my own political judgement (to settle the controversy) if asked by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa." Miyazawa, a former foreign minister, has been in charge of crisis management to defuse the five-week old dispute.

Suzuki's remarks coincided with an editorial in the English-language newspaper CHINA DAILY which urged Japanese leaders to take swift action concerning the textbook dispute.

On other major issues raised during the 60-minute press conference, Suzuki said:

-- He will stick to his strategy of "going natural" in connection with the scheduled LDP presidential election in November. He is expected to seek reelection as top LDP executive for another two years.

-- The current state of the national budget is "very severe," referring to a yen 2.86 trillion (dollar 11.3 billion) tax revenue shortfall, produced in fiscal 1981.

-- His pledge to draw up a national budget without deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1984 is still alive.

The press conference was held to review the Diet session which ended Saturday.

AGREEMENT WITH PRC ON FISCAL 1982 LOANS REACHED

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 23, KYODO -- Japan and China reached agreement Monday -- a day ahead of schedule -- on Japanese Government loans of up to yen 65 billion (dollar 255 million) for fiscal 1982, official sources said.

Yen 45 billion will be provided for three port and railway construction projects and yen 28 billion will be in commodity loans, they said. Interest is set at 3 percent per annum and repayment is over 30 years, including a 10-year deferment.

The working-level talks scheduled for Monday and Tuesday at the Foreign Ministry in Tokyo came to an end early when Chinese officials accepted Japan's offer. Japan provided China with government loans of about yen 60 billion last year.

SUZUKI MEETS WITH UN SECRETARY GENERAL

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 24, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday his government will consider supplying necessary equipment and personnel to U.N. peace-keeping forces to help strengthen the world body's function. Japanese officials told reporters Suzuki made the statement during a 90-minute meeting with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Suzuki said Japan has been financially helping the United Nations thus far but added: "Consideration will be given to supply equipment and personnel (for U.N. forces) within the framework of the Constitution."

The U.N. chief arrived from China Monday for a six-day official visit to Japan which includes an audience of Emperor Hirohito and a visit to the A-bombed city of Hiroshima in western Japan.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi in June told the Upper House Budget Committee amendment of the self-defense law might be needed as dispatch of Japanese defense personnel abroad is now prohibited.

After the Suzuki-De Cuellar meeting, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told reporters dispatch of such personnel is a future problem, indicating the government eventually has to consider the dispatch for closer cooperation with U.N. peace-keeping activities. He said the government was considering supplying military equipment like trucks and jeeps.

Suzuki first made the proposal for strengthening the U.N. peace-keeping functions at the second special General Assembly meeting on disarmament in New York in June.

The officials quoted Suzuki as urging Perez de Cuellar Tuesday to take necessary steps to check the abuse of the veto by permanent members of the Security Council and further strengthen the secretary general's function to mediate conflicts. Suzuki also proposed to the U.N. secretary general a plan to display important documents concerning the 1945 atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the United Nations, officials said. He also expressed his desire that the huge amount of funds developing countries now spend on arms should instead be used to stabilize the livelihood of their people.

The Peruvian secretary general was reported to have expressed the hope relations between the secretary general and the permanent members of the Security Council could be improved in order to prevent abuses of their veto power. He also proposed that member nations should submit to the secretary general bank "powers of attorney" in order to give him more authority in U.N. operations.

Suzuki briefed the secretary general on the Japanese Government's role to achieve a peaceful settlement of the Kampuchean problem, and Perez de Cuellar expressed his appreciation of these efforts.

Perez de Cuellar conferred with Hajime Fukuda, speaker of the House of Representatives, and met briefly with Masatoshi Tokunaga, president of the House of Councillors, in the Diet Tuesday afternoon.

In a 15-minute meeting with Fukuda, the Peruvian secretary general said Japan has made a great contribution to the U.N. operation in political, economic and social affairs. He also appreciated the key roles Japan has taken for maintaining global peace, an essential U.N. mission.

Perez de Cuellar will go to Nasu in Tochigi Prefecture Wednesday afternoon to pay a courtesy call on Emperor Hirohito at the imperial villa there. The emperor has been staying at the villa north of Tokyo since August 13 recuperating from an illness.

SUZUKI REJECTS WATANABE RESIGNATION OFFER

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 23, KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe offered to resign from the Cabinet to take responsibility for the huge revenue shortfall in the fiscal 1981 budget, but Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki dissuaded the popular minister from doing so. Following his meeting with Suzuki Monday evening, Watanabe said at a press conference he would do his utmost to carry out his official duties.

The finance minister expressed his desire to resign in order to filfill a promise. Earlier this year, Watanabe declared he would resign if a revenue shortfall should arise when he was criticized by opposition party members for his over-estimation of tax revenue for fiscal 1981. The 1981 fiscal budget has a revenue shortfall amounting to yen 2.49 trillion (approximately dollar 9.78 billion).

The prime minister in answer to questions from the press, explained the circumstances in which Watanabe informed him of his desire to resign but Suzuki dissuaded him, telling him that it was not proper for the finance minister to resign when he is faced with the very important task of rehabilitating the deficit-ridden national finances.

INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT DECLINES AGAIN IN SECOND QUARTER

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 20, KYODO -- Japan's industrial output in the second quarter of this year dropped for the second consecutive quarterly loss due to a decline of exports, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry reported Friday.

The main indicator of the nation's production at mines and factories fell 1.6 percent in the April-June period from a year before to 146.8 against the 1975 base figure of 100 following a 1 percent decrease in the January-March period. The second quarterly decline occurred, a ministry official said, despite a 2.4 percent increase (revised) in industrial output in June after two straight monthly drops in April and May from the year ago level. The official said the second consecutive quarterly loss, the first since the third quarter of 1975, reflected the stagnant state of processing and assembly industries some 40 percent of whose output is exported.

Private plant and equipment investment notably by Japan's medium and small enterprises was also on the wane, contributing to the quarterly drop in the nation's output, the ministry official added. Shipments in the second quarter suffered a 1.6 percent decrease from a year before to 138.3 in spite of a 2.3 percent rise (revised) in June, the last month for which latest information on Japan's industrial output was available. A drop in exports of key money earners such as video tape-recorders and semiconductors, coupled with export self-restraint and the global recession, was chiefly responsible for the shipment decrease, according to MITI officials. Inventories in the second quarter stood at 118, up 1.5 percent from the corresponding quarter of last year as the ministry revised in a final report the June inventories from a 0.1 percent increase to unchanged from May.

TOSHIBA PRODUCES COMMERCIALLY VIABLE LSI CHIP

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 23, KYODO -- Toshiba Corp. has come up with what it claims to be the world's first prototype of a commercially viable large-scale integration (LSI) chip based on a compound of gallium and arsenic, it was announced Monday. Toshiba said it will be able to mass produce the new LSI chip -- replacing the conventional silicon semiconductor -- three to four years later after some technical improvements such as enhancing the degree of integration are completed. The company succeeded in burying resistors and other circuit elements into a gallium-arsenic base material with the aid of platina, a technical breakthrough no other manufacturer has yet achieved, a company spokesman said.

The new chip, of a gate-array type, measures 4.5 by 4.3 millimeters, incorporating 2,400 elements. It has 500 gates (switches). The speed of transmitting information between gates is 80 picoseconds (one picosecond is a trillionth of a second), five times the maximum speed for conventional silicon semi-conductors, the spokesman said. The new chip consumes 0.2 milliwatts, about a tenth of the electricity required for silicon versions, he added. An LSI chip based on a gallium-arsenic compound is regarded as one of the "next-generation semiconductors" suitable for giant computers for scientific calculation and other special uses.

VRPR BELITTLES REMARKS BY CHON ON AFRICAN TOUR

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Wherever he arrives on his tour of the African countries, Chon Tu-hwan tries to deceive public opinion at home and abroad and to conceal his pro-U.S. flunkeyist, traitorous crimes by raving about freedom, peace and prosperity -- all deceptive words.

On 22 August, arriving in Gabon after concluding his tour of Kenya nd Nigeria, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan has made such remarks once again. Here is an example:

Arriving in Gabon, Chon Tu-hwan unabashedly uttered such words as friendship with Africa, peace and freedom in his so-called reply speech. And in a speech made at the 23 August banquet, he babbled about such preposterous words as the North's guerrillas, acting as if he were hoping for peace. This is nothing but an act of a thief crying "Stop thief!" and the logic of an imposter who sticks to his own idea of confounding right and wrong.

As for the tour of Africa by Chon Tu-hwan, the U.S. stooge, it is part of the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers against the struggle of the African masses being waged to liberate the African continent from aggression and [word indistinct] of imperialism, racism, colonialism and Zionism. In other words, Chon Tu-hwan's visit to Africa is nothing but the play of a puppet under the behind-the-scene control and at the orders of the United States. It is no secret the rulers of South Korea, offering this land as a military base to the United States, have actively responded to the U.S. ambition to achieve world domination.

Chon Tu-hwan is a U.S. stooge, traitor of the nation, war maniac and an enemy of the nonaligned peoples. The very fact that such a guy, appearing in the African Continent with his blood-stained feet and poking his nose here and there, raves about peace and friendship as he pleases is a challenge to the African masses who are struggling for independence, justice and peace and an intolerable mockery to the peace-loving peoples of the world.

It is abominable that Chon Tu-hwan, who is colluding with South Africa, Central America and the Zionists of Israel while sending armed forces to such countries as El Salvador and Israel, should rave about the North's guerrillas. What is more, Chon Tu-hwan, who is frenziedly preparing for a war of northward invasion while begging for a permanent presence of U.S. troops in South Korea, babbled about peace and prevention of disputes. This is detestable.

His babbling about the North's guerrillas is a fabricated falsity aimed at justifying his preparations for a war of northward invasion and a plot to fabricate two Koreas. His raving about friendship is nothing but a plot to divide and disintegrate the Nonaligned Movement and his babbling about peace is a trick designed to cover up his bellicose nature. Chon Tu-hwan is a bellicose element who is not entitled to talk about peace, friendship and independence. He is a colonial puppet and an international gangster.

Chon Tu-hwan's visit to the African countries is nothing but a pitiful last-ditch effort aimed at overcoming his troubling situation and the isolation facing him at home and abroad.

Through his visit to the African countries, which is being carried out in accordance with a U.S. imperialist scenario, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan is trying to cover up his nature as a colonial stooge serving the U.S. imperialist, manic fascist, dictatorial system, in order to win support for the 1988 Olympics in Seoul from these countries and in order to justify his maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas and driving a wedge between the countries of the Nonaligned Movement so that it splits and disintegrates. But this is a foolish maneuver of a man who tries to shovel against the tide.

Our masses and the African peoples will never be deceived by Chon Tu-hwan's maneuvers and trickeries and will continue a more vigorous struggle until U.S. military occupation of South Korea comes to a halt and the flunkeyist and murderous nation-seller Chon Tu-hwan group is overthrown.

CHON CRUSHES ANOTHER ASSASSINATION ATTEMPT

["News for Soldiers" from the feature "Hour for the Armed Forces"]

[Text] In the midst of frequent assassination attempts on the life of Chon Tu-hwan, another shooting incident has taken place in recent days, attracting great attention from within and without.

According to military intelligence officials concerned, a group of army officials surrounding Kim Pok-tong, who have been expressing dissatisfaction over the discharge of Kim from the post of superintendent of the Korea Military Academy, reportedly hatched a plot to eliminate Chon Tu-hwan in a place in Seoul. Informed of this plot, Chon Tu-hwan reportedly mobilized soldiers attached to an army unit under the army security command and engaged the plotters in a long and fierce gunfight. This gunfight, according to army intelligence officials, took a heavy toll on both sides. Such gunfights, which have been taking place one after another in recent months, are interpreted as an indication that Chon Tu-hwan's days are numbered.

Voices denouncing Chon Tu-hwan's tour of Africa are also being heard even louder.

A Corporal Kim at (Ulji) unit said: With great fanfare, Chon Tu-hwan started his trip abroad. His trip abroad is the last-ditch effort of a colonial puppet. It has been an old-fashioned trick frequently employed by presidents of South Korea to make a trip abroad whenever they faced troubles at home and crises deepened. His current trip abroad is a part of his efforts to overcome the isolation facing him at home and abroad by winning popularity abroad. However, it will not work.

A Corporal Yi at (Paekma) unit said: Through his current visit to Africa, Chon Tu-hwan is trying to curb the North's growing influence in Africa and justify the two Koreas line by winning support for himself in the African countries. It is no accident that all soldiers are furious at his tour of the African countries.

'OPPRESSION' OF SOUTH KOREAN STUDENTS DENOUNCED

[NODONG SINMUN 24 August commentary: "Premeditated Political Repression"]

Reports say that the puppet clique's academic disciplinary act will be applied to all universities throughout South Korea. As they did whenever they punished the students, the puppets are attempting to make an excuse that the students were punished because of poor academic performance. This is nothing but a pretext to legalize the repression. The students, who were either expelled from schools or punished, are patriotic and conscientious students who demanded democratization of society and freedom on campus and who are discontented with outside forces' domination and interference.

The puppets' punishment of students is a heinous brigandish act to eradicate the movement of students and patriotic and democratic forces aspiring for anti-U.S. independence. How can the students, burning with ardent patriotism, idly look at the miserable situation in which national sovereignty, democratic freedom and human dignity are mercilessly trampled underfoot by the barbarous colonial terrorist rule of the U.S. imperialists and the military fascist clique?

The South Korean students are well aware that as long as the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and Chon Tu-hwan's military fascist rule are left intact, democracy, freedom on campus and desire for the fatherland's reunification can never be achieved. Thus, they courageously rose up in the sacred struggle for anti-U.S. independence. The Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique -- out-and-out stooge of the U.S. imperialists -- is exceedingly fearful of this; its fear is the very reason why it is repressing the campus.

The Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique is staging an operation to eradicate the student movement. The sacred campuses have been reduced to a military camp where fascism is rampant. The puppets have placed guards at the front gates of all schools, installed television monitoring devices and high-fidelity wall snoopers in the key points within the campus and infiltrated intelligence agents onto the campus. Thus, they are watching every move of the students.

The puppets, fabricating reactionary education laws that restrict free political activities such as the college entrance examination system, the graduation quota system, the system of appointment of professors and so forth, have bound the students with these laws. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is scheming to prevent the students' anti-U.S. struggle for independence by placing the campus under fascist rule and by tying the hands of the students.

The current punishment of students is part of the premeditated oppressive measures. The Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is attempting to expel from school and eradicate the conscientious students on the pretext of poor academic performance and is attempting to block their anti-U.S. independence, democracy and national reunification struggles by threatening them. This is, however, a foolish act of those who are scared. Nothing can oppress the spirit for anti-U.S. independence and for antifascism struggle increasing among the students. The repression will do nothing but fan the flames.

VRPR: ANTI-U.S. LEAFLETS SCATTERED AROUND SNU

[Text] Leaflets appealing for an anti-U.S. struggle for independence, which were scattered around the Seoul National University [SNU] have aroused sympathy from citizens as well as students.

The leaflets read: Fellow students: The students who have cried out against the United States and for independence are suffering in prison and are being expelled from the campus. The masses' outcry over democracy and the three rights of labor are demanding our valiant struggle. How can we hesitate under the situation in which the campus, existing for a academic study, has been reduced to a military barracks and our just struggle for independence and against the United States has been bayoneted? Aware that the anti-U.S. struggle for independence is the only path to survival, we fear nothing. Let us turn out to the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. Let us assemble and unite under the banner of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. Let us drive Yankees out of this land, overthrow flunkeyist traitor Chon Tu-hwan and put an end to the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists.

Present on the occasion were Kim Ki-nam, editor-in-chief of NODONG SINMUN and chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Journalists Union, and Kang Tok-so, vice-chairman of the DPRK Radio and Television Broadcasting Committee, and He Zhangming, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang.

Journalists Depart

It was seen off at Pyongyang Railway Station by Kim Yong-hak, director of the Publishing House of the Workers Party of Korea and vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Journalists Union; Kim Chong-hwan, editor-in-chief of PYONGYANG SINMUN; Kang Tok-so, vice chairman of the Radio and Television Broadcasting Committee of the DPRK; and He Zhangming, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang.

Charge d'Affaires ad Interim He Zhangming hosted a reception at his embassy on the evening of August 19 upon the conclusion of the delegation's Korean visit.

Head of the delegation Zuo Moye and editor-in-chief of NODONG SINMUN, Kim Ki-nam, chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Journalists Union, spoke at the reception which proceeded in a friendly atmosphere.

During its stay in Korea, the delegation visited Mangyongdae and inspected the Korean Revolution Museum, factories, cooperative farms, educational institutions and other places of Pyongyang and local areas and toured Panmunjon.

IRANIAN INDUSTRY MINISTER NABAVI CONCLUDES VISIT

Talks With Trade Minister

LD191754 Tehran Domestic Service in Persian 1630 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] Mr Behzad Nabavi, who is visting North Korea, at the head of an economic and technical delegation, today met and conferred with that country's foreign trade minister. During this meeting they discussed expansion of trade relations and the Islamic Republic's requirements in essential commodities and capital goods. It was agreed that the Government of North Korea should carry out the necessary cooperation in this field in order to supply Iran's requirements.

Mr Mohsen Nurbakhsh, the governor of our country's Central Bank, accompanied a member of the Iranian delegation, also met with the governor of the North Korean foreign trade bank today. During this meeting, they held talks on economic, banking and trade relations between the two countries. They also discussed North Korea's membership of the barter union.

It is worth mentioning that Iran is one of the main members of the barter union and managing directors of this union are chosen with Iran's proposal and its administrative affairs and development are under the supervision of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

IRNA Report on Visit

LD211842 Tehran IRNA in English 1611 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] Pyongyang, Aug. 21 (IRNA) -- Iranian Minister of Heavy Industries Behzad Nabavi, heading a delegation to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) met the Korean deputy prime minister here on Friday night.

Behzad Nabavi, speaking at the meeting, stressed an expansion of bilateral economic and political relations. In another part of his speech, Nabavi referred to the characteristics of the Islamic revolution of Iran and to the decisive leadership of Imam Khomeyni, the leader of the revolution. Nabavi also referred to the determined principles of the Islamic Republic of Iran in its foreign policy and to the common positions of the two countries which would be considered for the (?expansion) of economic, political and technical ties.

Meanwhile, Behzad Nabavi met and conferred with the DPRK deputy prime minister in charge of economic affairs on Friday afternoon.

The head of Iranian mission to DPRK also signed a letter of understanding on industrial, mines, agriculture, fishery, road and transportation and electricity fields.

According to this agreement, the amount of goods to be purchased from DPRK by the Islamic Republic of Iran in the late five months of 1982 [word indistinct] reach 70 million dollar and the figure will be 240 million dollar for 1983.

NODONG SINMUN VIEWS REVOLUTIONIZATION OF SOCIETY

[NODONG SINMUN 21 August editorial: "Let Us Continuously and Thoroughly Implement the Policy for Revolutionization and Workingclassization of the Whole Society"]

[Text] Our working class and workers, who are endlessly loyal to the party and the revolution, are effecting a new upsurge on all fronts of socialist construction, and an all-out march for the chuche orientation of the whole society is vigorously waged amid the flames of great revolutionary upsurges.

The important task facing us is to continuously and thoroughly implement the party's policy to revolutionize and workingclassize all the members of society.

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We should, above all, actively struggle to achieve the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society. The revolutionization and workingclassization of society is the inevitable demand of socialist and communist construction and the most important revolutionary duty which the party and the state of the working class should fulfill -- even after the socialist system is established.

The revolutionization and workingclassization of society is our party's strategic policy which we should adhere to on a sustained basis.

For the party and the nation of the working class to successfully build socialism and communism, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward at an early date the revolutionization and workingclassization of society as the most important revolutionary mission and stressed that this mission should be fulfilled.

The work of revolutionizating and workingclassizing the people has been vigorously carried out in the past under the correct guidance of our party. Proud exploits have been registered in this work. Through the struggle to revolutionize and workingclassize society, a basic turn was made in our people's ideological and spiritual outlook and great changes occurred in social relations. Disparity between the ranks of the working class and peasants has been drastically reduced and a great advance was marked in overall fields of revolution and construction. The actual experiences in our nation's socialist construction and today's realities clearly prove the justness and vitality of the policy for the revolutionization and workingclassization of society. We should vigorously expedite the final victory of the revolution by continuously and thoroughly implementing this policy based on previous achievements.

Waging the struggle continuously and vigorously for the revolutionization and workingclassization of all society is the inevitable demand of socialist and communist construction. We should build a firm material and technical foundation to construct communism. However, what is more important is to foster the people to become genuine communist revolutionaries. The process of building socialism and communism viewed from the point of class relations is the process of workingclassizing all members of society.

Whether we can advance toward communism rapidly or not depends on how we conduct the work of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the people. Thus, the further socialist and communist construction progresses, the more attention should be directed to the work of indoctrinating and reforming the people. We should thoroughly revolutionize and workingclassize all members of society. Only by so doing can we successfully carry out the tasks in the transitional period from capitalism to socialism, achieve the final victory of socialism and occupy the two fortresses of communism -- ideological and material fortresses -- at the same time.

Vigorously waging the struggle to revolutionize and workingclassize the whole society to revolutionize and working classize the whole society is emerging as a more important question as time passes and the revolution advances. Even after the socialist system is established, the remnants of outdated ideologies remain in the minds of the people and ideological and cultural infiltration by the imperialists continues. The people's living standard is being upgraded and their troubles and worries are removed as socialist construction progresses. Thus, a new generation with no experience in the trials of the revolutionary struggle will emerge as the main force of the revolution.

In this situation, if we neglect the work of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the people, the people would be unaware of revolutionary awareness and class consciousness. They may show reluctance to carry out the revolution and struggle, being intoxicated with the happy life.

In such a situation, we can neither advance the revolution nor firmly safeguard the gains of socialism which we have already obtained. In order to carry the revolution to the end and accomplish the cause of communism, we should vigorously and ceaselessly advance the work of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society.

Thorough and continuous implementation of the policy for revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society is an urgent demand of the current situation and the revolutionary mission.

Today, our party and people are faced with the historic mission to achieve the chuche-orientation of society and the independent reunification of the fatherland, upholding the decisions of the sixth party congress. Our people have to fulfill this grave mission in a situation more strained than ever before due to new war provocation maneuvers and national splittist maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique. This demands that we inspire the people's revolutionary zeal and solidify our revolutionary ranks politically and ideologically based on class-consciousness. The key to registering an unprecedented upsurge in socialist construction by creating the speed of the 80's in all fields of national economy is in thoroughly revolutionizing and workingclassizing the people by properly conducting the work with men.

Experience has shown we cannot mark miracles and innovation without inspiring the people's enthusiasm and ideas. The struggle to create the speed of the 80's can be successfully carried out only when we inspire the people's loyalty to the party and the leader and the spirit of self-reliance for arduous struggle so they are capable of effecting any difficult task.

Thus, we should assume the work of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the people as the basic task in the struggle for a new revolutionary upsurge. The policy for revolutionizing and workingclassizing society is a bright beacon illuminating the future of socialist and communist construction. Only when we continuously move ahead by upholding the slogan for revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society, the justness of which is full proved by revolutionary experience, can we accomplish the cause of communism under the banner of the chuche idea.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has already extensively elucidated the principle and method for successfully carrying out the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society. He is constantly deepening them to cope with the demand of developing reality.

Our party demands that we thoroughly embody all these lines by consistently upholding them. To successfully achieve the revolutionization and workingclassization of society, we should organize this struggle in accord with the characteristic nature of various classes and circles. A prerequisite in revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society is to revolutionize the working class.

Only when we thoroughly revolutionize the working class -- the most advanced class in our society and the leading class of the revolution -- can we strengthen its leading role and revolutionary qualification and advance the revolutionizing and workingclassizing of all members of society. Party organizations should intensify ideological indoctrination and organizational discipline of the working class and continuously enhance its ideological, organizational and revolutionary awareness.

In particular, we should properly carry out the work of enhancing the class consciousness and revolutionary nature of the working class of the new generation to comply with the present situation in which the new generation who grew up after national liberation constitute the cadre members in the rank of the working class. The working class in all fields of the national economy, upholding the beacon fire of the new revolutionary upsurges ignited by the party, should overfulfill this year's state targets and vigorously accelerate its advance to occupy in advance the 10 prospective goals of socialist economic construction.

By doing so the working class should perform its heavy mission and responsibility, assigned before the party and the revolution, as the main force of our revolution.

The revolutionization and workingclassization of peasants is a very important task arising in the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society. Only by revolutionizing and workingclassizing peasants can not only the revolutionary force be further strengthened and agricultural production be rapidly increased but also the class distinctions between the working class and peasants be eliminated and a classless society be realized.

By further strengthening chuche indoctrination and communist indoctrination among peasants, party organizations should firmly arm all peasants with the revolutionary ideology and collectivist spirit of the working class so that they can fully display the attitude worthy of the masters in their practical struggle.

Along with this, by conducting broad adult education work and work in popularization of science and technology among peasants, party organizations should also rapidly enhance their technological and cultural level up to that of the working class.

The rural economic sector should bring about a decisive turning point in workingclassizing peasants by pushing ahead with the work of changing cooperative ownership to popular ownership. Members of cooperative farms and all agricultural workers should vigorously struggle to make this year a bumper year and to achieve ahead of schedule the grain production goal of the 1980's by thoroughly implementing the chuche-oriented farming method with high revolutionary zeal and loyalty.

In revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society, it is still an important task to revolutionize intellectuals. Thanks to the party's correct policy on intellectuals, in our country the problem of the dual character of intellectuals has already been solved completely. Thereby, all intellectuals are serving only the working class and socialism.

However, in as much as intellectuals are apart from practical production activities and often conduct activities individually, they cannot be tempered revolutionarily and can be easily influenced by old ideologies if the struggle to revolutionize them is not steadily conducted.

We should continue to concentrate great efforts on revolutionizing all intellectuals so that they can faithfully struggle for the party and the revolution in the future, too.

The party organizations and the organs concerned should strengthen ideological education and organization life among intellectuals so that they can be educated and tempered revolutionarily. Along with this, the party organizations and the organs concerned should see to it that intellectuals learn, following the ideology, organization and discipline of the working class through their practical struggles.

Revolutionizing intellectuals is, above all, a task which they should carry out themselves. All intellectuals -- including scientists, technicians, educators, writers, artists and men of the press and publication -- should actively and constantly make every effort to revolutionize themselves. Thus, they should cherish infinite loyalty to the party and the revolution, strong revolutionary will and the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude. At the same time, they should brilliantly fulfil with high and abundant scientific and technological knowledge the revolutionary tasks imposed by the party.

Educating juveniles revolutionarily is a particularly important task in revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society. Juveniles are the future of our fatherland and the successors of our revolution. Therefore, the fate of the fatherland and the future of the revolution are influenced by how they are fostered.

In our country, under the correct leadership of the party, the work to revolutionize juveniles has been vigorously carried out. As a result, today the new generations fostered after the liberation of 1945 are playing the leading role in all fields of the revolution and construction with a revolutionary world outlook.

To continuously advance the revolution and construction and to complete the revolutionary cause of chuche generation after generation, we should vigorously continue indoctrination work for juveniles and, at the same time, should firmly prepare the new generations to be communist revolutionaries of a chuche type.

By strengthening class indoctrination and revolutionary indoctrination among juveniles, the party organizations and education organs should see to it that juveniles always remember the miserable situation our people faced in the past, forever hate the exploitation system of imperialism and resolutely struggle to smash all class enemies and to achieve the final victory of the revolution.

All juveniles should voluntarily join study activities and organizational life, actively participate in the practical struggle for socialist construction and for the defense of the fatherland and constantly temper themselves revolutionarily. Thus, they should firmly prepare themselves to become the reliable successors of the revolutionary cause of chuche.

Strengthening ideological indoctrination is the most powerful means of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the entire society.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The strengthening of ideological indoctrination for the revolutionization and workingclassization of the entire society is an important task in the ideological work of the party. The reformation of men's ideologies is a course for rooting out old ideologies left in their heads and for arming them with a revolutionary ideology. Only by strengthening ideological indoctrination work can we successfully achieve the revolutionization and workingclassization of all members of society.

Party organizations should constantly strengthen ideological indoctrination work, including the indoctrination in the party's unitary ideology, and revolutionary indoctrination among the party members and working people in conformity with the demands of developing realities. Thus, they should see to it that the party members and working people uphold and follow the leader of the revolution with firm faith and a revolutionary sense of obligation as the young communists did in the early period of the Korean revolution. In particular, they should not only see to it that all working people firmly arm themselves with the chuche idea and struggle, devoting their all for the victory of the chuche idea, but also prevent all forms of old ideologies, including flunkeyism, national nihilism and dogmatism, from infiltrating into us.

Revolutionary practice is a powerful means to reform people's ideology. People can be tempered ideologically only through their rewarding struggle to implement the party lines and policies. Through this rewarding struggle, their revolutionary outlook of the world can be more firmly established.

The party organizations should closely link the ideological indoctrination of functionaries and working people to their practical struggle for the revolution and construction, thereby seeing to it that functionaries and working people carry out their revolutionary tasks in a responsible manner with the attitude worthy of masters. By doing so, the course of carrying out the revolution can precisely be the course of revolutionization.

Organizational life is a blast furnace for ideological tempering and a school for revolutionary indoctrination. Only through strong organizational life can all people grow up to be revolutionaries who are infinitely loyal to the party and the revolution.

We should further strengthen revolutionary organizational life among party members and working people in conformity with the demands of the reality in which the work for revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society has entered a very high stage.

All party members and working people should voluntarily participate in organizational life with a correct view of organization and constantly temper themselves revolutionarily under the guidance of the organizations.

Revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society can be successfully achieved through the course of mass movements. The movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples set by unheralded heroes initiated by our party are mass movements of a new and lofty form. Therefore, they are powerful driving forces in accelerating the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society. These movements play great role in revolutionizing and workingclassizing people. This has been already proved by the practical struggle in the past.

All sectors and units should constantly follow and thoroughly implement the party policy for waging the movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples set by unheralded heroes. By doing so, they should see to it that the work for the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society is vigorously carried out in the flames of these movements.

The party is a militant organization. The party's basic mission is to indoctrinate and reform people. The party organizations should place priority on the work to revolutionize and workingclassize the whole society and constantly deepen work conducted with men — political work.

Only when all the party organizations carry out the work for the revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society in a substantial manner, with a correct method, in conformity with the enhanced ideological and mental level of people, can our revolutionary ranks firmly rally around the party and the leader and greater advances be made in the revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has achieved immortal feats in carrying out the cause of communism by advancing the policy of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society and by wisely leading the struggle to implement this policy.

Thoroughly implement the policy of revolutionizing and workingclassizing the whole society is honorable work for infinitely glorifying the great achievements of the leader and for completing the revolutionary cause of chuche to the end.

All party organizations and functionaries should keep in mind the party's intention of continuously upholding the slogan of revolutionization and workingclassization of the whole society and should effect a new turn in this work.

RECLAMATION SUCCESS CREDITED TO KIM CHONG-IL

[Text] Pyongyang, August 23 (KCNA) -- Now a long peninsula is being formed on the western coast of Korea by linking far-off islands with big dykes looking like a wall. There vast land is stretching far away to the horizon. This new peninsula is being formed by the long distance belt conveyor in Ullyul, South Hwanghae Province. The conveyor, starting from the crushing ground at a mine lot of the Ullyul mine, is a grand monumental structure capable of transporting tens of thousands of tons of scraped earth.

The construction of this belt conveyor is associated with the great feat of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, a genius of creation and construction. He boldly proposed the construction of the long distance belt conveyor there and wisely guided the project to build the grand structure. In January 1974 the dear leader put forward a plan to lay a long distance belt conveyor at the Ullyul mine, carry away mucks and hew ore in a big way for sending more iron ore to the Hwanghae iron works. He ordered a functionary to go down to the mine and acquaint himself with the situation there and work out a plan for the construction of the belt conveyor. A few days later, the functionary acquainted himself with the actual conditions of the mine and worked out a plan, and reported to the dear leader. The functionary proposed to lay a belt conveyor to the seashore.

The dear leader said that the conveyor should be laid far into the sea in a bold way, not to the seashore, and initiated a grand operation to lay the belt conveyor far into the sea. He drew red lines on the map. Red lines were drawn from Kumsanpo on the shore to Nunggum Island and, further, to Kom and Chongryang Islands and to Wolsa-ri in the south and to Sohae-ri in the north. He said that the sea would thus be dammed off and a vast land be obtained.

A gigantic battle took place in Ullyul according to the red lines drawn by him. He regularly received reports about the progress of the project and solved one by one all the knotty problems including the problem of the sea foundation work. It happened at a time when the project of laying the power transmission line in a 60 kilometre section to the electric motor room was going on. As the place was steep and the truck or tractor could not go up there, it was a difficult problem to erect electric poles there. Informed of this, the dear leader sent even a helicopter.

Thanks to the energetic guidance and meticulous care of the dear leader, the long distance belt conveyor was built on a grand scale in a brief period of time. This belt conveyor hourly carries far into the sea as much mucks as can be transported by hundreds of heavy-duty trucks. A new land as large as a county will make its appearance there.

UNC RETURNS NORTH KOREAN BODY AT MAC MEETING

[Text] Panmunjom, Aug. 24 (YONHAP) -- The United Nations Command (UNC) returned the body of an unidentified North Korean to the North Korean component of the Military Armistice Commission (MAC) at a MAC secretaries' meeting here Tuesday.

The North Korean, believed to be a soldier in his 30's, was found drowned in the upper reaches of the Imjin River in South Korea last Friday. It was the second time in four days that a MAC meeting was held for the transfer of the body of a drowned North Korean.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS NOT TO MEET LDP ENVOYS

[Text] Two Japenese dietmen, Mitsuzuka -- chairman of a special panel which Japan's LDP set up on the textbook issue -- and Mori -- former chairman of the LDP Policy Affairs Research Council's Educational Affairs Division -- who came to Seoul on the evening of 22 August on the textbook issue, began contacts with leading members of the ROK-Japan Parliamentary Union from 23 August and reportedly expressed a desire for meetings with high-ranking ROK Government officials. On this, however, the government has showed a cold response.

A government diplomatic source said on the matter: "They are not conveying the Japanese Government's official views, nor are they official Japanese Government envoys, the dispatch of which was discussed through diplomatic channels. Therefore, it will look somewhat awkward if government officials meet them." Thus, he indicated that high-ranking government officials would not meet them.

Another government source, by saying that "even if their mission is to test the ROK Government's stand, the contacts with the ROK-Japan Parliamentary Union will suffice for their purpose," also limited the scope of their contacts to meetings with ROK National Assembly members.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Korea Party [DKP], too, appeared indifferent on the Japanese dietmen's desire for a visit to DKP headquarters. On the Japanese delegation's desire to meet Yu Ok-u, DKP vice president, at party headquarters, those present at a meeting of the DKP Foreign Affairs Committee said that, since the purpose of their visit to Seoul is not clear and they have no concrete alternatives on the issue, there is no need for party officials to meet them. On the Japanese dietmen's desire to visit in the afternoon, Vice President Yu showed a lukewarm attitude by saying: "I have an appointment for today. So, I will meet them tomorrow, if I have business to discuss with them."

Further on Envoys' Visit

[Text] Seoul, Aug 24 (YONHAP) -- South Korean members of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians Union Monday demanded immediate corrections of "distorted" historical accounts in revised Japanese history textbooks and a "clear attitude" by the Japanese Government toward the textbook controversy. While meeting two Japanese lawmakers from the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), the Korean national assemblymen requested specific dates and scope for the corrections in Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's Thursday news conference, and warned that Japan must take all responsibility if the books are not corrected.

Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, chairman of the LDP's subcommittee on the textbook controversy, and Yoshiro Mori, former vice chairman of the party's Education Department, who arrived in Seoul Sunday for consultations concerning the controversy, said that "Japan's stand is to correct what should be corrected." Prior to the Monday meeting, Rep. Yi Chae-hyong, Seoul-side chairman of the union, met the Japanese and said "makeshift solutions will not be acceptable for the Korean people."

Meanwhile, Korea's leading opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP) issued a statement Monday on remarks made by Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki on the textbook controversy in a news conference the same day. The statement said: "We do not think the Japanese Government is properly dealing with the issue," and urged the Korean Government to take a "stronger" attitude toward Japan. DKP spokesman Kim Chin-pae blamed Suzuki's failure to admit the revised historical accounts are "distorted" while pledging "every effort to reach a solution" as a result of the Japanese belief that considerable mistakes do not exist in the descriptions. In the Monday news conference, Suzuki said Japan must respond "as soon as possible" to the furor, but failed to say when.

In another move, Korea's National Assembly will convene its Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday afternoon to hear Vice Foreign Minister No Chae-won testify on the government's negotiations with Japan for the correction of the books.

EXPORTS TO 'MAJOR' TRADING PARTNERS DECREASE

[Text] Seoul, August 23 (YONHAP) -- Korea's exports to its major trading partners have markedly decreased since the turn of this year, according to a Commerce-Industry Ministry report released Monday. The report showed that as of the end of May, exports to the United States and Japan decreased by 23.6 and 5.4 percent, respectively, compared with the same period of 1981. The figures also showed that exports to France, West Germany, Taiwan, Hong Kong and Singapore fell by 23.7, 18.5, 13.9, 20.6 and 10.4 percent, respectively. Last year, Korea's exports to those countries registered increases ranging from 1.9 percent (Japan) to 14.8 percent (Singapore).

Korea's imports from those countries also dwindled during the period to register an overall 7.3 percent decrease, compared with a 17.2 percent increase last year. Korea's imports from France, the United States, West Germany and Japan decreased by 23.4, 22.2, 11.5 and 3.8 percent, respectively, while Taiwan registered a slight 0.3 percent increase in exports to Korea during the period.

OFFICIAL SAYS GOVERNMENT TO INCREASE USE OF COAL

He estimated that coal consumption in the industrial sector would exceed 18.7 million tons by 1986, the final year of the current 1982-86 fifth-year economic and social development plan. The amount will include 4.6 million tons for use by general industrial firms, 6.8 million tons for power generation and seven million tons for steel-making. The expanded coal consumption will save the nation 384 million U.S. dollars a year, which would otherwise be spent to import more than 20 million barrels of Bunker C oil, the official said.

LAW ON COMPLAINTS, DENUNCIATIONS ANNOUNCED

["Text" of law on investigation and settlement of complaints and denunciations filed by citizens, read by Chem Snguon, vice chairman of the National Assembly Legislative Commission, during the third session of the First National Assembly -- recorded]

[Text] Law on the investigation and settlement of complaints and denunciations filed by citizens:

Chapter I -- General Regulations

Article 1

People's control should be established over state institutions, social organizations, people's armed forces units and the individuals concerned in these organs with the intention of creating a correct relationship among the party, state power and citizens, strengthening the force of socialism, safeguarding the state and collective interests and the legitimate interests of the citizens, ensuring the right of the citizens to lodge complaints and file denunciations, and defining duty and heightening responsibility of the heads of state institutions, social organizations and people's armed forces units and the personnel of these organs in investigating and settling complaints and denunciations filed by the citizens.

The citizens of the PRK have the right to lodge complaints, file denunciations and submit suggestions to any state institution regarding offenses which are harmful to the state and collective interests or to the legitimate interests of the citizens and opposed to policies or laws perpetrated by state institutions, social organizations and people's armed forces units or any individual of these organs.

State institutions, social organizations and people's armed forces units have the obligation to investigate and settle complaints, denunciations and suggestions of the citizens correctly in compliance with the state policies and laws, and must diligently seek the basis for the complaints or denunciations in order to help the offending state institutions, social organizations or any member of these organs amend them.

The state institutions, social organizations, people's armed forces units or individuals who are the object of the complaints or denunciations are required to take every measure to right the wrong in time, in accordance with the decision of the competent state organs.

Any activities which may obstruct the complaints or denunciations of the citizens or are intended as retaliation against those who have filed complaints or denunciations are forbidden. It is absolutely forbidden to help cover up actions of the state institutions, social organizations, people's armed forces units or the personnel of these organs who are the object of complaints or denunciations.

The victims of malfeasance should be given moral compensation or material compensation for any damage they have incurred. According to existing law, the state institutions, social organizations, people's armed forces units or the personnel of these organs who have harmed other people must make compensation for whatever damages they have committed.

Article 5

The competent organs must cooperate with organizations concerned in making investigation and settlement of complaints or denunciations.

Chapter II -- The Acceptance of Complaints and Denunciations

The citizens of the PRK may send their complaints or denunciations to or make them personally to state organs. All state organs are required to accept complaints or denunciations. State and social orgcns from the central to the district and city ward levels must establish a system for accepting the charges from the citizens. The location and date of the interview with the citizens must be made public. The organ receiving complaints or denunciations must record the content of the complaints or denunciations in a record book of changes. If the plaintiffs lodge a verbal charge, the nature of the charge should be recorded carefully, correctly and thoroughly and the plaintiffs should be asked to sign their complaints or denunciations contained in the record.

If the organ receiving the charges deems that the settlement of the complaints or denunciations is not within its jurisdiction, the charge document should then be forwarded to the organ concerned for investigation and settlement and the plaintiff should be informed of this action. However, if the plaintiffs make complaints or denunciations verbally, they should be advised to lodge complaints with the organ concerned.

Any act which may expose a secret, alter the denunciations or provide a copy of the charges in writing or on tape to the accused organ or individual is absolutely forbidden.

Complaints must not be forwarded to the organ or individual under accusation if it is deemed that such an action may be harmful to the plaintiff.

Chapter III -- The Competence and Duration of the Investigation and Settlement of Complaints and Denunciations

Article 8

Complaints against the personnel within any organ must, by duty, be investigated and settled by the head or the leading committee of that organ. Complaints against the head or leading committee of any organ must, by duty, be investigated and settled by the head or leading committee of a higher authority directly supervising that organ.

Denunciations against the personnel within any organ must, by duty, be investigated and settled by the head or leading committee of a higher authority of that organ. Denunciations against the head or leading committee of any organ considering the situation of the denunciations must be investigated and settled by the head or leading committee of higher authority directly supervising that organ or by the head or leading committee of any authority one level higher than the organ concerned.

After the competent organ has investigated and settled the charges, if the plaintiffs do not agree with the finding they may bring the complaints or denunciations to a higher authority directly supervising that organ.

Article 11

Organs having the duty of investigating and settling complaints or denunciations have the right to request the organs concerned to supply them with necessary documents. The organs to which the requests are made must answer these requests.

Article 12

The chairman of the provincial or municipal people's revolutionary committees have the duty of investigating and settling complaints or denunciations already investigated and settled by the heads of subordinate organizations or the heads of lower-level people's revolutionary committees but which the plaintiffs are dissatisfied with. The ministers and heads of organs under the direct supervision of the Council of Ministers are dutybound to investigate and settle complaints or denunciations already investigated and settled by the heads of subordinate organs but to the dissatisfaction of the plaintiffs.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers is required to investigate and settle the following complaints and denunciations:

A -- Complaints or denunciations lodged against ministers, heads of institutions directly under the supervision of the Council of Ministers and chairmen of the provincial and municipal people's revolutionary committees.

B -- Complaints or denunciations erroneously investigated and settled by the ministers, heads of institutions directly under the supervision of the Council of Ministers and chairmen of the provincial and municipal people's revolutionary committees.

The minister in charge of the control of state affairs is required to examine and submit to the Council of Ministers for investigation and settlement complaints or denunciations described in Article 13 of this law. VODK: SRV SENDS REINFORCEMENTS TO KAMPOT POSITION

This news exposed the Vietnamese aggressors' trick of their so-called troop withdrawal. Since the time they declared their partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea, the Vietnamese aggressors have sent in fresh troops, weapons and materiel from Vietnam to Kampuchea daily. This clearly shows the Kampuchean people and the world that the Hanoi declaration of a partial troop withdrawal was merely a cowardly and cheap trick.

The Kampucheans have had real experience with the Hanoi Vietnamese and are well aware of their tricky maneuvers. They know that the Vietnamese are not going to withdraw easily from Kampuchea unless they unite and persist in their struggle to force the Vietnamese to do so.

LEADERS' MESSAGE GREETS ROMANIAN NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Vientiane, August 23 (KPL) -- Kaysone Phomvihan and Souphanouvong, respectively general secretary of the LPRP CC and premier, and president of the republic and of the People's Supreme Assembly, yesterday sent a joint telegram greeting the Romanian leaders on the occasion of the 38th national day of Romanian Socialist Republic. The telegram was addressed to Nicolae Ceausescu, Nicolae Giosan and Constantin Dascalescu, respectively general secretary of RCP CC and president of the RSR, president of the Grand National Assembly and premier of RSR Government.

During the past 38 years, under the leadership of the RCP, says the message, the Romanian people have step by step scored success in national safeguarding and development which in turn has continually improved the population's standard of living. The telegram further expressed conviction that the existing relation between Laos and Romania will further be developed for the interests of the two peoples, peace and socialism.

On the same occasion, Khamphai Boupha, acting minister for foreign affairs, sent a telegram to his counterpart Stefan Andrei.

ATHIT SAYS FIGHTING IN KAMPUCHEA 'ESCALATES'

[Text] Vietnamese troops have renewed military offensives against Khmer resistance forces opposite the Thai border province of Prachin Buri, senior army officials said yesterday.

Assistant Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek said the fighting between the rival forces in western Kampuchea had escalated and resulted in spill-overs across the border into Thailand. Artillery and mortar shells fired from the Vietnamese troops landed on Thai soil and caused damage to the property of Thai villagers along the border but not one was injured, he said. He said the Vietnamese were laying seige to Khmer resistance groups' strongholds and bombarded them with artillery in the renewed offensive. But the Vietnamese attackers were also met with strong resistance from guerrillas of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government, he said.

Spokesman of the Supreme Command Lt Gen Som Khattaphan told the NATION that the Vietnamese recently sent 17 new tanks to reinforce its troops surrounding the Khmer Rouge stronghold on Phnum Malai mountain range. The number of the old Vietnamese tanks there was not known. He refused to assess the fighting situation at the major Khmer Rouge stronghold, but said the Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin forces have tried in vain for three years to liquidate the resistance base.

Gen Athit said that the Vietnamese recently fortified their bases near the Thai-Kampuchean border to facilitate the use of military hardware in their campaigns against the Khmer resistance forces. However, he said the Vietnamese would be incapable of using their tanks on the border area as the soil was soft enough to get the tanks bogged down.

[Excerpt] Ta Phraya, Prachin Buri -- More than 70 families of Thai villagers have been evacuated from a border village here following sporadic shelling by the Vietnamese-backed forces against a stronghold for Khmer resistance forces near the border. The villagers were moved from Ban Sa-Ngae, about 12 kms north of here, to Ban Khok Phrik in Tambon Thap Sadet.

Local authorities decided to evacuate the villagers after the Vietnamese-backed forces intensified their daily shelling against the soldiers of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) opposite Ban Sanlo Cha-Ngan here. The bombardment of the KPNLF's stronghold close to the Thai border began on August 18 and continued sporadically. Military sources said that at least five KPNLF soldiers were wounded almost every day and rushed to an Italian-run hospital in the district. The sources also said that two Vietnamese soldiers were arrested by a group of Thai defence volunteers near Ban Sa-Ngae on Friday.

KHMER ROUGE DESERTERS JOIN SIHANOUK FORCES

[Text] Most of the Khmer Rouge deserters who fled into Thailand from Phnum Malai last week have returned to Kampuchea to join the forces of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, according to a Moulinaka source yesterday.

Meanwhile more than 100 Khmer Rouge troops who tried to cross into Thai territory at Ban Sarongkong, about 20 kilmetres south of Aranyaprathet, were forced to turn back by Thai troops on Sunday night, military sources said.

About 100 of the 227 heavily-armed Khmer Rouge guerrillas, Mit Nari female militia and dependents who crossed into Thailand last Tuesday night were pushed back into Kampuchea, but the rest refused to return immediately and asked to be allowed to join the Moulinaka. A Thai military official said some were disarmed and sent to the Khao-I-Dang refugee holding centre. According to the Moulinaka source, the rest crossed back into Kampuchea from Surin last Friday to join the Sihanouk forces. The source went on to say that the prince has appealed for emergency food and medical aid from the World Food Programme.

Sunday's border incident could have been caused by a shortage of food, according to a senior Khmer Rouge officer. Mit Sok Phheap, deputy commander of the Khmer Rouge 474 Division, told reporters in an interview UNICEF has cut down its food distribution programme at the border from three times a month to twice. As a result, some guerrillas were trying to cross into Thailand to try to find food, he said. As the guerrillas crossed on Sunday, Thai troops of the Second Battalion, Second Infantry Regiment fired warning shots and flares, causing the approaching Khmer Rouge unit, estimated to be about 120-strong, to retreat into Kampuchea, sources said. Sources said fighting inside Kampuchea was reported as "slight" due to continuous rain. But military sources said the Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin regime has reinforced its border force with light tanks and two new battalions of troops.

USSR SAID CONSIDERING CUTBACK IN AID TO SRV

[Text] An expert on Southeast Asia at one of the universities in Thailand disclosed that the Soviet Union is reviewing a cutback in aid to Vietnam next year. The expert, who spent 2 weeks in the Soviet Union and Vietnam, interviewed senior officials in the Vietnamese Government, including Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach. He said a longstanding disagreement between the Soviet Union and Vietnam has been the question of how much aid the Soviet Union should give to Vietnam and a revision of Soviet aid will be made within the next year.

This revision stems from two factors: The Vietnamese desire to be less dependent on the Soviets and the Soviet desire for continued reducing aid to Vietnam. He said Vietnam used to depend heavily on the Soviet Union for basic consumer goods since the Vietnam war. But now that the situation is different, the dependence has lessened. Vietnam hopes that by 1985 it would not have to rely on the Soviet Union for food. He further elaborated that Vietnam views its present internal situation as rising economic recovery and rising expectation of increasing more agricultural produce step by step over the years.

Meanwhile, a recent official report said that Hanoi's debts with capitalist countries and foreign banks have increased to $1.7 billion along with its $80 million loan with the International Monetary Fund. The expert disclosed that Vietnam's problem with its southern half is becoming evident. Southern Vietnam has independent authority to conduct its own policy on a broad scale regarding economic, agricultural and trade with foreign countries, while its society is becoming isolated from the north. The problem of disintegration thus has become a major concern for Hanoi about how the present status could be maintained within the country. And this, he said, had delayed a possibility for Vietnam to create greater disturbances to its neighboring states.

BANGKOK POST SCORES VNA REBUTTAL OF THAI PROTEST

[Editorial: "Poisoning the Dialogue Spirit"]

[Text] Vietnam is upset that our government has complained to the United Nations about Hanoi's violations of Thai airspace and territorial waters.

The VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY said it was "authorised to declare that (the Thai protest) is sheer fabrication and that Vietnam always respects the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Thailand." There is more than a slight amount of debate possible over the last part of that statement, but of course Vietnam is entitled to its opinion.

What bothers us more than the VNA version of the facts of the case is the conclusion it draws. The news agancy said that because Thailand made public the facts of the cases involving Vietnamese violations of law, we are endangering "the atmosphere of dialogue between Vietnam and Thailand reached through the meeting between the foreign ministers of the two countries last month." Thailand is doing no such thing.

The "danger" and tension between our country and Vietnam comes from the east of us, from Kampuchea and Vietnam. It comes from a rock-hard position from Vietnamese authorities who insist that their "irreversible" position on a number of issues is the only right one. While Hanoi establishes a "Vietnamese-Thai" border, we are supposed to accept this. When Hanoi produces a supposed "confession" of a man claiming that high Thai authorities are trying to overthrow the Vietnamese Government, we are supposed to grin and bear it. When our own prime minister is named as a man dedicated to warfare over peace, we are not to take the right of reply.

Then, when Thailand presents its case at the United Nations, Hanoi has the gall to claim that it is Thailand which is harming relations between the two countries. Communist jargon as used in Hanoi calls this "the trick of the thief calling 'stop, thief,'" to sow confusion among bystanders. We would call it arrogance. It there is going to be any "atmosphere of dialogue" between Thailand and Vietnam, let Vietnam begin seriously discussing issues, and violations of Thai territory is as good a place to begin as any. Holier-than-thou denials poison the atmosphere of dialogue.

POLICE ARREST 'INSURGENT LEADER' 22 AUGUST

[Text] Phetchabun — A suspected communist insurgent leader who is on the most wanted list has been captured together with three other communist suspects yesterday, police reported.

Chot Sae Li, 32, and the three communist suspects were arrested in Tambon Wang Chompu in Muang District while on a mission to buy food for their "starving" comrades in Hin Rong Ka area, police said.

Police at first pounced on Chi Sae Chi, 27, after villagers noticed his suspicious behaviour while sitting at a bus terminal with several shopping bags. Chi reportedly confessed to police that he was a Hmong tribesman and a communist insurgent attached to the Tenth Unit in Hin Rong Ka. He said he came to town with two friends to buy food and medical supplies for those back in the jungle.

Later a police unit went to the village market and apprehended Charun Sae Tang, 42, and Sa-Ngeum Huatphrom or Comrade "Kamlai", 32. Both reportedly carried about 3,000 baht cash and a list of food and medical supplies to be purchased. Sa-Ngeum reportedly told police that about 100 insurgents waiting for him at the Tenth Unit in Hin Rong Ka were now starving and were frequently being attacked by government forces.

Police later arrested alleged insurgent leader Chot at a shop.

PHAM VAN DONG MEETS FORMER SOUTH REVOLUTIONARIES

OW210025 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the August revolution and National Day, 2 September, at Ho Chi Minh City's Thong Nhat conference hall Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, recently cordially met and talked with officials who previously took part in the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam, the Advisory Council, the Central Committee of the National Front for the Liberation of South Vietnam and the Vietnam Alliance of National, Democratic and Peace Forces. Also present at the cordial meeting was Comrade Nguyen Van Linh, member of the party Central Committee and secretary of the Ho Chi Minh City party committee.

Chairman Pham Van Dong solicitously inquired about the health conditions of the officials. He noted with great joy that nearly all the officials, despite their advanced age, their poor health and their being in retirement, have continued to make contributions, along with the city's people, by motivating their children and grandchildren in building and defending the Vietnamese socialist fatherland.

Chairman Pham Van Dong stressed: In the great revolutionary undertaking of our party and people, older revolutionary generations have made noble sacrifices and worthy contributions. Our people will never forget the children of nation and class who have made valuable contributions. During the intimate encounter, the officials were very moved to see Chairman Pham Van Dong again. Many of them expressed constructive views to help the party and state develop its fine achievements and repel and check negativism in production and social life. All those present were of the view that, in order to uphold the glorious traditions of the August revolution and National Day, 2 September, now more than ever everyone must make contributions, strive to overcome all difficulties, promote overall production, gradually enhance all social aspects, and wholeheartedly care for the spiritual and material life of the worker to make our people wealthy and our nation strong and to fulfill venerated and beloved Uncle Ho's ardent aspirations and earnest recommendation in his sacred testament.

Meets HCM City Intelligentsia

[Text] Amidst the enthusiasm and pride brought about by the historic days of August, more than 100 intellectuals of both sexes from different sectors and disciplines representing the Ho Chi Minh City intelligentsia happily met at the Thong Nhat conference hall to greet Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, and to report to him about their work, feelings and aspirations. Many overseas Vietnamese intellectuals from France, Italy, the FRG, Belgium and Japan who are visiting the homeland also attended the meeting. Present were Comrade Nguyen Van Linh, secretary of the city party committee, and several members of the standing bodies of the city party committee and the city people's committee.

Chairman Pham Van Dong conveyed his cordial greetings to the socialist intelligentsia of the city and said: Today is a good opportunity to cordially meet together, talk to one another and jointly resolve practical problems to further increase our contributions to the cause of socialist construction in the city as well as throughout the country as a whole.

In the sincere and openminded atmosphere, many intellectuals took turns reporting to Chairman Pham Van Dong about their efforts to overcome the immediate difficulties while carrying out scientific-technological activities in support of national construction and defense. Some of them informed the comrade chairman of their living conditions and the quality of their scientific training and research activities at present; and at the same time, they suggested a number of measures for employing scientific-technological workers and organizing their activities in accordance with the specific conditions of the country.

Doctor of Oceanography (Bui Thi Can), Doctor of Economics Nguyen Xuan Oanh, Engineer (Huynh Thien Tong), Prof Doctor of Chemistry (Chu Pham Ngoc Son) and Prof Ly Chanh Trung -- who had met Chairman Pham Van Dong when he visited the city early in 1981 -- reported the results of the work they had promised to perform for the chairman at the previous meeting.

On behalf of the city party and people's committees, Comrade Nguyen Van Linh welcomed the diverse and constructive views presented by the intellectuals and stressed: The city party and people's committees will continue to create favorable conditions for the city's intellectuals -- socialist intellectuals as Chairman Pham Van Dong puts it -- to make ever bigger contributions to the nation's great revolutionary cause.

Chairman Pham Van Dong heartily praised the intellectuals for their valuable contributions in the past. He expressed concern over the difficulties facing their activities and urged them to strive to surge forward constantly to fulfill their missions as socialist intellectuals trusted by the party and the people. The chairman pointed out: Socialist construction is a great undertaking and a totally new and very difficult, complex task, especially in the case of our country -- a country with a poor and backward economy that went through decades of devastation by war. Therefore, to achieve success everyone must develop for himself great confidence, firm determination and a highly creative spirit.

He continued: Formerly we, with bare hands, fought with confidence in the final triumph of the revolutionary cause and achieved glorious victory. It must also be said that, along with fighting and winning victory, we also succeeded in building a powerful People's Armed Forces and developing the Vietnamese military science and art. I think that since we already succeeded in the military and national defense field, there is no reason for us not to succeed in other fields. Therefore, it is necessary to stress that today, in this glorious socialist revolution, we will certainly overcome all difficulties, build socialism successfully, defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland firmly and lead our people to a plentiful, civilized and happy life. This conviction is based on history and science.

Chairman Pham Van Dong instructed the Ho Chi Minh City party and people's committees to study the diverse views presented by the intellectuals and gradually overcome the difficulties and obstacles to their efforts in scientific-technological research and application as well as their livelihood. He expressed the hope that each intellectual will work according to his conscience and make concrete contributions to the great undertaking now being vigorously carried out by our entire party and people.

With resounding and prolonged bursts of applause, the intellectuals at the meeting expressed their deep feelings and determination to carry out the instructions cordially given by respected and beloved Chairman Pham Van Dong.

SUZUKI MOVES TOWARD SETTLING TEXTBOOK ISSUE

[Excerpts] Kanonji, Kagawa Pref., Aug 25, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki took another step toward settling the current textbook dispute Wednesday when he said the government will put concrete measures in a statement to be issued shortly concerning the diplomatic row. He said the statement will be ready in a day or two after talks with two Liberal-Democratic Party members, who returned to Tokyo Wednesday from Seoul.

On Monday Suzuki said the government will try harder to make the textbooks and the accounts they carry better and more appropriate. This was interpreted as the first official indication that the government may comply with a Chinese and South Korean demand for correction of "distortions" in the history textbooks about Japan's conduct in the two countries before and during World War II.

But Suzuki said at Wednesday's news conference that the government statement will not specifically refer to any particular "distortion" that may be corrected. "Rather it will be in line with our idea to make the textbooks reflect basic descriptions more correctly," Suzuki said. Suzuki also said the government will produce a general policy and that how it will be carried out is up to the Education Ministry, empowered to screen the textbooks. He ruled out the possibility of revising the high school history books before they are used starting next school year.

Ogawa Urges Caution

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 25, KYODO -- Education Minister Heiji Ogawa has asked the prime minister not to go too far in favor of China and South Korea in the current dispute over Japanese textbooks, government sources said Wednesday.

The request, made Tuesday, followed Monday's news conference in which Suzuki indicated his readiness to comply with the Chinese and South Korean demand for correction of "distortions" in Japanese textbooks about Japan's military activities in the two countries before and during World War II.

The sources said Ogawa reminded Suzuki that the Education Ministry is in charge of dealing with the textbook controversy. "We will regret it if we make pledges (to China and South Korea) which we cannot carry out," Ogawa was quoted as saying.

Ogawa and Suzuki met for 50 minutes to discuss the dispute which has developed into a major diplomatic issue clouding Japan's relations withthe two countries. Ogawa had planned to visit China early next month but the Beijing Government has withdrawn its invitation to him, saying he is "unfriendly" toward the country.

Dietmen Return From ROK

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 25, KYODO -- Two officials of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) returned here Wednesday after talks with South Korean officials on the current textbook dispute.

They were due to meet Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa later in the day to brief him on their four-day visit to Seoul. Miyazawa, a former foreign minister, is in charge of a government crisis management team to defuse the diplomatic row involving Japan, South Korea and China.

The LDP officials -- Hiroshi Mitsuzuka and Yoshiro Mori -- tried, but apparently failed to convince the South Koreans that the Japanese Government has been making every possible effort to settle the dispute. South Korea has officially demanded correction of "distorted" descriptions in Japanese school textbooks about Japan's conduct during its 1910-45 colonial rule of Korea.

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 25, KYODO -- Two Dietmen, who returned home Wednesday from South Korea where they discussed the textbook issue with South Korean officials, called for a prompt political decision to be made by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to settle the diplomatic row.

Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, chairman of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's subcommittee on the textbook issue, and Yoshiro Mori, former chairman of the party's Education Department, reported on their discussions with Korean officials, including Education Minister Yi Kyu-ho, to LDP Secretary General Susumu Nikaido and other top party officials.

Later, at a press conference, they told reporters that they got the Koreans to understand the Japanese textbook-screening system and Japan's move to revise the criticized accounts in history textbooks concerning Japan's colonial rule of Korea before and during the last war. They indicated that a solution to the diplomatic row would be possible if Japan meets Korean demands to the maximum within the framework of the present textbook-screening system. They added that the textbook issue is a question touching the Korean people's pride, soul and heart as well as their hardships under the Japanese rule and that such points should be incorporated in a government statement to be issued on the issue.

SAKURAUCHI: CIVILIANS TO BE SENT TO NAMIBIA

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 24, KYODO -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi accepted a United Nations request that Japan provide civilian personnel to assist a U.N. peacekeeping force in Namibia, southwest Africa, supervise a ceasefire and elections. The foreign minister told U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar Japan would send the personnel at a meeting between the two in Sakurauchi's office Tuesday.

The secretary general had asked Japan to provide the assistance to the international peacekeeping force in the troubled African country, Foreign Ministry officials said. It will be the first personnel contribution by Japan to U.N. peacekeeping activities.

Although final arrangements are yet to be made, negotiations are udnerway among parties concerned for the independence of Namibia, now under the military control of South Africa. According to the agreement reached so far, the ceasefire between the South African forces and the South West African People's Organization (SWAPO) guerrillas will be followed by elections to a constituent assembly which is to finalize a constitutional platform for independence, the officials said. They said that the elections would take place early next year.

During the 70-minute meeting, Sakurauchi suggested the secretary general make a proposal to restrict the abuse of veto rights by the five permanent members of the Security Council in order to strengthen the peacekeeping functions of the world body, according to the officials. Perez de Cuellar, however, replied that a proposed amendment in the U.N. Charter, which is necessary to restrain the use of the veto, would most likely be vetoed, they said. He said he would rather improve the authority of the secretary general to counter the use of the veto.

In regard to the North-South problem, Sakurauchi told Perez de Cuellar that the industralized nations have agreed to start global negotiations for a new economic order by respecting the framework of existing international economic organizations. The Japanese foreign minister asked the secretary general to urge developing countries to start global negotiations.

The countries of the South are insisting on a new order of currency, trade and energy free from existing international institutions and are hesitating on the negotiations. The secretary general pledged to explain to the developing nations global negotiations would bring benefits to them and that they should be flexible.

MITI 1983 BUDGET REQUEST REPORT DETAILED

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 24, KYODO -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry has made a budget request to create a national reserve system for rare metals which have taken on greater significance in the face of unstable supply, ministry officials said Tuesday.

They said the ministry is requesting a 810 million yen ($3.2 million) appropriation for the project which will supplement a private-level reserve structure for which the state is providing 490 million yen ($1.9 million) in the current fiscal year. State stockpiling of rare metals like nickel and chrome is necessary, the ministry stated in a budget request report for fiscal 1983, to guarantee the nation's economic security.

..e officials said that the ministry's 1983 budget proposal, which was presented to the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, contained a 25 billion yen ($98 million) request for revitalizing Japan's ailing basic industries such as aluminum and petrochemical. A senior ministry official estimated that Japan's aluminum production cost per ton is around 500,000 yen ($1,960) while the market price of the metal has dropped to below 300,000 yen ($1,176) today from some 450,000 yen ($1,764) two years ago. Additionally, MITI is demanding 2.85 billion yen ($11.2 million) for development of so-called "fifth generation" computers as part of an international effort to promote industrial cooperation in the high technology field.

These projects were contained in the ministry's 846.71 billion yen ($3,320 million) request in the government's fiscal 1983 general account budget. The ministry request for the next fiscal year starting April 1, 1983 means an increase of about 7 percent, 55.54 billion yen ($218 million), from the current fiscal year.

MITI is also asking for 12.99 billion yen ($50.9 million) for the quasi-governmental Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO), up from 11.82 billion yen ($46.4 million) in the current fiscal year, in a drive to contribute to the revitalization of the world economy and establish harmonious trade ties with other countries. The total, said Shigeo Nuraoka, director of the ministry's General Coordination Division, includes a 230 million yen ($900,000) appropriation for setting up industrial cooperation and technology exchange centers in New York, London, Paris and six other major cities. Also included in the JETRO budget request was 1.36 billion yen ($5.3 million) for creation of trade and industry promotion and cooperation centers in the Philippines and Malaysia. Japan already maintains centers in Indonesia and Thailand to promote closer relations with the countries.

NODONG SINMUN SEES CHON'S AFRICA TRIP AS 'TRICK'

[NODONG SINMUN 24 August article: "Enemy's Nature Cannot Be Hidden Under the Mask of Friend"]

Prattling about diversifying export markets and securing raw materials, the puppet clique is also intensifying maneuvers to make economic inroads into these countries. However, such unseeming acts by the puppets are rejected and denounced wherever they go.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The South Korean puppet cannot approach the Third World countries nor does it have the qualifications to do so. South Korea is a U.S. colony and there are U.S. imperialist military bases in South Korea. The South Korean puppets are collaborating with the U.S. imperialists in their brutality. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is not even qualified to approach the nonaligned countries, which are aspiring for independence and struggling against imperialism.

South Korea is a U.S. colony and the puppet clique is a U.S. perpetrator. The South Korean puppet clique cannot move even one step without receiving control and direction from its U.S. masters, and it cannot live even for a moment without being comforted in the bosom of its masters. This being the case, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, offering South Korea to the U.S. imperialists as a complete colony and military base, assumes as its mission faithful execution of the U.S. imperialist masters' colonial enslavement policy.

Speaking about the U.S. imperialists, whom the puppets worship as their savior, they are the arch enemy of the Third World peoples. In the past, imperialists like the U.S. colonized the Third World countries and forced the people of the Third World to serve as slaves. Today, they are ceaselessly committing military intervention and subversive acts to crush the struggle the people of the Third World countries are waging to achieve national independence and to build a new society.

By becoming a dirty stooge of the imperialists, the flagrant enemy of the people of the Third World, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is now challenging the people who are struggling against imperialism and aspiring for independence. The anti-imperialism and independence aspirations of the people of the Third World countries and the Chon Tu-hwan clique's pro-U.S. flunkeyist and traitorous acts are incompatible; therefore, the Chon Tu-hwan clique can never mingle with the peoples of the Third World.

Also because of its crimes committed against the anti-imperialism and national liberation cause of the peoples of the Third World countries, the Chon Tu-hwan clique cannot go shoulder to shoulder with the newly emerging countries. The criminal acts committed by the South Korean rulers to crush the struggle for national liberation waged by the peoples of the Third World are still vividly remembered by the people of the world. In particular, Chon Tu-hwan, when he was serving the former dictator, was the first to rush to the battlefield of the U.S. imperialists' war of aggression against the Vietnamese people and to randomly massacre people there who rose to achieve their just cause, thus emerging as a nefarious enemy of the peoples of the Third World countries.

Together with the former dictator, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique activly protected and supported the Israeli aggressors, the enemy of the Arab peoples and, under collusion with the African racists, committed indelible crimes against the peoples of the Third World countries by running riot in a bloodthirsty effort to strangle the struggle waged against imperialists and for national liberation of the African peoples.

Even today, the puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique is fulfilling its duty as a shock brigade for the U.S. imperialists' aggression against the Third World. The puppets are actively participating in the U.S. imperialists' criminal maneuvers aimed at disintegrating, splitting up and defeating the Third World countries and nonaligned nations one after another. The fact that the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan, while touring Southeast Asian countries last year, preached the U.S. imperialists' strategy to dominate the Pacific and openly raved about strengthening its military bloc is a concrete manifestation of this. The fact that the U.S. imperialist bosses praised the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique for contributing to the restoration of the friendly ASEAN countries' confidence in the United States through its tour of those countries clearly shows that the puppets are performing the aggressive scenario of the U.S. imperialists.

Particularly, the puppet clique's nature as a shock brigade executing the U.S. imperialists' aggressive strategy is clearly shown in the fact that the clique is strengthening political and military collusion with the Israeli aggressors and the South African racist clique. As soon as he usurped power, the puppet clique called in the Israeli ambassador and promised active support for Israel. The puppet clique is expanding cooperation in the military field with the Israeli Zionists, South African racists and the traitorous clique of Taiwan, clearly showing that the puppet clique is a partner of the U.S. imperialists in executing their aggressive policy against the peoples of the Third World countries.

Facts indict the nature of the Chon Tu-hwan clique as the flagrant enemy of the peoples of the Third World. The puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique is anxious to infiltrate into the nonaligned nations by pretending to be a friend of those countries, because the South Korean puppet clique is isolated in the international community for its criminal policy of following the United States, for its suppression of the people and for perpetuation of national division.

As a result of the puppet clique's economic policy that depends on the outside forces, the South Korean economy is in trouble because of a shortage of raw materials and a lack of funds and markets.

By making inroads into the nonaligned nations, the puppet clique is trying to separate them from the anti-imperialists' struggle for independence front and to make them follow the U.S. imperialists in order to avoid its own isolation in the international community. It also tries to perpetuate national division by winning support for its splittist lines from the nonaligned nations and to rescue its sagging economy from bankruptcy by depending on the rich raw materials and fuel of the Third World countries. But this is a preposterous daydream. It is a foolish act for a colonial stooge without a bit of independence to try to join the ranks of independent countries.

The wily attempt on the part of the enemy of the Third World to pretend to be their friend will not work. The peoples of the Third World are raising their vigilance against the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is flirting with them with a sword up its sleeve.

No matter how cunning a mask it may employ to cover up its nature it cannot deceive the people. The more the clique tries to appear to be friendly to the peoples of the nonaligned nations, the stronger will be the hatred and denunciation evoked from these countries.

NODONG SINMUN ON U.S. 'INTERFERENCE' IN NICARAGUA

[Text] Pyongyang, Aug 20 (KCNA) -- Commenting on the ever more undisguised anti-Nicaraguan campaign of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, NODONG SINMUN Friday says: The U.S. imperialists must give up their anachronistic dream of solving all things with "strength" and promptly renounce their aggression and intervention scheme against the Nicaraguan people.

The author of the commentary, captioned "U.S. Imperialists Must Withdraw Their Interfering Hands From Nicaragua," notes that the aggressive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys against Nicaragua are escalating.

He further says: The aggressive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the Honduran reactionaries are leading the situation around Nicaragua to an ever higher pitch of strain and creating a grave situation in which another war of aggression might break out.

The Korean people bitterly denounce their aggressive moves against Nicaragua and express firm solidarity with the Nicaraguan people in their struggle for defence of the nation's sovereignty and independence.

The aggression and intervention scheme of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys against Nicaragua is aimed at strangling the Nicaraguan revolution in its cradle and keeping off its influence ever growing in Central America.

The victorious advance of the Nicaraguan revolution is a powerful inspiration to the Latin American people who have risen up in an anti-U.S., anti-dictatorship struggle for democracy and dealt a hard blow to the U.S. imperialists and their placemen.

Upset by this, the U.S. imperialists are resorting to vicious acts to destroy the Nicaraguan revolution, hating it as a thorn in the flesh. The anti-Nicaraguan campaign of the U.S. imperialists, which is becoming more undisguised day by day, is their ridiculous act for crushing the Nicaraguan revolution with "strength."

The world progressive people who love peace and justice are actively supporting the struggle of the Nicaraguan people against the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys and unanimously denouncing the criminal acts of the U.S. imperialists and the Honduran reactionaries against the Nicaraguan people.

TANJUG NOTES IRAQ NOT TO HOST NONALIGNED SUMMIT

[KCNA identifies this as a "pool" item]

[Text] New Delhi, Aug 20 (TANJUG) — A Yugoslav delegation headed by Radovan Vlajkovic, member of the Presidency of Yugoslavia, arrived here this morning and started an exchange of views with its Indian hosts on the most important international problems, especially the non-aligned countries' activity aimed at ensuring the successful holding and outcome of the seventh non-aligned summit. Another topic of discussion is further development of cooperation between the two traditionally friendly countries which are among the founders of the movement of non-alignment.

In New Delhi, it has been recalled that India, after Iraq had self-sacrificingly resigned its role as host to the seventh summit, officially indicated its readiness to organize a new summit meeting of the non-aligned countries, provided the other members of the movement agreed to that.

The Yugoslav delegation has arrived in India after the visits to Bangladesh and Nepal. In all its official and other meetings in Dacca and Katmandu, the vital place and importance of the movement of non-alignment in the endeavours for maintaining and strengthening world peace and stability was always stressed by both sides. It was also pointed out that it was essential to consolidate the unity of the movement of non-alignment and ensure all the necessary conditions for a successful holding of the seventh non-aligned summit.

BURMESE INFORMATION MINISTER ARRIVES FOR VISIT

[Text] Pyongyang, August 21 (KCNA) -- A government cultural delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by U Aung Kyaw Myint, minister of information and concurrently minister of culture, arrived in Pyongyang on August 20 by plane. The delegation was met at the airport by Yi Chang-son, minister; and Chang Chol, vice-minister of culture and arts; and Chang Se-kuk, vice-chairman of the Committee for Cultural Relations With Foreign Countries; and other personages concerned.

Administration Council Banquet

[Text] Pyongyang, August 21 (KCNA) -- The Administration Council of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea arranged a party at the People's Palace of Culture on the evening of August 20 in honour of the government cultural delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma on a visit to our country.

Minister of Culture and Arts Yi Chang-son spoke first at the party. He said that the friendly and cooperative relations between Korea and Burma are growing strong and developing in all fields on the basis of the intimacy established between the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and the respected leader of the Burmese people His Excellency Chairman U Ne Win.

Noting that the new changes taking place in Burma today prove the correctness of the independent policy of the Burmese Government, the speaker said: We will as ever actively support and encourage the just cause of the Burmese Government and people vigorously advancing along the road of independence.

Head of the delegation U Aung Kyaw Myint, minister of information and concurrently minister of culture, spoke next. He expressed thanks for the warm hospitality accorded the delegation from the moment of its arrival in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Saying that the friendly and cooperative relations between Burma and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea have strengthened and developed since the establishment of diplomatic relations in 1975, the speaker expressed joy over the close cooperation between the two countries in cultural, art, economic and other domains.

The participants raised glasses to the friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Burmese peoples, to the good health and long life of the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, to the good health and long life of the respected leader of the Burmese people His Excellency Chairman U Ne Win and to the good health and long life of His Excellency President U San Yu.

NODONG SINMUN ON WORK TO CREATE SPEED OF 80'S

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today, our people's revolutionary enthusiasm and fighting spirit are very high and the nation's overall situation is very good. The party organizations at all levels and leading functionaries should organize and execute all tasks in a responsible manner, assuming an attitude worthy of maters. They should win the brillant victory in this year's struggle by actively inspiring the revolutionary zeal and initiative of the masses.

Formulating the organizational and command work is an important task that our functionaries should always see to in carrying out the revolutionary tasks. It is an urgent demand for leading the struggle to create the speed of the 80's.

Functionaries are the commanding staff of the revolution who directly organize and lead the execution of the party's lines and policy. The teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and all works for execution of the party's policy are organized, marked, controlled and executed by them. Therefore, the question as to whether the party's lines and policy are correctly carried out or not depends on how carefully and meticulously the functionaries formulate the organizational and command work. Without organizational and command work, the functionaries' activities cannot be possible by any means. We cannot talk about their loyalty to the party and the leader without this work.

The functionaries who implement the policy and tasks put forward by the party in a timely manner by formulating the organizational and command work and who make the masses' enhanced revolutionary zeal be reflected in actual results of the tasks are functionaries faithfully working for the party and revolution, for the fatherland and the people.

The socialist society is a highly organized society in which everything functions in a systematic way and all the people live and move collectively. Therefore, nothing could be successful in the socialist society if there were no support from correct organizational and guiding work. In particular, we cannot advance the socialist economy even one step farther unless we formulate economic organizational work and production command work at a time when the scale of the socialist economy has expanded and the relations between each domain of national economy and between each production process have become complex.

Economic organizational work and command of production are the prerequisites for socialist economic construction. We could make brillant achievements by continuously creating the Chollima speed, the vinalon speed, the Pyongyang speed and the 70-day struggle speed, which surprised the world's people, because economic functionaries in all domains and units properly carried out economic organizational work, commanded battles and produced and constructed more by enhancing the masses' revolutionary zeal and using the existing labor power, existing facilities and existing material.

The struggle to create the speed of the 80's -- a new advancing speed -- is being a vigorously waged on all fronts of socialist construction, upholding the party's appeal. Those who should organize and command this struggle are none other than our functionaries. The potential for creating the speed of the 80's lies in the people's ideology and the functionaries' organizational work. When the functionaries deeply mingle with the masses and actively conduct the political work for them, inspiring their initiatives, and when they formulate economic organizational work and command production to fully utilize all the elements of production, an uncommon speed can be created.

In creating the speed of the 80's by planning and coordinating organizational and command work with the fighting spirit in which they enacted Chollima upswings in the postwar period and with the ambitious spirit in which they displayed the might of the speed battle in grand socialist construction, economic functionaries in all domains of the people's economy should endlessly illuminate the history of great revolutionary upswings created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and more greatly demonstrate the glory and dignity of chuche Korea advancing under the party's leadership, continuously effecting renovations.

More important in formulating organizational and command work to create the speed of the 80's is for all leading functionaries to correctly grasp the party's intentions contained in the party's policy by deeply studying the latter.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's teachings and the party's policies embodying them are the only leading lines for revolution and construction and the criteria for establishing correct methods in all work. They delineate keys to all problems raised in organizing and leading production -- including organizing and mobilizing the masses and searching and mobilizing inner reserves -- not to mention clear directions and tangible ways to carry out all work.

For this reason, all leading functionaries should correctly grasp the essence and demands of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's teachings and the party's policies set forth on every occasion. And, on the basis of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's teachings and the party's policies, they should establish plans and organize and execute them.

By establishing a revolutionary study atmosphere, functionaries should develop themselves into experts and deeply study and seize the party's lines and policies. Moreover, they should steadily acquire a variety of knowledge needed for revolution and construction. Economic guidance functionaries, in particular, should possess a variety of knowledge and skills, studying well to acquaint themselves with their major fields.

Organizational and command work is creative work. However clear directions and methods may be and however correctly plans may be laid, we cannot achieve successes unless we carry out organizational and command work in a positive and creative manner in accordance with given circumstances.

Under the circumstances in which, upholding the party's line of effecting great revolutionary upswings in socialist construction, we are advancing at full speed, creating the speed of the 80's, countless complicated and difficult problems urgently awaiting solutions are being raised.

These urgent problems awaiting solutions are being raised due to different conditions and experiences. For this reason, no problem can be correctly resolved in a single way. So, on the basis of the party's policy, our functionaries should mobilize their wisdom and make desperate efforts to settle the tasks assigned to them with their own abilities and wisdom.

In conformity with the demand of the creation of the speed of the 80's, economic guidance functionaries, in particular, should closely combine the work of organizing and mobilizing the masses to search for inner reserves and vigorously stage the movement for technical innovation according to their level of preparedness and the economic tasks assigned to their units.

To carry out organizational and command work well, functionaries should go down to the producing masses and deeply grasp realities. As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The working masses are our teachers and our encyclopedia.

When they go down to the masses, participate in meetings and exchange conversations with them, functionaries can seize what should be urgently resolved in the struggle to create the speed of the 80's and can find keys to solutions. Furthermore, they can carry out organizational and command work in a substantive way based on their grasp of reality.

Recognizing that going down to the masses, learning from them and, based on their ability and wisdom, executing tasks assigned to economic guidance functionaries are our party's traditional work method, all economic guidance functionaries should give priority to going down to the masses.

Functionaries should go down to the masses, work in conformity with the demand of the work method advanced by the great leader and responsibly organize and lead the struggle to implement the party's economic policy. Along with this, functionaries should set practical examples for the masses, find out their problems and demands and resolve them in good time.

By increasing the role of the party's organizations, the party's organizations should correctly lead all functionaries to carry out organizational and command work well. The party's organizations and three revolutions team members in all domains and at all units of the people's economy should further strengthen the work of explaining and having permeate deeply into functionaries the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's teachings on the work of organizing the economy and leading production. And they should make functionaries faithfully work for the party, the leader, the fatherland and the people.

Along with this, the party's organizations should not only guarantee conditions in which, in conformity with the demand of the great leader's work method and the anti-Japanese guerrilla work method, all leading functionaries can go down to the masses and work with them, but should also strengthen the party's guidance to leading functionaries so that they can mobilize party members and workers in the method of one functionary mobilizing ten party members and workers, 10 functionaries 100 party members and workers and 100 functionaries 1000 party members and workers.

In particular, the party's organizations should make functionaries work in the manner of masters. Also they should make functionaries greatly display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude.

Our functionaries are responsible persons in charge of directly executing the party's policy and commanders leading the producing masses.

By responsibly formulating economic organizational and command work to implement well the party's plan for effecting great upsurges in socialist construction by creating the speed of the 80's, functionaries should illuminate the 1980's as the most proud and glorious decade.

EDUCATION MINISTER MEETS JAPANESE DELEGATION

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 25 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Education Minister Yi Kyu-ho said Tuesday Korea will not "make any diplomatic deal" to resolve its demand for corrections of "distorted" historical accounts in revised Japanese textbooks, adding that "the longer Japan drags on, the tougher Korea will be." The highest education official in Korea said: "If Japan hurts the national prides and traditions of Korea and other Asian countries, it will create very serious problems internationally."

Meeting with two visiting Japanese lawmakers from the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), Yi said: "In a similar dispute between West Germany, Poland and the United States after World War II, those countries cooperated with each other with amicable attitudes."

Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, chairman of the LDP's subcommittee on the textbook controversy, and Yoshiro Mori, who arrived in Seoul Sunday for consultations over the controversy, replied that "the Japanese Government has pledged to correct the 'distorted' historical accounts in the textbooks." Mitsuzuka said the Japanese Government regrets its past actions before and during the Japanese colonial rule in Korea (1910-1945), while Mori apologized for the "controversial textbook descriptions" on behalf of the Japanese Cabinet and the LDP.

Assembly Views Textbooks

SK250148 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 25 Aug 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs No Chae-won told the National Assembly yesterday the government will give greater priority to resolving the textbook dispute than any other issue pending between Korea and Japan.

In testimony before the Foreign Affairs Committee, No said the textbook controversy affects the Korean people's independence and self-respect. The government, he said, will give top priority to make Japan redress the distorted historical facts concerning Korea on all outstanding issues between the two countries.

Touching on Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's press conference Monday, he said the government thinks that Japan's top leader expressed his intention to correct the distortions. As Suzuki fell short of mentioning the timing and method of correction in his news conference, the government will map out proper countermeasures, closely watching the movements in the Japanese Government, he said. The vice minister said he does not believe that Japan will discriminate between Korea and Mainland China in settling the textbook issue. The government is launching diplomatic efforts to solve the dispute apart from the outstanding issue of Korea's request for public loans, he said. The government, he said, will ensure the textbook dispute will not be affected by the loan request.

The vice minister asserted a "rightful awareness of the past history between Korea and Japan" may be the starting point of the reformulated relationship of friendship and good neighbors. "The government's short-term objective is to have Japan correct distortions in modern history voluntarily and willingly," he said. The government's mid- and long-term objective calls for Japan to right erroneous descriptions of Korea-Japan relations in ancient and medieval history, he explained. He said it is rather difficult for the government to map out proper measures for the textbook dispute, since there apparently is a split between conservative and progressive forces of Japan on the issue.

He offered testimonials on behalf of Minister of Foreign Affairs Yi Pom-sok who is now accompanying President Chon Tu-hwan on his trip of four African nations and Canada. The vice foreign minister added that the government collected 2,612 kinds of textbooks from 47 countries since 1975, and had distortions and erroneous descriptions found in 586 textbooks from 34 countries rectified.

Members of the assembly committee denounced the distortions as a denial by Japan of Korea's independence and sovereignty as well as of friendly relations between the two countries. They argued what Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki announced in his news conference Monday fell far short of living up to the Korean people's expectations. They urged the government to take strong measures against Japan to force it to correct the distortions contained in new Japanese history textbooks to be distributed next April.

Some members went so far as to demand the government reorient Korea-Japan relations, if the Tokyo government refuses to accept Korea's demand for immediate correction. They asked what measures the government envisages if Japan refuses to correct the distortions as demanded by Korea. The government must insure Japan will right the distortions, even if the loan request is retracted and diplomatic relations with Japan severed, they said. They called upon the government to work out measures in conjuction with Asian and Pacific countries which are against Japan's move to tone down its past war brutalities.

The vice minister revealed a total of 26 countries including Korea, Mainland China and other Southeast Asian countries have joined in the concerted criticism of Japan's distortion of history. He said 48 of 70 media in the 26 countries found fault with Japan's distortion.

'KOREA UNIFICATION BANK' TO OPEN 'SHORTLY'

[Text] Seoul, Aug.24 (YONHAP) -- South Korea is expected to open its seventh commercial bank shortly, a Finance Ministry source said Tuesday. The new bank will be called the Korea Unification Bank and its backing will come from influential businessmen who came from North Korea, the source said.

A statement issued at a recent meeting of 75 representatives originally from the five provinces of North Korea said that the Unification Bank will contribute to the nation's economic development by maximizing the mobilization of domestic funds and by playing a leading role in economic exchanges with North Korea when Korea is unified in the future. The establishment of the bank will be authorized if its existence is deemed conducive to the advancement of the South Korean economy, according to the source. The bank, with an initial paid-in capital of 30 billion won (40.5 million U.S. dollars), will become the country's second commercial bank to be set up this year, following the Shinhan Bank which opened in early July.

COOPERATION AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH NIGERIA

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 20 (YONHAP) -- Nigeria and South Korea have concluded a bilateral agreement on economic, scientific and technical cooperation, the Korean Foreign Ministry announced Friday. The agreement, the first government-to-government accord between the two countries, was signed in Lagos Friday by Mrs. A.E. Oyagbola, Nigerian minister of national planning, and Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok. Yi is with the official party of President Chon Tu-hwan now visiting the African nation. The agreement, consisting of 12 articles, provides for increased Korean-Nigerian cooperation in economic, technical and scientific areas, as well as the undertaking of joint ventures.

LAW ON PROTECTION OF STATE PROPERTY ANNOUNCED

[Text] Law on the protection of state property:

Chapter I -- General Regulations

Article 1

State property belongs to all citizens throughout the country and is managed by the state. It is an important material base of our regime and the source of our economic and defense forces for ensuring the successful defense and construction of our fatherland, gradual advance through a transitional period toward socialism, and for guaranteeing the improvement of our people's livelihood with well-being, happiness and peace.

The citizens of the PRK must honor and protect the state property. This is the sacred duty and genuine right of each citizen. If they see any waste of or activity harmful to the state property, each individual has the duty and right to make denunciations or lodge complaints to the competent ministries for the timely prevention of such acts. Any reprisal against those who made the denunciation or lodged the complaint is absolutely forbidden.

Article 3

Pursuant to law, the state organs, national defense organs, production enterprises, commercial enterprises and all other enterprises must set up control regulations on the acceptance, portage, maintenance, distribution, management and transportation of materials, goods and other state property, and publicize these regulations among cadres, personnel, workers and combatants for thorough implementation.

Article 4

Cadres, personnel, workers and combatants who are directly in charge of the acceptance, portage, maintenance, transportation, distribution and management of the state property must strictly implement the law and regulations on the control of the state property, make every effort to ensure that the state property is not wasted or damaged, manage the state property appropriately and thriftily, and take every necessary measure to protect the state property from any danger or enemy attack.

Article 5

The leaders of each economic sector, organization, enterprise and KPRAF unit have the duty to set a good example in the implementation of the law and regulations on the control of state property. They must not waste or cause damage to state property. They educate cadres, personnel, workers and combatants on the protection and maintenance of state property. They must keep a close watch on the conditions of state property in their control, clearly assign tasks for their subordinates to maintain and manage the state property correctly and in accordance with the law and regulations. They must regularly monitor and inspect the implementation of these laws and regulations, keep a regular inventory of state property and inspect the implementation of the regulations concerning the accounts of the state property and warehouses, and the preparation of statistics and reports on the control of state property. They must take necessary measures to prevent such activities as wasting or damaging state property. They must enforce strict and appropriate punishments against such activities.

The good citizens who have protected state property will be awarded. The citizens who wasted or caused damage to state property will be punished according to the categories of their offenses defined by this law.

Chapter II -- Forms of Punishments

By taking into consideration the conditions of the offenses and the interrelation between the state property and the offender, punishment will be taken in accordance with any one or several of the following punishments:

Punishment in accordance with the civil code; punishment in accordance with the labor law; punishment in accordance with the administrative law; and punishment in accordance with the penal code.

Article 8

Punishment in accordance with the civil code means compensation for the failure to fulfill the obligations mentioned in the agreements on the purchase, sale, loan, service, maintenance and transportation of the state property. The amount of compensation to be paid will be equal to the actual price of the losses incurred.

Punishment in accordance with the labor law means material compensation. This measure will be imposed upon cadres, personnel, workers and combatants who violated the control regulations or damaged state property due to lack of responsibility while they were in charge of the control, acceptance, portage, transportation, maintenance, distribution and management of the state property. If their violations of the regulations or lack of responsibility caused damage or loss to the state property, the offenders must compensate for the total loss incurred. The compensation may be reduced if there is clear proof of reasonable cause for the loss. If the damage of the state property was caused by violations of regulations or lack of responsibility, the offender must compensate for the loss. The amount of money to be compensated must not exceed the 3-month salary of the offender. The compensation may be reduced according to the state of the offender's assets. Should there be more than one offender, all offenders must compensate for the loss. However, the total compensation must not exceed the actual amount of loss.

Punishment in accordance with administrative law means warning, reprimand, demotion in rank, demotion in position, forcible resignation or dismissal. All of these administrative measures are to be imposed upon cadres, personnel, workers and combatants whose violations of the regulations or lack of responsibility have caused damage or loss to state property.

In the case of force measure, that is, in the case of an unexpected and irresistible danger, disaster or attack by the enemy, damages or losses caused therefrom shall not be compensated.

Article 12

Whoever damages state property with intent to betray the revolution shall be punished in accordance with Articles 3 and 4 of the KPRC Decree No. 2-DL dated 15 May 1980.

Article 13

Whoever is found guilty of theft of state property or committing other offences which caused damage to state property shall be punished in accordance with Article 5 of the KPRC Decree No. 2-DL dated 15 May 1980.

Article 14

Whoever takes advantage of his position and authority to make use of state property for his own benefit shall be subjected to disciplinary action or ordered to compensate for the damage he caused. In the case of serious damage, the offender shall be punished with imprisonment from 6 months to 3 years.

Article 15

Whoever abuses his position and authority to intentionally misappropriate the principles and regulations concerning the control of state property and intentionally uses state property for any purpose other than intended, thus causing damage, shall be subjected to disciplinary action or ordered to compensate for the damage he caused. In the case of serious damage, the offender shall be subjected to imprisonment from 3 months to 2 years.

Whoever infringes the penal code as mentioned in Articles 13, 14 and 15 of this law may be granted reduction in punishment in the following cases:

The offense is committed for the first time, and when the competent authorities have discovered this offence, the offender is willing to return the misappropriated state property or to make reparation for whatever damage he has committed;

Voluntary confession and exposure of accomplices;

The damage is slight.

Article 17

Whoever infringes the penal code as mentioned in Articles 13, 14 and 15 of this law shall be subjected to harsh punishment in the following cases:

Multiple offenses, even if he has not yet been charged;

Organized offenses;

Offenses with perfidious, dangerous and subversive intent; and

Offenses which cause serious material damage or serious consequences.

Article 18

Besides being exiled, the offender may be subjected to one or several of the following lesser punishments:

A fine of 500 to 5,000 riels;

Partial or total seizure of his assets; and

Chapter III -- Regulations for Implementation

The leaders of each economic sector, organization, KPRAF unit and each enterprise have the right to impose punishment according to the administrative law and labor law upon the offenders who infringe the control regulations or cause damage to state property due to lack of responsibility. Representatives from the Trade Union Committee, the Youth Association or the Women's Association shall take part in the hearing and decision on verdict.

Article 20

The provincial and municipal state prosecutors and people's courts and the military prosecutors and military courts have the competence to bring charges and try the offenses of sabotaging or damaging state property as mentioned in Articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 of this law.

Article 21

If contentious civil affairs which concern the failure to fulfill obligations and lead to damage of state property occur between a state institution and a production solidarity group or between a state institution and the private sector, they must first be subjected to a reconciliation effort. If this reconciliation effort does not succeed, the files should then be forwarded to the municipal or provincial courts for decision.

Article 22

This law shall be effective the day it is promulgated.

Article 23

The Council of Ministers is in charge of counseling in the implementation of this law.

CHEA SIM-LED DELEGATION LEAVES FOR BULGARIA

BK241535 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1434 GMT 22 Aug 82

It was seen off at Pochentong Airport by Say Phutang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Organization Commission; Bou Thang, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, minister of national defense and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission; Hun Sen, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Chan Phin, member of the KPRP Central Committee Secretariat and minister of finance; Mat Ly, member of the KPRP Central Committee and vice chairman of the National Assembly; Phlek Piroun, secretary general of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean Red Cross; and other ministers and National Assembly members. Orlin Kostadinov Ghiyaurov, acting charge d'affaires of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, and Ngo Dien, SRV ambassador to Kampuchea, were present at the departure of the delegation.

'SCHEME' TO HAVE SIHANOUK REPRESENT KAMPUCHEA SCORED

[Station commentary: "A Farce by the Three Puppets"]

[Text] The three puppets have staged a farce. This farce is divided into two parts. In the first part, the audience sees Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann holding a meeting in Kuala Lumpur in order to establish the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. The second part shows these puppets touring various countries in order to propagate their so-called Democratic Kampuchea comedy. At the same time, one sees these puppets on their knees to beg for foreign aid.

It is known to all that Beijing and Washington are the manipulators of these puppets. The puppet playing the lead is Sihanouk. Why Sihanouk plays the lead is understandable.

The manipulators do not want the genocidal Pol Pot clique to play the lead because they are afraid that world public opinion will condemn Pol Pot's evil face. This is why they put Sihanouk in the front row.

So far, the farce staged by these puppets has only received a little applause from an audience who knows these puppets well, such as Yugoslavia and Romania. The sound of applause in Belgrade and Bucharest has not encouraged Sihanouk at all because previously these two audiences had acclaimed the Pol Pot clique despite the fact that it massacred 3 million Kampuchean people. Moreover, the fact that Yugoslavia and Romania support Sihanouk proves that Sihanouk is very skillful, on the one hand, at concealing the evil face of the Pol Pot clique whose hands are stained with the people's blood and, on the other, at opposing the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. This is an offense that Sihanouk can never wash away in his life.

The Kampuchean people will always harbor a bitter grudge against and condemn this ugly treason by Sihanouk. We also regard the attitude of Yugoslavia and Romania as an intolerable act of interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

The scheme by a number of countries to send Sihanouk to speak at the seventh summit conference of the nonaligned countries is an act which runs totally counter to the will and hopes of the Nonaligned Movement. As they know, the summit conference of the nonaligned countries held in Havana in 1979 decided to leave the Kampuchean seat empty. No party has the right to speak at the conference on behalf of the Kampuchean people. Under whatever label, Sihanouk, who is the representative of the genocidal Khmer Rouge clique which has been condemned by all mankind, has no right to attend this conference.

No matter how keenly he tries to play his role, a puppet is a puppet. A puppet can never build a revolutionary history.

VODK REPORTS ON SIHANOUK, KHIEU SAMPHAN VISIT TO SFRY

BK201327 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 19 Aug 82

His Excellency Petar Stambolic, president of the SFRY Presidency; His Excellency Lazar Mojsov, federal secretary for foreign affairs; His Excellency Mirko Ostojic, deputy federal secretary for foreign affairs; His Excellency Mihailo Lompar, SFRY ambassador to Democratic Kampuchea; and other Yugoslav officials welcomed our Democratic Kampuchean delegation in the sincerest and warmest atmosphere. The two parties held talks on issues related to mutual interests and the current international situation. Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, expressed his deepest thanks to the fraternal Yugoslav Government and people for their firm and steady assistance and support to the just struggle of the Democratic Kampuchean people and government.

In the name of the Yugoslav Government and people, President Petar Stambolic praised the victory scored by the Democratic Kampuchean people and government in their just struggle. He also welcomed the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea which shows that the great national union of the entire Kampuchean people will struggle for the survival of their nation and race.

His Excellency Petar Stambolic emphasized the SFRY stand which continues the policies of President Tito, always upholds and defends the principles of the Nonaligned Movement and firmly opposes any violation of these principles. Based on the principles of the Nonaligned Movement, the Yugoslav Government and people sympathize with, assist and support the present struggle by the Democratic Kampuchean people and government against the Vietnamese aggressors for national salvation.

These abovementioned talks were held on 12 August 1982 in Ohrid, Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, in the warmest atmosphere, full of the spirit of friendship and solidarity between the two peoples and countries -- Democratic Kampuchea and the SFRY. During its stay in the Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, our Democratic Kampuchean delegation was welcomed in the warmest and sincerest atmosphere by the chairman of the Executive Council of the Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia's parliament and other leaders as well as the people of this republic.

VODK REPORTS ON KHIEU SAMPHAN'S REMARKS IN EGYPT

Cairo newspapers extensively published Khieu Samphan's interview. The Egyptian papers wrote:

On the military situation in Kampuchea, Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea, said: Strategically, the Vietnamese Le Duan clique has been defeated. The Vietnamese aggressor troops are tired of war and their morale is very low. They will inevitably be defeated in the end despite a daily $6 million of aid from the Soviet Union.

Khieu Samphan said that the formation of the CGDK was a bitter and shameful political defeat for the Hanoi authorities, who had done their best to prevent the Kampuchean patriotic forces from uniting in order to resist the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea. Khieu Samphan stressed that the Kampuchean people, the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas resolutely adhere to the 22 June declaration in Kuala Lumpur to continue their sacred struggle until the total liberation of their beloved Kampuchea fatherland.

On the diplomatic front, Khieu Samphan noted with satisfaction that peace- and justice-loving countries the world over have given firm and persistent support and assistance to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people. These countries now realize the expansionist policy of the Vietnamese and the Soviets in Southeast Asia and the world.

Concerning the solution to the Kampuchean problem, Khieu Samphan said that this is predicated on the unconditional withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly on Kampuchea and not on the so-called partial troop withdrawal, which was just a trick.

SITTHI OPENS ASEAN STANDING COMMITTEE MEETING

[Text] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila opened the first meeting of the ASEAN Standing Committee at the Oriental Hotel in Bangkok at 1600 today. In his speech, the foreign minister said this year is the 16th year of cooperation among the ASEAN Standing Committee and that this year is a year of political and economic challenge for the ASEAN members. The ASEAN members must continue to work hard and closely together with the international community to uphold the just principles of the UN Charter concerning sovereignty, territorial integrity and self-determination. This principle has been contemptuously trampled upon by Vietnam through its current occupation of Kampuchea.

The foreign minister said that the UN General Assembly is only about 1 month away, but Vietnam has not shown any indication of a change in its attitude toward the Kampuchean question. It has not paid any attention to the Kampuchean people's right to self-determination, nor has it acknowledged the existence of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea with Prince Sihanouk as president, which is a means toward a political and peaceful solution to the Kampuchean problem.

As for ASEAN economic cooperation, the ASEAN economic ministers have already done significant work in this field, and there is an ad hoc committee for reviewing and evaluating the results of ASEAN cooperation. Thus it is hoped that the various ASEAN governments will give favorable consideration to existing ASEAN economic activities.

A Brunei delegation is also attending the ASEAN Standing Committee meeting as an observer. The secretary general of the ASEAN Office has reported the following on the meeting.

At the meeting, the ASEAN Standing Committee largely studied economic social, cultural and information exchange cooperation. There were no political discussions. The meeting discussed several major projects, such as an ASEAN oil reserve. This would be of the same nature as the ASEAN food reserve, whose work has already begun. The ASEAN Standing Committee has approved the oil reserve project in principle and will study it in detail in the future. The meeting also discussed the results of past and future cooperation between ASEAN and non-ASEAN countries, such as cooperation with the United States, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and the EEC.

The meeting discussed the formation of an ad hoc committee comprising non-ASEAN parties to evaluate the achievements of ASEAN since its inception and to make recommendations for improvement. The meeting also agreed to make Police Lt Col Chakthep Emsabut responsible for the antinarcotics field. It also appointed Sarawut Khongsiri to become the director for ASEAN's social and cultural affairs. In addition, the meeting discussed the expenditure of funds for various ASEAN projects.

BANGKOK POST DISCUSSES KAMPUCHEAN QUESTION

[Alan Dawson's "Eye on Indochina" column: "Question of War or Peace in Kampuchea -- or Both"]

[Text] Frustrated analysts trying to figure out what's going to happen next on Kampuchea are convinced there is going to be major fighting or peace there. Or maybe both, although not at the same time.

Opinions vary widely among diplomats and Foreign Ministry officials on the likely next steps on the troublesome Kampuchea question. And it is beginning to appear entirely possible that those who detect peace feelers from Hanoi and those who see warfare in the future are both right.

For the moment, the threat of war is far greater than the threat that allout peace may break out. Intelligence officers from a number of countries including Thailand are concerned that the Vietnamese Army has plans for its biggest dry-season campaign since it took Kampuchea, including large-scale attacks across the frontier into Thailand. "The propaganda is already well under way, the diplomatic line is even more inflexible, and the military build-up has already begun," one source summed up. "It's going to be a very hot dry season." He might have added, with sufficient evidence from a number of Thai border provinces, that even the wet season is hotter than in the past.

Opinion is split on what analysts call "the big decision": whether or not the Vietnamese leadership will give the green light to large-scale attacks into Thailand. But based on currently available information, including secret field reports on Vietnamese troop movements, many sources predict the biggest military campaign by Vietnam since Hanoi troops swept into Phnom Penh after a two-week battle early in 1979. Many analysts believe the Vietnamese Army is getting ready to make its long-awaited attempt to try to wipe out the Khmer Rouge and other armed resistance. They are concerned. "There's only one way for them to do that effectively," said an experienced military analyst. "That's to come across the Thai border in strength,"following the resistance fighters in any retreat. There are very ominous signs that this could happen as early as the coming dry season, or possibly next year at the latest. The "partial withdrawal" of Vietnamese forces announced by Hanoi last month has relieved the occupation forces of what one source derogatorily labelled "the least good and reliable" of the Hanoi army in Kampuchea. Vietnam has completed its defence build-up at the Chinese border, and military planners have turned their full attention to Kampuchea, many sources indicate. And crack northern troops now are available to move into Kampuchea. The partial pull-out was to be permanent, according to the official announcement, only if Thailand reciprocated by reining in the resistance in their attacks. In fact, the resistance appears to have become stronger -- certainly it has on the political side -- and has begun serious planning to increase military pressure on Vietnamese positions.

Obviously, the decision to send Vietnamese troops crossing into Thailand is a major decision which would have to be made by the Vietnamese Politburo. The last such big attack, in June 1980, led to the firing of the Vietnamese division commander who ordered the attack. He was relieved of command not for sending a regiment into Thailand, which he was authorized to do. He was instead fired because he timed the attack when Thach was travelling in the ASEAN area, and, more importantly still, because his troops lost the battle to clearly superior Thai military forces.

If Vietnam now makes "the big decision" to move into Thailand during an anti-resistance offensive, such attacks would clearly be bigger than the 1980 incursion -- "multi-division at least," says a foreign specialist on the Vietnamese military. The international bubbub would be considerable and would be extremely anti-Vietnam and pro-Thai. But Hanoi might well reason that the chance to destroy the Kampuchean resistance would be worth the trouble, and that peace talks could be put off until the brouhaha subsides.

Fight-and-talk or fight-then-talk tactics have both been used with what Hanoi considers success in the past against the French, the Americans, the Saigon regime, the Khmer Rouge and China. Vietnam has been putting new weapons in place in Kampuchea for at least six months, apparently believing that the army will once again be called upon to fight for Hanoi's terms for peace. And few if any Vietnam analysts believe that even with all its current domestic problems that the Hanoi regime or the Vietnamese people have reached the limits of their "pain threshold."

A senior Heng Samrin official, National Assembly President Chea Sim, still won applause when he told the assembly: "The Kampuchean revolution is irreversible." And Hun Sen, the world's youngest foreign minister, clearly showed the militant line of thinking when he told the parliament: "In reality, the tension along the Kampuchean-Thai frontier springs from Bangkok's hostile policy." Tough words come from Hanoi and Phnom Penh, backing up the analysis that Vietnam intends to fight for what it has in Kampuchea, and is not interested in negotiating a peaceful solution to the problem.

Footnote: This analysis is not unanimous among Indochina-watchers by any means. The opposing view has it that Vietnam is looking for a happy end to the Kampuchea problem, and is looking for it quickly. The theory springs from Thach's insistence during and after his visits to Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand that a "spirit of dialogue" should exist between Vietnam and ASEAN. There is at least a faction, many believe, within Vietnam's ruling circles which seeks a compromise in order to end the tension over Kampuchea.

But some American planners who see more warfare in the future have warned the Reagan administration that it should prepare contingency plans for a response to such a cross-border operation by the Vietnamese Army. Sources say there are no specific plans currently in existence determining an exact response to possible military moves by Vietnam against, or into, Thailand.

SRV TROOPS, USSR ADVISERS DEPLOYED AT LAO BORDER

[Text] Vietnamese troop reinforcements and a small number of Russian advisers were deployed last week to a border garrison in Laos opposite Chiang Khong District of Chiang Rai, presumably to receive Thai communist insurgents and to stem infiltration by Lao resistance forces.

A senior officer of the Third Army Region, who declined to be named, told the POST yesterday that an unspecified number of Thai insurgents had broken away from the predominantly pro-Beijing Communist Party of Thailand [CPT] to join a pro-Vietnamese faction in Laos through which they can more easily obtain weapons, ammunition and supplies to pursue their armed struggle. The officer said that more Thai insurgents are expected to desert the CPT and cross the border to Laos after their bases in Doi Pha Mon and Doi Pha Chi in Chiang Rai had been smashed by government troops earlier this year.

The Vietnamese troop reinforcement and some Russian advisers were trucked to a garrison in Huai Sai and Doi Phan Mon which straddles the Thai-Lao border. The officer said that the Thai insurgents had already moved their political base, called Zone 8/1, from Thoeng District to Phan District of Chiang Rai. He added that the guerrillas had made some headway with villagers in Phan District.

ARRESTS MADE IN 16 JULY MORTAR ATTACK ON PREM

BK250826 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 25 Aug 82 pp 1, 12

The convoy was escorting Prime Minister General Prem to the camp's airport where he was to depart for Nakhon Ratchasima Province after presiding over a ceremony inaugurating a statue to the late Marshal Phibunsongkhram at the center. However, the mortar shell missed the prime minister's vehicle by inches, went through the branches of a tree by the roadside and exploded when it hit the hill. Nobody in the convoy was aware of the incident. Later Maj Gen Prasat Wimonsinlapin, commander of the artillery center, hand-carried a report on the assassination attempt tothe prime minister. Subsequently, the Norasing unit was set up to prevent such incidents.

A high-level army source informed MATICHON on 24 August that Assistant Army Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek appointed a committee comprised of Col Phutchong Ninkham, commander of the 1st Artillery Unit, and Col Amnuai Kitsuwan, commander of the Army Transport Department's Aviation Division, to investigate the incident. This led to the arrest of M Sgt Somchai Koetphon of Lop Buri Military District. Somchai, who is a relative of Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon, was later released because of lack of evidence. The source also revealed that, as the investigation intensified, on 5 August Col Amnuai Kitsuwan led a number of soldiers to arrest four noncommissioned officers of the Lop Buri Military District's service company: M Sgt Surasak Kusonsuk, a unit commander; M Sgt Chaiwat or Chaiwai Rotsamoe; Sgt Sutchai Ma-Im and Sgt Thongchua Nonloet. On 7 August, Pvt Wichai Saengdet was arrested on the same charge.

The source said: "Eyewitnesses confirmed that they saw M Sgt Chaiwat Rotsamoe and Sgt Sutchai Ma-Im running away from the site where the investigating officers found three mortars, one of which had been fired. The other two mortars were loaded, but the shell in one of them was a dud. The five accused are now being detained at the first military circle's prison. They denied the charge."

It has been reported that Col Khemchat Nitisiri, deputy chief of staff of the Lop Buri Military District, who is suspected of being implicated in the incident, has gone on leave until 19 August. The investigating officers could find no evidence against him. Col Phuchong Ninkham has already submitted the results of the investigation to the army commander.

MATICHON VIEWS APPOINTMENT OF ARMY COMMANDER

[Editorial: "Army Commander's Post: Why So Secretive?"]

[Text] Gen Kriangsak Chamanan, leader of the National Democratic Party, has said the army lacks decisiveness in the appointment of the new army commander, because to date there is no clear answer as to whether Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek or Gen Pramot Thawonchan will get the post, further adding that this has led to divisions within the army. However, Gen Sitthi Chirarot and General Athit Kamlang-Ek have said the appointment of a new army commander is an ordinary issue.

The question which has arisen is: Is not the appointment to the army commander's post a thorny issue? Many will reply that it is. The fact is that the current problem, which reached the stage of using grenades and weapons to solve, originates from disagreement in the selection of Gen Prayut Charumani's successor as army commander.

General Kriangsak may have certain political purposes in making his remark, although he was a former supreme commander, defense minister and prime minister and thus had extensive lessons from and experience in annual military appointments. His views are thus noteworthy.

The attempts on the life of Gen Prem Tinsulanon -- using an M-72 and a handgrenade -- clearly show the existence and magnitude of conflicts within the armed forces, particularly the army.

The real cause of the problem is the discontent with General Prem favoring Gen Athit Kamlang-Ek to become the next army commander. The circles experiencing this discontent feel that General Prem is supporting General Athit in order to use the post of army commander to bolster his political throne to stay in power, at least for a certain period.

The Defense Ministry should settle the appointment of the new army commander to remove the people's anxiety, regardless of what the objectives for the appointment may be, particularly when important military and government officials agree that the army commander's appointment is not an extraordinary issue. Most importantly, it will enable the new army commander to start healing the division in the army and strengthen its unity in order to safeguard the country from external enemies.

MILITARY DELEGATION DEPARTS FOR KUALA LUMPUR

Supreme Commander General Saiyut Koetphon said before departure yesterday that the meeting would review security problems and performance of operations to maintain peace and order along the common border during the past months. He noted that the elements which pose a threat to the security of peoples both sides of the border include the terrorist bandits, guerrillas of the Communist Party of Malaya [CPA], criminal and Mafia-type influential people.

The general said that the Thai delegation, which will be headed by Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot, was expected to raise the problem about terrorist bandits to the attention of the Malaysian delegates. Other problems to be discussed at the meeting in Kuala Lumpur include border smuggling and dual citizenships of some people across the border. All security-related problems within or beyond the scope of joint Thai-Malaysian agreement and economic cooperation, namely the Kolok River basin programme, would be discussed during the meeting, he added.

The supreme commander said the Thai side would brief their Malaysian counterpart of the result of suppression of the CPM guerrillas in southern Thailand and would explain why Malaysian forces were not called in to help in the drive. He maintained that what the government had done so far against the security problem was enough evidence of Thailand's sincerity towards Malaysia. He said he expected a similar attitude from Malaysia in return.

CEASE-FIRE ON PRC BORDER FOR 27 AUG-8 OCT PROPOSED

The Vietnamese people's National Day, 2 September, and the Chinese people's National Day, 1 October, are glorious historic days of each country's peoples. Prompted by the traditional friendship between the peoples of Vietnam and China and the desire to ease tension in the relations between the two countries, on 14 August the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent a note to its Chinese counterpart proposing that both sides agree to abstain from conducting armed activities and other hostile activities and from opening fire along the two countries' border from 0000 Hanoi time on 27 August [1700 GMT 26 Aug] through 0000 Hanoi time on 8 October [1700 GMT 7 Oct] so as to create conditions for the people in the two countries' border areas to celebrate in peace the national days of their respective countries.

This constructive proposal on the part of Vietnam responds to the aspirations of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, contributes to easing the tension in the border area, creates a favorable atmosphere for the settlement of the problems in the two countries' relations and is consistent with the desire for peace and stability of the peoples of the region's countries.

It is regrettable that so far the Chinese side has not responded to this Vietnamese proposal. The Vietnamese people, as always, honor and preserve their longstanding friendship with the Chinese people. In this spirit, the SRV Government on 25 August ordered the Vietnamese armed forces along the northern border to scrupulously implement this proposal.

The SRV Government once again asks the PRC Government to give a positive answer and order the Chinese armed forces to abstain from armed and other hostile activities and from opening fire along the common border.

The Vietnamese people firmly believe that this sincere proposal and good-will act of the Vietnamese side will enjoy the sympathy and vigorous support from the Chinese people and broad world public opinion.

Commentary Lauds Proposal

BK251053 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] To create favorable conditions for the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples to celebrate their national days in peace, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on 14 August sent a note to its Chinese counterpart proposing that the two sides conduct no hostile armed actions and a ceasefire along the common border of the two countries. The note pointed out: This proposal will take effect as from 0000 Hanoi time on 27 August to 0000 Hanoi time on 8 October this year. Our radio has this commentary:

This is not only a constructive proposal but also a practical deed showing the Vietnamese people's unchanged good will in pursuing thier policy of peace and friendship with the Chinese people. This proposal responds to the aspiration of both the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, contributes to easing tension along the common border and creates a favorable atmosphere for peaceful settlement of problems in the relations between the two countries.

It is necessary to recall that in the past 3 years, during the traditional lunar new year festival of the two nations and during New Year festival, Vietnam many times called on China not to conduct hostile armed actions against the Vietnamese people, but China rejected all these proposals.

It also rejected the good-will proposal made by Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea for signing bilateral or multilateral treaty of peaceful coexistence with China. In an attempt to sabotage the China-Vietnam talks, Beijing has ten times rejected our proposal for early resumption of these talks. This time Beijing has not yet replied to our 14 August proposal for a ceasefire by both sides.

This act shows that the Chinese authorities have cared nothing about the interest of the Chinese people themselves and the peace and stability of countries in the region. The Vietnamese people for their part always respect and want to preserve the traditional friendship with the Chinese people. Though receiving no reply from Beijing, the Vietnamese Government on 25 August still ordered its armed forces garrison along the northern border to cease fire. It also asked the Chinese side to order its armed forces to cease all armed provocations and their hostile activities in the Sino-Vietnamese border area.

The Chinese authorities often talked about their good will and desire for peace. Let them prove their words by concrete deed.

LEADERS GREET GDR'S HONECKER ON BIRTHDAY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 25 -- Vietnamese party and state leaders today extended their warmest greetings to Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) Central Committee and president of the Council of State of the German Democratic Republic, on his 70th birthday.

The congratulatory message was sent by Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers. It says:

Over the past years, under the leadership of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany headed by you, the G.D.R. working class and other labouring people have made considerable achievements in the building of a developed socialist society.

As an outstanding son of the G.D.R. people and a prominent activist of the international communist and workers movement, you have made glorious services to building and defending the G.D.R. and actively contributed to the world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

With profound gratitude, the Communist Party, the government and the people of Vietnam have always borne in mind the precious support and assistance given by the party, the government and people of the G.D.R. and yourself to Vietnam in the past war of resistance against U.S. aggression as well as in national construction and defence at present.

We wish you the best of health to join the SED Central Committee and the G.D.R. Council of State in leading the fraternal G.D.R. people to obtain new and ever bigger achievements in the implementation of the resolutions of the 10th SED Congress with a view to building a developed socialist society in the G.D.R., thus contributing to the strength of the socialist community and to the struggle for peace and security in Europe and elsewhere in the world.

May the militant solidarity and allround cooperation between the parties, the states and the peoples of our two countries be further consolidated and developed on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism.

Order Conferred

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 24 -- President of the Council of State Truong Chinh has signed a decision to confer the Gold Star Order, Vietnam's highest honour, on Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (S.E.D.) Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State of the German Democratic Republic.

The decision, made at the request of the Council of Ministries, highlights the GDR leader's "outstanding friendship, militant solidarity, and allround cooperation between Vietnam and the GDR."

NHAN DAN Editorial

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 25 -- NHAN DAN today editorially wishes G.D.R. President Erich Honecker many happy returns of the day on his 70th birthday. The paper also says that the decision of the Vietnamese Council of State to confer the Gold Star Order on the GDR leader is of great political significance. It says: .

"The conferment of Vietnam's highest honour on President Erich Honecker shows that the Communist Party, the government and the people of Vietnam highly value his important role in and his great services to the building of a developed socialist society in the GDR as well as his remarkable contributions to consolidating and strengthening the fraternal friendship, militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between the parties, government and peoples of the two countries".

"The gesture," NHAN DAN continues, "also expresses the sincere feelings and respect of the Vietnamese party, state and people towards the beloved leader of the working class and labouring people of the GDR, and spells out Vietnam's deep gratitude to the fraternal party, state and people of the GDR for their great, valuable support and assistance."

President Erich Honecker's spectacular revolutionary record is closely linked to the revolutionary cause of the GDR working class and the foundation and development of the GDR, the paper says, reviewing the GDR leader's revolutionary activities, especially since World War II. NHAN DAN goes on: "As the esteemed leader of the GDR party and state, Erich Honecker has done his best for the might and prosperity of his country and for his people's happiness. Under the SED leadership headed by him, the GDR people have turned half of the former hideout of fascism into a land of peace, democracy, happiness, friendship and international solidarity." President Erich Honecker has actively contributed to the growing might of the socialist community as well as to the unity of the international communist and workers movement and the struggle for world peace.

The Vietnam-GDR treaty of friendship and cooperation, NHAN DAN stresses, has brought about a strong development of the time-honoured friendship, fraternal solidarity and comprehensive cooperation between the parties, the states and the peoples of the two countries.

MAHATHIR, LEE KUAN YEW CONCLUDE DISCUSSIONS

Views on Kampuchean Question

BK241347 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] The prime ministers of Malaysia and Singapore saw no disagreement exists in ASEAN joint efforts to seek a political solution to the Kampuchean question. The 24-hour visit to Kuala Lumpur by Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew over the weekend had enabled the two leaders to assess ASEAN's strength and ability in such efforts. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed said he now had a clearer picture on big power attitude toward Kampuchea.

At a joint news conference in Kuala Lumpur yesterday, Mr Lee explained that the United States was more interested in getting the Kampuchean question solved. This was because of Washington's long-standing ties with Thailand.

On world economic recession, Mr Lee Kuan Yew said he shared similar views to Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir's. The lowering of U.S. interest rates and the approval by Congress of the $98,300 million tax bill was helpful toward world economic recovery. However, he says these measures could not cure U.S. long-term problems.

Mr Lee said current relations between Singapore and Malaysia were so close that the two countries were interdependent. Singapore and Malaysia understood each other's problems and sensitivities and would cooperate closely to help one another in time of difficulty.

Bilateral Cooperation

BK231000 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 23 Aug 82

The two leaders met privately for 2 hours before adjourning to the conference room where they were joined by the ministers and other members of their delegations. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed also entertained Mr Lee Kuan Yew to lunch at a leading hotel in the federal capital. Several Cabinet ministers, deputy ministers and the five Singaporean ministers joined the two leaders at luncheon.

FIFTH ASEAN-JAPAN SYMPOSIUM OPENS 24 AUGUST

[Text] The 5th ASEAN-Japan symposium began in Kuala Lumpur this afternoon. Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed and the former Japanese premier, Mr Takeo Fukuda, delivered keynote addresses at the opening ceremony.

The main topics for discussion during the 3-day symposium will be how best ASEAN and Japan can insulate themselves from the persistent global economic slump, the volatile political situation and the stalemate in dialogue between developing and developed countries.

The participants are expected to determine how ASEAN and Japan can cope with the fast-changing world in a cooperative manner. Results in the past four symposiums have helped to upgrade and solidify Japan's policies toward ASEAN nations.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in his message to the [word indistinct] program in conjunction with the symposium, expressed confidence that ASEAN would continue to overcome various problems during the current recession and make further progress in ASEAN unity. He assured that Japan was determined to offer as much cooperation as possible to ASEAN.

The symposium is organized by the MAINICHI newspapers of Japan and the Asian Affairs Research Council.

Mahathir, Fukuda Speak

BK241400 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir says development and industrialization efforts from developing countries can be hampered if protectionism in developed countries is not checked.

In his keynote address at the opening of the fifth Japan-ASEAN symposium in Kuala Lumpur, the prime minister says the current recession also threatened to retard ASEAN industrialization efforts. However, through concerted efforts and ASEAN unity, the grouping has been able to face these challenges.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir points out that a stable and prosperous ASEAN is important for peace and stability in the region and, due to this, the grouping merits from Japan's support. The prime minister goes on to say, one aspect of Japan's aid is the setting up of the ASEAN promotion center on trade, investment and tourism in Tokyo. Japan has also extended aid totalling $1 billion for ASEAN industrial projects.

On Kampuchea, the prime minister says continued military occupation by Vietnam will only invite further interference, domination and rivalry among major powers in the region. This can lead to further instability.

It will be in the interest of Vietnam and ASEAN that the Kampuchean problem be quickly resolved. He said a political solution can be found through the declaration and resolutions of the UN-sponsored International Conference on Kampuchea.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir expresses the hope that the recently established government of Democratic Kampuchea led by Prince Sihanouk will get the support of the international community.

Earlier, the former Japanese prime minister, Mr Takeo Fukuda, in his address said Japan provided aid amounting to $800 million to ASEAN last year. This represented a four-fold increase since 1967. Trade also soared at 16-fold increase. Last year's trade amounted to more than $36 billion.

Mr Fukuda was of the view that due to the current global economic recession, mutual cooperation between ASEAN and Japan should be further stepped up.

On Kampuchea, he said Vietnam should come to the negotiating table as soon as possible to find a comprehensive solution to the problem.

On the "look east" policy of Malaysia, the Japanese leader said it would cause a fundamental effort on the economic development of this country. Malaysia should make its own independent judgement on what should be learned from the Japanese. Japan, he added, had adopted Western technology and knowledge, but the traditional social system and work ethic had been preserved.

MARCOS TO DISCUSS SECURITY, ECONOMY WHEN IN U.S.

[Text] Prime Minister Cesar Virata says security and economic issues will be taken up when President Marcos visits Washington next month. Virata made the statement after the Cabinet and National Economic and Development Authority sat down yesterday to lay down the groundwork for the state visit. No other details were immediately available.

Meantime, the first lady said the Washington trip would be more of the nature of a friendly call. But she said it will be no less important and will in fact have great implications not only to the Philippines but to the ASEAN region as well. Despite the national and regional dimensions of the state visit, Madame Marcos said it would be basically a call of one friend on another. She said the visit would also be made against the backdrop of the flexible foreign policies of the government.

MARCOS URGES BOOSTING TRADE WITH UNITED STATES

[Text] The president has called on the private sector to revive vigorous trade between the Philippines and the United States. The president told a visiting mission of the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce to find out what has gone wrong. The chief executive noted that Philippine-American trade has gone down by 27 percent in a year. He urged the mission, composed of 30 members, to help perk up the declining trade between the two countries.

Pointing out that Republic of the Philippines-U.S. trade is in a bad shape, the president told the mission that it is about time the private sector representatives talked with each other to find out what is happening and why the bilateral trade has gone down. The chief executive said he was shocked to learn that Philippine exports had gone down by 27 percent in a single year. It is our hope, he added, that the American Government will see the need to participate in the effort to resurrect trade between the Philippines and the United States.

Mr Marcos said that he was going to the U.S. in September as an invited friend and not for any particular specific mission. Matters like the question of trade ties have been taken up by other missions, but may be the subject of some conversations, President Marcos said.

The chief executive, citing the protectionist policies of some countries, declared that while the Philippines had reduced tariffs on 400 items, protectionism is rising in most markets, including the American market, which is equal to the combined markets of Europe, Japan and South America. Perhaps this is where the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce can help, because this problem can be overcome by interconnection between the private sector operators, the president said.

Speaking of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, President Marcos said the dynamism demonstrated by ASEAN and the social cohesion shown by its members to other countries of Asia will help much to bring about benefits to the traders from the United States.

Prime Minister Cesar Virata, who preceded the president, briefed the mission on the government's trade policies, including the preferential trade treatment given to American businessmen under the parity rights, and the present trade policy regarding foreign traders.

MARCOS MESSAGE READ AT DEVELOPING NATIONS MEETING

[Text] The president has reiterated his call for self-reliance among the Group of 77, or developing countries, in view of the global economic climate. The president said that the international community is undergoing painful economic adjustment due to the policies imposed by the developed nations.

The president said this in a speech read for him by Prime Minister Cesar Virata at the opening of the economic cooperation among developing countries conference, or ECDC meeting. The meeting is being held at the Philippine International Convention Center, where more than 200 representatives from Asia, Latin America and Africa are attending. The ECDC conference seeks to adopt a program for development among Third World countries.

In his speech the president said the Third World nations are still faced by trade protectionist policies, particularly against agroindustrial products from developing countries. The president stressed that the Philippines would seek minimum interest rates exemptions for developing countries on export credits for capital gains.

MARCOS EXHORTS LUZON LOCAL LEADERS TO IMPROVE

[Column by Jesus Bigornia: "Personal Contact With Rural Folks Considered Vital"]

[Text] President Marcos touched a festering sore on the country's body politic when he warned local government officials against neglecting to meet frequently with their constituents. "I am ordering you as your superior in the civil government to participate in this fight against the subversives, actively," he had said during a recent meeting with Cagayan Valley local officials. "When government officials fail to meet their constituents, the people feel neglected and disenchanted not only with those they have elected, but with the government as well."

The president could not have emphasized the attitude of, and problem with, a number of provincial, municipal and barangay officials, especially those in rebel-infested areas, any better. Moreover, the presidential directive could be interpreted as particularly directed at officials in areas now considered as special targets of New People's Army [NPA] propaganda activities. Unlike the dissident-infested regions like northeastern Luzon, eastern Visayas and Mindanao, which are economically depressed, central Luzon cannot be classified as poverty-stricken. A visit to barangays of some municipalities of Pampanga, Nueva Ecija, Bulacan and Tarlac would convince anyone that compared with the populations of other regions, the people of central Luzon are more progressive, more prosperous and more literate.

A closer look at barangay life in central Luzon should show that (1) almost all families live in their own houses of strong materials built on their own lots; (2) each barangay has its own elementary school, electric power, water system, chapels, and accessible transport systems; 3) families receive support from members working either in Manila or abroad; 4) food is no problem; and 5) malnutrition among the young is not evident. Moreover, the basic causes of social unrest that kept the region in constant turmoil during the post-World War II period are no longer present.

Despite all these advances and advantages, the central Luzon provinces remain today a fertile ground for dissident proselytizing. An alarming number of barangay folks are falling for communist propaganda as articulated by highly politicized young NPA members in barrio teach-ins. The blame for such a situation may well be attributed to the apathy, neglect, arrogance, corruption and incompetence of local officials. It may be added that such an attitude is driving the people into the welcoming arms of subversives who are only took quick to exploit their advantage.

Still a further reason for the escalation of NPA activity in certain barangays in central Luzon is the "live and let live" attitude of some municipal mayors who ignore the small armed bands conducting teach-ins in the hinterlands provided the dissidents do not create trouble in town centers. They close their eyes in the hope that the problem would disappear. Now, the president has warned these officials: "I do not want anybody taking a neutral position."

MIYAZAWA ISSUES STATEMENT ON TEXTBOOK ISSUE

OW260913 Toyko KYODO in English 0858 GMT 26 Aug 82

Statement by Chief Cabinet Secretary Miyazawa on Japanese history textbooks

1. The Government and people of Japan are deeply aware that, in the past, Japanese actions have inflicted great suffering and injury on the peoples of Korea, China, and the other countries of Asia, and we have embarked upon the path of a nation of peace in the penitence and determination that such events must never be repeated. Japan has affirmed this stance in the 1965 joint communique with the Republic of Korea as "Japan is deeply contrite over the aberrancy of past relations" and in the joint communique with the People's Republic of China as "the Japanese side is keenly conscious of the responsibility for the serious damage that Japan caused in the past to the Chinese people through war, and deeply reproaches itself." These statements were affirmation of the penitence and determination of Japan, and this awareness is not in the least changed even today.

2. The spirit of this Japan-ROK joint communique and this Japan-PRC joint communique should obviously be respected in Japanese education and textbook authorization. Yet there has recently been criticism on this point by the ROK, the PRC, and other Asian countries. Japan will pay full heed to this criticism in promoting friendship and goodwill with the nearby countries of Asia, and the government will undertake on its own responsibility to make the necessary amendments.

3. Accordingly, for future textbook authorization, the authorization criteria will be revised in the Textbook Authorization Research Council and care will be taken that the above gist is duly realized. For textbooks which have already been authorized, measures will be taken to realize the same gist promptly, and, as an interim measure until such can be effected, the minister of education will issue a policy statement and will see that the gist of section 2 above is fully reflected in actual education.

4. Japan desires to continue to develop relations of friendship and cooperation and to promote mutual understanding with the peoples of these countries and to contribute to the peace and stability of Asia and the world.

SUZUKI GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE 23 AUGUST

OW241121 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0600 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Text] [Question] The just concluded Diet session was an unusually long one. It scored a fairly high batting average by passing 95 percent of the bills submitted to the session. On the other hand, however, a number of bills were held for action at future sessions, triggering some criticisms. To begin with, how do you, as prime minister, evaluate this session that concluded on 21 August?

[Answer] As you said, it was a long session indeed, a 244-day session. In terms of substance, I could sum it up as a very fruitful session. The first thing that should be said for it is that is passed in time the budget bill for fiscal 1982 so that we did not have to compile a provisional budget plan. It was a budget which reflected the nation's need for administrative and fiscal reforms and, as a result, called for drastic curtailments in both revenue and expenditure.

The general account was up 6.2 percent over the previous year, while expenditures were up 1.8 percent. The curtailment was the sharpest in 30 years. I feel that the budget bill passed by the Diet marked the starting line for the nation's fiscal reconstruction in fiscal 1983 and subsequent years. In that sense, its passage was of great significance.

The Diet also passed a bill on streamlining administrative business relating to various licenses and approvals granted by the government. The bill was based on the second batch of recommendations by Rincho, the Extraordinary Administrative Research Council. Furthermore, it passed 77 of the 81 bills the government had presented to the session, including most of those relating to the nation's foreign policy. The government is satisfied with the performance.

One more thing I should add is the passage of proposed amendments to the public office election law, which centered on the national constituency electoral process for the House of Councillors. Inasmuch as it was an epoch-making bill, I was very happy with its passage at the extended session.

[Question] Turning to specific issues, I would like to ask a question about political ethics, whose upgrading amounted to a public pledge of the Suzuki government. The latest Diet session failed to pass legislation concerning Diet members testifying before the Diet. It also failed to summon witnesses for testimony [in the Lockheed payoff scandal case] thus causing criticism. Would you comment on this as president of the ruling party?

[Answer] Political ethics is an issue not limited to the last Diet session. Politicians are always required to keep themselves clean and to preserve the public's confidence in them. This is a basic requirement of democratic government. Questions involving political ethics are a task facing each and every session of the Diet.

In my opinion, political ethics are the business of each and every politician. I think that all politicians should always keep themselves and their environment clean, thereby trying to win public confidence. At the same time, it is necessary to make some institutional arrangements to firmly establish political ethics. The proposed legislation concerning Diet members testifying before the Diet, which you just mentioned, could be one such arrangement. The legislation in question, if passed, could be a vitally important piece of legislation affecting the foundations of the Diet's authority to investigate the national administration. It is therefore necessary that all strata of the people and all parties and groups fully discuss it and help the Diet enact a fine law.

During the last Diet session, the Legislative System Council held as many as 16 sessions on the proposed piece of legislation but failed to reach an agreement. I am sorry about the council's failure, but it should be noted that after all the bill was left in the hands of the speaker, which signifies high-level treatment given the bill. It is my hope that the next Diet session will pass it at all costs under the speaker's leadership.

[Question] I would like to ask a question regarding the revised public office election law you have referred to. The first point is about the publicly expressed concern over the possibility of the revision leading to an upper house controlled by political parties and virtually subordinate to the House of Representatives. What is your view on this point? The second point is about apprehensions relating to the selection of candidates. As president of the LDP, what is your plan to insure fairness in formulating the party's list of candidates?

[Answer] Frankly speaking, I believe that as long as the House of Councillors is publicly elected, it is inevitable that political parties progressively increase their control of it. As you know, there was a nonpolitical group called Ryokufukai represented in the House of Councillors in the past; however, as the upper house passed through successive public elections, it found itself increasingly under the control of political parties.

Meanwhile, the national constituency electoral process for the House of Councillors in the past was considerably costly. Furthermore, it was difficult for voters to select candidates to vote for. Candidates also found it both time-consuming and physically difficult to cover the nationwide constituency.

It was concluded that the only way to correct all these problems was to change the system based on individuals into that based on political parties. Based on this conclusion, work started to establish a new electoral process governing the national constituency and thus to correct the past shortcomings by means of elections based on political parties. This work led to the revised public office election law.

In the meantime, I do not think that placing the House of Councillors under the control of political parties would impair the functions of the upper house under the bicameral system. Under the new system of proportional representation based on a prefixed namelist, each political party is expected to include highly qualified persons in its namelist. If all parties do so, I am certain that we will have upper house members worthy of their title and will even see the House of Councillors enhancing its functions.

Concerning the anticipated difficulty involved in the drawing up of the namelist of candidates, I must say that since this is a totally new system, the LDP and other parties will naturally encounter a great many difficulties in drawing up the respective namelists. This, however, is the kind of work that is unavoidable in carrying out the reform. As for the LDP, as you know, a committee has been created which will establish fair criteria, fully reflecting the views within the party. The LDP has thus launched efforts to make a selection from among highly qualified persons in all walks of life. I believe that all other parties are making similar efforts from whatever positions they are in now.

[Question] Our next question is about the school textbook issue, the solution of which has become an urgent task. Already a month has passed since the problem surfaced. During this period, both China and the ROK have persistently been demanding quick correctional action. [Words indistinct] What are your plans about handling the issue? It is about time for the prime minister to make a decision.

[Answer] Our country inflicted grave damage upon the peoples of China, Korea and other neighboring countries in the past war. It deeply feels its responsibility for it. On the basis of this reflection, Japan has been striving to develop relations of mutual trust, friendship and cooperation with them since the normalization of diplomatic relations. The perception manifested in the Japan-China joint statement and the Japan-ROK joint communique has not changed in the least. I believe that this perception should of course, be correctly reflected in school education in our country, in screening school textbooks. I intend to do my best to make the descriptions in textbooks more appropriate. I have instructed that a study be made of how to specifically deal with the issue.

[Question] Do you mean that textbooks will be revised again?

[Answer] As I have said, efforts were made in the past to correctly describe historical facts in textbooks but I believe that further efforts should be made to make descriptions even more correct and more appropriate. Again as I have said, a study of specific measures to cope with the situation is under way and I have given instructions to speed things up.

[Question] When do you think this will be completed?

[Answer] As soon as possible. That is what I can say about it now.

[Question] [words indistinct] Would it be something answering not only the protests from China and the ROK but those from other Asian nations in general as well? The second point relates to your visit to China scheduled for next month.

When the textbook issue surfaced, it was understood that your scheduled visit to China would simply be to highlight the friendship between the two countries in connection with the 10th anniversary of the normalization of diplomatic relations. The textbook issue has added to the importance of the visit, has it not? With regard to the ROK, [words indistinct]. Would you comment on these two points?

[Answer] I think that the textbook issue has its roots in the deep national sentiments of the peoples not only of China and the ROK but also of other neighboring Asian countries. This leads me to conclude that the issue has a vitally important aspect. It relates to the ties of friendship, cooperation and mutual trust which we have endeavored so much to develop with neighboring countries. It would be a disaster if these international ties should be damaged and hurt. Thus, I take a very serious view of the issue and its impact. I believe that Japan should deeply reflect on the sacrifices, damages, losses, injuries and pains it inflicted upon the peoples of neighboring countries in the past war, that it should humbly listen to their complaints and criticisms about Japan, and that it should redouble its efforts to forge relations of true friendship, cooperation and mutual trust with them.

We should in this spirit exert our utmost efforts to solve the immediate issue at hand, the issue involving the descriptions in school textbooks. At the same time, I feel that similar efforts must be made on a people-to-people basis to strengthen friendship, cooperation and mutual trust with the peoples of neighboring countries by regarding them as our true brothers.

Speaking of China, we recently sent high-level, specifically director general-level, representatives of the Foreign Affiars and Education Ministries for consultations with the Chinese authorities on their views and criticism. Based on our findings, we are speeding up our study of a possible settlement acceptable to China, the ROK and other countries. I think that the issue should be resolved by the time I visit China; I should have it resolved by then without fail.

As regards the ROK, we are also conducting talks and exchanges of views on a comprehensive basis, through personal channels cultivated through time-honored associations involving the Japan-ROK Parliamentarians Union. Based, among other things, on information about the ROK authorities' views made available through these connections, we are striving to find a solution to the textbook issue as soon as possible. As you have pointed out, there are a number of other pending issues between Japan and the ROK. We hope to restore our relations with the ROK, with which Japan has most profound relations, at the earliest possible date, and to develop lasting cooperative relations between the two countries.

[Question] I would like to ask you about your personal perception of the textbook issue. The question of whether there was an aggression or an advance is now at issue. People, not only in China or Korea but also in Japan, think that the war was after all a war of aggression. I think that it was on the basis of this reflection that Japan drew up its present peace Constitution and adopted the position that its defense should exclusively be for self-defense. Was that war an act of aggression or an advance? In his Diet testimony, the education minister said that, in his definition, it was a war of aggression. What do you, as prime minister, personally think about this?

[Answer] I think that an evaluation of Japan's act in prewar days should be entrusted to historians in later ages. But it is true that internationally, including in China, Japan's acts in prewar days have led to a stern evaluation, criticism or perception in that they are regarded as aggression. I think that the government needs to fully bear this in mind.

Question] You said earlier that you want to have matters settled at an early date. By that do you mean that you want to work out specific measures to cope with the issue or [words indistinct]? What do you mean precisely?

[Answer] I meant what I said earlier. But I believe that the school textbook screening system is a very important pillar to prevent Japan's postwar education from becoming so-called ideologically prejudiced education and instead making it into an impartial and unbiased education. I think that we must continue to keep this screening system in the days to come. But at the same time we must treat well our neighboring countries in Asia with which we are now maintaining friendly ties. Yet these countries criticize us in connection with issues involving textbooks or historical descriptions. Japan must make great contributions in the international community in the days ahead, but if it has this kind of criticism or protests hurled at it by the Asian countries, there is nothing Japan can do about it.

I think that how we resolve and deal with these two issues is very important. Therefore, I am dealing with these questions very carefully, by devoting much time to it. But, since basically I maintain the view that I earlier described, I am having officials speed up the study so that a conclusion can be drawn as early as possible in accordance with my point of view. This is the present situation.

[Question] Prime Minister, you have not made clear whether you visited the Yasukuni shrine this year in your personal or in your official capacity. Because of this you have been subjected to the same kind of criticism as those leveled against Japan in connection with the textbook issues. I feel that the textbook issue and the Yasukuni issue boil down to one and the same question. What do you think about this?

[Answer] I think that your criticism, linking my visit to Yasukuni to the textbook issue, is unfounded. Regarding my view on my visit to the Yasukuni shrine, I have already clarified it over and again in the Diet. It is not a matter which I have to answer every time a microphone is put before my nose. I have made it clear in the Diet. I have even had it put on record by the stenographers, why I visited the Yasukuni shrine. I hope you will not worry too much about these things and hope that you will give your understanding.

[Question] [Words indistinct] The bill on the establishment of a Japanese national railways management committee has to be dealt with and there also is the issue involving fiscal deficits. Business recovery measures are also being demanded. I think that in this connection, plans have firmed up in general for convening an extraordinary Diet session. The question in this regard, I think, is when the session should be convened. In this connection you have said that it would be after the economic indices for September become available. On the other hand, on 16 October the candidates for the LDP presidential election will be put on public notice. In this connection, you are reportedly thinking of convening an extraordinary Diet session in late October or even after that. On the other hand, some quarters reportedly say that, if the session is called too early, all sorts of troubles may arise because of revenue shortages and other reasons, thus affecting your LDP presidential election. Others reportedly oppose the idea of convening the session at about the same time that former Prime Minister Tanaka is scheduled to receive his verdict. So, will you convene an extraordinary Diet session or not? And when will it be convened, if it is to be convened? Are you willing to call it into session before 16 October, or in September? Could you please answer these questions?

[Answer] Your question, in essence, concerns the convening of an extraordinary Diet session. Regarding the question of when to convene the extraordinary Diet session and the political tasks or bills to be dealt with at the session, various opinions have been put forward by various quarters within as well as outside the party. I am aware of this.

In the execution of the fiscal 1982 budget, considerations were given to business recovery measures and public works funds were allocated greatly ahead of schedule, as much as 77.3 percent. This may result in some strains in the second half of the year. From this viewpoint, some quarters hold the view that a supplementary budget mainly dealing with public works should be formulated and that it should be submitted to the Diet at the extraordinary session for approval. In addition, Rincho has come up with a package of basic recommendations dealing with important questions. Of these recommendations, those requiring urgent action, specifically those concerning a national railways reconstruction and management bill, revisions to the pension system and other measures, must be quickly dealt with even if we should have to call an extraordinary Diet session. These kinds of influential views and recommendations are worth listening to: I mean I share the same view as those who have presented these views and recommendations. The government plans to ask for the convening of an extraordinary Diet session at an early date as soon as the necessary preparations have been completed.

[Question] When you speak of an early date, do you mean that the session could be convened in early October regardless of the LDP presidential election?

[Answer] That is a question that I must of course discuss with the party. No decision has yet been made on the question of whether I should continue to give my services or not. As you know, the cabinet holds itself responsible to the party. I do not know if the party will decide to change the highest person in charge while the extraordinary Diet is in session. Apart from past practice, should the election be conducted and the highest person in charge changed while the Diet is in session? These are the factors to be taken fully into consideration. But, apart from this, as I have just said, I plan to convene an extraordinary Diet session at the earliest possible date after taking everything into consideration and as soon as the necessary preparations have been made. This is what I meant.

[Question] In that case, as you have just said, [words indistinct]: Since big calamities hit us this year, I feel that you will undertake public works and disaster relief measures on a considerably large scale. The scale and direction in that case [words indistinct]. Could you please [words indistinct]?

[Answer] Various surveys have been conducted on the scale of the disasters, but the damage to the public works sector due to the severe calamities centering around Nagasaki was relatively light. Of course, the damage to small and medium businesses and to individuals was considerably severe but the government has taken measures by making available government funds and loans. Therefore, it is possible to take measures for the rehabilitation of damaged public works within the limits of the present 1982 budget.

As I said earlier, the government took the bold step of allocating 77.3 percent of the public works funds ahead of schedule. What effect will this have on the recovery of business and how much should we earmark in the supplementary budget for public works in the second half of the year? I think that these are the areas we should examine thoroughly from all angles and should properly deal with in the days ahead.

[Question] Permit me to ask you about the deficit in fiscal 1982. We feel that the government has been driven into a situation where it could not avoid a drop in tax revenues. In what form, when and on what scale is the government going to issue deficit-covering bonds? We feel that the issuance of such bonds will be on a very large scale. If and when the government issues these bonds, what will happen to your big goal, the goal of freeing the government from deficit-covering national bonds by 1984? Is that goal really possible to achieve? To us, it looks very difficult. Please give your comment on this.

[Answer] A tax deficit considerably larger than anticipated was incurred in fiscal 1981. Since this 1981 tax deficit greatly affects the 1982 budget, as you just pointed out, revenue deficits in 1982 will inevitably be considerably high. I frankly feel that the situation has become very serious.

As you know, the government has balanced its accounts to make up for the tax deficit incurred in 1981 but it plans to make up for further deficits in drafting the 1983 budget. Regarding the 1982 revenue deficit, as I said earlier, I admit that it will greatly affect the 1982 budget. But it is too early yet to talk about how much it will be or when and how the government will deal with it. I hope to decide on the government policy with respect to this question when we formulate the 1983 budget.

[Question] In that case, do you mean that you do not plan to decide on it at the coming extraordinary Diet session?

[Answer] Do you mean the 1982 budget?

[Question] Yes.

[Answer] What the 1982 tax deficit will be, we do not know yet. Of course, it will have some impact, for sure. But, as I said, the government at the present stage finds it difficult to estimate the exact amount, study other measures or draw up a supplementary budget and determine the amount of public bonds to be issued at the extraordinary Diet session. This is what I meant.

[Question] This was mentioned in the last question. That is, does your major resolve to shake the government free from a red ink budget by 1984 remain unchanged at the present stage?

[Answer] As I have just said, I am also aware that the situation has become very severe. But the goal of freeing ourselves from budget deficits is what I promised the nation. Personally, I will do everything in my power, take every practicable measure and strive to achieve that goal.

[Question] Let me change the subject and ask you about administrative reform. You mentioned it a little in connection with the political schedule, but we think that the core of the package of recommendations presented by Rincho is, after all, a reform of the national railways. The prime minister seems to find it desirable to establish the proposed management committee at an early date. What role do you expect the management committee to play? Some quarters -- particularly those within the LDP -- are even opposed to the ultimate goal of dividing the national railways and placing them under private management. In this connection, what do you think should be the ultimate goal of the management committee?

[Answer] I would like to get the bill on the establishment of a national railways reconstruction and management committee approved at an early date -- as soon as possible -- in September, if possible. I also hope to set up a preparatory office in the Cabinet Affairs Council of the prime minister's office. Always, I plan to tackle the task at an early date.

When the government received Rincho's package of recommendations, the government decided in a Cabinet resolution to pay maximum respect to the recommendations at the 10 August Cabinet meeting. Therefore, it is expected that the government will promote legislation on the basis of the intent of Rincho's recommendations as far as the National Railways Management Committee is concerned. The government will deal with the issue under that policy.

The last question deals with the question of dividing the national railways and placing it under private management. I think the question is whether the government -- not the management committee -- will handle it. But I think this is the most important task for the management committee. I think that management reorganization of the national railways is the central task of the management committee. Therefore, when this management committee is established and when it begins work, I will have it present its plan and conclusion regarding this question first of all, and in accordance with the plan and conclusion, the government will take legislative and other measures. I think this will be the way.

[Question] I have a question in connection with Rincho's recommendations. Fiscal reconstruction without tax increases is the goal sought in the recommendations, and it is also the Suzuki Cabinet's public pledge. However, some quarters within the government and the LDP have recently been expressing the view that increasing taxes might be possible if it is within the framework of the current taxation system. I would like to hear what you personally think of this, Mr Prime Minister?

[Answer] By fiscal reconstruction without tax increases Rincho means that the government should take bold steps in reducing and redressing its administrative and financial constitution, which became corpulent in the days of high economic growth. It calls for all-out efforts in the area of streamlining and rationalizing administration and finance and improving the Constitution before considering tax hikes. I think this is what Rincho means by fiscal reconstruction without increasing taxes.

I feel exactly the same way. The 1982 budget was formulated under the zero ceiling principle, but in formulating the 1983 budget, we plan to review both expenditures and revenues from the stricter position of minus ceiling.

[Question] An immediate question in connection with fiscal reconstruction is how to handle arbitration over public officials' pay. Despite the argument last year that pay hikes should be held in check, pay hikes were carried out in full in practice after all. In its recommendations Rincho stresses that pay hikes should also be curbed this year, and I think this view is held by a considerable number of the members of the ruling LDP. In this connection, are you planning to take measures that would virtually curb pay hikes such as changing the rate of hikes or delaying the effective dates of hikes? Also, if you decide to do so, when will it be? I would like to ask these two questions.

[Answer] What Rincho notes in its latest package of recommendations is that the National Personnel Authority [NPA] should be retained, but that the government and the Diet should fully consider the present severe financial situation and other factors in acting upon recommendations to be submitted by the NPA.

The same thing has also been pointed out by the NPA and, since the state's financial situation this year is even more severe than last year, the government plans to draw a conclusion at the ministerial council on wages after taking all factors into consideration.

Regarding the question of arbitration, the government takes the view that, for budgetary reasons, it is not so easy or simple to carry it out. From this viewpoint, the government has requested the Diet to pass its judgment on the matter, and the Diet carried it over to its next session. So, we will await the Diet's appropriate judgment.

[Question] Let me go back to the financial issue. At present, tax deficits in 1982 are said to amount to roughly 5 trillion yen, a far greater amount than originally anticipated, and the revenue deficit in fiscal 1981 was 2.5 trillion yen. Mr Prime Minister, you said earlier that the deficits would be covered in fiscal 1983. I think probably you meant to say that the deficits would be made up in fiscal 1983 by borrowing from the national bond adjustment fund. But tax revenues ran so short in 1982, too, and unless there is an impressive rise in business, tax revenues in 1983 are also expected to drop considerably. Now, would it be correct to say that, in formulating the 1983 budget late this year, you will keep the goal of reducing the deficit-ridden national bonds to zero in 1984?

[Answer] I believe I have answered that question already, but in settling accounts for the deficits incurred through tax shortfalls in 1981, the government borrowed money from the national bond adjustment fund. As is stipulated under law, the borrowings must be paid back by 1983 and the government will do so as a matter of course. Now, deficits in tax revenues might be incurred in 1982. In this connection, I said earlier that deficits in tax revenues might run to a considerable amount in 1982 also.

However, it is too early yet to discuss what measures the government will take. The amount of the deficits and other factors have not yet been firmed up and it is impossible to make a decision on the basis of a rough estimate. In this regard, I want to take the 1983 budget to be formulated for comparison. This is what I said.

[Question] In that case, would it be right to say that the supplementary budget bill will be a two-stage bill? In other words, the government will incorporate additional funds for public works in the supplementary budget bill to be submitted to the coming extraordinary Diet session, but it will deal with deficits in tax revenues to be incurred in 1982 at a later stage. Is this a correct way of thinking?

[Answer] I talked about it earlier. Some quarters suggest that the extraordinary session be called in September or early October, and I said that, to deal with reflation measures or the Rincho recommendations which call for urgent action, the government would ask for the convocation of the extraordinary session at an early date, as soon as the necessary preparations have been completed.

However, as I said just now, the deficits in tax revenues in 1982 are certainly expected to come to a considerable amount, but it will be impossible to get the full picture in late September or mid-October. Therefore, I said that the government would thoroughly study those aspects and deal with the situation.

[Question] Listening to your account, we get the impression that it will be a tough job to formulate the 1983 budget. However, would it be right to say that there would be no change in your public pledge to reduce the deficit-covering national bonds to zero by 1984, even after you are reelected?

[Answer] Putting aside the question of whether I will be reelected or not, I am doing everything in my power to achieve that goal. To make up for the shortfalls in tax revenues, we must rack our ingenuity in every possible way and look for sources of revenue. But I want to make clear that the introduction of large-scale new taxes, like an excise tax, is not in my mind.

[Question] Please allow me to change the subject now. The LDP will be holding various study and training meetings sponsored by its various factions from now to early September, and preparing for its presidential election as the deadline for candidacy is set for 16 October. Please excuse me for bringing up a little sanguine talk, but what are you, Mr Prime Minister, planning to do for yourself?

[Answer] Regarding this question of the presidential election, I have been saying for a long time that I will leave the matter to take its own course. Even now there is no change in this mental attitude.

[Question] Even though you say you will leave the matter to take its own course, when the time comes, will you be ready to hold talks on this question with so-called influential figures, including the supreme adviser?

[Answer] I do not know what you have in mind in asking that sort of question. But I am not in the least thinking of carrying out maneuvers to win a majority vote or visiting here and there to secure my own reelection.

[Question] I would like to ask you one more question in connection with the textbook issue. You said that you would get the issue resolved at an early date and some quarters within the government are talking about doing something before the foreign minister leaves on an overseas tour on 27 August. In that case, there are no more than 4 or 5 days left before 27 August. In this sense, Mr Prime Minister, you expressed your view, which I think is the first to come from the government. In this connection, do you have any plans to take the initiative and hand down a political judgment or decision to resolve the issue?

[Answer] At present, I am having details on the matter worked out energetically under the care of Chief Cabinet Secretary Miyazawa. Depending on the situation, if the chief cabinet secretary seeks my final judgement, then I am thinking of drawing a conclusion on my own responsibility.

[Question] Is 27 August a target date? I mean to say, do you plan to get the issue resolved before that date?

[Answer] Well, I think that the chief cabinet secretary is working hard in the belief that it can be done by that time.

[Question] We can understand your position that you will leave it to take its own course, but we wonder if you have some sense of mission that you have a task left unaccomplished and you want to continue rendering service, or if the party's concensus is that you should be replaced, you are ready to yield your post to your successor. I think that this is a difficult question, but could you post to your successor? I think that this is a difficult question, but could you please clarify? [laughter]

[Answer] I will make my intention clear on 16 October.

[Question] I have one more question to ask you in connection with the textbook issue. Those portions deleted from the textbooks deal, not only with external issues, but also with the massacre of local inhabitants in Okinawa committed by the Japanese army. How are you going to handle such domestic issues?

[Answer] Regarding those humanitarian questions or other questions subject to criticism -- not only those external ones committed during the war -- we should deeply reflect and see that those things are not repeated in the days to come. In this connection, the government will study how to deal wtih those questions.

SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY AGENCY BUDGET REQUEST

By major category, however, no increase is planned in appropriations related to atomic energy and space development from 176.2 billion yen ($691 million) and 87.7 billion yen ($344 million), respectively, for the current fiscal year. Moreover, a decrease of 2.1 percent to 5.5 billion yen is envisaged in appropriations for ocean development, while appropriations for life sciences and other comprehensive projects will also decline 1 percent to 27.294 billion yen, the sources said.

Conspicuous among individual budget items, however, is a more than twofold increase in appropriations for construction of a new home port for the nuclear-fueled Mutsu in Sekinehama, Aomori Prefecture, to 8 billion yen. The agency plans to complete the port in fiscal 1986. Also notable is a 3.5-fold jump to 12.1 billion yen in appropriations to prepare for the international exposition to be held in the academic town Tsukuba in 1985.

JOINT EXERCISE 'ULCHI-FOCUS LENS' DENOUNCED

[NODONG SINMUN 26 August commentary: "The War Lunacy Expediting Self-Destruction"]

The spokesman of the combined forces command said the ongoing training is designed to exercise and improve combined and joint coordination between U.S. troops and the puppet army, plans and systems necessary to conduct emergency operations. The South Korean puppets are babbling that they will extensively review and examine the wartime mobilization system and the posture of total war through emergency mobilization training for homeland reservists and "Ulchi" training. These facts show that the ongoing military exercise is to more completely perfect the command system of the joint operation between the U.S. troops and the puppet army and strengthen the war potential. This serves as clear proof that new war provocation maneuvers in South Korea are reaching a dangerous stage with each passing day in accord with the U.S. imperialists' strategy toward Korea.

Today, the U.S. imperialists, bringing the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to the front, are fanatically accelerating war preparations to seize South Korea as their permanent colony and military base and to achieve their ambition to dominate all of Korea. The leaders of the U.S. imperialists, in particular, openly raved that they will utilize the Korean Peninsula militarily, whether directly or indirectly, in the interest of the United States, linking the Koran Peninsula with their vital interest. They are constantly increasing U.S. troops in South Korea and the puppet army and bringing in modern lethal weapons.

The contacts between the military leaders of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean Army are more frequent than ever before and military conspiracies are being held one after another. In particular, war exercises between the U.S. aggressive troops and the puppet army are constantly staged. Even in recent months, the large-scale war exercise called "the Team Spirit 82", marine firing exercise, "Myolgong-28" military training and so forth have been staged. Thus, war exercises bearing close resemblance to a real war have been conducted constantly in the air, on the land and on the sea.

All facts show that the U.S. imperialists' raving that they want peace on the Korean Peninsula and Chon Tu-hwan's babbling about peaceful reunification are nothing but empty words and that the very masterminds of the strained situation are none other than the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets.

The danger of war in Korea comes from the South. Today the spirit for anti-U.S. struggle for independence and antifascist struggle for democracy is increasing every day among the South Korean people. The U.S. imperialists' colonial rule over South Korea and the puppets' barbarous terrorist rule are arousing strong protests and denunciation of the people at home and abroad.

In this situation, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are creating tension by repeatedly staging war exercises. Thus, they are attempting to divert the attention of the South Korean people elsewhere by creating a terrorism-ridden atmosphere and are attempting to appease the anti-U.S., anti-Chon Tu-hwan sentiment that is increasing at home and abroad.

The war maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, which are becoming violent, merely expose their own aggressive and treacherous nature. The U.S. imperialists should immediately withdraw from South Korea, abandoning the anachronistic policy for occupying South Korea by force and war maneuvers. They should stop rackets instigating the puppets to fascism, division and war. If the South Korean puppets continue perpetrating the criminal act of implementing the U.S. imperialists' policy of war as their stooges, they cannot avoid the stern judgment of history and the people.

VRPR DENOUNCES S. KOREA-GABON JOINT COMMUNIQUE

[Text] In the statement jointly issued with the Gabonese president yesterday, traitor Chon Tu-hwan babbled that as a temporary step until the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula is achieved, the entry of the North and South into the United Nations could contribute to easing tension.

This shows that he again revealed his intention to realize his ambition for long-term power by eternally dividing the Korean Peninsula while making the two Koreas a fait accompli in the international arena through the simultaneous entry of the North and South into the United Nations.

For 37 years, the tragic situation of the national division has continued and the situation on the Korean Peninsula has been brought to the brink of war. This is not due to the failure of the North and South to enter the United Nations but to the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the Chon Tu-hwan ring, their obstructionist schemes against reunification and their maneuverings to provoke a new war.

Even in another's country, traitor Chon Tu-hwan has revealed his inner thoughts to eternally divide the Korean Peninsula and begged for support for this. This clearly shows that traitor Chon Tu-hwan is the most truculent splittist in the world.

CPRF FLAYS S. KOREA'S PUNISHMENT OF STUDENTS

[Information No 227 of the Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland issued on 25 August in Pyongyang -- read by announcer]

According to news reports, the South Korean puppets have recently punished or expelled from schools en masse in a tyrannical fashion some 2,500 students at various colleges in Seoul, including Seoul National University, Yonsei University, Tongguk University and Hongik University, under the cloak of poor academic records.

The racket of inflicting academic punishment on students has been kicked up in all regional colleges, including Kyongbuk National University and Kyemyong University in Taegu. News reports say the number of the students punished far exceeds that of previous years. Such a frantic racket of academic discipline is overbearing and high-handed fascist suppression of the campus and another reactionary offensive against the progressive youths and students.

Standing at the forefront of the nation-saving resistance against the United States and fascism, which is being strenuously waged in South Korea, are the youths and students who have an ardent sense of justice and patriotism.

Those who set ablaze the beacon fire of the anti-U.S. struggle by burning the U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan are the youths and students who revere justice and are passionate in their patriotism. Those who burned the U.S. flag, the bloody Stars and Stripes, in Chunchon are patriotic students who do not tolerate injustice and nation-selling.

The just, patriotic activities of the youths and students who oppose the United States and aspire for independence are arousing the support and sympathy of broad circles of people of all walks of life in South Korea. These activities are creating fear among the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

The academic discipline measures of the South Korean puppets is wickedly aimed at making the students docile slaves by squashing the sentiment against the United States and for independence among the youths and students and by bringing fascism to the campuses.

This is clearly revealed by the fact that on 20 August, the puppet education minister babbled at a meeting of university presidents and college deans that he would not tolerate any campus disturbance.

This notwithstanding, their suppressive racket is foolish. The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique can punish and expel students but they can never stop the movement against the United States and for independence growing in South Korea.

The South Korean youths and students, who through experiences have been convinced that independence, democracy and reunification depend on ending the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule, will march forward, holding high the banner against the United States and for national salvation until they create an independent, democratic new world without outside forces and fascism.

VRPR HAILS CHURCH STATEMENT ON PUSAN ARSON

[Text] At a time when the voices protesting and denouncing the punishments given those who were involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan are growing at home and abroad, the Roman Catholic Church in South Korea issued a statement on 23 August strongly denouncing the punishments.

In the statement, the believers' peace council of this church pointed out that the police mercilessly tortured the arsonists and branded them as procommunist elements sympathizing with violent revolution, ignoring their assertion that the aim of the arson was to inform the people at home and abroad of their protest against the United States.

The statement, sternly denouncing the authorities and newspapers for slandering and calumniating the Roman Catholic Church as a hotbed of antigovernment figures, noted that Father Choe Ki-sik's act of giving refuge to those involved in the arson is just.

As the South Korean Roman Catholic Church justly pointed out in the statement and as the people from all walks of life unanimously protest and denounce, the Chon Tu-hwan clique's punishment of those involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan is unjust and is an unprecedented fascist act.

As is known to the entire world, those involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan are patriots who waged just activities for the nation's sovereignty and dignity with an anti-U.S. national salvation spirit.

Their courageous acts were an eruption of the accumulated resentment and indignation of our people against the U.S. aggressors who are causing innumerable misfortunes for our masses, having occupied South Korea for 37 years acting as masters.

This is clearly shown by the statement of the arsonists in court that the violent revolution raved about by the authorities is a fabrication achieved through torture and that they set fire to the U.S. cultural center to inform people at home and abroad of their protest against the United States, which is enforcing colonial slavery on our masses and illegally occupying South Korea.

The U.S. aggressors are enforcing the division of the nation, occupying our country to make it their colony, and perpertrating plunder and massacre. How could our masses merely sit idly by!

Their resistance struggle against the aggressors is just, reflecting our masses' unanimous desire to achieve independence by putting an end to the U.S. colonial rule. Thus, their struggle should not be regarded as a crime. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique sentenced them to death and severe punishment, unjustly charging them as guilty. This is a grave crime which should not be tolerated any longer.

Thus, the masses from various strata are protesting and denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan clique for its fascist barbarity against those involved in the arson incident with surging indignation. They strongly demand their immediate and unconditional release. The statement of the South Korean Roman Catholic Church denouncing the punishment given those who were involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan is a boundlessly just act which reflects our masses' will and demand.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique should stop committing nation-selling treachery to win the favor of its U.S. masters and maintain its filthy life by punishing the patriotic masses. It should immediately nullify the unjust judgment against those involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center and immediately and unconditionally release all of them. If the Chon Tu-hwan clique continues punishing the patriotic masses who rose in the anti-U.S. struggle in defiance of the protest and denunciation at home and abroad, it will face a more miserable fate than previous dictators who collapsed after perpetrating treachery by relying on their U.S. and Japanese masters.

CHOSON ILBO HITS SUZUKI'S 23 AUG PRESS CONFERENCE

[Commentary by correspondent Yi To-haeng in Tokyo]

[Text] Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki's 23 August press conference on the textbook issue was ambiguous, betraying people's expectations inside and outside Japan. At this press conference he did nothing but repeatedly stress what his officials had alluded to on many occasions after the textbook issue surfaced. He said: In the past war, our country caused serious damage to the peoples of neighboring countries, including China and Korea. We keenly feel responsibility for this. (Passage from the Japan-Red China joint statement) Since the normalization of relations based on the spirit of self-reflection our recognition of the Japan-China and Japan-South Korea joint statements has not changed.

He continued: It is natural that the spirit of such a recognition should be correctly reflected in school education. I am now reviewing concrete measures. Despite the use of these slick words, he did not utter a single word on when, what and how he would act. The Japanese press has regarded this affirmatively as an expression of a will for review and correction.

What is incomprehensible to Koreans is that the Japanese prime minister has indiscriminatingly applied to our case the passage in the Japan-Red China joint statement signed in September 1972 between former Japanese Prime Minister Tanaka -- Suzuki's predecessor and currently his political patron -- and Chinese Premier Zhou Enlai. It is possible that Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki recited what his officials had prepared beforehand. He failed to discern that the ROK was not China, to which Japan had caused serious damage in the past war. It appears that he tried to deal with Red China and the ROK simultaneously.

Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki has failed to recognize the historical fact that Japan occupied Korea far before it invaded China -- that is, it had occupied Korea to use it as a bridgehead for aggression against China and that because of this, the Korean people were forced to suffer more severe fetters over a longer period than the Chinese people did. With such an attitude, no matter how eagerly he tries to express his desire to normalize relations with the ROK at the earliest possible date, the Korean people will regard this as a futile effort.

Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki, representing Japan, is very anxious to realize his visit to Red China in September this year in commemoration of the 10th anniversary of the normalization of relations between the two countries. At the press conference he said he was obliged to settle the textbook issue before his visit to Red China. Thus, he intended to deal additionally and simultaneously with another textbook issue with the ROK. It appears that, as a means of hastily and simultaneously settling the textbook issue involve the ROK together with that involving Red China, Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki has sent lawmakers Mitszuka and Mori from the Education Department of the Japanese Liberal Democratic Party.

In Seoul they attempted to meet high-ranking government officials who were not concerned with the textbook issue. Instead of trying to meet members of the ROK-Japan Parliamentary League, they expressed their desire to meet high-ranking government officials. Why did they want to meet these government officials?

Needless to say, Japan desires to settle the textbook issue politically with the ROK Government. Asked about a pending issue with the ROK Government at the press conference, Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki said there are many pending issues. This was very suggestive.

By referring to a pending issue, Japan may try to prevent the ROK from abiding by its principles on the textbook issue. To achieve this end, the aforementioned Japanese lawmakers wanted to meet high-ranking government officials.

Two department chiefs of the Japanese Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Education, who visited Red China on 13 August, only explained the Japanese stand without conducting negotiations. Nevertheless, the Japanese Government, interpreting in a self-centered manner the Red Chinese authorities' remarks that they valued Japan's textbook review system, has laid down a principle that it will not correct textbooks which have already been reviewed.

On 22 August, XINHUA criticized this action taken by the Japanese Government. Such being the case, the Japanese lawmakers' attempt to politically settle the textbook issue through negotiations with high-ranking ROK Government officials is an internationally impolite act. We should not be deceived by this trick. We should not tolerate it.

MINISTRY PREDICTS INCREASE IN COAL IMPORTS

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 25 (YONHAP) -- Despite a government policy to boost coal production and encourage the use of low-quality coal, South Korea's coal imports are expected to increase in the years to come, the Energy-Resources Ministry said Wednesday.

A ministry long-term coal import program showed that coal imports this year would reach 3.8 million tons, down from last year's 4.3 million tons. However, coal imports will increase to 4.8 million tons in 1983, 4.85 million tons in 1984, 4.92 million tons in 1985 and 5.42 million tons in 1986, the report showed.

Meanwhile, the government plans to increase coal stockpiles to two million tons by the end of 1986, the final year of the country's fifth five-year economic and social development plan, to insure a stable domestic coal supply.

Coal stored by the government totaled 1.3 million tons at the end of 1981. The figure is expected to rise to 1.5 million tons by the end of this year.

COMMENTATOR WELCOMES TSEDENBAL-BREZHNEV MEETING

OW210453 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1720 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 21 Aug (MONTSAME) -- The Mongolian public warmly welcomes the meeting between Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal, general secretary of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee, chairman of the Presidium of the M.P.R. Great People's Hural, and Leonid Brezhnev which took place yesterday in Crimea. As well as previous meetings between the party and state leaders of Mongolia and the Soviet Union, this one will mark an important stage in the development and expansion of fraternal Mongolian-Soviet relations and will undoubtedly enhance the struggle of peoples for the preservation of peace and security on our planet, a MONTSAME commentator writes.

Comrades Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal and Leonid Brezhnev informed each other on the socio-political and economic developments of Mongolia and the Soviet Union and discussed paramount problems of bilateral relations.

As regards the international situation, great attention was paid during the meeting to the situation in Asia and the Middle East. The stable peace in the Middle East can not be achieved neither through separate deals nor through brigandage, violation and genocide as it was chosen by Israel. Only just and universal political settlement can secure vital interests of all peoples for whom the Middle East is a home, they stated. Expressing concern over the continuing Iran-Iraq war, the two sides spoke out for the political settlement of outstanding problems between these two neighbouring states.

The Mongolian People's Republic and the Soviet Union bade welcome and fully supported the peaceful efforts and initiatives of the three Indochinese states aimed at the establishment of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, at the development of good neighbourly and equitable cooperation between the states of this region, the commentator stresses. The two sides expressed readiness to discuss with all states concerned of the Far East the ways of the radical improvement of the situation to make it possible for the peoples of this region to concentrate on the solution of the socio-economic tasks and to minimize their individual and joint efforts on ensuring their security.

TSEDENBAL, BATMONH GREET ROMANIAN NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 24 Aug (MONTSAME) -- Y. Tsedenbal and J. Batmonh have sent a message of congratulations to Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, president of the SRR, and C. Dascalescu, prime minister of the Government of the SRR on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of Romania's liberation from the fascist yoke.

During the years of people's power, the message reads, the Romanian people have achieved great successes in the socialist construction under the leadership of the RCP, in close-knit cooperation with the socialist community countries and has turned its country into a socialist state with modern industry, intensive agriculture and developed culture.

The Mongolian leaders noted with satisfaction the upward development of friendship and cooperation between teh two countries on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism to the benefit of the Mongolian and Romanian peoples, in the common interests of socialism, peace and international cooperation.

Y. Tsedenbal and J. Batmonh wished the Romanian people great successes in implementing the decisions of the 12th congress of the RCP in the struggle for peace and security of peoples.

LEADERS SEND GREETINGS TO AFGHANISTAN'S KARMAL

LD220707 Kabul BAKHTAR in English 0442 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] Kabul, August 21, BAKHTAR -- A congratulatory message has been received here by Yu. Tsedenbal, general secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Revolutionary Party of Mongolia and president of the Presidium of the People's Great Hural of the Mongolian People's Republic, and J. Batmonh, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Mongolian People's Republic, addressed to Babrak Karmal, general secretary of the PDPA Central Committee and president of the Revolutionary Council of the DRA and Soltan Ali Keshtmand, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the DRA on the occasion of the 63rd anniversary of the regaining of independence of Afghanistan.

The telegram says: "The regaining of independence of Afghanistan achieved as a result of the national uprising of the people of Afghanistan has fulfilled a great role in the development of the liberation movements in Asia".

The telegram adds that the victory of April revolution, especially its new evolutionary phase, is a great turning point in the history of Afghanistan. And the people of Mongolia rejoice over the great gains of the people of Afghanistan led by the militant PDPA party in safeguarding the acquisitions of revolution against the interference of counter-revolution and imperialist and hegemonist forces towards construction of a new society. The telegram also mentions that the traditional and historic relations between the peoples of the two countries after the triumph of April revolution have acquired a new content and form. And these relations will further develop in the interests of our people, peace, security and social progress.

OBITUARY FOR ARMY GENERAL DORJ PUBLISHED 24 AUG

CHEA SIM HOLDS TALKS WITH BULGARIAN ASSEMBLY

[Text] Phnom Penh, 25 Aug (SPK) -- According to a report from the Bulgarian capital, immediately after its arrival in Bulgaria, the delegation of the PRK National Assembly led by its chairman Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, held talks with the delegation of the People's Republic of Bulgaria's National Assembly led by its Chairman Stanko Todorov. The two parties analysed questions related to the cooperation between the parliaments of the two countries.

Chairman Chea Sim highly praised the development of cooperation between the two countries in all aspects of life based on Marxist-Leninism, proletarian internationalism and the accord of friendship and cooperation signed in 1980 by Todor Zhivkov, first secretary of the Communist Party of Bulgaria and Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP.

He expressed his gratitude to the Communist Party of Bulgaria for its aid to the Kampuchean people in the construction of a new life and in the struggle against the attempts of the hegemonists and reactionary forces in the region to place obstacles in the way of the peaceful development of the country. According to BTA, the delegation will visit different regions of Bulgaria today.

KPRAF ACTIVITIES, THAI BORDER VIOLATIONS REPORTED

BK211027 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Weekly roundup of KPRAF activities]

[Excerpt] According to reports we have received, during the week of 6-12 August, the Pol Pot bandits and other reactionary Khmers, supported by the Thai ruling circles who allow them to use Thai territory as a refuge, continued to carry out their senseless crimes of destruction and to disrupt the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people.

During the past week Thai aircraft flew 8 spying missions over such areas as the Preah Vihear temples, Anlong Veng, Phnum Malai, the sector west of Koh Kong town and Hill 343. At sea, Thai armed vessels carried out 60 spying missions into our territorial waters.

Along the border, on 33 occasions Thai artillery shelled such areas as the sector west of Smat Deng in Pursat, Nimit, Thmar Puck, the sector west of Ta Sanh, the Preah Vihear temples and Trapeang Kol. These barrages were fired in support of the Pol Pot bandits who crossed the border to carry out their crimes and disrupt the peaceful life of our people. The sector west of Smat Deng was shelled continuously for 5 days. Incoming fire averaged about 70 rounds per day. On 9 August, 180 rounds fired from 120-mm mortars and 105-mm cannons landed in our territory. On 8 August, the sector around the Preah Vihear temples was also hit by more than 150 rounds.

Apart from this, the Thai authorities used trucks to provide ammunition to the Pol Pot soldiers in various camps on Thai territory along the Kampuchean border opposite Pursat and Battambang Provinces. The ammunition included 120-mm and 60-mm shells, M-69 mines and a number of CKC rifles. In all their activities, despite the support of Thai aircraft, artillery fire and armed vessels, as well as in their intrusions inside our territory along the border to loot and plunder, they were all promptly defeated by our regular forces, our regional and militia forces, our cooperational groups and the people.

During the week of 6-12 August, in many places, group after group of these bandits were destroyed by our forces even before they had time to carry out their crimes.

In the sector west of Smat Deng in Pursat, with the support of Thai artillery fire, on nine occasions the Pol Pot remnants sneaked across the border in an attempt to destroy the positions of our border defence forces. But each time they suffered heavy losses inflicted by our vigilant forces.

On 8 August, we killed 3 of the enemy, seized a 12.7-mm rifle and 1,000 rounds of ammunition, and an AK. Two days later, on 10 August, also in Pursat Province, the regional forces took four prisoners during their sweep operation in Bakan District. The prisoners led our forces to the temporary shelter of their comrades where we killed 10 of them and seized 8 weapons.

On 11 August, a group of 10 bandits sneaked into (Ta Tem) village, Anlong Veng, in Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province, to spy and plant mines along Route 69. They were all killed by our regional forces who also seized five weapons. A day earlier, on 10 August, at 0400, our vigilant border defense forces spotted a group of Pol Pot soldiers who were gathering east of the Preah Vihear temples. With the cooperation of the Vietnamese forces, we set out to destroy the enemy. The battle lasted just over an hour, during which we killed 50 of them on the spot, took 4 prisoners, seized an assortment of 35 weapons -- including a 120-mm, an 82-mm and a 60-mm mortar, a DK-75, a DK-82, and 30 other weapons -- and a 15-watt radio set. We also destroyed three ammunition caches. The two or three survivors fled in panic to the other side of the border.

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Aug (SPK) -- According to military sources, during the week 13-19 August, Thai helicopters, T-28 aircraft, jet fighters and L-19's six times flew over sectors located 2 km from the border in Koh Kong, Pursat, Battambang and Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Provinces.

Thai boats and armed vessels penetrated between 4 and 20 nautical miles into Kampuchean territorial waters 201 times in the vicinity of Kaoh Kong and Kaoh Tang Islands.

Sixty-two shellings from Thailand against Kampuchean territory by 120-mm and 80-mm mortars and H-12 rockets were recorded. The sectors south and southeast of the border junction in Preah Vihear Province were hit by artillery fire from Thailand four times; Ampil, Thmar Puok, Yeang Dangkum, Hill 505, the sector west of Ta Sanh and Poipet in Battambang Province were also hit 34 times. The sectors west and northwest of Smat Deng alone were under fire from artillery pieces installed in Thailand 15 times while Hill 343 in Koh Kong Province was hit five times.

Many Pol Pot and Sereika groups infiltrated into Kampuchean territory but were beaten back by Kampuchean border defense guards.

SIHANOUK ARRIVES IN BEIJING, MET BY HAN NIANLONG

[Text] Beijing, August 20 (XINHUA) -- Democratic Kampuchean President Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Mme. Sihanouk and their party arrived here by air this afternoon from a friendship visit to Yugoslavia and Romania. They were greeted at the airport by Han Nianlong, advisor to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, and his wife.

Also on hand were diplomatic envoys to China of Yugoslavia, Romania, Democratic Kampuchea and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Meets Wan Li

OW241359 Beijing XINHUA in English 1252 GMT 24 Aug 82

Wan Li congratulated Samdech Sihanouk on his successful visits to Yugoslavia and Romania. Sihanouk spoke of the warm and sincere receptions accorded him by Yugoslav and Romanian leaders.

In a cordial conversation, the Chinese vice-premier reiterated the Chinese Government's firm support to the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea and the Kampuchean people in their just struggle against Vietnamese aggressors and the Heng Samrin puppet regime.

Present on the occasion were Han Nianlong, adviser to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, and his wife, and Pich Cheang, ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea to China. After the meeting, Wan Li gave a dinner for Samdech and Madame Sihanouk.

VODK REPORTS SIHANOUK VISIT TO ROMANIA

[Text] A Democratic Kampuchean delegation with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, as its head, and His Excellency Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs, as its deputy head, arrived in Bucharest on the afternoon of 14 August 1982 for a friendship visit to the Socialist Republic of Romania following its visit to the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Upon its arrival at Bucharest Airport which was decorated with the national flags of Democratic Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Romania, the Democratic Kampuchean delegation was warmly welcomed by His Excellency Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei, other Romanian officials and the diplomatic corps of the ASEAN countries, China and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

The Democratic Kampuchean and Romanian delegations held talks at the presidential office in Snagov on 16 August. His Excellency Nicolae Ceausescu, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, accompanied by other Romanian party and state leaders, warmly and cordially welcomed the Democratic Kampuchean delegation. This warm reception reflected the good relations of friendship, cooperation and solidarity between our two Kampuchean and Romanian peoples.

During the talks, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, informed the Romanian leaders about the situation in Kampuchea caused by the Vietnamese aggression and about the Kampuchean people's struggle for Kampuchea's national independence. The samdech said: In 1979, 1980 and 1981, the international community voted to approve resolutions clearly supporting Democratic Kampuchea and demanding the total withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea so as to allow the Kampuchean people to exercise their right to self-determination through a free election. The samdech thanked the Socialist Republic of Romania for standing by Democratic Kampuchea -- a legitimate state that the United Nations continues to recognize as the sole government of the Kampuchean nation.

His Excellency Nicolae Ceausescu, president of the Socialist Republic of Romania, welcomed the unity of the Kampuchean patriotic forces and the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK]. Concerning the settlement of the Kampuchean problem, President Nicolae Ceausescu said: It is necessary for all foreign troops to withdraw from Kampuchea and to create conditions for the Kampuchean people to solve thier own problems without any foreign interference.

Following the talks, President Nicolae Ceausescu hosted a brilliant banquet in honor of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, and the Democratic Kampuchean delegation. Many leaders of the Romanian party and state also participated in the banquet.

In his speech, President Nicolae Ceausescu said: Now once again Kampuchea and the Kampuchean people are going through difficult times. As friends of the Kampuchean people, whom we have always supported in their struggle for independence, we again wish to express our solidarity and our hope that they will regain full independence in order to be able to dedicate their efforts to economic and social development and welfare in independence and freedom and to choose by themselves their own path of development.

President Ceausescu added: It is necessary for all foreign troops to be withdrawn from Kampuchea so as to allow the Kampuchean people to solve by themselves their internal problems, free from any foreign interference. The Romanian people experienced foreign occupation over a long period, thus our people respect and support the struggle for independence waged by all people who want to become masters of their own destiny. We want the relations between Romania and Kampuchea -- friendly relations based on their longstanding cooperation -- to develop continuously. We hope the CGDK and the president of Democratic Kampuchea will become the lasting basis for the struggle to win back Kampuchea's independence and its free and independent development. I wish the Kampuchean people success in regaining their independence quickly.

In his reply, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, said: The people of Democratic Kampuchea have been forced to wage an armed struggle in order to regain their sovereignty and their right to self-determination and national independence, as part of the territorial integrity of their homeland. The states and governments that officially recognize or have diplomatic relations with Democratic Kampuchea are carrying out an act of justice as our Democratic Kampuchean state is the victim of foreign aggression. All foreign troops should withdraw from our Kampuchea.

The samdechpresident of Democratic Kampuchea expressed the Kampuchean people's profound gratitude to President Nicolae Ceausescu who, on behalf of the Socialist Republic of Romania, has given and is continuing to give noble support to our struggle for the liberation of our fatherland. The talks and banquet proceeded in the warmest and most intimate atmosphere.

On the evening of 18 August, President Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife, Madam Elena Ceausescu, hosted a dinner at the presidential palace in Bucharest in honor of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Princess Monique Sihamouk and His Excellency Khieu Samphan. His Excellency Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei also attended this reception.

The hosts and guests had a friendly and cordial conversation. Samdech Norodom Sihanouk and President Nicolae Ceausescu expressed satisfaction at the outcome of their talks and stressed their desire to strengthen and develop relations between the CGDK and the Romanian Government and friendship and cooperation between the Kampuchean and Romanian peoples in the interests of the two peoples and of international peace and cooperation.

After ending his successful visit to Romania, the president of Democratic Kampuchea left Bucharest on the evening of 19 August. Seeing the samdech off at the airport were His Excellency Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei, other Romanian officials and the diplomatic corps of the DPRK, China and the ASEAN countries.

At noon on 18 August, the diplomatic corps of the ASEAN countries hosted a brilliant banquet at the residence of the Thai ambassador in Bucharest in honor of the samdech president of Democratic Kampuchea and his Democratic Kampuchea delegation.

VODK: SRV STORES TOXIC CHEMICALS NEAR PHNOM PENH

[Commentary: "The Vietnamese Enemy Transported 40 Big Crates of Toxic Chemicals From Vietnam to Phnom Penh"]

The world and the United Nations have strongly denounced and condemned the Vietnamese for their crimes of aggression in Kampuchea, genocide against the Kampuchean race and their use of toxic chemical weapons to massacre the innocent Kampuchean people. The UN General Assembly appointed committees to investigate the big crimes committed by the expansionist Vietnamese and Soviets in using toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos, Afghanistan and in other places. Concurrently, the world and the UN have brought pressure to bear on the Vietnamese, calling for a complete and unconditional Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea and the respect of the Kampuchean people's right to determine their own destiny with no external interference.

Faced with continuous calls from the world and all mankind, the Hanoi Vietnamese expansionists pretended to be deaf and mute. Furthermore, they rejected and flagrantly charged the international community with interference in Vietnam's internal affairs. At the same time, they staged tricky maneuvers aimed at duping the world in order to make it believe that Vietnam had changed its stand, wanted peace and wanted to live peacefully with neighboring countries. They made propaganda about their withdrawal of part of their troops from Kampuchea, while in fact, the Vietnamese did not withdraw even a single soldier from the Kampuchean battlefield. They sent more troop reinforcements and more Soviet-made weapons and military materials to Kampuchea. Currently, they are successively transporting more toxic chemicals to Kampuchea.

These Vietnamese activities do not make anybody believe or misunderstand that the Vietnamese are ready to search for peace, but clearly show that the Vietnamese are preparing to increase their war of aggression in Kampuchea and extend it beyond the Kampuchean border.

BK221420 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] On the morning of 21 August, Pujo Prasetiyo, Indonesian ambassador extraordinary and plentipotentiary to Laos, paid a call on Phoumi Vongvichit, deputy prime minister and minister of education, sports and religious affairs, to bid him farewell before returning to Indonesia after completing his tour in Laos. On the same morning, the Indonesian ambassador also bade farewell to Sali Vongkhamsao, deputy prime minister and chairman of the State Planning Committee.

During the respective conversations, Phoumi Vongvichit and Sali Vongkhamsao thanked the envoy for contributing to the further consolidation and strengthening of the friendship between the two countries and peoples for the sake of peace in Southeast Asia and the world. They also wished the envoy a safe journey and success in his new assignment. The envoy asked the deputy prime ministers to convey his warm salutations and thanks to the Lao Government and people for facilitating the execution of his duty. The conversations proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship.

BK260339 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 26 Aug 82

["Text" of joint greetings message, dated 24 August, from Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan and President Souphanouvong to Erich Honecker, chairman of the State Council of the GDR]

[Text] Beloved and respected comrade: On the occasion of your 70th birthday anniversary, we would like to convey to you, comrade, our sincere congratulations and best wishes.

Over the past 50 years or so of your fertile revolutionary activities, you have scored precious heroic deeds in the struggle against the Hitlerite fascists for the cause of national liberation, in the maintenance of revolutionary gains, and in the socialist construction of the GDR. At present, the GDR has become a developed socialist country with modern industry, and the people have enjoyed a plentiful and prosperous life. You, comrade, have also made a great contribution to the strengthening of the cohesion of the socialist community and to the struggle for the cause of peace, for detente, for an end to the arms race and for cooperation among nations. Our LPRP and Lao people have highly appreciated your great contribution to the daily strengthening of the relations of friendship and cooperation between the GDR and the LPDR for the interests of our two peoples.

On this glorious occasion, we wish you, comrade, good health and new success in performing your noble duties.

OFFICIAL INTERVIEWED ON USSR-SRV RELATIONS

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, Aug. 26 (AFP) -- Thailand sees scant chance of "weaning" Vietnam from the Soviet Union and fears their alliance could lead to Soviet stationing of nuclear arms in the region, Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong said today.

In an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, Mr Arun said Hanoi appeared to be drifting "deeper and deeper" into dependence on Moscow, largely because of the heavy cost of maintaining 150,000-200,000 troops in Cambodia. No other country could or would provide as much aid, including infrastructure assistance, to meet the threat perceived by Hanoi from China, Mr Arun noted. "And the Soviets don't do things for charity, you have to pay them back," he said, referring to Hanoi's recent statement that it was leaving the door open on possible Soviet base rights.

The Thai official dismissed as wishful thinking the notion Vietnam might one day reassert its traditional foreign-policy independence and veer away from Moscow, as did Egypt, Somalia and Indonesia in the 1960's and 1970's. He noted no socialist state had ever made such a major break and said the idea Vietnam could be "weaned away" had been disproven to those who tried it before the invasion of Cambodia in December 1978.

The danger, he indicated, was the Soviet Union might some day station nuclear-powered submarines and similar advanced equipment at the Vietnamese bases of Danang and Cam Ranh Bay. "The Vietnamese are capable of doing anything," he said, referring to the possible new dimension to Sino-Soviet rivalry in the region. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach stressed at a news conference in Bangkok on July 30 that Vietnam could drop what is believed to have been its long reluctance to granting Moscow full base rights. "There are no foreign bases in my country, but that doesn't mean it will always be so in the future," said Mr Thach. "If there is some danger to my country (from China), we will not shut the door."

Mr Arun said the Soviet Union had studiously avoided making any such implied threats to Thailand and its regional non-communist partners to sanction their Cambodian policy at odds with Vietnam's. "They know very well they could lose (the right to navigate) the Malacca Straits," the waterway between Malaysia and Indonesia which is a short cut from the Indian Ocean to the Pacific, Mr Arun said.

The deputy foreign minister said the Soviet Foreign Ministry had sent the head of its Southeast Asian Department to Thailand immediately after Mr Thach wound up a two-week, four-nation regional tour last month "to sound out our reaction." He said the envoy had been oddly unaware that Hanoi's Cambodia position was slightly "softer" than Moscow's, notably on the question of an international conference and proposals for a demilitarized zone on both sides of the Thai-Cambodian border. But Thailand did not see any substantive changes in Hanoi's stand, Mr Arun said. Soviet Ambassador to Thailand Yuriy Kuznetsov had met Mr Arun yesterday to pass on an invitation from his Soviet counterpart Nicolay Firyubin to visit Moscow, the Thai official added.

VOFA DISCUSSES SITTHI REMARKS ON PRC RELATIONS

BK251530 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 25 Aug 82

This was revealed by the Thai foreign minister, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, to the Foreign Correspondents Club of Thailand on 11 August. He was replying to a reporter who had asked for his opinion on Chinese support for the CPT during a question and answer period after he had addressed the club on the topic: The Kampuchean Question in Perspective.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi also stressed that further economic development of the country, including helping the poor and addressing social grievances, would also lesson communist influence in the country. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi drew laughter when he said that a complete answer to the reporter's question could take the whole night. In summary, he said when Thailand established diplomatic relations with the PRC on 1 July 1975, M.R. Khukrit Pramot -- the then prime minister, who had gone to China to sign the joint communique establishing diplomatic relations -- had discussed extensively the matter of Chinese support to the CPT with top Chinese leaders, especially on the Chinese policy of differentiating state-to-state and party-to-party relations, The prime minister had emphasized that Thailand should be allowed to handle her own internal problems. Mutual understanding on this important problem had gradually increased and during the recent visit in August 1981 of Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang to Thailand, the Chinese premier stated that China would only give moral support to the CPT and would not use the party to expand China's influence.

It was quite apparent, Foreign Minister Sitthi went on to say, that as Thai-Chinese relations developed, China was gaining more benefits from state-to-state relations with Thailand than from party-to-party relations. China had also stated that it cannot cut loose immediately the party-to-party relations because it had a long history; this would take some time. Thailand understood China's dilemma, which explains why we have not raised too much voice. The foreign minister said we are trying to solve the problem in a quiet way. To lessen the CPT's influence, Thailand had to solve her own social and economic problems, which successive Thai governments had sought to do, he added.

The Thai Government places great emphasis on developing the country and its democratic institutions was [as heard] trying to help the poor and disadvantaged as well as trying to lessen gaps and differences among the various classes of people. If this could be done, he emphasized, communism would not arise or be a threat to Thailand's internal security. The CPT is now posing very little threat because of such policies and more and more CPT members have defected, he concluded.

NATION REVIEW URGES FOOD, MEDICAL AID TO CGDK

[Editorial: "Food, Medical Aid to Khmers Is Needed Now"]

[Text] The Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea although they are past masters in the art of guerrilla warfare and reputedly the world's best in guerrilla tactics, have been using conventional military strategy during past three years in fighting the patriotic forces east of the Thai border. We do not know the reason but all that we can say is that during the past dry seasons the mighty battle-tested army of the Vietnamese has not been able to overrun the scantily supplied Khmer Rouge, now reinforced by the guerrilla forces of President Norodom Sihanouk and Prime Minister Son Sann of the coalition government.

But in a departure from the strategy of the past three years, the Vietnamese are now active during the rainy season. Hanoi's reaction to the formation of the coalition government has been strange and if they have formed any firm policy to counter it, it has neither been announced nor has it been made clear in its implementation. It should appear, even to those not versed in military strategy, that the shelling of the guerrilla forces in western Kampuchea would be the softening up of the opposition forces before the Vietnamese troops can bring along the tanks when the rains stop.

As has been pointed out to us by the strategists of the Sihanoukist forces, the timing of the aid that the coalition should receive is very important. As Moulinaka's Nhem Sophon said, rice is an important commodity which is both a defensive and an offensive weapon. This Sihanoukist group has also pointed out that aid, mainly food and medical supplies, is very badly needed before the rainy season ends because "sick soldiers cannot march on empty stomachs."

Here we have an interesting situation. While the rich nations of the world may continue to have second thoughts about arms aid, we doubt there is any objection to giving the coalition government what they most need -- food and medical supplies. The United States is on record that it will provide non-lethal assistance to the guerrillas of the coalition government. Former Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda has said that Japan is considering [in italics] non-military aid to the coalition government. But right at this moment, talking of future contributions is of absolutely no help. Aid, especially food and medicines, are of no use at all if they are delayed.

ASEAN, without budging from its repeated stand of trying to find a political solution to the Kampuchean problem, should be able to help in this matter. They can easily convince countries in Western Europe, the U.S. and Japan how important the timing of food and medical aid is to the coalition government. ASEAN is coordinating its strategy for the coming UN General Assembly session which will be the dry season in Kampuchea. There is every reason to believe that the Vietnamese will mount a major offensive before the General Assembly session, if the present indications are correct.

The question of providing arms is altogether a different matter. Everyone knows that China has been supplying the guerrillas all along and is continuing to do so. Further both the Afghan and the Khmer guerrillas have proved themselves to be experts in capturing arms from their enemies and using them. But the question of arms aid and humanitarian aid must be clearly separated. Certainly nobody expects or wants Japan to provide rifles and grenades but if the situation is presented clearly to the Japanese authorities they will be able to see the need of the coalition government for food and medicines.

LAO, SRV ASSISTANCE FOR REBEL PARTY REPORTED

BK251300 Bangkok MATUPHUM in Thai 23 Aug 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] Charun Chamrak, Sawang Daendin District officer of Sakon Nakhon Province, told MATUPHUM on 22 August that Vietnam and Laos have assisted the Thai Northeast Salvation Party [Phak Thai I-San Ku Chat] in its political activities in northeastern provinces, particularly in Phetchabun Province, in an attempt to wrest influence in those provinces from the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT]. He said Vietnamese refugees are providing organized financial support for the Thai Northeast Salvation Party.

According to Charun, the Thai Northeast Salvation Party is under the leadership of Bunyen Wothong. Its activities are largely economic and political, with some small-scale armed activities. The party's activities in areas along the Mekong River bank, such as in Renu Nakhon District, are limited because the masses in such areas are pro-CPT. The party's activities are reportedly much more intense in Phetchabun.

Charun said the Northeast Salvation Party's activities in Nakhon Phanom provinces are limited, largely consisting of political agitation by cadres who have received political and military training from abroad. Party cadres operating at the village level earn 1,000 baht a month from the party, while tambon level operators earn 2,000 baht and district level operators earn 3,000 baht a month. The party receives continued financial support from Vietnamese refugees.

Charun said the government learned that on 28 March Vietnamese refugees in Sawang Daendin District donated 80,000 baht for the party and it is closely following up on this information. The party's school for political and military training is 16 km within Laos, opposite the Bung Kan and Seka Districts. Charun said the party's members are pro-Soviet oldtimers and pro-Soviet CPT defectors. The party is trying to penetrate the areas where the CPT's influence has weakened or has been completely eliminated.

Meanwhile, a high-level Thai military source told MATUPHUM that the Thai Northeast Salvation Party's leadership is in Laos. Laos, with Vietnamese assistance, reportedly has set up 18 schools for political and military training for the party's cadres. The party now has less than 1000 armed cadres.

SOLDIERS ARRESTED FOR EXTORTION, NOT ATTACK ON PREM

[Text] Five army men attached to Lop Buri military garrison have been arrested for alleged involvement in extortion, abuse of power and intimidation, informed military sources reported.

The five men were identified as Sgt-Maj [as published] Surasak Kusonsuk of the service company, Sgt-Maj [as published] Chaiwat Rotsamoe, Sgt Sutchai Mat-Im, Sgt Thongchua Nonloet and Pvt Wichai Saengdet. All of them are being detained by the military in Lop Buri, said the sources, adding that they were not involved in a recent attempt on the life of Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon when a number of M-72 anti-tank rockets were fired on the premier's motorcade. The arrest of five men followed a probe by the military in Lop Buri after numerous complaints were lodged by people in the province accusing some military personnel of extortion and intimidation.

OFFICIAL WARNS BURMESE REBELS OF 'TOUGH ACTION'

During a visit to Doi Lang yesterday, Maj-Gen Phairot said that the situation on the Burmese side was still quiet despite earlier fears that fighting might erupt at any time between the Shan United Army under the control of Khun Sa and the joint Wa National Army and Burmese Communist forces. He said that any warring troops who spilled over onto Thai soil would be pushed back because the government was firm about its policy of not becoming involved in Burmese affairs. Meanwhile, he said, local and BPP forces would be sent to areas where minority tribes might flee the fighting into Thai territory.

NAVY TO RECEIVE HARPOON MISSILES FROM U.S.

[Text] The United States is ready to sell a number of Harpoon ship-to-ship missiles to Thailand to beef up the firepower of the Royal Thai Navy [RTN], Admiral Sombun Chuaphibun, RTN commander-in-chief, disclosed yesterday.

A team of U.S. military technicians sent here to appraise the capability of the Thai naval vessels for accommodating the Harpoon missiles met with Admiral Sombun at the RTN Headquarters last Monday. Admiral Sombun said that his talks with the American team resulted in the U.S. agreement to deliver the missiles to the RTN. The number of missiles to be purchased will depend on the capability of the corvette-type vessels which the navy plans to build, he said, adding that an additional quantity of the missiles would also be acquired as reserves.

Delivery of the Harpoon missiles -- at 23 million baht each -- will be made as soon as the construction of two corvettes planned by the navy is completed, said the admiral, adding that the navy is calling a bid for the construction of the two vessels. Construction will take about 34 months after a contract is signed between the RTN and the shipbuilder. The two corvettes will not be built in Thailand because Thai shipbuilders still lack the technology to build such warships, said the admiral who asserted that the RTN would pick the bidder who offers the best terms.

Before the delivery of the missiles, Admiral Sombun said naval officers would be selected and sent to the U.S. for a three-month training in handling and maintaining the missiles. He said further that the navy would soon end its coastal patrol craft construction programme and would put emphasis on bigger and more sophisticated vessels. Regarding the annual reshuffle in the navy, Admiral Sombun said there is no problem with the navy, because only a handful of senior naval officers are due to retire this year.

Vietnam and Indonesia are negotiating for the delimitation of the continental shelf and the territorial sea off the coast of southern Vietnam, and the two sides have always maintained their respective stands. Vietnam has explained its position many times and has called foreign oil companies' attention to the consequences of their continuing prospecting for and exploitation of oil and natural gas in the disputed areas.

NHAN DAN SCORES REAGAN'S ECONOMIC POLICY

[Chieu Ly article on 24 August NHAN DAN: "Mr Reagan's Sophism and Trickiness"]

[Text] On 19 August, the U.S. House and Senate, voting 226-207 and 52-47 respectively, passed President Reagan's new tax increase bill. Earlier, on 16 August, in a lengthy televised White House address, Mr Reagan sought to defend his new economic program and to impress voters.

The new tax increase bill has shed more light on the true colors of the Reagan administration. Its passage, a decision fraught with unfathomable serious economic and political consequences, came at a time when the United States is preparing for midterm elections. Mr Reagan proposed a 3-year tax increase of $93.3 billion, mostly through indirect taxes. In the bill just passed by Congress, this proposal is linked with a decision to slash another $17 billion from federal spending, which was destined for various social welfare programs.

Both of these key provisions of the bill are yet another in a series of repeated blows dealt by the Reagan administration to the various strata of the American working people. When he first presented his new bill, Mr Reagan explained that it in no way meant a reversal of his administration's economic policy or philosophy. However, he could not deny that the bill represented a step backward in his basic economic plan. He also asserted that the proposed nearly $100 billion tax increase was necessary to make up for huge budget deficits, to cut bank interest rates and to move closer to economic recovery.

Yet, not too long ago, before entering the White House,, Mr Reagan still extolled the virtues of a proposed 30 percent, 1981-83 3-year tax cut and a $418 billion, 1982-85 tax break, which he considered to be strong economic stimuli. It should be recalled that on 7 November 1981, Reagan emphatically declared that there would not be the slightest change in his new economic program, no matter how the situation might develop. Now, the U.S. President is glibly defending his 180-degree turnabout. The bill recently passed by Congress has clearly exposed Reagan's conservative and opportunistic character. There has been absolutely no mention by the U.S. President of any cutback in military spending. Obviously, the United States is being governed by a warmongering administration which has persistently pursued the costliest arms race ever in history, ready to spend $263 billion in fiscal 1983 and another $1.6 trillion over the next 5 years for this purpose.

Last year, when proposing his tax cut program, Reagan claimed that it was designed to stimulate the economy and to speed up its recovery. Now, he asserts that taxes must be increased if the United States is to move closer to economic recovery. Obviously, the U.S. President is resorting to sophistry. The new tax increase bill immediately encountered strong opposition from many conservative Republican senators and even from several of Reagan's economic advisers themselves. Objectively speaking, the new tax increase was a utterly bitter pill which Mr Reagan has had to swallow with a smile. He has had to admit that, without a tax increase, U.S. budget deficits will snowball to horrifying proportions. If the United States continues to pour money into the arms race as planned without increasing taxes, it may suffer a budget deficit of no less than $160 billion during the next fiscal year.

The Reagan administration will undoubtedly be the first in U.S. history to accumulate a total budget deficit of more than $300 billion during its term of office. These deficits have been one of the major causes of the consistently high bank interest rates, a factor which has contributed to keeping the U.S. economy in the grip of one of the most serious crises since the end of World War II.

It is worth mentioning that, just as on previous occasions, this time around the tax burden weighs most heavily on the various strata of the American working people. On 16 August, Reagan himself had to acknowledge that the new tax increase bill was not popular.

For many years now, the ruling U.S. capitalist circles have been torn between two choices: To give priority to antirecessionary or to anti-inflationary measures. The new tax increase bill was essentially anti-inflationary; it was designed to further lower bank interest rates and to significantly reduce the rate of inflation. A series of measures applied recently by the Reagan administration has helped bring down the discount rate by 3 percent over the past 6 weeks, from 16.5 to to 13.5 percent, and the prime rate of many banks to about 14 percent.

U.S. business circles are still perplexed since the new tax increase has yet to exert a palpable effect on the economic recession. U.S. industry is still functioning at about 70 percent of capacity. Industrial output in July still represented a 10.3 percent decrease from the same period last year. Most serious was the unemployment rate, which has affected 9.8 percent of the work force, the highest level since 1941, with more than 10.7 million jobless people. There are indications that this rate will continue to rise. U.S. economist Paul Craig Roberts, who resigned from his position of assistant secretary of the treasury early this year, affirmed: The tax increase will result in a bigger budget deficit, not a smaller one, because the economic recession will become more serious.

Mr Reagan has recently made one self-contradictory statement after another. His economic policy is not consistent. The only thing that is consistent in his attitude is his conscientious protection of the interests of various big capitalist cliques, especially the U.S. military-industrial complex, and his squandering of U.S. national resources in an extremely costly and dangerous arms race. Reagan's popularity among U.S. voters is approaching its nadir.

TRUONG CHINH, LE DUC THO MEET VETERAN CADRES

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 24 August]

[Text] Today NHAN DAN frontpages a picture of and a report on a recent meeting between [Council of State] Chairman Truong Chinh and Comrade Le Duc Tho and revolutionary veterans in Ho Chi Minh City on the occasion of the anniversary of the August revolution and National Day, 2 September.

In an intimate and frank atmosphere, Comrades Truong Chinh and Le Duc Tho wished the veteran cadres the best of health always and hoped that they will contribute valuable experience to the tasks of developing the party and consolidating and protecting revolutionary power -- goals our people obtained at the expense of their blood.

OFFICIALS MARK ANNIVERSARY OF ARMY JOURNAL

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 25 -- A get-together has been held here marking the 25th anniversary of TAP CHI QUAN DOI NHAN DAN, a theoretical military and political review of the Communist Party of Vietnam for the armed forces.

General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and minister of defence, and General Chu Huy Man, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and head of the General Political Department, were among the review's reporters, contributors and readers present on the occasion. Speaking at the event, General Van Tien Dung said that the Council of State had decided to confer the Military Exploit Order, First Class, on the staff of the review in acknowledgment of its brilliant achievements over the past 25 years.

PHAM HUNG VIEWS PROTECTION OF SOCIALIST PROPERTY

[Text] A conference was recently held in Ho Chi Minh City to study and discuss plans for implementing the resolution of the Council of Ministers on protecting socialist property and ensuring social order and safety. Attending the conference were key leaders of various administrative organs, the security force, the army, the police force and tribunals of provinces from Quang Nam-Danang to Minh Hai; leaders of military regions and army corps; and leaders of the sectors concerned at the central level.

Pham Hung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, chaired the conference to which he transmitted the Council of Ministers' resolution.

Comrade Pham Hung reminded sectors from the central to grassroots levels, localities and units to review their situation extensively; to set forth requirements and measures for quickly reorganizing the management and protection of socialist property; and to launch a revolutionary movement among the people to participate actively in the protection of socialist property and the maintenance of social order and safety and to counter the enemy's scheme of economic sabotage. He also urged them to implement the Council of Ministers' resolution scrupulously so as to contribute to implementing the 1982 and 1981-85 state plans successfully.

NHAN DAN VIEWS EMULATION AMONG SOVIET EXPERTS

BK251236 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 20 Jul 82 p 3

[Article by Nguyen Tho Chan, chairman of the party Central Committee Emulation Department: "Flowers of Emulation of the Vietnamese-Soviet Friendship"]

[Text] The Vietnamese-Soviet friendship emulation movement has developed vigorously at the project sites and in the factories where Soviet experts are working. Implementing their emulation pledges, all the Soviet experts have fulfilled their tasks ahead of schedule. They have helped our cadres and workers develop initiatives, rationalize production and improve technical and organizational work to increase labor productivity and economize on energy, materials and manpower.

They have also assisted in conducting basic and advanced technical training and in restoring and repairing equipment, some of which has been stored for a long time. In several localities, the Soviet experts have helped our cadres complete research on several valuable scientific subjects. No matter where they are working, they always orient our emulation movement toward fulfilling production and construction plans well, and accelerating socialist cooperation among component organizations and individuals. They have thus contributed to promoting the emulation movement.

In the Uong Bi electric power plant, the Soviet experts have pledged to emulate the Vietnamese collectives in increasing the generator output of each work shift and in assuring safety, even though the plant's equipment has not been fully installed. They have guided us in applying the system of chief-engineer and foreman control in order to give close guidance and centralize the operational control power. As a result, the plant fulfilled its 1981 plan for the first time. In the first quarter of 1982, the volume of electricity output exceeded the plan norm by 8 percent while the rate of electricity consumption within the plant decreased by 0.2 percent, the amount of fuel consumption decreased by 50 percent and the number of breakdowns decreased by 60 percent. The plant's functional cycle has increased to 150 percent, making 1982's first quarter the first quarter since 1975 during which the plant's capital accumulation increased to 50 million dong.

The Soviet experts of oil company No 1 and the Vietnam oil sector's geophysics company have signed a pledge with our cadres and workers to overcome all difficulties in fulfilling the plan. In 1981 and the 1982 first quarter, all units have fulfilled their assigned duties ahead of schedule under the emulation drive. They have discovered several additional oil-bearing stratum, tripling the 1980 reserve of oil. This has enabled us to industrially exploit the first oil well in our country for fuel to produce tens of millions of kilowatts of electricity, to establish seismologic lines at sea and to collect the first data on the substrata of our northern continental shelf.

In the geological units, the Soviet experts who join the emulation drive have achieved the units' major tasks. Entering 1982, experts in the 9th geology group have helped repair more than half of the unserviceable drilling machines. After 35 days of urgent work, all the machines resumed normal operations and by the end of February, 62.7 percent of the drilling plan for the first quarter, believed at first to be unachievable, has been completed.

The Soviet experts and our cadres and workers at the construction site of the Song Cong diesel motor factory set 14 emulation points under the drive to greet our party congress. All these points have been fulfilled satisfactorily with many of them completed ahead of schedule.

At the Thang Long bridge construction project site, the Vietnamese cadres and workers and the Soviet experts signed a cooperation pledge to emulate in fulfilling various specified items of the project. Every quarter together they have reviewed their work to draw upon their experiences and discussed measures to speed up construction rates. In 1981, the Thang Long bridge construction corporation fulfilled 2.6 percent of the plan norm and output value. For the first quarter of 1982, it has fulfilled 102 percent of the truss installation plan, overfulfilling the quarterly plan norm and the gross output value. The Soviet experts have trained our workers in applying the latest welding techniques to assemble various metal structural parts.

At the Haiphong port, besides helping revamp labor organization and management, the Soviet experts have signed emulation pledges with the transport agencies, the river transport department, the truck transportation department and various consigners to ensure safe shipments to the two construction sites of the Pha Lai thermoelectric power plant and the Bim Bon cement plant. The organization of such an emulation drive plays the role of encouraging gradually and uniformly units of various sectors assigned a similar task to increase their loading and unloading output. The loading and unloading output at the port has doubled and quadrupled in some months.

At the construction site to enlarge the Lam Thao superphosphate factory, all the Soviet experts have signed emulation pledges with the H76 project site headquarters, the V8 general department of chemicals and machinery assembling company No 3 of the Building Ministry and the factory's building committee to emulate in work systematically for years now. As a result, the 1981 plan norm for the project was overfulfilled by 16.5 percent and 105.9 percent of the construction plan norm for the first half of 1982 were fulfilled by the Vietnamese and Soviet workers at the site. Soviet team leader (Batrakov) and his assistant (Putkin) -- the proponents of this friendly emulation movement -- have stayed close to all units to provide adequate assistance to the Vietnamese cadres and workers.

At the Bim Son cement plant construction site, the Soviet experts have emulated the Vietnamese cadres and workers in installing production chain No 1 and produced the first tons of cement to greet our party congress. They have trained skilled Vietnamese workers to be core forces in various workshops. Soviet team leader (Marov) has frequently helped the Vietnamese cadres and workers improve labor organization to complete the construction work more quickly. Land survey engineer (Oradyev) together with our cadres and workers has performed surveying and measuring tasks for 6 continuous months over 5 kilometers of rugged rocky mountain roads to determine a line of access to quarries. Chief Engineer (Nalivachenkov) has helped us establish estimates for the purchase of reserve machinery. He has gone to the port to personally check every new arrival of machinery. He is always available to guide our cadres and workers in accurately installing machinery.

At the Hoa Binh hydroelectric project site, the Soviet experts together with our cadres and workers have completed ahead of schedule 12 projects and 193 difficult jobs with good quality. Those experts assigned to tunnel projects have guided our cadres and workers in applying new drilling techniques to double the work results. In the first half of 1982, 53.2 percent of the annual construction plan norm have been fulfilled.

At the Pha Lai thermoelectric plant project site our cadres and workers have signed a pledge to accelerated the construction of 75 project items bearing the fifth congress name to include the main generating plant, furnace No 1 and the 200-meter high chimney. The Soviet experts have suggested the application of new techniques to improve work and increase labor productivity from 5 to 10 percent. In the first half of 1982, 65.9 percent of the annual construction value has been achieved.

There have been also growing friendly emulation movements among the Soviet experts and our cadres and workers in the various mining areas and factories of the Coal and Mine Ministry. Since 1981, many projects have been completed on or ahead of schedule, ensuring good production and economic results. The Soviet experts have guided our cadres and workers in installing new pieces of equipment at the Cao Son mine.

Drilling machine No 9 and shovelling maching EKG7 have been installed 17 and 22 days ahead of schedule respectively. Our workers have been trained promptly to engage in production since December 1981 and accept production plans at the very beginning of 1982. As a result, Cao Son is the sole mine in the sector which has completed the excavation plan.

At the Cam Pha engineering center, the Soviet experts have cooperated with our cadres and workers in designing and building a machinery parts-cleaning machine that was commissioned in January 1982. This machine has saved costly manual work and has doubled work quantity and quality. They have also helped us manufacture machines to send furnace arches and cast iron with better quality. At the Cam Pha engineering plant, the Soviet experts have cooperated with Vietnamese workers to transform damaged 540 Bella trucks into towing and forklift trucks which are of great use in the engineering sector.

At the Mong Duong and Khe Cham mining areas, the Soviet experts and Vietnamese cadres and workers pledged to start mining effective April 1982. Nevertheless, mining actually began in February 1982 and on 19 May 1982, the eastern shaft began producing coal to mark Ho Chi Minh's birthday. Among the Soviet experts who have devoted most effort to Vietnam's coal and mine sector is adviser (I.T. Kongrachenkov). He has been instrumental in the signing of annual contracts for materials and in the timely supply and transportation of equipment items and materials to the mining areas. He has contributed many ideas to the annual and 5-year plans for the development of the mines. He has put forth measures to implement the plans and disseminate the Soviet coal sector's experiences in the management, guidance and organization of coal production. In the Soviet coal sector, the specialists' work efficiency has always been a great concern and action has been taken to increase their effectiveness.

At the workers' cultural hall construction site in Hanoi -- this project is financed by the Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions -- the Soviet experts have cooperated with our cadres and workers to accelerate the construction of various projects of the 1981 plan and have completed the work of the first months of 1982 with good quality. Soviet team leader (Bagatov), who controls the construction of a 1,200-seat theater balcony, has helped save thousands of square meters of casing timber. Chief Engineer (Mikhail) has taught our workers to rub rust off steel rods by sandblasting. Engineer (Gavilov) has shown our workers how to build walls, install steel framework and set up casing to pour concrete.

We cannot cite all the beautiful examples set by the Soviet experts at our various construction sites. We can derive several valuable lessons and experiences from the labor emulation spirit of Soviet experts who have upheld their sense of responsibility and proletarian internationalism in performing their labor tasks to assist our people. We like the Soviet experts for their simplicity, modesty and frankness and for staying close to our cadres and workers. We learn from them the progressive thinking and bearing of the working class, self-consciousness, the inspiration and discipline of work, and healthy relaxation in living activities. These comrades always take work results as criteria for evaluating man and consider them the base of bright socialist ethics on which to oppose selfishness and laziness unfamiliar to socialism. They have devoted themselves wholeheartedly to our people's revolutionary cause; respected our good men, good deeds, models and young offspring of the movement; and cheerfully introduced and praised our cadres and workers for their high skills and sense of responsibility and for their organizational initiative.

The Soviet comrades are very concerned with the life of our cadres and workers. Understanding our difficulties, they have encouraged us to increase labor productivity. They have always stimulated our cadres and workers to develop their organizational initiative and resolve the various economic and technical problems in production, especially the problem of organizing tasks and jobs.

We admire and thank the heroic Soviet people who have been educated and trained by Lenin's great party. These people have implemented proletarian internationalism with outstanding success in their own country which is composed of many republic states and people of hundreds of different nationalities.

FRASER COMMENTS ON TRADE RELATIONS WITH U.S.

BK210937 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] The federal government says it will resist any attempt by the United States to cut back on Australian beef imports. The prime minister, Mr Fraser, said that during the past few days, problems had arisen over access for Australian meat on the American market. Mr Fraser said if the U.S. did not uphold its commitments in relation to Australian beef, it will be the gravest, the greatest travesty [as heard] of relationships between countries he had ever seen.

The prime minister, who was speaking in Tasmania, said the U.S. did not have a good trade relationship with Japan, but he said it was still better than its trade relationship with Australia.

USSR SCIENTISTS BOYCOTT PERTH MEETING

[Excerpt] The 25-member Soviet delegation is boycotting a conference in Perth being attended by more than 2,500 scientists from 50 countries. The boycott is in response to the federal government's decision to refuse entry visas to the two scientists who would have led the Soviet delegation to the International Congress of Biochemistry.

A spokesman for the Foreign Affairs Department said the decision was in line with the government's policy of restricting visits to Australia of senior Soviet officials. He said this was one of the measures taken by Australia to protest against the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan more than 2 1/2 years ago. The spokesman said Soviet authorities had made clear they were not happy with the decision to refuse entry visas to the two scientists but there had been no official complaint about it.

The president of the congress, Prof (Wood) of the United States, says the decision has damaged Australia's international reputation and will severely disrupt the congress. He says participation of all delegations is needed for the congress to make official decisions.

Foreign Minister's Comments

[Text] Minister for Foreign Affairs Street says the Soviet threat not to send scientific delegations to Australia should be seen in its proper perspective. Mr Street said Australian policies have reminded the Soviet Union of the unacceptability of their policies in Afghanistan and Poland. The Soviet Union yesterday protested against the decision by the federal government to deny visas to two Soviet scientists to attend a conference in Perth.

POLAND'S SOLIDARITY MEMBERS ARRIVE FOR TALKS

[Text] Two senior members of the Polish trade union Solidarity have arrived in Australia to discuss the plight of their organization with Australian trade unions. They said they are looking for moral, political and material help from Australians.

Mr (Jozef Melaskiy) and Miss (Nadda Voycek) escaped capture and detention when the Polish Government cracked down on Solidarity last December. They now live in Western Europe.

(Melaskiy) said the Polish Government's refusal to negotiate with Solidarity's underground leadership had made the situation in Poland dangerous.

SINCLAIR PRESENTS BILL ON FOREIGN WARSHIPS

[Text] Minister for Defense Sinclair has introduced legislation to Federal Parliament to give the government power to ensure the entry of foreign warships to Australian ports. Mr Sinclair said the bill is designed to authorize visits by foreign warships and protect them from obstruction or interference. It follows moves by the Victorian government to ban nuclear-powered or armed warships.

The bill provides for a $1,000 fine of, or 6 months in jail for anyone convicted of preventing hindering or obstructing the entry, berthing or departure of approved foreign warships from any Australian port. Mr Sinclair said the government believes visits to Australian ports by allied warships have the overwhelming support of the Australian people.

The opposition made no attempt to speak against the bill at today's second reading.

LAST OMEGA NAVIGATION STATION COMPLETED

[Text] The Omega navigation facility in eastern Victoria is now completely operational. The facility was built under joint Australian-United States agreement and is the last link in a worldwide network of eight Omega stations.

Announcing the opening, the minister for transport and construction, Mr Hunt, said it would fill gaps in the Omega navigation system which had existed in parts of the Pacific and Indian Oceans and over Australia. The station has been criticized by antinuclear groups which say the Omega system can be used by planes and ships during a war.

Construction was delayed also for over 9 months when two unions involved in the building quarrelled over those members should be doing the work.

TAHITI

LEADERS OF MAOHI INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT ARRESTED

BK171200 Hong Kong AFP in English 0815 GMT 17 Aug 82

[Text] Wellington, Aug 17 (AFP) -- The leaders of Tahiti's independence movement, the self-styled Maohi provisional independence government, and 50 of its supporters were jailed on Sunday by gendarmes (police), according to the New Zealand Greenpeace group.

The group, which supports independence movements in the French overseas territories in the Pacific such as Tahiti, said the detainees had not yet been charged or released from police custody. The group claimed a task force of gendarmes arrested "provisional government" President Mai Tetua, prime minister in [as received] Tamatea R. Taero, other government members and 50 supporters, during a raid on the party's headquarters.

The gendarmes were also reported to have ransacked offices and burnt the Maohi provisional government flag in the raid.

Greenpeace organisation spokesperson Elaine Shaw said news of the arrests came today from the leader of an independence movement in one of France's other territories -- New Caledonia -- Yann Celene Uregei. Greenpeace claimed the arrests were made as the French secretary of state for overseas territories, Henri Emmanuelli, was leaving the capital, Papeete, after a visit.

She said the move was a crackdown on the tiny, but rapidly growing, Maohi independence movement in Tahiti, which forms part of French Polynesia. Greenpeace said the arrests may have been sparked by the movement's plan for a national congress on August 21 in Papeete.

SUBROTO DISCUSSES OPEC VIENNA MEETING UPON RETURN

BK231010 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0757 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Text] Jakarta, August 23 (ANTARA) -- The meeting of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) Monitoring Committee held in Vienna on August 19 and 20 suggested to OPEC President Mani' ibn' Sa'id al-'Utaybah to maintain the highest production of 17.5 million barrels daily.

Minister of Mines and Energy Prof. Dr. Subroto stated soon after his arrival from attending the meeting also proposed the maintenance of the benchmark price of U.S. $34/barrel.

Apart from that, the Monitoring Committee, which consists of Indonesia, the United Arab Emirates, Algeria and Indonesia [as received], forwarded a proposal for the setting up of a working committee to calculate the price differential of various kinds of OPEC crude oil. The Monitoring Committee forwarded to the OPEC president its decision to meet again in Abu Dhabi in the near future.

Subroto stated that the world oil market was still sluggish at the present time. He expressed confidence, however, that the oil price would improve not in a very long time, in view of the reduction of oil stock in the advanced countries.

The minister disclosed the production of oil by the OPEC member countries was still below the limit of 17.5 million barrels/daily at present, although the production reached 18.2 million barrels daily in July. The depletion of oil stock and the fact that OPEC oil production is still below the limit, according to the minister, guarantee the improvement of the world oil market in the near future.

The meeting also discussed reports that several OPEC members had produced crude oil over the production limit 17.5 million barrels daily. In this connection OPEC will make approaches to persuade them to abide by the decision on the production limits so as to maintain the OPEC unity, according to Subroto.

LEADING LAWYER ON TRIAL FOR 'INSULTING SUHARTO'

BK240727 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0705 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 24 (ANTARA) -- Lawyer "S" was tried here Monday on charge of insulting President Suharto. [Hong Kong AFP in English at 0629 GMT on 24 August carries a similar report which identifies the lawyer as Sunardi, former secretary of the Indonesian Lawyers Association.]

Prosecutor Kasim Hussein charged the 41-year-old lawyer with distributing letters, insulting the head of state, all chiefs of military commands in the provinces, chiefs of staff of the army, navy and air force, chief of the state police and Parliament leaders as well as to a number of leaders of groups considered opposition to the government and the mass media. The copies of the letters were sent to President Suharto himself, Vice President Adam Malik and Defence Minister/Chief of the Armed Forces General M. Yusuf.

The letter contained statements calling for the holding of an extraordinary general session of the People's Consultative Assembly (MPR) to review the general election law, the law on political parties and the law on the composition of the MPR and Parliament and the regional assemblies (DPRD).

Through those letters the lawyer urged that the laws should be a reflection of the state ideology, Pancasila, and the 1945 Constitution. He also referred to continued split of the two existing political parties, PDR [Indonesian Democratic Party] and PPP [United Development Party] saying the current law on political parties and Golkar, the ruling group, was an illegal law.

The court investigating [as received] will be resumed on August 10.

LEE KUAN YEW RETURNS FROM TALKS IN KUALA LUMPUR

BK231446 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 23 Aug 82

Commenting on his 2-day official vist to the Malaysian capital, Mr Lee said he believes it was of enormous value to both sides to be able to get on the same wavelength. He said we live in an interdependent world, but the relationship between Singapore and Malaysia is so close that we are more interdependent than any other countries. If we understand each other's problems and sensitivities, then we should be able to help each other in achieving more, and in times of difficulties in relieving the threat as that would be the aim of both our governments. Mr Lee said it was in that spirit that he has come to Kuala Lumpur and he was happy that he found the response in kind.

The prime minister and Mrs Lee Kuan Yew have returned home.

Comment on Talks

BK260819 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 25 Aug 82 p 14

[Editorial: "Look Ahead to New Vistas"]

[Text] The second meeting between Mr Lee Kuan Yew and Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed in eight months has yielded positive results. Several areas of cooperation have been agreed upon in what Mr Lee described as another meeting of minds. Last December, the two prime ministers broke new ground in reaching a frank understanding of each country's perceptions and problems. The latest get-together consolidates the bond of mutual respect which had been established. Unlike previous talks where the agendas were stacked with bilateral issues which had to be resolved, this week's meeting focused on forging new areas of cooperation. In moving from a problem-solving approach to one that is more forward-looking, the two leaders have enhanced the relationship between Singapore and Malaysia.

The fact that Dr Mahathir and Mr Lee can "get on the same wavelength" has resulted in lingering suspicions being dissipated. That probably explains why bilateral matters were disposed of so swiftly. The meeting also afforded an opportunity for our younger leaders to get to know their Malaysian counterparts. This is important as they are the ones who in future will represent Singapore in bilateral discussions. If the present cordial dialogue is to be preserved, it would be prudent for them to establish close ties with their Malaysian colleagues.

The several areas of cooperation identified hold much promise. If the joint projects yield results, and there's no reason to believe that they won't given the close relationship between the two countries, it will be a significant development. At a time when the world economy is in recession, Malaysia and Singapore would do well to increase bilateral economic cooperation. The benefits go both ways. The proposed gas pipeline is one example of how Malaysia's excess capacity in natural gas could be turned to the advantage of both countries. In the area of tourism, too, cooperation would result in mutual benefits. Malaysia has the resorts and places of interest which Singapore does not have. On the other hand, Singapore has the attractions of a cosmopolitan city and the advantage of being a major communication centre where air routes converge. Put the two together and you will have a more potent appeal to tourists. A similar argument can be extended to other areas of cooperation.

While it may not be easy at times to submerge national interests, bilateral differences can always be overcome in an atmosphere of trust when there is an appreciation of each other's sensitivites and requirements. However, increased bilateral cooperation is only the first step in which developing countries like Malaysia and Singapore can generate economic activity to offset the debilitating effects of global recession. Greater benefits can be reaped by extending economic cooperation on a regional basis.

DEFENSE MINISTER DENIES LABOR SECTOR 'WITCH HUNT'

According to Enrile, the arrest of labor leaders behind the terror, sabotage and assassination conspiracy insulated the mass of unwitting workers from the web of deception by the underground movement. He also emphasized that the government supports the untramelled exercise of labor rights within the constraints provided by law.

MRS MARCOS DISCUSSES HER ROLE IN POLITICS

HK260118 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 25 Aug 82 p 10

[Text] The first lady, Minister of Human Settlements Imelda R. Marcos, said her diplomatic missions abroad had contributed to the image and the security of the Philippines.

In a TV interview titled "A Conversation With the First Lady" over Channel 4 Monday, Mrs. Marcos turned back criticism from oppositionist ranks that her trips were extravagant.

She declared that her dealings with world leaders had assured the country of the friendship and sympathy of the superpowers, thereby enhancing the security position of the Philippines.

At the same time, she declared that she had no presidential aspirations. "Frankly speaking, I don't want to lose my mystique as a woman," she said. She said that as one who had been intimately involved with the presidency for so many years, she knew that "The president has to be strong, the presidency calls for strength, and I am basically a woman, a dutiful woman." And as a woman, she said: "We make our dreams, our plans from the heart. But when one is president, there are many things that you have to decide with your head." Having been born a woman, with the mystique of a woman, she would like to die with that mystique.

The first lady said that her recent appointment to the Executive Committee was not a promotion. It was an added responsibility.

She defended the long tenure of President Marcos, noting that he was elected in a free election and that his stay in office should be veiwed in the context of the political traditions of Asia.

She cited Asian leaders who have stayed in power with the consent of their constituents -- like Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, who has been in power for 23 years; Thailand's King Phumiphon, a reign of 37 years; and Indonesia's President Suharto.

There has been a one-party rule in Japan since the end of World War II and there is Taiwan, once ruled by President Chiang Kai-shek, and now by his son, she said.

"They pick on President Marcos and his 17 years of tenure because they think of us as a colony of the United States where the people change their leaders every four or eight years," she said.

POLICE CHIEF WARNS ON ABUSE OF CIVILIANS' RIGHTS

HK260046 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] PC [Philippine Constabulary] Chief Lt Gen Fidel Ramos urged men in uniform assigned in Bicol to treat civilians with tact and diplomacy. General Ramos pointed out that abuses committed by soldiers result in the people's loss of confidence in them. At the same time, he said the people's faith in the leadership of President Marcos is also undermined. The general warned that abusive constables and policemen will be dealt with severely.

Even as he made the warning, General Ramos cited the officers and men of the PC-INP [Philippine Constabulatory-Integrated National Police] (Raycom)-5 command for their success in containing the activities of communist terrorists and for maintaining the peace and other situations in their area.

NEW UNDERGROUND MUSLIM GROUP ACTIVE IN MINDANAO

HK230202 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 22 Aug 82 pp 1, 11

[Text] The existence of an underground Muslim organization in Mindanao with an apparent revolutionary orientation has been disclosed by military authorities in the south.

The group, called the "Islamic Revolutionary Movement of Free Enlightened Muslims," was formed some two months ago, Brig Gen Jimmy Bancola, overall supervisor of armed forces being organized for central and western Mindanao, told Brig Gen Jose P. Magno, Jr., Central Mindanao Command (Cemcom) chief, last week. Magno, in turn, bared the existence of the group to Maj. Gen Josephus Q. Ramos, army commanding general, when the latter visited Marawi City last week.

Lanao del Sur Gov. Mohamad Ali Dimaporo, newly appointed member of the Executive Committee, hinted to visiting Manila newsmen about the new Muslim organization but could not give details of its objectives and setup.

Bancola, a retired constabulary colonel who was recalled to service by President Marcos recently with the rank of brigadier general, withheld the identities of the movement's organizers.

Southern Command (Southcom) military authorities reported yesterday that some 600 kilos of explosives were seized from an inter-island vessel docked at the Zamboanga city port. The vessel also yielded 180 boxes of Blue Seal cigarettes.

Maj. Gen. Delfin C. Castro, Southcom chief, told the BULLETIN that the explosives could be part of the reported shipment entering the country to support the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), the New People's Army (NPA), and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) operating in southern Philippines. The explosives are popularly called by terrorist elements in Mindanao as "Colorato." Castro said the explosives came from Pata Island in Basilan, and were mixed with copra inside 42 sacks. The boat was loaded with 400 sacks of copra from Basilan. Castro reported that this is the second time Southcom elements captured almost the same weight and quantity of explosives. The first cache was intercepted shortly before the regional elections last June 17 in Mindanao.

It was learned that the same type of explosives is usually used by the NPA and MNLF terrorists in their bombing activities in selected areas in Mindanano. This was evidenced, Castro said, by the unexploded bombs recovered by the military in Davao, Zamboanga, and Cotabato cities. Some of the explosives are fixed with timing devices by the explosive experts of the MNLF and NPA terrorists BULLETIN sources said. A month ago a cache of explosives, rifle grenades, dynamite coils, and fuses were also captured by the Southcom intelligence unit (U-2) under Col Rolando Q. de Guzman in the house of a suspected MNLF contact in barangay Aplaya in Zamboanga city.

MIYAZAWA ON ROK ACCEPTING TEXTBOOK ACTION

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 27, KYODO -- Japan must realize with sincerity and as soon as possible its promise to "make necessary amendments" in history textbooks, chief government spokesman Kiichi Miyazawa said Friday.

Miyazawa commented on a South Korean statement which indicated that Seoul accepted Japan's reply to its demand to correct what it called distortions of historical facts. Miyazawa, chief Cabinet secretary, told newsmen he knows well that South Korea is not necessarily satisfied with the Japanese action.

On Thursday, Japan announced that it committed itself to make necessary amendments in the textbooks under fire from neighboring nations for distorting historical facts about Japanese conduct during and before World War II. South Korean Culture and Information Minister Yi Chin-hui said in the statement Friday that South Korea would continue diplomatic efforts to see that Japanese history textbooks are corrected soon and that Japan accepted repeated South Korean requests and public opinion.

SAKURAUCHI LEAVES ON ASIA-EUROPE TOUR 27 AUG

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 27, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi left here for New Delhi Friday on the first leg of a 13-day tour of five countries. He is scheduled to return to Tokyo September 8 after also visiting Pakistan, Britain, the Netherlands and Denmark. This is the first time in two years for a Japanese foreign minister to visit India and Pakistan. Former Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito visited the two South Asian countries in August 1980.

During his stay in New Delhi until Monday, Sakurauchi is scheduled to hold consultations with his Indian counterpart P.Y. Narasimha Rao and pay a call on Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. He will visit Pakistan for four days from Monday and hold talks with Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Ali Khan as well as visit an Afghanistani refugee camp.

Sakurauchi will hold consultations with his British counterpart Francis Pym during his visit to London between September 2 and 4. He will also visit the Netherlands September 4 and 5 and Denmark for three days from September 5.

During Sakurauchi's absence, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa will take over his duties as foreign minister.

DIET LEADER TOKUNAGA LEAVES FOR BULGARIA

OW270355 Tokyo KYODO in English 0332 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 27, KYODO -- Masatoshi Tokunaga, president of the House of Councillors, left here for Bulgaria via Frankfurt Friday for a four-day visit to the East European country. He is scheduled to return to Tokyo, September 17 after also visiting the Netherlands, Norway and Canada.

During his stay in Bulgaria, Tokunaga is scheduled to meet with Todor Zhivkov, president of the State Council. He also plans to meet with Jean Marchand, speaker of the Senate, when he visits Ottawa.

STEELMAKERS 'CALM' ON U.S. EXPORTS RULING

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 26, KYODO -- Japanese steelmakers reacted calmly Thursday to the U.S. Commerce Department's ruling that European countries subsidized steel exports to the United States. The ruling has been anticipated, steel company officials said, adding, however, it would have little impact on Japanese steel shipments to the U.S.

Many producers, nonetheless, expressed disappointment at the finding which they said shattered hope the U.S. and the European Common Market would move toward an early solution of the steel trade dispute. The ruling raised the possibility of the U.S. International Trade Commission coming up with a final ruling next October, calling for countervailing duties on European imports, they noted.

OFFICIALS WELCOME U.S. DISCOUNT RATE CUT

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 27, KYODO -- Japanese Government and Bank of Japan officials Friday welcomed the fourth discount rate cut announced by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board in five weeks and expressed hope that the yen would make a substantial rebound against the U.S. dollar soon. They believed U.S. monetary authorities are now adopting an easier monetary policy.

The dollar opened higher at yen 253.50 in Tokyo Friday morning despite the expectations by Japanese officials. However, they remained cautious about the outlook for U.S. interest rates. "It is almost certain the U.S. Government will suffer a huge deficit, and its projected massive financing in the private market will most likely stem lower interest rates," they said.

Bank of Japan officials said they would take a flexible attitude toward any change in Japanese monetary policy, including the official discount rate now pegged at 5.5 percent, "keeping a careful watch on future movements in the yen's value."

WATANABE HINTS AT POSSIBLE FISCAL EMERGENCY

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 27, KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe Friday hinted at possible declaration of a state of fiscal emergency to drive home to the taxpayers the severe condition of state finances.

After the day's Cabinet meeting, the finance minister met with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to discuss various problems relating to the expected revenue shortfall in fiscal 1982 and the compilation of the fiscal 1983 budget. Suzuki instructed Watanabe to take appropriate measures to acquaint people with the hard financial situation and get their understanding.

Later Watanabe told reporters: "The exact amount of revenue shortfalls in fiscal 1982 is not yet known, but it will be necessarty sooner or later to proclaim something like a state of fiscal emergency." Watanabe said he told Suzuki that the fiscal 1982 revenue shortfall will be too big to be covered by an additional issue of national bonds and that a major cutback on expenditures will be inevitable. The finance minister also said that his ministry will explore every possible avenue of increasing non-tax revenues in both fiscal 1982 and 1983.

Watanabe took a cautious view of an additional public works spending, saying that "one must consider the negative effect of increasing the issue of national bonds to finance such spending."

SOUTH KOREAN ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE SUPPORTED

SK270654 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2248 GMT 26 Aug 82

[NODONG SINMUN 27 August special article: "The South Korean People's Anti-U.S. Struggle for Independence Is a Just Struggle for National Independence and Prosperity" -- KCNA press review identifies this as an article]

[Text] The furious anti-U.S. movement for independence is sweeping across South Korea, where the people have been suppressed for so long.

Yesterday the flames of anti-U.S. struggle were raised in Kwangju, Pusan and Chunchon. Today the anti-U.S. flames for national salvation are rising and spreading in Seoul and many other parts of South Korea.

This shows the firm will of the South Korean people struggling to bring the U.S. imperialist aggressors' colonial rule and subjugation to an end and to live an independent life. At the same time, this reflects the trend of the current era in which people are advancing along the road of independence. The South Korean people's anti-U.S. struggle for independence is a patriotic struggle to save the country and the nation and a just struggle for democracy and reunification.

The road of being against the United States and for independence is the only way to bring the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule in South Korea to an end and to achieve independence, democracy and reunification.

Only when they achieve victory in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence can the South Korean people be freed from the fate of colonial slavery and recover and safeguard independence and national sovereignty.

The elimination of the U.S. imperialists colonial rule and the achievement of independence are a first step to secure the human rights and dignity of the South Korean people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: If the country and the nation come under subjugation, the people cannot escape slavery. If the country and the nation have no independence, there is no independence for the people.

The independence of the country and the nation is a prerequisite to the independence of the people. If a nation is deprived of its sovereignty and comes under another's subjugation, it becomes as miserable as a cold, hungry dog.

The situation in South Korea is clear evidence of this. Today in South Korea, as the South Korean people themselves admit, there is land but no sovereignty, and there are citizens but no rights to exist. There are only oppression and extortion, maltreatment and poverty. South Korea is being suffocated.

The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique rave that there is a sovereign government in South Korea. However, this is a brazen lie . The present Chon Tu-hwan regime, as was the case with all former South Korean puppet regimes, is a colonial, submissive reactionary regime established by the guns and swords of the U.S. imperialists against the desire of the people.

The real rulers in South Korea are the U.S. imperialists, who have the real power there. It is the U.S. imperialists who devise and enact all policies. Since the first day of their occupation of South Korea, to maintain their colonial puppet regime, the U.S. imperialists have continued to infringe upon the sovereignty of the nation and suppress the South Korean people's desire for independence, democracy and reunification. Because of the deprivation of the sovereignty of the country and the nation by the U.S. imperialist agressors, the South Korean people have been abandoned socially and politically. Only submission and subjugation have been imposed on them.

Because of the armed occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists and their colonial mule, all national and patriotic things are relentlessly trampled on. Aggression and treachery are rampant.

As long as (?colonial) suppression is imposed on the people and the sovereignty of the country and the nation is relentlessly trampled, the democratization of society cannot be achieved nor can the independence of the people be expected.

The elimination of the U.S. imperialists colonial rule and the achievement of independence through the South Korean people's unyielding anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation are an essential demand for the recovery of the true sovereignty of the nation and democratic freedom and rights.

The South Korean people's anti-U.S. struggle for independence is also for the independent reunification of the fatherland -- the supreme desire of the nation.

The question of the reunification of our country is, in essence, one for recovering the territorial land and the sovereignty of the nation, which have been taken away by foreign aggressors. It is a matter of the self-determination of our nation.

To achieve the reunification of the fatherland in accordance with the desire and demand of our people, the U.S. imperialist colonial rule in South Korea must be eliminated and the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces must be withdrawn.

The U.S. imperialists'occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression are a main stumbling block on the road to the reunification of our country and a basic factor infringing on the independence of the South Korean people.

With the aggressive aim to maintain South Korea as their colony, the U.S. imperialists have, as a basic strategy toward Korea, worked out the policy for two Koreas. They have been instigating the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries, engaging in all kinds of plots and schemes.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique's bestial repression of the South Korean people's desire for reunification in the 2000's in seeking the permanent division of the nation are all in accordance with a scenario written by the U.S. imperialists, seeking to continue their occupation and rule in South Korea.

All the facts show that as long as the U.S. imperialist aggressors remain in South Korea, the cause of the reunification of the fatherland cannot be achieved. To achieve the reunification of the fatherland independently and in accordance with the desire and demand of our nation, freedom of speech in South Korea must be guaranteed and their rights to participate in the settlement of the reunification question must be guaranteed. This, too, is possible only when domination and subjugation have been brough to an end in South Korea and independence has been acheived.

When the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces have been withdrawn and the people's independence has been achieved, the cause of the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland will be achieved.

Indeed, democracy and reunification and the prosperity of the nation depend on the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. The South Korean people, youths and students must fly higher the anti-U.S. banner for independence which they have already raised and wage a persistent struggle to make the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces withdraw from South Korea and eliminate their colonial rule.

It is an important requirement for the democratization of South Korean society and the reunification of the country to eliminate the fascist dictators, depending on foreign forces for their lives.

Obedient to the brigandish demand of the U.S. imperialists, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique is continuing its bestial suppression of the South Korean youths, students and people who have risen in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. This is a fascist rampage of the traitors seeking to continue the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists in South Korea and, with their protection, maintain their dirty lives.

The South Korean people must continue to fan the furious flames of the struggle to overthrow the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique, desperately seeking to remain in power and accrue personal gains by continuing the division of the nation and selling it to foreign aggressors.

When the people of all strata of South Korea unite as one under the anti-U.S. banner for independence and wage a pannational struggle, they can make the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces withdraw from South Korea and bury the fascist colonial rule. On its grave, they can establish an independent democratic government to defend the sovereignty of the nation and pave the way to independent reunification.

South Korea cannot indefinitely continue as the colony and military base of the U.S. imperialists. The South Korean people will not indefinitely tolerate the colonial slavery and the ruthless violation and defamation of the national sovereignty and dignity.

The U.S. imperialists must clearly realize the unyielding will of our people, who value human dignity and national sovereignty more than their lives. They must act with discretion and withdraw from South Korea at once, along with all their aggressive forces. The South Korean people's just cause for the elimination of the domination and subjugation of the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the achievement of independence will certainly be victorious.

NODONG SINMUN HAILS NONALIGNED MOVEMENT

[NODONG SINMUN 25 August article: "The Nonaligned Movement Is Advancing"]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: "The Nonaligned Movement -- a great anti-imperialist revolutionary force in our era -- has daily expanded and strengthened. It is advancing victoriously. The banner of nonalignment -- our banner of independence -- is vigorously fluttering on all continents and in all regions of the world. Thanks to the magnificent advance of the Nonaligned Movement, the imperialist reactionary forces have declined with each passing day, and the cause of the world's people for independence and against imperialism has been vigorously expanded.

Under an antiimperialist banner for independence, the Nonaligned Movement was initiated and developed through the joint struggle of newly emerging countries against the imperialists' policy for aggression and blocs.

After World War II, the imperialists led by the U.S. imperialists, while pursuing a policy of strength and the cold war, fabricated aggressive military and political blocs all over the world and wickedly maneuvered to place new independent countries under their control. This being the case, it was very important for new independent countries to defend national independence and achieve their independent development. Many newly emerging countries jointly struggled against the imperialists' domination, interference, plunder and marauding. This struggle gradually developed into a systematic form. Finally, in September 1961, the first summit conference of nonaligned countries was held. This marked the first historic advance of the Nonaligned Movement. Developing in the struggle for independence, the Nonaligned Movement has grown and been strengthened as a unique political force outside the bloc and a powerful anti-imperialist revolutionary force in our era.

Since its inauguration with 25 countries, the Nonaligned Movement has rallied nearly 100 countries to its ranks, encompassing about 1.5 billion people and a vast area.

In terms of the number of countries population and territories, the Nonaligned Movement has become the largest movement in the international community. Many countries and peoples, small and large, on all continents and regions, including Asia, Africa, Latin America, Oceania and Europe, have participated in the Nonaligned Movement. This shows the great vitality of this movement.

The Nonaligned Movement -- a progressive movement which opposes all forms of domination and subjugation and which seeks sovereignty -- abides by the principle for independence and against imperialism. It is a publicly-recognized principle of the Nonaligned Movement that it refuses to join any bloc and that it strives to achieve the development of individual member nations based on the principle of independence, territorial security, noninterference in others' internal affairs and mutual inviolability.

The noble principle of the Nonaligned Movement reflects the common desire of the people of our era for building an independent and propserous new world free from domination, subjugation, exploitation and plunder and the requirements of our era for helping all countries achieve sovereignty and traverse the road of self-reliance and independence. Because of this, despite the imperialist reactionary forces' subversive maneuvers for division and alienation, the Nonaligned Movement, while continuously expanding its ranks, has advanced victoriously.

Through its practical activities and struggle, the Nonaligned Movement has greatly influenced political life in the world and the development of history. With a united effort, nonaligned countries have positively struggled to demand the dismantling of all military blocs and the withdrawal of foreign military bases and the establishment of nonnuclear peace zones. This struggle has greatly contributed to thwarting the imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and war and to preserving world peace. The steady struggle of nonaligned countries to demand the dismantling of military blocs has greatly contributed to accelerating the dismantling of SEATO and CENTO. After withdrawing from CENTO in 1979, Iran and Pakistan joined the Nonaligned Movement. This is an indication the nonaligned policy has been victorious and that the imperialists' policy for blocs has become bankrupt.

The Nonaligned Movement has played an important role in the struggle to eliminate the old international economic order for exploitation and plunder and to establish a fair international economic order based on the principle of sovereignty. At various meetings held to discuss the world economy, including the recent sixth and seventh special UN sessions, the fourth UN trade promotion conference and the UN Law of the Sea meeting, nonaligned and developing countries, through a joint struggle, have dealt severe blows at the imperialists who have been tyrannical in the international economic sector and have taken rational measures in establishing a new international economic order. This is an example of the role of the Nonaligned Movement.

While eliminating the foundation of the imperialists for exploitation and strengthening the self-reliant nature of the national economy based on the principle of individual and collective self-reliance, nonaligned and developing countries have strangled the lifeline of the imperialists by expanding and developing economic and technical exchanges with one another.

While obstinately clinging to their maneuvers for division and alienation by driving a wedge among nonaligned countries and by creating a dispute among them, the imperialists, including the U.S. imperialists, who regard the Nonaligned Movement as a thorn in their side, are running amok to thwart this movement. However, no maneuvers of the imperialists have blocked the victorious advance of the Nonaligned Movement.

Holding aloft the banner of unity, the Nonaligned Movement -- a powerful anti-imperialist force in our era of independence -- has strengthened the unity of its ranks through struggle. The seminar of nonaligned and developing countries held in Pyongyang in August 1981 to discuss the matter of increasing agricultural and food production and the seventh conference of the Press Agencies Pool of the Coordinating Committee of Nonaligned Countries greatly contributed to strengthening the unity of the Nonaligned Movement.

The Nonaligned Movement is now playing a more important role in the struggle of the people to eliminate all forms of domination and subjugation and achieve independence all over the world. Since emerging, the Nonaligned Movement has victoriously advanced with great vitality. This is because it has abided by and materialized its principle.

Our party and the government of the republic has made it their consistent stand to become faithful to the principle of the Nonaligned Movement and to expand and develop this movement. Since joining the ranks of the Nonaligned Movement on 25 August 1975, the DPRK has made every effort to strengthen and development this movement.

Just as it did in the past, our country, as a dignified member nation of the Nonaligned Movement, will make a positive effort to firmly abide by the principle of this movement and to strengthen and develop it. No force in the world can block the victorious advance of the Nonaligned Movement.

SIXTH CHONDOIST CHONGU PARTY CONGRESS HELD

Yim Chun-chu Speech

SK240425 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0337 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Pyongyang, August 24 (KCNA) -- The Sixth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party opened in Pyongyang on August 23. A portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was placed on the platform of the congress. The congress was attended by delegates and observers selected at the regional party organisations of the Chondoist Chongu Party.

An opening address was made by Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu Party.

Elected to the presidium of the congress were Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu Party; Choe Hui-chun and Yi Tuk-yop, vice-chairmen of the C.C. of the party; and Kim Chong-ho, Chong Kum-sok and Yim Son-il, department directors, and Chang Hyo-sop, Mun Ung-ki and Paek Yon-uk, deputy department director of the C.C. of the party.

Comrade Yim Chun-chu, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea; Yo Yon-ku, director of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland; Hong Ki-mun, vice-chairman of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland; Yom Tae-chun and Chong Tu-hwan, Presidium members of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland; Yom Kuk-rol, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Social Democratic Party; and Kim Song-yol, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Christians Federation were invited to the platform.

The congress adopted the following agenda:

1. On the review of the work of the Central Committee of t[illegible]doist Chongu Party.

2. On the revision of the programme and rules of the Chondoist Chongu Party.

3. On the election of the central leading bodies of the Chondoist Chongu Party.

The congress entered into the discussion of the first item on the agenda.

Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu Party, made a report on the work of the Central Committee of the party.

Comrade Yim Chun-chu, delegate of the Workers Party of Korea, made a congratulatory speech.

He said that the Chondoist Chongu Party has since its founding performed great feats in the struggle for the complete independence and sovereignty of the country and the prosperity and development of the country by fully displaying the patriotic idea of defence of the country and peace of the people and the independent spirit of "repulsing Western and Japanese aggression."

The past history of the alliance and collaboration between the Workers Party of Korea and the Chondoist Chongu Party based on the idea of united front of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been a history of the creation of a good example of collaboration and unity between political parties with differing political views and "isms," he said.

The Workers Party of Korea, he declared, will as ever strengthen the unity and cooperation with the Chondoist Chongu Party and pool strength with all patriotic forces to carry to accomplishment the sacred revolutionary cause of our people at its head.

Choe Hui-chun, delegate of the Nampo regional party; Pak Sang-cho, delegate of the Hamju regional party; Chong Kum-so, delegate of the Chongju regional party; Kim Yong-ho, delegate of the Hwangju regional party; Mun Ung-ki, delegate of the Haeju regional party; Kang Yong-mu, delegate of the Pyongyang regional party; and Yi Chang-to, delegate of the Songchon regional party; spoke on the first agenda item.

They said that the new tasks advanced by the congress are a just fighting programme fully reflecting the objective demand of the development of the society of the northern half of the republic which has reached a higher stage and the will of the party members and Chondoists and stressed that they must uphold the wise guidance of the great leader President Kim Il-song to successfully fulfil them.

Noting that the members of the Chondoist Chongu Party and the Chondoists in the northern half of the republic are confronted with the sacred task to accelerate the building of a complete socialist society where all the working people can enjoy the highest value of man, they said they would thoroughly arm themselves with the great chuche idea, the invincible guiding idea of our people, further enhance their political and working level and thus powerfully organize and mobilize the party members and believers in struggle to consolidate and develop the socialist system.

They said that the members of the Chondoist Chongu Party will more actively struggle to force the U.S. imperialist aggression troops to withdraw from South Korea, terminate the U.S. imperialists' colonial enslavement policy toward South Korea and reunify the country with the internal force of the nation.

All the people who love the country must courageously turn out to determinedly smash the anti-communist policy of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique and accomplish the cause of national reunification through alliance and collaboration with communism, closely rallied under the banner of reunification and national salvation, transcending the difference in ideology, idea, system and religious belief, they stressed.

They proposed the congress to send in its name an appeal to the Chondoists in South Korea and overseas powerfully encouraging them to advance more stoutly along the road of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and independent reunification.

Lastly they stressed that they would make all efforts to reunify the country by founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, regarding this as their supreme task.

Congratulatory speeches were made by Yom Kuk-yol, vice-chairman of the C.C., the Korean Social Democratic Party, who was the representative of the party, and Yo Yon-ku, director of the Secretariat of the C.C., the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland, who was the representative of the front.

The congress elected the drafting committee of the decision on the review of the work of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu Party, the drafting committee of the revised party programme and rules and the drafting committee of the appeal to the Chondoists in South Korea and overseas.

The congress continues.

Chong Sin-hyok Report

SK240918 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0811 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Pyongyang, August 24 (KCNA) -- The Sixth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party opened in Pyongyang on August 23. Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the Central Committee of the party, made a report on the work of the Central Committee of the party.

Noting that nearly ten years have passed since the Fifth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party (August, 1973) Chairman Chong Sin-hyok said in his report: During the period under review the Chondoist Chongu Party put it up as its most important task to achieve, above all, a harmony and unity of people in the building of a welfare society for the people and directed the primary efforts to the spiritual transformation of people.

He went on: Our party regarded the immortal chuche idea founded by the respected leader President Kim Il-song as the only guiding idea giving fullest play to chajusong (independence) of the nation and the value of man and the ideological and spiritual foundation for a harmony and unity of the whole members of society and, on this basis, has waged an active struggle for achieving harmony and unity.

Respected President Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation, is the center of a harmony and unity uniting the whole members of the society in a big family and the great leader of our people bringing the will and interests of our nation into one and wisely leading the entire people to their realization.

This honor and pride of our people have become firmer and brighter as we hold dear Mr. Kim Chong-il, another outstanding leader, in high esteem as the great successor to the cause of chajusong.

Recognizing the decisive role played by an outstanding leader of the nation in shaping the destiny of the country and the nation, the Chondoist Chongu Party has regarded it as a consistent principle to hold and attend in high esteem the respected leader President Kim Il-song as the supreme leader of the nation and the centre of harmony and unity of the people.

The reporter said that during the period under review the Chondoist Chongu Party had taken an active part in the endeavours for building socialist economy and chuche-based socialist national culture to build a welfare society of the people.

Today the Chondoist Chongu Party faces the heavy task to build a complete socialist society by energetically accelerating the socialist construction in the northern half of the republic, the reporter said, and noted: We, first of all, must further strengthen the people's government and enhance its function and role in every way, holding high the historic policy speech of the great leader President Kim Il-song.

The deputies to power organs at different levels including the Supreme People's Assembly from the Chondoist Chongu Party, office workers at power organs at all levels and members of the Chondoist Chongu Party and believers must take an active part in shaping the state policies by their creative suggestion of policies and make best efforts to unconditionally and thoroughly implement the state policies.

Referring to the question of national reunification, the reporter said that the Chondoist Chongu Party, at its fifth congress, warmly hailed and supported the July 4 North-South joint statement, the keynote of which is the three principles of independence, great national unity and peaceful reunification advanced by the respected leader President Kim Il-song and North-South dialogue and declared the three principles of national reunification confirmed by the North and the South as common principles of reunification the solid foundation of the party's policy of national reunification and bent positive efforts to observe and carry into practice these three principles.

The Chondoist Chongu Party, he stressed, has made every possible effort for the realization of the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the respected leader President Kim Il-song, regarding it as the most fair and aboveboard proposal for reunification and national salvation.

National reunification must be achieved under all circumstances in accordance with the three principles of independence, great national unity and peaceful reunification laid down in the July 4 North-South joint statement and the most reasonable way for this today it is to realize the proposal for founding the DCRK advanced by the great leader President Kim Il-song, he emphasized.

If the country is to be reunified through the founding the DCRK, he noted, it is necessary to force the U.S. imperialist aggression troops to withdraw from South Korea, put an end to the U.S. imperialists policies of aggression and interference, decisively frustrate the South Korean rulers policy of reliance on outside forces and fascist suppression of the people, overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist dictatorial "regime" and establish a patriotic regime calling for reunification.

To thwart the U.S. imperialists' policies of aggression and the South Korean puppets policy of reliance on outside forces and relize the proposal for founding the DCRK, all the Koreans in the North and South and overseas who desire reunification must achieve great unity on the basis of common national idea, irrespective of the difference in ideology and religious belief and party affiliation and class, he noted.

The Chondoist Chongu Party will closely cooperate with the Workers Party of Korea and other friendly parties and public organisations, unite with anyone in South Korea who want reunification, irrespective of difference in ideology and idea, religious belief and political view and make active efforts to form a great national united front embracing patriotic political parties, groupings and people of all walks of life in the North and South and abroad, he declared.

The Chondoist Chongu Party will incessantly strengthen and develop solidarity with all the progressive peoples of the world who support the cause of peace in our country and its peaceful reunification and thus actively contribute to expanding the ranks of supporters and sympathizers for our nation's cause of reunification, he stressed.

Appeal to South, Overseas Koreans

[Text] Pyongyang, August 25 (KCNA) -- An appeal to the Chondoists in South Korea and overseas was adopted at the Sixth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party which was held in Pyongyang.

The appeal says that the biggest matter of concern for the fellow Chondoists at the congress hall overflowing all along with patriotic spirit was to accomplish the cause of national reunification at an early date and realise the age-old aspiration of "defence of the country and peace to people" on a nation-wide scale.

Noting that the U.S. imperialists who crawled into South Korea under the mask of "liberator" to lord it over as the new colonial ruler, have reduced South Korea to their complete colony with a tight hold on all the political and military, economic and cultural arteries, viciously trampling upon the ardent desire of the compatriots of the South for sovereignty and independence, the appeal says: The U.S. imperialist aggressors must be expelled from the sacred soil of our fatherland and only this promises a new era of independence and democratisation aspired after so ardently by the compatriots in the South and guarantees the day of national reunification, the earnest desire of the whole nation.

The fellow Chondoists who truly value the destiny of the country and the nation, whether they reside in South Korea or overseas, propertied or unpropertied, must all turn out on to the road of anti-U.S., national salvation and fight daringly to make the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from the southern land.

The struggle for overthrowing the military fascist clique of traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a part of the struggle for ending the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a truculent human-butcher who, serving the U.S. imperialists as a despicable lackey, acts the executor of the colonial rule and suppresses in cold blood the just patriotic struggle of the compatriots of the South, and a despicable traitor who has committed unpardonable, most grave crimes ever known against the nation.

The fellow Chondoists in the South who ardently love the country should wage an undaunted struggle to remove traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the rare traitor and fascist-maniac, and do away with all the fascist laws and suppressive machines.

You should fight resolutely for the freedom of speech, the press, assembly, association, demonstration and religion and for the freedom of political activities of all the political parties and organisations, and for an unconditional and immediate release of all the illegally arrested political prisoners including Kim Tae-chung.

The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the great leader President Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation and the lodestar of reunification, fully conforms to the three principles of national reunification and correctly reflects the objective realities of our country and the will and interests of the people of all strata; it is a most fair and reasonable great program of reunification which is acceptable to anyone who desires reunification.

For the establishment of the DCRK, an independent, neutral, democratic and peaceloving reunified fatherland, a great unity of all the political parties, groupings and people of all strata must be achieved, irrespective of difference in ideology and idea, political view and religious belief, under the banner of national reunification and, to this end, you must unite and cooperate with the communists, first of all.

The Chondoists in the northern half have been able to make a worthy contribution to the building of a new fatherland and realise their old aspirations for an earthly paradise by collaborating with the communists, declares the appeal, and stresses: We earnestly appeal to all the fellow Chondoists in South Korea and overseas to take the road of alliance and collaboration with the communists without hesitation and turn out as one man for the formation of a great national united front in close unity with all political parties, groupings and compatriots of all walks of life.

When all the fellow Chondoists and compatriots, brothers and sisters, at home and abroad unite in one body and staunchly wage the anti-U.S., national salvation struggle with united strength, the U.S. imperialists will surely be expelled from South Korea and the glorious day will certainly come when our 50 million fellow countrymen will hug each other in the Plaza of Reunification.

Congress Closes

[Text] Pyongyang, August 25 (KCNA) -- The Sixth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party which opened here on August 23 closed next day, successfully concluding its work.

Chang Ho-sop, Hyesan regional party delegate, Yi Yong-ho, Kaesong regional party delegate, and Kim Chong-ho, Munchon regional party delegate, spoke on the first agenda item yesterday.

They said that, holding aloft the national reunification policy of the great leader President Kim Il-song, they would actively support the just patriotic struggle of the Chondoists and people of all walks of life in South Korea and overseas for independence, democracy and reunification, conduct energetic external activities of the Chondoist Chongu Party to strengthen and develop the bonds of friendship with the political parties and religious organisations of all countries of the world and turn the party into a more powerful organisation and enhance its function and role in every way.

The congress adopted a decision on the review of the work of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu party, the first agenda item.

It discussed the revision of the party programme and rules, the second agenda item, and adopted a decision.

It adopted an appeal to the Chondoists in South Korea and overseas.

It elected the central leading bodies of the party, the third agenda item.

Chong Sin-hyok was elected chairman of the Central Committee of the party, Choe Hui-chun and Yi Sok-yo chairmen, and Chong Sin-hyok, Choe Hui-chun, Yi Tok-yop, Kim Chong-ho and Chong Kum-sok members of the Presidium of the Central Committee of the party.

The result of the election of chairman of the Central Auditing Commission of the party held at a meeting of the commission was made public at the congress.

Chairman Chong Sin-hyok made a closing address.

He said that the Chondoist Chongu Party would as ever closely cooperate with the Workers Party of Korea and other friendly parties, upholding the correct national united front line of the great leader President Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation and lodestar of national reunification, and make every possible efforts to promote the unity of people pursuing the same purpose, strengthen the internal forces of the nation in every way and accomplish the historic cause of national reunification at an early date.

He declared the Sixth Congress of the Chondoist Chongu Party closed, expressing the belief that all the delegates and the entire party members would implement with credit the line and policies advanced by the party congress, holding in high esteem the great leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr Kim Chong-il.

ARTICLES MARK RPR FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

NODONG SINMUN Special Article

SK250228 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2240 GMT 24 Aug 82

[NODONG SINMUN 25 August special article: "The Anti-U.S. Cause for Independence of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification Is Victorious and Invincible"]

[Text] Today we mark the 13th anniversary of the founding of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification -- a genuine vanguard organization of the South Korean working class and working people.

The South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic people are waging the arduous struggle against the colonial terrorist rule of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to restore the nation's sovereignty and to achieve freedom and liberation. Under these circumstances, they are greeting the anniversary of the founding of the RPR, the genuine protector of their class and national interests.

On this occasion, the working class and all the people in the northern half of the republic extend militant greetings and firm solidarity to the South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic people.

The RPR was founded in the midst of the struggle for independence, democracy and reunification. From the first day of the national division, caused by outside forces, the South Korean people waged a ceaseless struggle against the colonial fascist rule of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to restore the nation's independence and freedom and to reunify the fatherland. They were not able, however, to win a decisive victory in their struggle because of the lack of the leadership of a revolutionary party armed with scientific programs of struggle and scientific strategy and tactics. Thus, the South Korean revolutionaries and people sought a key solution for leading the just cause of independence, democracy and reunification to victory by founding a party of the working class guided by the chuche idea.

The South Korean people learned this serious lesson from repeated arduous struggles and painful trials. The South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic people, proceeding from the lesson of history, finally organized the RPR Central Committee through a bloody struggle. They adopted the declaration of its founding and its programs, taking the immortal chuche idea created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as their guide. Thus, they declared the founding of the RPR to the entire world.

The RPR is a vanguard unit struggle in the interest of the people in South Korea including the suppressed and exploited workers and peasants and is a weapon of struggle. The RPR assumes the achievement of the people's freedom, liberation and independence as its lofty target of struggle. The founding of the RPR, which assumes the chuche idea -- the unique and correct guiding idea in revolution and construction -- as its guiding idea, was an epochal event in the development of the South Korean revolution and was of great historical significance.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The RPR -- a unified Marxist-Leninist party and a party of the working class -- was founded amid the arduous revolutionary struggle of the South Korean revolutionaries and people against the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. With the emergence of a Marxist-Leninst party of the working class, the broad oppressed and exploited masses in South Korea had a genuine protector of their class and national interests. The revolutionary struggle of the South Korean people for freedom and liberation had its reliable political staff office.

With the founding of the RPR, the broad South Korean masses could have a genuine protector of their class and national interests and their spokesman. Their struggle for national sovereignty, democracy and national reunification had its reliable political staff office. Thus, the South Korean people's struggle for independence, democracy and reunification could assuredly advance to victory along the scientific course of chuche.

The founding of the RPR was of historic significance to the development of the South Korean revolutionary movement. The RPR firmly traversed the road of revolution for reunification and patriotism, upholding the banner of chuche and overcoming repeated trials and difficulties.

With the conviction of sure victory and indomitable spirit, the RPR actively explained and propagandized the chuche idea among the party members and the people from all strata by adopting various measures and methods. It persistently waged the struggle to expand and strengthen the ranks of the party. Thus, the chuche-orientation of the party and revolutionary ranks has been more vigorously carried out, many chuche-type revolutionaries have been brought up and the ranks of the party have been expanded and strengthened.

The South Korean people endlessly admire and revere the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. They are loyal to the respected leader, holding him in high esteem as the sun of the nation. This is the greatest achievement and success attained by the RPR in the course of the arduous yet glorious struggle for the chuche-orientation of the party and the revolutionary ranks.

The party is consolidating the mass foundation by indoctrinating the people from all walks of life and making them unite around the party. Thus, the RPR has been strengthened, has developed in to a revolutionary vanguard organization consisting of cadre members and party members with firm chuche outlooks and has planted its root deep in the broad masses. It has consolidated the organizational and ideological foundation for fulfilling the sacred revolutionary cause that it assigned to the working masses including workers and peasants. This shows that the basic question to assuredly advance the revolutionary movement in South Korea along the road indicated by the chuche idea has been brilliantly resolved.

The RPR effected a noteworthy advance in inspiring the people to struggle to eradicate the colonial terrorist rule by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges and to achieve democracy and the nation's total independence. Putting forward the strategy and policies of struggle that correspond to the requirement of each step of the situation, the party has vigorously waged organizational and political activities through various propaganda and agitation measures. It has actively organized and mobilized the South Korean people to struggle against outside forces, fascism and nation-selling, to arm themselves with the idea of national independence and to achieve freedom and liberation.

The people's struggle for democratization of society and national reunification brought about the disgraceful collapse of the former dictator. This struggle developed into the Kwangju popular uprising against the Chon Tu-hwan clique's military fascist dictatorship. The Kwangju popular uprising was a prominent event that decorated the history of the South Korean people's antifascist struggle for democracy with brilliant exploits. Today, the South Korean people's struggle against outside forces and fascism and for national reunification has deepened and developed into a new higher stage.

The RPR is vigorously inspiring and encouraging the broad masses to fulfill the anti-U.S. cause for independence by firmly uniting them around the party, while accelerating the chuche-orientation of the revolutionary ranks.

The U.S. imperialists, having occupied South Korea for 37 years, are continuing to implement their barbarous colonial rule. They are increasing their armed forces to continuously seize South Korea as their colony and military base; they are attempting to turn South Korea into a nuclear base and a dangerous hotbed of weapons; they are implementing the vicious military terrorist dictatorship to perpetuate the division of Korea, bringing the Chon Tu-hwan clique to the front. The South Korean people are indomitably waging the struggle against the oppressors for freedom and liberation, even under the circumstances in which terrorism is rampant.

With the arson at the U.S. cultural center, the anti-U.S. struggle for independence has been strengthened. It has greatly shaken the colonial terrorist rule by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. Upholding the slogans of "Yankee go home," "We denounce the neocolonialism of the United States," and "Down with Chon Tu-hwan," the people are waging a courageous struggle against the treacherous nation-selling military fascist dictatorship, burning the aggressive U.S. organizations and the Stars and Stripes. This shows that the South Korean people, with correct awareness of the object and target of their struggle, have closely linked the anti-U.S. struggle for independence with the antifascist struggle for democratization and that their struggle for national sovereignty and democracy has deepened and developed to a new, higher stage.

The U.S. imperialists and their stooges, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, frightened by the spirit for fighting against outside forces, fascism and for national reunification that is increasing every day among the South Korean people, are fanatically running amok to eradicate the RPR's activities and the people's patriotic struggle. Implementing an unprecentedly barbarous rule, they have mercilessly trampled underfoot the people's freedom and rights and have reduced South Korea to a medieval land of the dark ages. They have arrested and imprisoned and are wickedly punishing the patriotic masses and democratic figures who demanded democratic rights, freedom and national reunification.

The spear of oppression is particularly being aimed at the patriots and revolutionaries. However, the U.S. imperialists and their stooges can never block the advance of the South Korean people. The South Korean people will surely achieve freedom and liberation through their indomitable struggle by frustrating the obstruction maneuvers by enemies at home and abroad.

The U.S. imperialists should immediately withdraw from South Korea in accord with the demand of the South Korean people and the UN resolution, abandoning their foolish fantasy of permanently remaining the colonial ruler. They should take their hands of interference off Korea. The fascist evil laws and oppressive organizations, which tie down the hands of the South Korean people, should be abolished. The RPR should be legalized and its activities should be guaranteed.

The just struggle of the RPR for anti-U.S. independence and antifascist democracy enjoys the support and encouragement of the people of the northern half of the republic and the world's progressive people advancing to independence.

The cause of the RPR advancing under the banner of chuche is invincible. The South Korean people's desire to raise a unified and prosperous Korea on the land of the fatherland by eliminating the colonial terrorist rule will be achieved without fail.

Propaganda Activity Report

[Talk on propaganda activities by members of local chapters of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification on the 13th anniversary of the party's founding from the "Underground Newsletter" program]

[Text] This is a report from the Seoul city committee of our party. On the 13th anniversary of the founding of the RPR, the Seoul city committee of the party has recently prepared a guideline for party activities and sent it to the party organizations under the city committee. This guideline for the party activities is to thoroughly educate all party members on the basic party struggle line and to arm them with the revolutionary ideology of chuche so they can successfully accomplish the heavy but honorable revolutionary duties of our party.

According to this guideline, the propaganda department of the Seoul city party committee has published materials for the party members entitled "The Founding of the RPR and the Task of Party Members" and distributed them to the party organizations under the city committee for use in individual or group lectures for the party members in accord with their own situation. This guideline also instructs the party organizations and members to go down to the masses of working people and vigorously conduct propaganda activities.

According to a report, a cell party member who is conducting propaganda activities among workers of the Kuro industrial complex in Seoul is conducting lectures by distributing indoctrination materials sent from the party Central Committee among party members. The lecture includes discussions among party members to link the lecture to the practice of revolution.

It has been reported that the Seoul city party committee is conducting lectures for party members to thoroughly prepare them as core elements of the great Kimilsongism by using lectures [word indistinct] among the party organizations.

This is a report from the South Kyongsang provincial party committee. According to this report, on the occasion of the 13th anniversary of the founding of the party, the provincial party committee is vigorously conducting propaganda activities among the people in addition to lecture activities among party members.

Using materials entitled "The RPR Is the Genuine Vanguard Party Protecting the Interests of the Masses of Working People," the subordinate party organizations and party members of the provincial party committee are conducting activities among the masses of working people by explaining to them the materials in detail in an effort to more firmly rally them around our party and to encourage them to join the sacred anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the struggle against dictatorship and for democracy.

The contents of the materials of the party propaganda among the masses say that our party takes the immortal chuche idea -- which is a humanistic philosophy and outlook -- as its guiding principle. They say it is a party of the working masses organized with the oppressed and contemptuously treated workers, peasants, fishermen and working intellectuals as well as sons and daughters of the patriotic masses. They note that our party is the genuine vanguard of the working masses struggling for the independence and sovereignty of the country, national liberation and reunification -- the unanimous desire of the nation -- while always sharing its destiny with the working masses. With these materials, our party teaches the working masses in conformity with the degree and level of their knowledge.

Thus, our party members are actively conducting propaganda activities among the broad working masses. They can recognize that our party is a party genuinely struggling for their interests and voluntarily join the struggle for the implementation of our party's cause.

In addition to these propaganda activities, on the 13th anniversary of the founding of the party, party organizations throughout the country, including Kyonggi, Kangwon and South Cholla Provinces, are also conducting indoctrination activities for party members and party propaganda activities among the working masses in accord with the demands of the time by using various methods.

RPR Struggle History

[The 32d and last installment of serial program "Following the Glorious Footsteps Embroidered With Patriotism"]

[Text] The wholesale suppression in July 1968, which was known as the incident of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification was a trial for our party, which was just growing up. Exposing their vampire-like nature, the fascist hangmen brutally massacred our revolutionary comrades, including Comrades Kim Chong-tae and (Choe Hong-chu), triggering a frantic racket to obliterate the RPR in its inchoate state.

However, our RPR was not obliterated or weakened. Rather, even under untold difficult circumstances, the basic organizations of the party were further expanded, leading core elements of the party were more firmly organized and the party foundation among masses was further deepened.

Despite such countless, arduous trials, the RPR finally held its founding convention in Seoul secretly on 25 August 1969, after having traversed a ceaseless, indomitable road of struggle. Thus, the party declared its founding to the world and adopted its party program.

As a result, the underground party organizations which were conducting party activities throughout the country were rallied into a unified underground party under the guidance of the party central guidance department, the local leading branches of the RPR were organized throughout the country and the basic cell organizations of the party were organized everywhere in the country.

Indeed, the founding of the RPR was a brilliant fruition of the great chuche idea of Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of the resolution, and was a significant event in the development of our revolution.

With the founding of the RPR, which was composed of the leading fighters of the working masses of South Korea, including workers and peasants, and which adopted the great kimilsongism as its guiding ideal, our masses were, for the first time, able to have a true protector of national and class interests in this land. At the same time, the South Korean revolution struggling to drive out foreign forces, to overthrow the flunkeyist and treacherous group, to achieve national liberation and democratization of the society and to establish a true democratic regime in this land was able to vigorously advance toward the heights of firm victory under the guidance of a reliable militant general staff.

In its declaration and program, the RPR solemnly declared that it takes the immortal chuche idea created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as its guiding principle and that it is the vanguard of the South Korean revolution struggling to embody this idea.

The great chuche idea was precisely a ray for our South Korean revolutionaries and oppressed and exploited masses, the only compass illuminating the future of the South Korean revolution and the guiding principle of the revolution bringing infinite vigor to not only the present but also the future, let alone the past.

The declaration and program of our party embodying the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great chuche idea -- the torch of the revolution and the truth of history in our times -- clarified that the present goal of the party is to establish a democratic system on this land through national liberation and the revolution for people's democracy and to achieve national reunification, which is the long-cherished desire of our nation.

This has become not only a common political program of all patriotic democratic forces struggling against the colonial and fascist rule in this land, for the democratic development of the society and for the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, but also the unanimous struggle goal of all masses.

The announcement of the organization, declaration and program of the RPR central guidance department aroused great repercussions externally. The revolutionary parties and peoples of the world, let alone our brothers in the north, expressed warm solidarity with us and supported and encouraged our revolutionary cause, rejoicing over our advance and success in struggle.

Indeed, the formation of the Central Committee of our party and the announcement of its declaration and program were another great turning point promising rapid progress of the South Korean revolution.

Thirteen years have passed since then. The course traversed by our party since then has been more arduous than ever before. Following the fascist repression of the Pak Chong-hui Yusin group, the fascist repression of the murderous Chon Tu-hwan military clique has reached an extreme point. As a result, the vestiges of democracy have vanished, without a trace.

Furthermore, the frenzied schemes of the enemies to obliterate our RPR and to ferret out revolutionaries and patriotic people have become more unscrupulous.

However, our party has never yielded to any frantic offensive of the enemies. It has been faithful to the mission as the vanguard of the South Korean revolution and has repeatedly victoriously advanced.

Despite the suppression of the fascist clique, the party organizations have been incomparably expanded and strengthened as compared with those in the early period after the founding of the party. The political, ideological and organizational cohesion of the entire party has been further deepened and the guiding and combat capabilities of the party organizations have been enhanced by far.

Thanks to various mighty means for mass enlightenment, including the party newspaper HONGMYONG CHONSON and the voice of the RPR, and the energetic activities of party members, the party's foundation among all masses, including the masses of workers and peasants, has been reliably deepened and the party's guiding ability in the mass movement has been also enhanced.

Today our RPR has appeared as a dignified party before the revolutionary parties of the world and is vigorously advancing amid the invincible ties with all the people at home and abroad.

The situation of the revolution over the past 13 years has shown that the revolutionary forces in this land have been rapidly united and strengthened under the guidance of our party, that the fascist ruling system of the U.S. imperialists and the fascist clique has been sharply weakened and that the enemies of the revolution have been further isolated.

The South Korean revolution is now firmly entering a new stage of development. The Chon Tu-hwan fascist ring is desperately trying to realize its wild ambition for long-term power. However, this wild ambition will be frustrated before the raging torrent of the revolution advancing like angry waves.

The RPR will more resolutely strengthen the revolutionary fordes in the future, too, and will wage a decisive struggle to overthrow the fascist dictatorship of Chon Tu-hwan and to achieve the democratization of society.

Thus, our party will see to it that the stormy wind of the revolution sweeps the whole area of South Korea before long [pulwonkan], will finally smash the cursed subjugation, fascism, exploitation and the blood stained iron chains of repression in this land and will surely declare to the world the victory of the revolution for reunification.

VRPR EXTOLS LEADERSHIP QUALITIES OF KIM CHONG-IL

On Leadership Ability

SK270010 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Article from feature program "Today's Feature" by Robin Ravales, chairman of the Suriname National Republican Party, entitled, "The Dear Comrade Kim Chong-il Is a Brilliant Successor to the Chuche Cause"]

[Text] The dear Comrade Kim Chong-il is a great leader who is perfectly and flawlessly endowed with personality and gifts such as profound wisdom, outstanding leadership ability and noble morality, which are needed in brilliantly inheriting and completing the chuche revolutionary cause and which a revolutionary leader should possess. He has thoroughly and consistently devoted his meditation and activities to completing the chuche cause by materializing the respected and beloved leader's idea and leadership and by advancing and leading the revolution to victory in accordance with the leader's plan and intention.

With an ironclad will to complete the chuche cause, the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il completely mastered the leader's revolutionary idea in his school days. Through energetic ideological and theoretical activities, he has developed and enriched the great chuche idea.

What is important above all in his ideological and theoretical activities is that he has scientifically and theoretically standardized the leader's revolutionary idea. The dear Comrade Kim Chong-il has concisely standaridized the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary idea, defining it as a complete system for the theory and methodology of the chuche idea. While summing up with several words the leader's profound idea -- which cannot be conveyed with hundreds and thousands of books -- he has standaridized this idea by delineating its structure and characteristics, bringing into perspective its contents and profound meaning. This reflects profound ideological and theoretical wisdom.

With his standardization of the great leader's revolutionary idea, the great and unique nature of the chuche idea has become clearer, guaranteeing the final victory of the chuche cause. The scope of the dear leader comrade's ideological and theoretical activities is matchlessly broad. By setting forth profound theories and policies in various sectors of revolution and construction, including the political, economic, cultural, military and foreign affairs sectors, he has attained immortal achievements in developing the idea of mankind.

All the theories and policies he has developed are aimed at thoroughly abiding by and continuously developing the great leader's idea and cause. These theories and policies are logical and encourage the people. They are unique. Thanks to his ideological and theoretical activities, all theoretical and practical questions have been brilliantly solved in Korea for inheriting and developing the chuche revolutionary cause.

The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il is not only an outstanding ideological theoretician but also a leadership artist who, with skilled leadership, has performed miracles and enacted innovations in various sectors of revolution and construction. Setting forth great policies and fighting slogans in every stage of the development of the revolution, he has wisely led the people to implement these policies and slogans.

All policies, including the policy on speed battle, and slogans, including "Ideology, technology and culture -- all in accordance with the demands of chuche," "Production, study and life -- all in the manner of the anti-Japanese guerrillas" and "Let us live in our own way," that he has advanced are an ideological and theoretical weapon that vigorously encourages the people to implement the chuche cause and show infinite vitality and invincible might.

By giving detailed instructions on these policies while conducting the overall control and guidance of the party and state activities, he has developed all fields of the revolution and construction. He boldly and broadly conducts all work. Once he has decided to do a task, he proceeds with the task to the end with invincible fighting spirit and extraordinary revolutionary driving force.

He has constantly embarked on the road of on-the-spot guidance to solve all difficult and vast tasks in revolution and construction. Thus he has led the revolution and construction to a road of upsurge.

His excellent and tested art of leadership is producing a brilliant fruition in all parts of the country and is making great changes in revolution and construction. All changes unique to this century that have taken place in Korea recently cannot be contemplated apart from the name of the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il is the genuine leader of masses who possesses great personality and who infinitely treasure and loves the working masses, devoting his all for them. Regarding it as his duty and mission to take care of the lives of the people, he has devoted all his efforts to this.

Overflowing under the foundation of the independent and creative life that the people of the DPRK, the fatherland of chuche, are enjoying today is the lofty, virtuous character of the dear comrade leader who loves the people infinitely and devotes all his efforts to their happiness.

Indeed, his politics are the politics of great love toward the people. The dear comrade leader is also a great teacher who infinitely treasures and loves functionaries, cherishing the lofty revolutionary love of comradeship and the revolutionary sense of duty. Thinking that life as a revolutionary fighter is a valuable existence that cannot be exchanged by anything, he has bestowed the most valuable political life to them and personally led them to glorify it forever. He has even taken care of their health problems, not to mention their work and life.

The modest, carefree and unworldly-minded personality is the most pure and excellent virtue that the dear comrade leader possesses. He considers it as a most joyful and happy time to mingle with the people. He always hears the voices of the people and discusses the affairs of the country with them without reserve, mingling with them. He not only shows the examples of popular traits to the peole but also leads all guiding cadres to become genuine servants of the people. Because of such great traits, he has close blood ties with the people and the people infinitely follow and uphold him, entrusting their all to him.

History has not witnessed a dignified people, like the Korean people, who are advancing being blessed with the leadership of both the great leader, who pioneered the road of the revolution for the first time, and the sagacious leader who is brillianty embodying, inheriting and completing the leader's ideology and leadership. This is a miraculous event in the history of mankind and is the greatest fortune bestowed on the Korean people.

The future of the Korean revolution is infinitely bright and promising. The star of guidance of chuche risen in Korea will shine its rays on the world and lead mankind to perform the lofty exploits for independence.

Worldwide Recognition

[Excerpts] [First speaker] February 16 was the significant birthday of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. Greeting this day, the world's revolutionary people as well as our people endlessly respected, revered and admired the dear leader as never before. In this hour, I would like to discuss this.

[Second speaker] I have heard from Comrade Choe, who visited North Korea, that progressive people celebrated the birthday of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. They sent congratulatory messages and letters and many precious gifts to the dear leader comrade, greeting his 40th birthday. They also observed various felicitous functions and carried out press activities to praise his greatness. Indeed, the world seethed with ardent desire in marking his 40th birthday as a most significant, felicitous event.

[First speaker] It is the happiness of our people to hold in high esteem the dear leader comrade. It is also the delight and honor of the world's revolutionary people.

[Second speaker] On the occasion of the 40th birthday of the dear comrade, high-ranking party and government officials of many countries and progressive figures in various social circles, including the chairman of the Japanese Socialist Party, the general secretary of the Canadian Communist Party, the general secretary of the Chilean Communist Party, the speaker of the Bangladesh National Assembly, the chairman of the Press Agencies Pool of the Coordinating Committee of Nonaligned Countries, the first and second speaker of the House of Representatives of Thailand, the general secretary of the Egyptian Communist Party and the general secretary of the Seychelles People's Progressive Front, sent congratulatory messages and letters to him. Over 1,400 messages were sent.

[Second speaker] In their congratulatory messages and letters, party and government leaders and people of various foreign countries unanimously praised the dear leader comrade as a great man of the century and as a guiding star of an era of independence and respectfully wished him a long life.

[First speaker] It is the greatest happiness and honor of our people to hold in high esteem as our leader the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, whom the world's revolutionary people revere. With endless happiness and honor to live and carry out the revolution, holding in high esteem the great leader and the dear leader comrade whom the world's people revere, respect and admire, our people should vigorously struggle, following the party.

As Successor to Chuche

[Dialogue entitled "Inheritance of Revolutionary Cause of Chuche and Our Attitude" from today's feature: "Let's Brilliantly Inherit and Consummate the Revolutionary Cause of Chuche"]

[Text] [first speaker] How are you? I want to talk with you on the issue of the inheritance of the revolutionary cause of chuche and our attitude. Would you first of all touch on the intrinsic attributes of the revolutionary cause of chuche?

[Second speaker] The revolutionary cause of chuche is the cause pioneered by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the lodestar for the liberation of mankind. It is the greatest and most sacred revolutionary cause in human history, and it regards the immortal chuche idea as its guiding ideology. In other words, the revolutionary cause of chuche regards the chuche idea, the guiding ideology of our era, as the leading ideology; it is the cause that, by brilliantly embodying the chuche idea, is designed to provide the fatherland's complete independence, eternal prosperity of the nation and the happiness of the generations to come for all ages. It is the cause aimed at constructing a communist world in which the ideals of mankind are in full bloom on the earth.

[First speaker] Yes. In reality, the revolutionary cause of chuche is the most sacred cause in human history. It is a revolution aimed at guaranteeing the really independent and creative life for the working masses -- the masters of history and powerful prime movers of social development -- by completely realizing independence for them.

I think that the revolutionary cause of chuche is the cause whose greatness, justness and indestructible vitality are substantiated through revolutionary practice.

[Second speaker] Right. The revolutionary cause of chuche is the great cause whose greatness, justness and boundless vitality have been clearly corroborated along the revolutionary path spanning more than half a century since it started. We can say that the revolutionary cause of chuche is the cause that does not know of setback and failure but is only embroidered with proud victory and glory. This can be shown by the fact that in the process of pioneering and leading this cause, the great leader has made epoch-making miracles and proud achievements unprecedented in any era of the human history.

Under the banner of the chuche idea, the great leader vanquished the brigandish Japanese imperialists and achieved the historic cause of the fatherland's liberation. Since liberation, he has penetrated the prevailing situation at home and abroad in a scientific fashion and has provided a powerful revolutionary base in the north. He led the 25 June war, which was provoked by the aggressor U.S. imperialists, to victory, thus defending the national sovereignty and opening up a new era of upswing for the struggle against imperialism and the United States.

Since the ceasefire, he has led the masses to brilliantly achieve the socialist revolution and socialist industrialization in the North in the shortest period. Thus, he has changed the North into the socialist power of independence, self-reliance and self-defense.

[First speaker] Your remarks deeply convince use that the revolutionary cause of chuche is the most glorious cause personally pioneered and led by the great leader, the genius of the revolution, and that when we firmly inherit and glorify this cause, the ultimate victory of our revolution will be further accelerated.

[Second speaker] Certainly. The sagacious leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is guiding the chuche cause by resplendently succeeding the cause, once said: We should entertain constant loyalty to the leader and should consummate the revolutionary cause pioneered by the leader generation after generation.

In this regard, I think it very important for our South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic masses to correctly succeed and consummate the revolutionary cause of chuche. That is because when this cause is accomplished, our nation's cause for national liberation and the sacred cause for democracy and reunification will also be brilliantly accomplished and, furthermore, the independent and creative life of our masses and the eternal prosperity of the nation will be achieved.

[First speaker] I see. We can say that, since inheriting the chuche revolutionary cause and brilliantly consummating it are the cause for our South Korean revolutionaries and masses, accomplishing it is their lofty duty. Now I would like to talk about the tasks assigned to South Korean revolutionaries and masses in inheriting and consummating the chuche revolutionary cause.

[Second speaker] More important in brilliantly consummating the chuche revolutionary cause is to possess a sense of loyalty to the great leader who created the chuche cause and who has guided it to victory. We cannot think of the victory of the chuche revolutionary cause as separate from loyalty to the leader because endless loyalty to the leader is a decisive guarantee for all of our victories. Only when South Korean revolutionaries and masses deeply entertain firm loyalty to the great leader, uphold and follow him, resolutely defend his authority and are faithful to his teachings can they more rapidly and successfully accomplish the revolutionary cause of chuche.

[First speaker] I agree. I believe that, when our masses uphold the respected and beloved leader -- the great leader they have greeted and upheld for the first time in our nation's long history -- when they are faithful to his teachings, the glorious day will certainly come when the sacred anti-U.S. cause for independence will win victory and all of our fellow countrymen will live happily, upholding the leader, in a reunified and independent fatherland.

[Second speaker] Right.

[First speaker] Now I would like to talk about the tradition of revolution.

[Second speaker] The tradition of revolution is a very important question directly linked to the revolutionary cause of chuche. In other words, inheriting and developing the tradition of revolution achieved by the leader are of great significance in sustaining the life of the revolution. To brilliantly inherit and consummate the revolutionary cause of chuche pioneered by the great leader, our masses should hold on to the glorious tradition of revolution achieved by the leader and brilliantly inherit and develop it.

The tradition of revolution, which our nation should inherit and develop generation after generation, is the tradition of revolution that General Kim Il-song -- the sun of the nation -- achieved in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. This tradition of revolution abundantly contains basic principles to which we should firmly adhere in the revolutionary struggle for independence and contains fighting experiences.

[First speaker] You mean that brilliantly inheriting and developing the tradition of revolution -- the deep and stout historic root of the chuche revolution and the eternal foundation for the victory of revolution -- are a basic demand to inherit and consummate the chuche cause generation after generation.

[Second speaker] That is right.

[First speaker] I think that South Korean revolutionaries and masses of all walks of life should make efforts to defend firmly the glorious tradition of revolution achieved by the great leader from the attack of reactionaries at home and abroad and to embody the tradition of revolution through practical activities.

I believe that, to inherit the chuche revolutionary cause, our South Korean revolutionaries and masses should reverentially uphold the sagacious leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is aiding the great leader and brilliantly succeeding to his cause, and give loyalty to him.

[Second speaker] Right. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who our fellow countrymen admire as the guiding star of the nation, is the sagacious leader who has brilliantly inherited the chuche cause pioneered by the great leader and guided it to victory.

Since we uphold the outstanding leader, who is endlessly faithful to the great leader, the fatherland, the people and the revolutionary cause, as the successor to the chuche cause, the victory of our revolution is decisive and our nation has a promising future. This is the matchless glory and great fortune of our nation and masses.

As they have led their lives and fought, admiring the great General Kim Il-song as the sun of the nation, for over half a century, so our revolutionaries and masses should vigorously advance the sacred struggle to accelerate the chuche cause, admiring the sagacious leader Comrade Kim Chong-il as the guiding star of the nation and firmly united under the anti-U.S. banner for independence.

RESPONSE TO JAPANESE MEMORANDUM ON TEXTBOOKS

[Text] Seoul, August 27 (YONHAP) -- The Japanese Government Thursday handed over a memorandum on the Korean-Japanese textbook controversy to the South Korean Government. The memorandum was conveyed by Japanese Vice Foreign Minister Ryozo Sunobe to Korean Ambassador to Japan Choe Kyong-nok Thursday morning in the form of a response to an aide memoire which Seoul relayed to Tokyo August 3.

In the memorandum, the Japanese Government said it had studied with sincerity concrete measures it would take in consideration of the consequences of the issue in South Korea. The memorandum also contained the contents of the Japanese Government's official policy statement on the issue made by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa later in the day.

The South Korean Government is to announce its official position on the issue Friday in a statement. Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop and other pertinent ministers held a meeting Thursday afternoon to discuss countermeasures to Tokyo's policy statement which pledged correction of the disputed historical accounts of high school textbooks in the next new edition to be published in 1985.

Culture Minister's Statement

["Text" of statement issued by ROK Minister of Culture and Information Yi Chin-hui in Seoul on 27 August]

[Text] 1. In response to our government's 3 August memorandum , the Japanese Government, on the morning of 26 August, sent a memorandum clearly indicating it will correct portions of the controversial Japanese textbooks under the authority of the Japanese Government. This memorandum contains the statement of the chief cabinet secretary -- the spokesman of the Japanese Government -- that was issued on the same day. We believe the pledge of the Japanese Government to correct the textbooks is the result of our government's repeated demands for a correction and our people's opinion.

2. We believe the textbooks that are to be approved in the future will undoubtedly reflect our position. However, the fact that portions of the textbooks at issue which were already authorized are to be corrected in 1985 does not meet our expectations. Continuously paying attention to the pledge of the Japanese Government to fully reflect our people's opinion and criticism in their educational system, we will make diplomatic efforts to achieve practical results.

3. We believe the correct awareness of our history is an important factor in preserving the friendship and cooperative relations between Korea and Japan based on mutual respect and reciprocity. Proceeding from this, we expect the relations between the two countries will be developed soundly in the future through the ceaseless efforts of Japan to rectify its erroneous depiction of history.

4. Keenly feeling the necessity to foster our national strength to support and promote the nation's dignity and the traditions of our national history, we should guarantee the united will and efforts of the people and the government.

Parties' Reactions Noted

[Text] Seoul, Aug 27 (YONHAP) -- Korea's ruling and opposition parties Friday reacted differently to the Japanese Government's official policy statement on the Korean-Japanese textbook controversy announced Thursday by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa.

A spokesman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party commented that it is a natural consequence that Tokyo was repentant for the past invasion of Korea and acknowledged erroneous accounts in revised high school textbooks. The spokesman said that "the Japanese Government should perceive deeply the indignation of Korean and other Asian peoples triggered by the revision of history textbooks and exert sincere efforts to correct the distortions." The ruling party, however, expressed dissatisfaction on the Japanese Government's policy to postpone correction of the errors in the revised textbooks until 1985.

The major opposition Democratic Korea Party criticized the official policy statement for being a pretext to drag on the correction of the textbook errors. "Any pretext will not cover up the distorted historical facts and the Japanese statement will not help the two countries normalize their strained relations."

The Korea National Party, the second largest opposition party, said in a statement that the Japanese Government position leaves problems, since Koreans want a "drastic" solution to the textbook issue.

A fraternity group of independent lawmakers denounced the Japanese policy statement, saying that it is far from Korean people's "just demand regarding the textbook issue." "The policy statement should be criticized as an act of deception," the group commented.

SUPPORT FOR NAMIBIAN STRUGGLE REAFFIRMED

[Text] Seoul, Aug 27 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government reaffirmed Thursday its firm support for the legitimate rights of the Namibian people to self-determination and their just struggle for independence and urged all states and international organizations to increase their support for the struggle of the Namibian people.

In a message delivered to the U.S. secretary-general on the occasion of the Namibian Day, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok said that "South Korea has strictly adhered to the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Security Council of the United Nations, while positively participating in various conferences in support of the Namibian people under the auspices of the United Nations."

South Korea has made contributions annually to the various funds including the U.N. trust fund for institute for Namibia. This year, the government pledged 50 thousand U.S. dollars to the fund. Yi also said that the South Korean Government is prepared to provide the Namibian people with such assistances as granting scholarship for Namibian students or inviting them to Korea for technical training. The Korean Government last year extended its invitation to the U.N. Council for Namibia to send one of its missions to Korea in a sincere effort to facilitate assistance for the Namibian people.

COURT SENTENCES FORMER NDP MEMBER TO PRISON

SK270809 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 1000 GMT 25 Aug 82

CHAN SI ATTENDS TRADE MINISTRY COURSE OPENING

BK260741 [Editorial Report] Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1300 GMT on 25 August carries a 16.5-minute report with portions recorded on a ceremony held at the conference hall of the Trade Ministry to open the first administrative course for cadres from various companies and directorates under the ministry, in the presence of "Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Comrade Tang Saroem, minister of internal and external trade; Comrade Thong Chan, deputy minister of internal and external trade; and Comrade Poun Ponloe, deputy minister of internal and external trade."

The announcer says "Comrade Tang Saroem, minister of internal and external trade, made a speech on the activities of the Trade Ministry carried out in the past 3 years which brought about great achievements for the people and nation. The comrade emphasized the immediate tasks of cadres and personnel in the ministry, adding that they should strive to develop their revolutionaly ethics and build an ordinary and good lifestyle. In particular, the essential factor is for them to stimulate agricultural production and practice thrift to the maximum in all aspects with an aim to stabilize and make the people's livelihood advance toward prosperity."

The announcer then presents a recorded speech by Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers. In conclusion, the announcer says "the first stage of this Ministry of Internal and External Trade course ended at 1100 in a warm and joyous atmosphere permeated with great pride over the achievements made in all fields by the Kampuchean revolution."

Chan Si Address

[Text] Our Trade Ministry was quickly established immediately after the liberation of our country in order to satisfy the people's needs. In order to meet this requirement, a trade ministry had to be established quickly. It was assigned the duty of receiving aid given to our people by various countries, particularly the fraternal socialist countries and peace-loving countries throughout the world. In cooperation with the specialized transportation sector, it was responsible for distributing aid to localities throughout the country in order to avert the famine which was then threatening our people. This was why the Trade Ministry had to be established immediately to take charge of the reception and distribution of aid to save our people from famine and to improve the health of those people who fled from the claws of the genocidal clique. At that time our country still did not have any currency. Therefore, I regard your work as of great value. How were our people's health, their living conditions and clothing when they first fled from the claws of the genocidal clique into the jungles and mountainous areas? How are they now? How are the cities and the countryside?

We can see that in the past more than 3 years, our society has undergone many changes. The Trade Ministry has made a significant contribution to the new face of our society. This is because, aside from receiving and distributing aid to the people to help avert the famine, the comrades have made great efforts to encourage and to buy crops from the people in their production drive. Aside from purchasing crops and food from the people, the Trade Ministry has organized dealers to sell various goods, such as salt, clothes and kerosene, to the people. [Words indistinct] targets to sell goods to the people. You sold quite a large amount of goods to the people in order to encourage them to sell rice to us.

We must sell goods to the people because they have money after having sold rice to us. [passage indistinct]. Thus, our comrades have taken part in the purchase and sale of crops and goods as a contribution to improving our people's living conditions. This is a contribution made by the Trade Ministry. However, you must strive to improve the system of purchase, sale and barter with the people. We must strive on, enduring all hardship. As the trade sector, we [words indistinct].

In the economic and financial sector, the comrades have made great efforts. Although this work is new to us, the comrades have begun the task in a planned way. Many sectors have started trading. In the past, we worked without plans -- neither monthly nor any other plans. We gave out whatever we were asked for because we had no plans on anything. But now the comrades know how to map out plans for everything. We have made plans for work throughout the country. Each plan is made up in accordance with the size of our population and the requirement of our people. With these plans, the comrades can assess profits and losses. In trading, there are profits and losses, but everyone wants profits rather than losses in doing business. No one wants to lose in trading.

Thus, in order to profit from trading, we must have plans. We seek profit rather than loss. In fighting the enemy, everyone wants to win. Nobody fights in order to lose. If we are to lose, why should we fight? This is similar to trading. Thus, the apparatus in all sectors must make preparations. Earlier, many sectors within your framework were not properly arranged. They were unbalanced. However, the comrades have strived to rearrange them and improved things to a great extent. Some have been removed and installed in other work suitable to their capability, knowledge and state of health. This is the effort that our comrades have made.

Concerning this course, the comrades must study hard. This course is of greater significance than that in the past. This course is directly related to your ministry and your business. I have recalled all these weak and strong points and achievements made by your ministry and some of you as well as some targets in order to encourage you to study hard and realize the role of your ministry in the defense and construction of the country. You must realize the trust placed in all of you by our party which has assigned you in charge of materials and capital worth several million riels.

Our revolution is making a constant advance and achieving victories in all fields -- economic, cultural, social, political and military -- as well as in domestic and foreign policies. All of you have made active contributions to all the achievements in the past 3 years as I mentioned above. Thus, you must strive to increase your knowledge. You must heighten your sense of patriotism, responsibility and revolutionary vigilance against the enemy and strive to improve your daily tasks. In this immediate period when you are attending this course, you must try to ensure success in study as well as in the work at your ministry. [Words indistinct] of the ministry. This is what I want to entrust to you.

In conclusion, I wish all of you success in this study. The success of this course will be beneficial to this ministry as well as a good example from which the Central Committee and the Council of Ministers will draw experience and for the other ministries to follow. [applause]

POLISH AMBASSADOR BIDS FAREWELL TO CHEA SIM

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Aug (SPK) -- Sergiusz Mikulicz, Polish ambassador to Kampuchea, paid a farewell visit to Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly, on 21 August, before returning to his country to take up other duties.

Sergiusz Mikulicz deeply thanked the party, government and people of Kampuchea for the facilities granted to him to carry out his duty. He promised to work to further develop the relations of friendship, solidarity and cooperation which unite the parties, governments and peoples of Poland and Kampuchea.

Chea Sim expressed high appreciation for the satisfactory results of the Polish diplomat's work in Kampuchea. He said these results have contributed to the consolidation of the relations of friendship, solidarity and cooperation between Kampuchea and Poland for 3 years since the liberation of Kampuchea from genocide. Chea Sim declared total support for the bitter struggle and the just measures taken by the Polish party and government to save the nation and defeat all subversive activities of the U.S. imperialists and accomplices.

He also talked about the success achieved by the Kampuchean people during 3 years under party leadership and with the assistance of socialist countries and progressive peoples the world over.

CHEA SIM RECEIVES HEAD OF FRANCE-BASED AID GROUP

BK221111 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Aug (SPK) -- On Saturday, 21 August, Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the KUFNCD National Council, received in audience in Phnom Penh the delegation of the Association for Aid to the Cambodian People led by its president, Ing Meng Keat, who arrived in Kampuchea on 16 August.

Ing Meng Keat informed Chea Sim about the activities and aims of the Association for Aid to the Cambodian People and its efforts to provide moral and material help to the Kampuchean people. He also talked about close relations among the associations of Kampuchean nationals in France, which, he affirmed, always support the Kampuchean people. He praised the revolutionary gains which the Kampuchean people have scored over the past 3 years and affirmed that these successes are due to the correct leadership of the KPRP, the KUFNCD and the PRK Government as well as the efforts of the Kampuchean people. He expressed his indignation and horror with respect to crimes and destruction perpetrated by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime against the Kampuchean people.

The president of the Association for Aid to the Cambodian People promised to do his best to consolidate its ties with the Kampuchean people in order to contribute to the construction and to the restoration of Kampuchea.

KUFNCD Chairman Chea Sim thanked the association for its support to the Kampuchean people. He stressed that the correct leadership of the KPRP, to the moral and material aid of fraternal socialist countries, in particular Vietnam and developing countries. [sentence as received]

Received by Chan Si

BK241548 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1438 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Aug (SPK) -- Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, received on 22 August the visiting delegation of the Association for Aid to the Cambodian People headed by its president Ing Meng Keat.

Ing Meng Keat affirmed the political stand and objective of his and other associations' activities aimed at helping the Kampuchean people.

Chan Si talked about the objective of the Kampuchean revolution. He also spoke about the development in all fields in Kampuchea over the past 3 years -- a result of the unremitting struggle of the Kampuchean people for independence, freedom and peace.

Chan Si congratulated the Kampuchean intellectuals inside and outside the country for their precious contribution to the cause of their fatherland and stressed the attention paid by the Kampuchean party and government to training intellectuals. He condemned maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and their ASEAN lackeys, and the tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. Chan Si said the Kampuchean people, strengthened by their unity and with the assistance of fraternal countries, particularly Vietnam, will defeat them.

Chan Si called on Kampuchean residents abroad to help the Kampuchean people unite more closely to make a prosperous country according to the aspirations of the Kampuchean people, out of a Kampuchea which was almost completely devastated by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan criminals.

VODK SCORES SRV 'SUBVERSION' IN NONALIGNED MOVEMENT

[Station commentary: "The Hanoi Vietnamese Enemy Aggressors and Exterminators of the Kampuchean Race Cannot Escape From Being Condemned by the World and the Nonaligned Movement"]

[Text] While member countries of the Nonaligned Movement have been discussing preparations for its seventh summit meeting which will be convened in the near future, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy -- the aggressors against Kampuchea who barbarously violated and trampled under foot the sacred principles of the Nonaligned Movement and the UN Charter over the past nearly 4 years -- sent Vo Dong Giang, Vietnamese deputy foreign minister, to discuss activities and maneuvers, to lie to and dupe the nonaligned countries and everybody in an attempt to block participation by Democratic Kampuchea in the next nonaligned summit meeting. They are trying to have the Democratic Kampuchean seat vacated again and are preparing to have it occupied by their running dogs and puppets in Phnom Penh.

Why are the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors trying to stage such dirty and cheap activities? Firstly, the Vietnamese are afraid of Democratic Kampuchea's influence. Democratic Kampuchea, which has waged a struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors during the past nearly 4 years, has received increasing sympathy, assistance and support from the world, especially from the nonaligned countries.

Secondly, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors are scared of the nonaligned countries' voice of justice. Most of the nonaligned countries which are loyal to nonaligned principles oppose the Vietnamese aggression against Kampuchea. They also oppose Castro's barbarous act of leaving the Democratic Kampuchean seat vacant in violation of the Nonaligned Movement's principles.

Thirdly, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors are afraid that the Nonaligned Movement members are more fully and clearly becoming aware of their most criminal and fascist acts caused by their occupation of Kampuchea and their genocide against millions of Kampuchean people by betraying and violating as well as trampling under foot the principles of the Nonaligned Movement of which Vietnam is also a member.

The Vietnamese are afraid of being denounced, condemned and pressured by the nonaligned countries to respect the Nonaligned Movement principles and the resolutions of the nonaligned summit meeting, which called for unconditional and complete Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea. Just as nobody can cover a dead elephant with a basket, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy cannot hide its crimes. Vietnam's aggression against Kampuchea and genocide against the Kampuchean people in an attempt to exterminate the Kampuchean race is obviously flagrant.

The entire world, mankind and all nonaligned countries clearly realize the crimes committed by the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy in its aggression against Kampuchea by arrogantly and barbarously violating the principles of the Nonaligned Movement, international law and the UN Charter. They have strongly denounced and condemned as well as continually called over the past nearly 4 years for a complete Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea as was expressed in the resolutions of the nonaligned meeting at the beginning of 1981 and consecutive resolutions of the UN General Assembly.

The whole world and mankind, including the nonaligned countries, clearly realize the ugly face of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy, who is the most arrogant, barbarous and fascist expansionist aggressor in our era. The Vietnamese enemy aggressors are the cat's paws of the Soviet international expansionists in Southeast Asia. They oppose the principles of the Nonaligned Movement. They destroy this movement. They have engaged in subversion inside the Nonaligned Movement aimed at diverting this movement to serve their own expansionist strategy and that of their Soviet masters and their other allies. Everybody knows that the Vietnamese oppose the principles of international law, the UN Charter, the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the call from the entire world and mankind which have persistently demanded for nearly 4 years their complete troop withdrawal from Kampuchea and the respect of the Kampuchean people's sacred right to determine their own destiny by themselves with no external interference.

Therefore, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors, swallowers of territory and race exterminators can never bury these truths. They can never escape from being condemned by the entire world and humanity and, in particular, by all peace- and justice-loving countries and countries which love and respect the principles of the Nonaligned Movement and the UN Charter. One day the nonaligned countries will reexamine the criminal and unjust act of Cuba, Vietnam, the Soviet Union and their ilk against Democratic Kampuchea of flagrantly and barbarously violating the principles of nonalignment. Cuba and its allies left vacant the seat of Kampuchea -- a founding member of the Nonaligned Movement. They have prepared to replace Democratic Kampuchea with the Vietnamese aggressors' administration in Phnom Penh. The overwhelming number of nonaligned countries, which respect the nonaligned principles and are loyal to the Nonaligned Movement, will certainly not allow Vietnam and Cuba -- the cat's paws of the Soviet international expansionists -- to make rain and thunder as they wish in the Nonaligned Movement forever. They will unite and take measures to restore the legitimate rights of Democratic Kampuchea and its seat in the Nonaligned Movement in the future as they have supported the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the UN since 1969.

KOMPONG CHHNANG TRANSPORT -- Phnom Penh, 21 Aug (SPK) -- Workers of the communications, transport and posts service of Kompong Chhnang Province, 90 km northwest of Phnom Penh, achieved their plan to transport 3,900 tons [figure as received] of merchandise. The transport service channeled various goods from Phnom Penh to different localities of the province; more than 5,000 tons by roads and 300 tons by rivers. The road and bridge service paved 900 meters of road with stone, and other work sites are being set up. The provincial postal service distributed tens of thousands of letters. SITTHI VISITS MANILA TO DISCUSS ASEAN UN STRATEGY

BK261157 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila is now on a visit to the Philippines to work out a common stand for the upcoming UN General Assembly meeting scheduled for 27-28 September. The visit follows an invitation from his Philippine counterpart Carlos Romulo. After the Philippines, Foreign Minister Sitthi will also visit Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia for the same purpose. According to Minister Sitthi, upon arrival in New York the ASEAN foreign ministers will hold a 2-day meeting to map out strategy on the seating of Democratic Kampuchea at the United Nations. The ASEAN foreign ministers will also hold talks with President of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who is due to arrive there in the middle of next month.

Returns; Discusses Task Force

[Text] Philippine Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo is optimistic that the success of the ASEAN task force may lead to the holding of ASEAN summit, Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said upon his return from a day's working visit to the Philippines yesterday. ACM Sitthi said that he met with President Marcos and exchanged views with Romulo on ASEAN strategy on the Kampuchean issue in the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly in New York next month. He said a former Philippine president was appointed to head the Philippine representation in the ASEAN task force, while the Thai side is to be led by former Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Mr Anan Panyarachun. The task force is scheduled to meet in Bangkok on September 15 to review all matters regarding the Kampuchean problem. ACM Sitthi said Mr Romulo was hopeful that the task force would pave the way for the ASEAN summit.

While ACM Sitthi was in Manila, Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau was also visiting the Philippines and also met Marcos and Romulo. But ACM Sitthi said Romulo told him that there was nothing new from Lau on the Kampuchean problem. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach plans to visit the Philippines in November, he added.

While in Manila, Sitthi also delivered a message from Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon to Marcos.

Further Remarks

BK270856 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila has returned from the Philippines, arriving at Bangkok airport yesterday evening. He told newsmen at the airport that he was accorded warm hospitality during his visit and that he was greeted upon his arrival at Manila airport by Philippine Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi disclosed that he had talked with his Philippine counterpart about the latter's participation in the next UN General Assembly session on the Kampuchean problem. The session is scheduled to open on 9 September and will be attended by Prince Sihanouk and President Marcos on 15 and 17 September, respectively. The foreign minister told newsmen that he had handed a get-well message from Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon to President Marcos, who has just recovered from an illness. The Philippine president asked him to convey his best wishes to the Thai prime minister on the occasion of his birthday. The foreign minister, however, declined to reveal the issues he discussed with the Philippine president.

Regarding the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, the foreign minister said that the Philippines has given much of the credit to Thailand. He said he believed that this success should be attributed to the joint effort of all parties. The Philippine foreign minister told his Thai counterpart that the position of the Democratic Kampuchean Government would be further improved.

NHAN DAN CALLS FOR PEACE ON PRC-VIETNAM BORDER

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 26 -- To live in peace is the legitimate aspiration of the population on both sides of the Sino-Vietnamese border, says NHAN DAN today.

The paper is commenting on a proposal made by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on August 14 that the two sides refrain from armed activities and other hostile acts along the common border from August 27 to October 8, on the occasion of the Vietnamese and Chinese National Days. It says: The inhabitants along the border have suffered from a prolonged tension caused by China, and it is not difficult to meet their desire, provided China is willing.

NHAN DAN points out that the Vietnamese proposal aims at enabling Vietnamese and Chinese in border areas to celebrate their respective national days in peace. It says: This proposal, like others made by Vietnam for previous public festivities, is an expression of Vietnam's sincere intention to help in easing the tension on the common border and paving the way for the settlement of problems in the relations between the two countries.

We always have at heart the time-honoured friendship between the two peoples and their peaceful life, and we hold that any attempt to dash their hopes will not only harm peace and stability in the two countries, but also pollute the atmosphere of the whole region. But it is regrettable that, as the relations between the two countries became worse, China has not responded to any of the constructive proposals raised by Vietnam, and has not taken any really constructive initiative itself.

Although China has not yet replied to the August 14 note of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry, Vietnam, as made clear in a Vietnamese Foreign Ministry statement released yesterday, persists in its effort to preserve and defend its long-standing friendship with the Chinese people. As a matter of fact, the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam on August 25 did order Vietnamese Armed Forces along the length of the common border to act in strict conformity with this proposal.

We hope that China, in the interests of the Chinese people, will positively respond to our proposal by ordering its forces to cease all armed activities and other hostile acts, including shelling and firing, along the common border.

PRC 'IMAGINARY VICTORY' IN PRC-U.S. COMMUNIQUE HIT

BK261313 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] The Chinese authorities have for the past week made much fanfare about what they called victory in the Shanghai communique No 2 signed on 17 August 1982. They boasted it as an important step to solve the differences in the relations between China and the United States and a major victory because China succeeded in forcing the United States to make one step backward with the threat to downgrade diplomatic relations with the United States if the latter continues to carry out its two-Chinas policy.

Listening to such boast, people could think that the United States has accepted the backward step. China, it bragged, had advanced further in the settlement of the Taiwan issue which is facing Deng Xiaoping and his faction while being condemned by public opinion in China for having sold Taiwan to Washington. [sentence as heard]

But what appears in the nine articles of the 17 August communique and statements and explanation made by U.S. President Reagan and U.S. State Department is the opposite. In this communique, besides general articles saying that the United States committed not to infringe on China's sovereignty and territorial integrity, there is no hint of the United States'willingness to give up its two-China policy.

Thus China conceded the clause reading the United States acknowledges China's stand on one China and Taiwan is part of her territory U.S. backward step. [sentence as heard] As pointed out by the U.S. State Department in its open explanation and its testimony at the Foreign Relations Committee, the United States only acknowledged this Chinese stand, not showing any other views.

Moreover, right after the announcement of this communique, U.S. President Reagan affirmed that the relations between the United States and Taiwan cannot be affected by this communique. That is to say about the general articles, but what about concrete articles such as Article 6 of the communique on U.S. arms sales to Taiwan? Through this article, people easily see that the United States still has the right to continue its arms sale to Taiwan. It only committed to reduce -- not to completely stop -- arms sales to Taiwan and no concrete timing has been set to end such arms sales.

Meanwhile, the Chinese authorities committed to give up their intention to reunify Taiwan through violence and only two days after the announcement of the Sino-U.S. communique, U.S. President Reagan himself announced at the Congress Washington's continued contracts with Taiwan on the production of F-5E jet fighters worth $240 million.

Public opinion in the States and the West at large remarked that the United States gets a lion's share in the communique of 17 August. This is right. Beijing is making quite a scene about an imaginary victory. With the 17 August communique -- the second Shanghai communique, as it is known to the West -- Beijing cannot hide its intention to sell dirt cheap Taiwan to America, a thing it did 4 years ago in exchange for the stepping up of relations and collusion with Washington.

Deng Xiaoping once declared that the Taiwan problem is not important. It does not matter if we solve it one hundred years later. The latest Sino-American communique has spurned the legitimate aspirations of the Chinese people, namely, to unite Taiwan with Mainland China.

Publicizing the so-called victory in solving the Taiwan problem, Deng Xiaoping obviously attempted to ward off with U.S. support the pressure from opposition parties in the scramble for power in the coming party congress. Once Deng Xiaoping has consolidated his foothold in the Chinese leadership it is certain that the Sino-American alliance will be strengthened to oppose the Soviet Union, socialism, peace and national independence. So that's the essence of the 17 August Sino-American joint communique. The defeats to (?the plans of) the Beijing leadership won't get it nowhere.

SPECIAL ENVOY VO DONG GIANG VISITS ZAMBIA

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 25 -- Deputy Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang, special envoy of State Council President Truong Chinh, paid an official visit to Zambia from August 19-23.

The secretary general of the United National Independence Party of Zambia, H. Mulemba, received the Vietnamese envoy, who handed him a letter from President Truong Chinh to Zambian President K. Kaunda, who was abroad on business. Speaking at the reception, Vo Dong Giang praised the active role played by Zambia in the Non-Aligned Movement and liberation movements, particularly those in Southern Africa. He also told the Zambian leader of the Vietnamese president's views on the current important issues of the Non-Aligned Movement.

After expressing his identical views on the issues discussed, Secretary General H. Mulemba said that now, as before its independence day, Zambia has closely followed the efforts of the Vietnamese people, which, he said, gave encouragement to the Zambian people in their struggle. He extended his congratulations to and admiration for the heroic people of Vietnam. Both Vietnam and Zambia, he said, were striving to build their countries into progressive and developed ones, while continuing to discharge their international duties.

He also said that Vietnam should believe that in Zambia there was no betrayal of the people's interests and those of the progressive forces in the world. He stressed that Vietnam had sincere and wholehearted friends in Zambia. He asked the Vietnamese envoy to convey greetings from the party, the government and the people of Zambia to the Vietnamese party, government and people.

Deputy Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang also met and had working sessions with the foreign minister and other senior officials of the Zambian Foreign Ministry. The meetings took place in an atmosphere of friendship, solidarity and mutual understanding.

On August 22, Vo Dong Giang visited and held talks with leaders of the Southwest African People's Organization (S.W.A.P.O.) and the African National Congress (A.N.C.) who were present in Lusaka. These talks took place in an atmosphere of militant solidarity.

SRV, BULGARIAN FOREIGN MINISTRIES SIGN ACCORD

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 25 -- A cooperation agreement for 1982-1985 has been signed between the Foreign Ministries of Vietnam and Bulgaria. The agreement, signed by Hoang Luong, Vietnamese deputy foreign minister, and Mariy Ivanov, first vice-minister for foreign affairs of Bulgaria, was sealed during a visit made by the former from August 19-23.

Hoang Luong was also received by Stoyan Mikhaylov, secretary of the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee, who expressed satisfaction with the development of the friendship and all-sided cooperation between the two parties and countries. Stoyan Mikhaylov also said that Bulgaria fully supported the constructive proposals made by the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference in Ho Chi Minh City last July for a peaceful and stable Southeast Asia.

Hoang Luong and Mariy Ivanov compared notes on relations between the two countries and on international problems of common concern.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS ALLOWS ECONOMIC ZONES FUND

BK270630 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Implementing the slogan: The state and the people work together in building new economic zones, the Council of Ministers recently issued a decision permitting provinces and districts where there are people leaving or coming to resettle in new economic zones to establish a new economic zones building fund.

The provincial or district people's council is authorized to set up this fund according to the various incomes of each locality. Localities may mobilize laborers, peasants, handicraft workers and other strata of people to contribute money to the fund -- money obtained from their 2-5 man days.

The decision says: The new economic zones building fund will be used to help relieve the initial difficulties of resettlers in new economic zones. This includes buying them equipment for production and seeds, and providing them with pocket money, household appliances and living quarters.

The fund will be managed by an organization responsible for the building of provincial or district new economic zones, and the money will be deposited in the local state bank. The local financial organization is responsible for guiding and inspecting the management of this fund in accordance with the general system. The local people's committee will make an annual report on the management situation and submit a balance statement to the people's council.

ARMY PAPER ON MILITIA, SELF-DEFENSE FORCES' TASK

[Text] The militia and self-defense forces are armed forces that are organized throughout the country, and their organization and activities are always closely related to the grassroots level and the localities. They serve as the core force in maintaining security and order and protecting the revolutionary administration at the grassroots level. Along with the other armed forces, especially the people's security forces, it is the duty of the militia and self-defense forces to always uphold vigilance so as to actively discover and promptly suppress counterrevolutionary elements, resolutely smash all disturbances and actively struggle to prevent all negative phenomena. While the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists are intensively waging a kind of multifaceted war of sabotage in an attempt to weaken and then annex our country, it is all the more important for us to defend the revolutionary administration, safeguard our labor in socialist construction and protect the lives of the people. This, in fact, is a fierce, protracted and complex struggle in which the militia and self-defense forces are required to possess a high fighting spirit, a sense of organization, strict discipline, valor and determination in carrying out their tasks and functions.

Recently many militia and self-defense units in the rural areas as well as in cities and municipalities, and especially those in the border and coastal areas, on offshore islands and at important positions along water and land communication lines, wharves, seaports, bus terminals and so forth, have effectively contributed to maintaining security and order, thus winning the confidence, affection and support of the local party organizations, administration and people. Various organizational measures have been adopted to enable members of the militia and self-defense forces to carry out the task of maintaining security and order without having to cease their production activities, and they have realized considerable results. However, up to now many establishments and localities have, in spite of the complicated situation, failed to pay attention to properly using the militia and self-defense forces to maintain security and order, and in some places, a number of cadres and combatants belonging to the militia and self-defense forces have not failed to abide by the law of the state in an exemplary manner, but have also participated in negative deeds or closed their eyes to the disruptive acts of bad elements, thereby damaging the prestige of their units.

To develop the capabilities of the militia and self-defense forces for maintaining security and order, it is necessary first of all to firmly and vigorously consolidate militia and self-defense force detachments and to ensure that they are politically stable, closely organized and socially popular. In order to guarantee the quality of a broad-based armed force of the masses such as the militia and self-defense forces, experience gained so far dictates that we must base ourselves on practical activities and rely on the people to discover and select fully qualified persons for admission to the organization.

The maintenance of security and order requires that all cadres and combatants of the militia and self-defense forces thoroughly understand the law and be prepared to enhance their sense of responsibility in implementing the law. This will help them promptly discover and correctly deal with criminal acts and protect the people's right to collective mastery. Grasping the law and carrying out tasks according to the law are effective measures for suppressing the armed counterrevolutionary groups and hoodlums and hooligans who are conducting illegal activities

Tasks concerning the maintenance of political security and social order and safety require uniform leadership in order to develop the combined strength of the various forces effectively. To achieve this, each unit of the militia and self-defense forces must base its actions on the tasks entrusted by the local party organization and administration to formulate programs and plans in cooperation with the people's public security force, the army and the youth union in carrying out various tasks and the division of labor effectively.

Vague formulation of plans and solving problems after the fact are practices that will not produce expected achievements. Division of labor must also be clearly defined within the militia and self-defense forces in order that specialized detachments may be formed as a core force and other detachments will be able to carry out various tasks comprehensively. Members of the detachment responsible for maintaining security and order must be carefully selected and must be composed of outstanding cadres and combatants who once worked in critical areas or were assigned to important tasks. They must be given professional training, however, in order to enable them to carry out their tasks both overtly and covertly and solve developing problems promptly and correctly.

Close cooperation in maintaining security and order always exists between the self-defense force and the guard force of organizations and enterprises as well as between the militia force and the people's public security force. However, we should neither combine these two organizations into one nor allow them to operate totally independent from each other. Without uniform leadership and cooperation, we cannot create a vigorous fighting strength and score achievements in the maintenance of political security and social order.

The establishment of militia and self-defense forces detachments for maintaining security and order at the grassroots level is a good initiative which should be applied comprehensively, especially in critical areas. However, these detachments should be of the appropriate size, with emphasis on qualitative results rather than quantitative achievements in order to avoid performing tasks just for the sake of form.

Formulating an appropriate policy to improve spiritual and material facilities for members of the militia and self-defence forces, educating them and helping them to enhance their vigilance and maintain their fighting impetus and quality are tasks that must be carried out consistently in order to enable them to perform their tasks of maintaining security and order satisfactorily.

In localities where there are militia and self-defense forces, their organization and tasks must be satisfactorily carried out and political security and social order must be firmly guaranteed and maintained.

REVIEW OF AUGUST ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

OW260849 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Review of TAP CHI CONG SAN, No 8, Aug 82]

[Text] The August 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN has come off the press. Its editorial, entitled "Improve the Quality of Education," reveals the deficiencies in the quality of education at present and points out that in the coming years all educational sectors must strive to create conditions for enhancing the quality of education in accordance with the party's training objectives, while paying attention to promoting education on various essential tasks in a number of regions.

The editorial also enumerates the decisive economic and social factors in determining requirements in the quality of education and stresses that while enhancing the quality of education, we should pay attention to ideological tasks so as to ensure strict adherence to the party's political line and should continue the movement to promote education on revolutionary ethics and the capacity for knowledge and practice in order to meet the requirements in the new division of labor in the national economy as well as the requirements in the task of class struggle and national defense.

The editorial continues: The raising of the quality of education and promotion thereof requires, first of all, an appropriate improvement in the educational system, the curricula and the training plan. While progressing steadily in the switch to the reformed educational system, we should further improve the existing school system. The general school curricula should be revised to incorporate labor, general technology, and vocation-oriented training. A categorization of training at an earlier stage in general middle schools should be adopted so as to prepare students fully for vocational studies in which technically oriented labor productivity must be highlighted. Meanwhile, the training of exceptionally gifted students should also be improved. The system of vocational schools and technician-training schools should be restructured and consolidated. Also, attention should be paid to opening vocational training classes to serve agricultural production and the production of consumer and export goods. Vocational middle schools, advanced schools and colleges should restudy their training objectives and revise their curricula and training plans accordingly and suit their training systems to the requirements in the related economic zones. We should advance toward building, for each region and each province, centers for training scientific and technical cadres, from the vocational middle school to the college level, in order to make realistic contributions toward fulfilling the scientific and technical training plan for production.

The editorial also deals with questions of stepping up the ideological task in schools, building up the contingent of teachers and educational management cadres, improving the teachers' living conditions, and enhancing school management so as to make schools and classes worthy of their names.

Next is an article entitled, "Build Up the Contingent of Teachers To Meet the Requirements of Reformed Education," by Comrade Nguyen Thi Binh, minister of education. After analyzing the weaknesses and shortcomings of our present contingent of teachers, which are adversely affecting educational undertakings, as well as their causes, the article points out: Pedagogical reforms must be aimed primarily at enhancing the quality of the body of teachers so that the requirements of reformed education will be met, so that this body will be up to political and professional standards and so that it will be capable of keeping abreast with the constant developments of the new society and younger generations. Pedagogical reforms must enhance the revolutionary and scientific characters of the contingent of teachers so as to turn teachers into truly revolutionary fighters on the ideological and cultural fronts, the "soul shapers" [kyx suw taam hoonf] for the younger generation. Pedagogical reforms include many tasks, both long-range and immediate tasks. For the immediate future, we must strengthen the educational task and the management of the contingent of teachers while caring for the teachers' lives and enhancing their social status. We should combat the average achievement mentality and other negative phenomena within the body of teachers and raise their sense of responsibility and their fervor in the performance of tasks. We should simultaneously improve the managerial and control systems and intensify political and ideological indoctrination for teachers. Trade unions and the youth union must further step up the movement: "Each teacher, male or female, is a bright example for students." Local party committee echelons and administrations should consider teachers as party cadres.

The article then discusses some specific tasks that should be carried out with regard to the contingent of teachers.

Also featured in this issue is an article by Comrade Nguyen Van (Chan) on the question of restructuring the economy. The article points out: Seeking by all means to overcome, step by step, the imbalances in the economic structure is an investment-related task, an economic strategy, a matter relating to the art of economic management. With such significance, restructuring the economy and our existing economic structures is an indispensable, fundamental and pressing task. Restructuring the economy creates preconditions for the further development and socialization of our national economy and helps make realistic adjustments to the important components of the economy in its advance toward overcoming the existing economic imbalances.

Restructuring the economy, in essence, bears the nature a strategy for development of social economy and a strategy for economic management. The article then offers a number of measures for the implementation of the economic restructuring.

Next is an article entitled "Thoroughly Grasp the Party's Economic Line; Vigorously Develop Local Economies in the Immediate Stage," by Comrade Nguyen Xuan Huu, secretary of the Phu Khanh provincial party committee. The article expresses the opinions of the local party committee echelons on a number of issues set forth by the fifth party congress: Agricultural developemnt, agroindustrial relations in the immediate stage, and control of capital for the vigorous develop ment of local economies.

This month's issue also carries Comrade Che Viet Tan's article entitled "Renovate the Planning Task at the Central, Local and Grassroots Levels." The article points out: In order to ensure that the managerial echelons at the central, local and grassroots levels can truly exercise control over the economy and truly formulate, harmonize, defend and implement their own plans, we necessarily must practice planning from the grassroots level up, using a new planning mechanism, in which the principles of economic accounting and socialist transactions are thoroughly grasped, to replace the old mechanism which is restrictive, bureaucratic, subsidy-based and increasing less dynamic and efficient. The new planning mechanism is one which attaches importance to the principles of both democrateic centralism and expansion, to both the state-established plan norms and the use of economic levers, which both promotes the creativeness and igenuity of the localities and grassroots units and sets high criteria for discipline and responsibility; which simultaneously strengthens the socialist economic sectors and provides guidance so that the operations of individually owned, privately owned and sideline economic installations will be geared to the objective of the state plan. The renovation of the planning task at all levels in accordance with the above-mentioned spirit will give rise to an improvement in the quality, efficiency and disciplinary nature of plans and will ensure that careful calculations will be made to achieve overall countrywide harmony -- harmony in the sectors, localities and at the grassroots level.

Then comes an article by Comrade Vo Chi Cao dealing with the consolidation and development of economic accounting and the building up of the right of enterprises to financial independence. The implementation of this measure is the best way to eliminate the long-standing practice of granting subsidies. It links the planning system with the system of checking the efficiency and responsibility in implementing state plans and encourages initiative at the grassroots level. The article also mentions the necessary conditions that the state must create in the coming years to help the enterprises practice economic accounting.

Next is an article entitled, "The Population Explosion and Its Impact," by Le Nang An. Through the concrete data presented, the article shows that the vigorous and rapid growth of our country's population has caused a great impact in the fields of food supply, educational development, population and labor distribution, environmental protection, job opportunties, housing drinking water, energy, communications, transport, sanitation, service supply, and so forth.

The article then suggests measures for carrying out our party's and state's population policy in which the first and foremost task is to arouse the consciousness, will, and feelings of everyone in society with regard to this issue.

Next is Hai Dang's article entitled "Build up a Strong, Stable Working Class To Make The Party Strong and Stable." The article points out that within a fraction of cadres and party members there exists a tendency to separated the working class from the party, and recognize only the party's leading role, but not that of the working class, in revolution, thereby slighting the task of building up the article also exposes the strengths, shortcomings and weaknesses of the contingent of workers and mentions the task that should be carried out to create a strong, stable working class.

Also featured in this issue is an article by Pham Thanh introducing Comrade Le Duan's book on socialist collective mastery, an important book which presents a systematic view of the collective mastery system -- one of our party's contributions to the treasure of scientific communist theory -- which clearly shows us the path in gradually building the socialist collective mastery system in line with the level of development in each of our country's stages of revolution and which contributes to helping us further grasp the basic issues in the fifth party congress resolution.

This month's issue also carries Prof Dao Van Tien's article entitled, "Scientific Knowledge Can Be Gained Only Through Correct Self-Teaching Methods." The article exposes the shortcomings of many self-taught personnel and discuss a scientific, efficient self-teaching method.

Next comes an article by Thien Nhanentitled, "Counter the Enemies' Economically Destructive War." After exposing the schemes and tricks used against us in the economic field by our enemies -- primarily the Chinese expansionist-hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists -- the article shows that our struggle against the enemies' economic schemes and tricks is an arduous, decisive and very complex class struggle that is closely related to the political, ideological, cultural and social domains. Therefore, we should raise everyone's consciousness regarding our enemies' multifacited war in general and their economically destructive war in particular so as to heighten vigilance, take preventive measures and wage an effective struggle.

Then comes an article entitled, "Some Questions on Chinese Military Strategy." by Nhuan Vu. The article points out that it is on the basis of a counterrevolutionary political policy that the reactionary forces within the Beijing ruling circles have devised the Chinese military strategy, a strategy advocating the domestic use of the army as a tool to repress the people and those who are opposed to the clique of Maoist followers and to collusion abroad with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionary forces in the implementation of their expansionism and hegemonism, their policy of creating great chaos in the world and in their war preparations to oppose the Soviet Union and Vietnam. That reactionary military strategy has come into being at a time when the Zhongnanhai leaders are incapable of realizing their ambitions by their own means. It manifests, on the one hand, the expansionist and big-nation hegemonistic nature of the reactionary forces within the Beijing ruling circles and, on the other, many hard-to-solve contradictions. Therefore, it certainly will go bankrupt as the Chinese people are awakening to reality and the world's three revolutionary currents are launching furious attacks.

VIETNAM-USSR FISHING COOPERATION -- Since early this year, the Haiphong branch of the Central Marine Products Corporation has received 1,600 tons of sea fish from various Soviet trawlers under a program of cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union. This volume of fish exceeds the plan set for 1982 by more than 100 percent. [Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 21 Aug 82 BK]

FOREST MANAGEMENT BY COOPERATIVES -- To date more than 2.05 million hectares of forests have been turned over to some 4,000 cooperatives in 17 northern provinces and two southern provinces for management and exploitation. Together with the people and state-operated forestry forces, these cooperatives have planted 403,475 hectares of forests in centralized areas and 2 billion trees in various localities. Forests in centralized areas in some mountainous provinces have reportedly begun to supply raw materials for the mining, paper and fiber industries and special products for export. DEFENSE EQUIPMENT ALTERNATIVES DEBATED

Briefing on Harrier Jets

BK250918 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] The manufacturers of the British jump-jet have been telling the Defense Department how the sea Harriers performed in the Falklands war. A Radio Australia reporter in Canberra says that the makers of the Harrier want Australia to buy the aircraft but have been told Australia will hold off until it is clear whether or not the navy is to get a new aircraft carrier. Each Harrier costs $14 million. That's about the same in American dollars.

Report on Aircraft Carrier

[Text] A federal government committee says a new aircraft carrier should not be the first priority for Australia's defense planning. A report of the Joint Committee on Foreign Affairs and Defense says it believes the cost of a new aircraft carrier would be up to $1,000 million with another $500 million for aircraft. The committee points out that cutbacks in spending mean training hours for pilots have been reduced to a minimum for safety and 13 of the navy's 19 Grumman fighter aircraft are in storage.

The report says the defense forces need an airborne early warning system and recommends that navy Skyhawks should be taken out of storage and used as land-based strike aircraft.

LIBERALS DEFEAT CENSURE MOTION IN PARLIAMENT

BK251615 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1130 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] The federal opposition leader, Mr Hayden, says the royal commission into the ship painters and dockers union has blown up in the prime minister's face, unexpectedly revealing large scale tax evasion. During an opposition censure motion against the government in Parliament today, the Labor leader claimed the extent of the fraud revealed in the Costigan report would have been as much as $15 billion. That's about the same in American dollars.

In his report to Parliament, Mr Costigan found that federal officials knew of a major tax evasion scheme in 1973, but because of inaction and negligence, allowed it to flourish without prosecution. He also found the schemes could have been prosecuted under existing laws and that legislation introduced in 1980 was unnecessary.

During the censure motion, the treasurer, Mr Howard, said it would take years for the high court to test the validity of pre-1980 legislation and until then it wouldn't be known whether Mr Costigan's legan opinion was correct. Mr Fraser said he couldn't care if people were caught by new or old legislation as long as they were caught.

The censure motion was defeated on party lines. In the Senate, Democrats are supporting Labor's censure motion and Radio Australia's Canberra office says the result will depend on the vote of an independent senator.

ENTRY VISA FOR FRETILIN LEADER REFUSED

BK260919 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] A representative of the Fretilin nationalist forces in East Timor has been refused an entry visa to Australia.

A spokesman for the federal minister for immigration, Mr Hodges, said Mr (Jose Ramos Horta) had been refused a visa on the recommendation of the foreign affairs minister. He said Mr (Horta) represented an organization which the government did not recognize.

Describing the action as shameful, the chairman of the Australian-East Timor Association, Dr (Preston), said Mr (Horta) had been invited to submit to a Senate standing committee his proposals for a resolution of the East Timor conflict.

The Australian Council for Overseas Aid said the blocking of Mr (Horta's) entry was unacceptable, and would deprive the Senate hearing of a major source of vital information.

VISIT BY FRENCH ENVOY TO NOUMEA EXAMINED

BK231345 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1110 GMT 23 Aug 82

[From the "Australian Insight" program]

[Text] The French high commissioner in New Caledonia, Mr Nucci, has arrived in Australia during his south Pacific tour to explain the program of reforms the French Government is trying to introduce in its south Pacific territory. Political correspondent (John Lombard) reports from Canberra:

[Begin recording] Mr Nucci was the member of the Socialist government of President Mitterrand who was chosen by the president to go to Noumea to bring about a series of reforms in New Caledonia. The Melanesian population at New Caledonia, which represents about 46 percent of all the people on the archipelago, had been urging the metropolitan government in Paris to set a date for independence.

So far, the Mitterrand government has refused, saying only that it will review the statute which governs New Caledonia next year. The French parliament decided last year that the territory would be ruled by a decree from Paris for 1 year, and Mr Nucci was sent to Noumea to implement a number of reforms. These are intended to remove injustices and inequality from such issues as land ownership, economic development and judicial matters. They were described by the French minister for overseas territory, Mr Emmanuelli, as bold and audacious. However, supporters of rightwing European elements were involved [words indistinct] riots last month, and invaded the territorial assembly during a debate on the reform.

The situation in New Caledonia is now calm, and Mr Nucci told a news conference in Canberra that he would not tolerate any further outbreaks of violence, either from the left or from the right. In an interview he told me that his most fervent wish for New Caledonia was that the Melanesians and the Europeans could learn to live together and work out a sensible program of reform.

Mr Nucci had already visited Fiji and New Zealand before coming to Australia. Today he had several hours of talks with Australian officials in the departments of foreign affairs, defense and that of the prime minister. A meeting is scheduled with the minister for foreign affairs, Mr Tony Street, and the deputy leader of the opposition Labor Party and Labor spokesman on foreign affairs, Mr Lionel Bowen.

Mr Nucci told his news conference that the French Government felt it was important that countries in the south Pacific region fully understood the program of reforms the Mitterrand administration was trying to implement. On its part, the Australian Government has already welcomed the moves initiated in Noumea. Mr Street has said that they were going in the right direction but, like Mr Nucci, he too deplored last month's violence. [end recording]

MARCOS RECOVERED, MEETS SRV, THAI OFFICIALS

[Text] The president has fully recovered from his respiratory infection and his exercise tolerance is now normal. However, attending physicians have advised him to limit visitors for the rest of the week. One of the president's few visitors today were the Vietnamese deputy foreign minister and the Thai foreign minister. Jose Carlos has details:

[Begin recording] The president looked healthy and was in a jovial mood when he received Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau this morning at Malacanang. The president told thevisiting Vietnamese official that the close friendly relations between the Philippines and Vietnam will not change, despite the difference in their foreign policies. The chief executive said whatever be the disagreements between the two countries in relation to Kampuchea and ASEAN, the Philippines will continue to strengthen relations with Vietnam. He said that the problems confronting the region can be settled by reason. For his part, the Deputy Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau personally delivered a message from Prime Minister Pham Van Dong to the president. In that message, Pham Van Dong praises the president and the first lady for the reorientation of the Philippine foreign policy towards friendship with other countries. President Marcos also said he was pleased to hear from the Vietnamese leader of his goal to help secure peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Later, the chief executive met Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila of Thailand. They exchanged views on mutual trade problems between the Philippines and Thailand.

Present during the meeting were Prime Minister Cesar Virata and Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo. [end recording]

SURVEILLANCE OF LABOR SUSPECTS CONTINUES

HK270016 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile says surveillance continues on labor and business leaders suspected of maintaining links with communist groups. In a talk with newsmen, Enrile said the watch is necessary to protect the security and the stability of the state, but the defense chief stressed that military action against these labor and business executives is being carefully planned so as not to violate their rights under the law.

SUZUKI ON PRC REJECTION OF TEXTBOOK STATEMENT

The prime minister made the remark in commenting on reports that China has rejected the latest Japanese Government's statement on textbook revisions, which Beijing and other Asian countries said distorted Japan's behavior before and during World War II in Korea and China. Suzuki said since the government clearly said it would correct the content of the textbooks with sincerity, there is no choice but to "fully explain" to China on the government statement.

The government's explanation will be given through diplomatic channels, but the prime minister indicated the government may send a special envoy to China in the future.

Ogawa Comments

OW290921 Tokyo KYODO in English 0855 GMT 29 Aug 82

[Text] Kannami, Shizuoka Pref., Aug 29, KYODO -- Education Minister Heiji Ogawa suggested Sunday Japan might send a special envoy to Beijing seeking Chinese understanding of a government statement on the textbook issue announced Thursday.

Addressing the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's (LDP) national seminar, Ogawa said he was "relieved" at South Korea's acceptance of the statement in which the government pledged "necessary amendments" to school textbook accounts of Japanese actions in neighboring countries in and before World War II.

Referring to China's refusal to accept it, he said the government had done all it could within the framework of Japan's textbook screening system. He said the government would explain its positionto China "sincerely and wholeheartedly" through diplomatic channels.

He later told reporters his ministry had done its best, suggesting it would not reconsider the official statement as sought by China. Asked about the possibility of dispatching a special envoy to Beijing, Ogawa said "It could occur depending on situations."

JSP TO ASK GOVERNMENT TO NEGOTIATE FISHING ACCORD

[Text] Yamaguchi, Aug 28, KYODO -- Japan Socialist Party Chief Ichio Asukata said here Saturday he will ask the government to invite a North Korean negotiator to resume talks on a bilateral fishery agreement that expired at the end of June. Speaking to reporters, he also said he wants the two-year private agreement elevated to the status of a government agreement.

The agreement expired after the Japanese Government rejected a planned visit of North Korea's chief negotiator Hyon Jun-guk to Tokyo. Japan has no diplomatic relations with North Korea. Several Japanese fishing boats have been seized in North Korea's exclusive fishing zone since the agreement lapsed.

SUZUKI REAFFIRMS POLICY ON MILITARY FORCES

[Text] Kannami, Shizuoka Pref., Aug 28, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Saturday reaffirmed his government's policy of not possessing military forces strong enough to threaten Japan's neighbors. The prime minister touched on defense as well as domestic issues such as the country's deficit finances in a speech at the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's national summer seminar.

In the hour-long speech, Suzuki said Japan will "carry out the minimum defense buildup necessary for a nation of peace." He said Japan will continue to uphold its non-three nuclear policy -- not introducing, not manufacturing and not-possessing nuclear weapons -- and will "not have military power (that can be of) a threat to neighboring countries."

The prime minister also referred to the summit of industrially advanced nations in Versailles in June and to the United Nations special General Assembly on disarmament in New York, both of which he attended. He said Japan contributed to reactivating the world economy at the summit, adding that Japan also helped lay the ground for abolishing nuclear weapons and for disarmament.

Speaking on the reconstruction of national finances, the prime minister said the government must make all out efforts to stop issuing national bonds in fiscal 1984. There have been reports that the government may not be able to meet this goal because of a tax revenue shortfall in the current fiscal year ending next March 31 which will exceed yen 5 trillion.

Suzuki was originally scheduled to deliver a speech titled "Choices for the 21st Century" in which he was to say he is keenly aware of the increasing responsibility he has and that he is determined to reconstruct national finances and streamline the government. He apparently decided not to deliver that speech because its tone could be interpreted to mean he is strongly interested in seeking reelection as party president late this year. Suzuki has officially refrained from commenting on whether he will run again for party president.

4 TRILLION YEN OF NATIONAL BONDS TO BE ISSUED

[Text] Kannami, Shizuoka Pref., Aug 30, KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe indicated Monday that the government would additionally issue about yen 4 trillion (dollar 15.5 billion) worth of national bonds to redress an expected revenue shortfall in fiscal 1982, ending March 31.

The indication was a clear sign that the government has in effect abandoned its plan to put its finances back in order by phasing out the flotation of deficit-covering bonds by fiscal 1984, financial sources said. At a Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) lecture meeting held here, Watanabe also said tax increases and a heavier burden on social welfare beneficiaries will be inevitable.

The finance minister stressed the need for a sizable cut in national expenditures. "If Japan does not make the combined efforts, it may fall into an inflationary trend like the 'British disease' of resorting to unreserved issues of national bonds," he said.

Watanabe made the statements in relation to compilation of a fiscal 1983 budget, which he will explain to LDP members Tuesday. This was the first time Watanabe specified an amount in connection with possible additional national bond issues.

But Finance Ministry officials said the amount the minister hinted would not cover a revenue shortfall in the current fiscal year. The shortfall is estimated at yen 5-6 trillion (dollar 19-23 billion).

Watanabe noted it is necessary to prop up the flagging economy by additional public works spending rather than by lowering interest rates. Reduction of interest rates may bring about further depreciation of the yen, he said.

DEFENSE AGENCY DRAWS UP FY 83 BUDGET REQUEST

Major items on the agency's fiscal 1983 shopping list include 20 F-15 jet fighters and 10 P-3C antisubmarine patrol planes. The contracts for the airplanes, other military hardware and defense facilities will compel the government to spend about yen 2.48 trillion (dollar 9.9 billion) in fiscal 1984 and beyond. If the agency's budget is approved by the Diet (Parliament) as it is, defense spending is expected to exceed 1 percent of the gross national product (GNP) during the next fiscal year at the earliest, despite the government's 1976 policy to hold it below that level.

While the United States has reason to be happy with the proposed defense spending, it will draw tough resistance from Japan's opposition parties. Some leftist parties claim Japan's Self-Defense Forces are not needed. The defense budget request came four days before Japanese and U.S. officials meet in Hawaii to discuss bilateral defense cooperation in the western Pacific. The U.S. Government has been persistently calling for Japan's substantial defense buildup.

The agency's shopping list also includes 75 74-model main battle tanks, 18 203-mm self-propelled howitzers and 10 AH-1S antitank helicopters. Most of the weapons will be deployed in the northern island of Hokkaido, considered vulnerable to possible Soviet attack. The agency plans to build up maritime defense capability by newly deploying three destroyers, a submarine, a missile vessel and a large replenishment ship during fiscal 1983.

The proposed budget also seeks yen 61.2 billion (dollar 245 million) in financial contributions to the U.S. forces in this country. This represents an 18.7 percent increase over the current fiscal year.

ROBOTS TO USSR, BULGARIA -- Tokyo, Aug 19, KYODO -- A government-sponsored Japanese firm said Thursday it may start leasing industrial robots to the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and other countries. A spokesman for Japan Robot Leasing Co. of Tokyo said that the way has been cleared for leasing robots to foreign countries now that the governmental Export-Import Bank of Japan agreed to finance such business if it takes the form of "lease and purchase." He said the company has already received leasing inquiries from major business corporations in Australia, Argentina and Taiwan as well as government agencies in the Soviet Union and Bulgaria. Noting that the Soviet Union had asked for leased robots for development of Siberia, the spokesman noted difficulties in such case due to the possibility of violating the regulations of the Coordinating Committee for Export Control (Cocom) and unavailability of robots able to withstand the extreme low temperatures in Siberia. U.S. SOLDIER REPORTED TO CROSS OVER TO DPRK

[Text] Pyongyang, August 28 (KCNA) — PFC. Joseph T. White, belonging to the 3rd Squad, 3rd Platoon, "A" Company, 31.1 battalion, 2nd Division, of the U.S. imperialist aggression army occupying South Korea, crossed the Military Demarcation Line and came over to the northern half of the republic on the morning of August 28.

He sought political asylum, saying that it is a wrong policy for the U.S. Government to send American youths to the far-off Korean soil, an alien land, and force upon them an army life against the Korean people and he had thought it shameful to take part in such aggressive act.

He is now under kind protection of the competent organ.

NODONG SINMUN DENOUNCES CHON'S AFRICAN TOUR

SK290531 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2248 GMT 29 Aug 82

[NODONG SINMUN 29 August commentary: "Sordid Trip of Deception by a Colonial Stooge"]

[Text] The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, the dirty stooge of the U.S. imperialists and flagrant traitor, has recently toured African countries, such as Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal.

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique's African tour was carried out at a time when the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule of South Korea and the puppets' policy depending on the United States have been more strongly denounced and rejected than ever at home and abroad.

In its trip to these countries, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique has pursued the goal of deceiving and mocking public opinion at home and abroad by covering up its nature as a traitor, nation seller, colonial stooge and fascist murderer, of raising its popularity and winning the favor of these African countries by beautifying South Korea to make it appear an independent country so as to emerge from the daily-deteriorating isolation facing it in the international community.

For this reason, its trip to these African countries was carried out in accordance with the aggressive demand of the U.S. imperialists, who are bent on keeping South Korea as their colony and military base. The trip was one of thorough deception staged on the basis of scenario written by the U.S. masters. The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique's babblings in the African countries clearly show this.

Wherever it went on its tour, it unabashedly raved about being thoroughly anticolonial. It is widely known to the world that the U.S. imperialists have been controlling military prerogatives of supreme command and practicing colonial rule in South Korea by occupying it for nearly 40 years. It is none but the U.S. imperialists who are acting as the masters controlling everything in South Korea.

As for the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, it is a stooge well and long trained by the U.S. imperialists and a colonial errand boy who is faithfully executing the U.S. masters' colonial rule, national division and war policy.

It is a preposterous and unseemly act that a sordid colonial stooge of the U.S. imperialists should babble about anticolonialism. If the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique possesses a shred of anticolonialism, it should, first of all, have denounced U.S. imperialism, the source of modern imperialism, and opposed the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule in South Korea. However, because it is the lowest class U.S. stooge, it dared not articulate its condemnation of its masters' colonialism.

It is as ridiculous as a prostitute opposes prostitution that it babbled about anticolonialism.

Also, at every opportunity in its tour, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique ignominiously raved about freedom, peace and prosperity. How can a bayonet-toting military gangster group like the Chon Tu-hwan clique prattle about freedom, peace and prosperity?

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique is a fascist murderer who, with tanks and armored personnel carriers, submerged Kwangju in a sea of blood and turned the whole land of South Korea into a dark world devoid of fundamental freedom and democracy. It is also a war maniac which is daily staging military exercises aimed at attacking us in the air, sea and on ground and the ringleader which has plummeted the South Korean economy into an extreme distress by its various scandals and plundering policy.

How can the puppets who, under instigation of the U.S. imperialists, have turned the whole land of South Korea into a prison cell without bars, a powderkeg of war which can explode at any time, and reduced the people's livelihood to the greatest misery, bring about peace, freedom and prosperity?

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique's prattlings are nothing but deceptive trick to cover up the tragic reality of South Korea and to hide its antipopular crimes which have caused such a tragic reality.

The deceptive acts by the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique have also been exposed in the fact that it is touting deceptive proposals for reunification and a proposal for summit talks between the supreme leaders of the North and South, which have already been denounced and rejected at home and abroad, and is begging for support for them.

The most important and the priority problem arising in solving independently the question of our country's reunification is to force U.S. troops of aggression to withdraw from South Korea and put an end to U.S. intervention in the internal affairs of Korea.

If the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique really hopes for national reunification, it should first of all demand that U.S. troops withdraw from South Korea. The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, however, never mentioned forcing U.S. imperialist troops of aggression to withdraw from South Korea during its current trip to African countries. Instead, it repeatly babbled about such cliches as the so-called national harmony or democratic reunification.

Essentially, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, while repeating that the only way to deal with the North is confrontation and that we should not imagine peaceful reunification, has only staged anticommunist rackets, encouraged confrontation between the North and South and built still higher the wall separating the North and South. In short, it is an intolerable national splittist.

It is an ignominous act of displaying the head of a sheep and then selling dog meat that such a national traitor who is bent on national division should beautify himself as an advocate of reunification by touting deceptive proposals for reunification abroad.

The proposal for a simultaneous UN admission by the North and South advocated by the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan is a deceptive splittist proposal and a plot designed to fabricate two Koreas and perpetuate national division. The deceptive and fraudulent nature of the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique is well exposed in its slandering of us. In a bid to obstruct our patriotic stand for reunification and the great overseas influence of the most realistic and fair proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique has uttered such vicious words as the North's policy of reunifying the South by use of force and about its military buildup.

As for the threat of southward invasion frequently cited by the puppets, it is a fabrication to deceive public opinion at home and abroad and a hackneyed slogan to cover up its vicious plot for a war of northward invasion.

When the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique was prattling about the North's policy of reunifying the South by use of force, the northern half of the Korean Peninsula was vigorously creating the speed of the 1980's generating from the struggle sites of the great socialist construction for national prosperity. The South was engaged in frenzied powder-reeking war exercise rackets on the assumption of a southward invasion.

Through this stark reality, people clearly see that the threat of invasion comes from the South.

Describing itself as a partner of the developing countries of Africa, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique babbled about mutual cooperation and promoting friendly relations in its current trip. It even made preposterous remarks that it supports the cause of the Namibian and Palestinian peoples. This is a poor masquerade.

It is well known to the world that the South Korean puppet cliques have been an enemy of the people of the newly emerging countries such as the peoples of the African and Arab countries as twin stooges of the U.S. imperialists, along with the South African racists and the Israeli Zionists.

Employed as mercenary troops of the U.S. imperialists, the puppets have massacred the people who rose in struggle to liberate their nation in the Southeast Asian jungles, stood alongside the Israeli aggressors against the Arab peoples by sending aircraft pilots whenever wars broke out in the Middle East and opposed the struggle of the South African people for national liberation by establishing friendly relations with the South African racists and sending a puppet military advisory group.

Despite this, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, assuming another shape, has tried to overcome its isolation in these countries by babbling as if it were supporting the African and Arab peoples in opposition to the South African racists and Zionists.

However, the Chon Tu-hwan ring, a dirty stooge of the imperialists, is now executing the aggressive policy of the imperialists. It has not been able to avoid denunciation from the peoples of the African countries.

No matter what sweet words he may have uttered during his tour of the African countries, he has not been able to cover up his wicked nature as a servant of the imperialists and an enemy of the Korean and African peoples.

No matter how much powder it may apply to make it appear beautiful, a crow can never transform itself into a white heron. Because of its nature and constitution as a dirty stooge of the U.S. imperialists and fascist murderer, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is not qualified as a party to talk to reasonable men and dignified, sovereign countries.

It is a political farce that a brutal murderer who has stained his hands with the blood shed by his fellow countrymen, a lone stooge who is denounced and cursed by the people of the world and a dirty colonial stooge who is capable of prolonging his political life under the protection of the bayonets of the imperialist masters, should babble about being a partner or promoting a friendly relationship.

It is also ridiculous that the stooge who has offered the South Korean economy to the U.S. and Japanese monopoly capitalists and who has to beg for millions of tons of rice to prolong its life on top of a mountain of debts totaling billions and billions of dollars should prattle about cooperation.

Hidden in such empty words are the wicked intention to earn a few handfuls of foreign exchange by exporting a labor force and to bolster the weak economy by inducing fuel and raw materials at a cheaper price.

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique's diplomacy, designed to enhance its popularity under a mask to cover up its dirty face, will not work. Needless to say, such diplomacy will become an intolerable insult to people who are advocating independence and struggling against all kinds of subjugation and domination.

The more desperate it becomes, the more the dirty nature of the Chon Tu-hwan ring will expose itself before the world. Its efforts will hasten its isolation in the international community.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, a dirty stooge of the imperialists and a fascist murderer running counter to the trend of times of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence, cannot avoid destruction.

SOUTH KOREAN MOBILIZATION EXERCISES SCORED

SK290844 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0837 GMT 29 Aug 82

Meanwhile, the fascist clique is staging "training of rehabilitation" of the bridge spanning the Han River between Yongsan and Noryangjin in Seoul from August 26 with the mobilization of a large number of personnel and heavy equipment.

VRPR: NUCLEAR WAR DANGER CREATED BY U.S.

SK291304 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Talk on "The Danger of Nuclear War Mounting on the Korean Peninsula" from "Hour for Compatriots Abroad" program]

[Text] Compatriots abroad: Today's international situation is being aggravated because of the Reagan regime, which is pursuing a policy of a military buildup and military confrontation under the slogans of military superiority and the rebirth of a strong United States.

In particular, the situation of the Korean Peninsula, which is a main target of the U.S. global strategy along with the Middle East and the Persian Gulf, has reached a very dangerous stage because of U.S. maneuvers to trigger a new aggression war and even a nuclear war in this region at any time. In fact, the Korean Peninsula, one of the main targets of the aggressive global strategy of the Reagan regime, has become a region where the possibility of a war breaking out is most clearly seen.

Successive regimes of the United States have realized the geopolitical importance and role of the Korean Peninsula in the implementation of U.S. global strategy and have attached great military and strategic significance to this. The U.S. war maniacs, including former U.S. President Truman, have regarded the Korean Peninsula as an ideal war ground guaranteeing success in their strategy in Asia and as a strategic base. Proceeding from this, following World War II, the United States hastily occupied South Korea illegally. Using it as a key base, it has dreamed of occupying and dominating the whole Korean Peninsula.

To realize such a dirty ambition, the United States not only has enforced its policy of making South Korea a colony and military base by establishing anticommunist, terrorist and dictatorial regimes in this land but has also frantically accelerated preparations for a war of northward invasion.

Such schemes of preparing for a war of northward invasion have been even more unscrupulous lately. The danger of war created by the Reagan regime is increasing with each passing day.

The deployment of tactical nulcear weapons in South Korea reveals the nature of aggression and bellicosity of the United States, which has continuously brought in nuclear weapons, openly clamoring that it will not rule out the use of nuclear weapons whenever the opportunity presented itself. As is widely known, an announcement of the Brookings Institution of the United States and military affairs experts in Japan and Western countries have already reported that 1,000 nuclear warheads are now deployed in South Korea. Such a large number of nuclear weapons -- which are said to be the equivalent of 1,700 times the power of the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan -- are capable of killing 160 million people. In other words, the nuclear weapons deployed in South Korea can destroy our nation as many as three times over.

Such huge amounts of nuclear warheads have been deployed in the area along the demilitarized zone and many other areas, including Ulsan and Kunsan, and in military bases in Japan and the Pacific.

The U.S. imperialists not only have deployed such huge amounts of nuclear weapons but also have frequently staged nuclear war exercises simulating the North as the target of a nuclear attack. The South Korea-U.S. joint military exercise codenamed Team Spirit staged by the U.S. imperialists annually can be said to be a preliminary war to complete preparations for a nuclear war of northward invasion.

All facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialists are attempting to trigger a nuclear war on the Korean Peninsula, regarding this region as a test site for a limited nuclear war.

The foreign press have reported that the Korean Peninsula is in danger of being the first test site and the first actual site of a limited nuclear war. This is by no means accidental. Because of the criminal war policy of the Reagan regime, our nation is in a very grave situation in which it may become entangled in the calamity of nuclear war.

Our people remember the miserable scenes of Hiroshima, Japan, where an atomic bomb was dropped for the first time in history by the U.S. imperialists 37 years ago. If a nuclear war breaks out in this region in accordance with the Reagan regime's strategy in Korea, who will be the victims of the nuclear war? Our people and the people in the North and the South will be the victims.

Compatriots abroad: Because of the U.S. aggressors' occupation of South Korea, our people have been suffering the tragedy of national division for over 37 years, failing to achieve the national reunification which they so ardently desire.

Enduring such a tragedy of national division is a deplorable thing. Nevertheless, our people still have to face the danger of national annihilation because of a nuclear war. Should we idly watch such a situation develop?

Everyone, if he sincerely loves the country and the nation, wants national reunification, does not want to live as a slave in a U.S. colony and does not want to become a victim in a nuclear war, should rise up in the sacred anti-U.S. national salvation struggle to make the U.S. forces withdraw from this land, to end the colonial rule of the United States and to eliminate the danger of a nuclear war in this region.

Withdrawing the U.S. forces from South Korea, withdrawing the nuclear weapons from this land, ending the U.S. colonial rule in this land and preventing the danger of a nuclear war are an ardent task assigned to our people and a precondition for achieving peace on the Korean Peninsula and its peaceful reunification. By actively waging a nationwide anti-U.S. struggle for independence to regain human dignity and national sovereignty, the people of all walks of life should more vigorously struggle to liquidate U.S. colonial rule and to establish an independent and democratic new society and a reunified fatherland without foreign forces.

VRPR: LETTER FOR ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE CIRCULATED

[Fatherland news from "Hour for Compatriots Abroad" program]

[Text] At a time when anti-U.S. and antigovernment sentiment is daily increasing in the fatherland, a letter of declaration for anti-U.S. struggle for independence in 1982 in the name of the fraternal association of students in Kwangju is being circulated in Seoul, Pusan, Taegu, Kwangju and Taejon. This letter of declaration has aroused support and sympathy among students and citizens.

The letter of declaration for anti-U.S. struggle for independence for 1982 points out: Thirty-seven years have passed since the country was divided into North and South. This division has been frozen into a permanent division. This national tragedy is a result of the U.S. occupation of South Korea and traitor Chon Tu-hwan's schemes hindering reunification.

The letter of declaration appeals to students and people throughout the country to rise up in the anti-U.S. struggle to end the U.S. occupation of South Korea and to achieve national reunification.

On the other hand, according to a report, members of an underground club of the students of a certain university in Pusan recently held a mock trial of traitor Chon Tu-hwan and burned him in effigy. Chon Tu-hwan is attempting to execute and massacre those youths and students who lifted the torch of anti-U.S. national salvation by setting fire to the U.S. Cultural Center.

On that day, the students sentenced traitor Chon Tu-hwan to death, branding him a special traitor, and burned an effigy of Chon Tu-hwan on the spot. Following this, the students sent a message to Chongwadae in which they said: "You have already been executed in the name of the people. You should admit all your crimes you have committed before the nation and go to hell."

It has been belatedly learned that on 20 March the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which sentenced to capital punishment and severe penalties the patriots who set fire to the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan to oppose the military occupation and colonial rule of South Korea by the United States and to make our peoples' anti-U.S. struggle for independence known to the world, distributed an announcement and reference materials prepared and fabricated by the National Security Planning Agency in connection with the Pusan arson case to newspaper companies and other press organs and forced these press organs to report them. This incident is arousing great indignation among the people.

According to this report, the materials distributed by the National Security Planning Agency included materials for questions and answers for use in a press conference and for use by personages appearing on radio and television.

These materials for questions and answers were prepared beforehand so that at the press conference reporters could not raise questions other than the prepared ones. Supplementary reference news data were also distributed to reporters in addition to materials for questions and answers so they could not quote any other data other than these and could not find the truth of the case independently. Furthermore, the Chon Tu-hwan ring forced newspaper editors to write the titles and subtitles of news articles on the arson case within limitations designated by the National Security Planning Agency.

Thus, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is trying to brand the patriots involved in this case as hooligans and block the anti-U.S. aspiration for independence of our people with false reports full of slander and fabrications.

NODONG SINMUN EXPOUNDS ON PROPOSAL FOR DCRK

[NODONG SINMUN 28 August special article: "The Establishment of the DCRK Is a True Way for Solving the Question of Reunification"]

[Text] The proposal for reunification of the fatherland through the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song continues to elicit a wide response at home and abroad because of its justness.

Voices supporting and welcoming this proposal and voices calling for an earlier realization of it are daily growing among the people of our country and people of the world. This is because the proposal for the establishment of the DCRK has elucidated the most correct way to solve the question of reunification and the national question in our country by reflecting the national aspiration, the concrete reality of our country and the interests of the North and South.

Only when a nation solves national questions in a correct way can its people maintain dignity and independence and achieve national prosperity. The question of reunification in our country is a matter of putting an end to intervention by external force in the internal affairs of Korea, realizing the complete sovereignty of our people throughout the whole nation, eliminating distrust and confrontation between the North and South and achieving national unity.

In a country like ours whose territory is artificially divided by outside forces and where different ideas and systems exist in the North and South, solving the national question emerges as a very difficult and complicated matter.

But putting forth a new proposal to reunify the fatherland through the establishment of the DCRK, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has elucidated a most correct way for a successful solution to such a difficult and complicated question.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The proposal to reunify the fatherland through the establishment of the DCRK newly put forth at the sixth party congress is the most reasonable, just and realistic proposal for national reunification.

The proposal to found a confederal state put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a patriotic proposal for reunification which has placed national interests at a premium, having them take precedence over ideas and systems. The nation takes precedence over ideas and systems. If we continue to be separated into North and South without achieving complete national sovereignty, our people in each half of the country will not be able to achieve independent development.

The proposal to found a confederal state is a most reasonable and realistic proposal enabling us to solve the national question, leaving the two contradictory [sangban toenun] systems in the North and South.

The proposal to establish the DCRK is an all the more reasonable and realistic proposal for solving the national question in that it enables us to achieve the complete sovereignty of our people. Complete national severeignty will be achieved only when we put an end to all sorts of intervention in the internal affairs of our people by outside forces and when we independently solve all the problems arising before the country and nation.

The confederal government elucidated in the proposal for the establishment of the DCRK is an independent government which is to sweep away throughout the nation all sorts of intervention in the internal affairs by outside forces and dependence on foreign forces, to exercise complete sovereignty in domestic and external activities and solve all problems arising in the national politics in the basic interests of the Korean people and in accordance with reality of the country. This shows that the proposal for the establishment of the confederal state is a just proposal reflecting the fundamental demands necessary to realizing the nation's complete sovereignty.

The proposal for the establishment of the DCRK is one for the solution to the national question in that it enables us to achieve nation's united development and prosperity. Only when a nation is achieving united development and prosperity in conformity with its aspirations and demands can it maintain its independence, dignity and honor.

In order to achieve our nation's united development and prosperity, we should put an end to national division and achieve national reunification. When we have reunified our fatherland, we can achieve united development by mobilizing national resources, technology and strength and wisdom and open a firm prospect for national prosperity.

The proposal for the establishment of a confederal state elucidates a short cut to lessen the differences between the North and South -- the result of a continued division -- and to achieve a united development of the country and people by establishing a unified state, leaving the two contradictory systems existing in the North and South.

It is expected that the DCRK will place the overall interests of the country and people at a premium and will discuss common problems in the interests of the country and people. It also expected that the governments in the two areas will make efforts to lessen the differences of the North and South and for a united development of the nation.

The proposal for reunifying the country by founding the DCRK is a unique one which meets the situation in our country. Confederal states known so far have taken the form of national and state confederations based on identical social and political systems. Experience up to now suggested that mutually contradicting social systems could not exist in a confederal state.

The proposal for forming a confederal state is a chuche-type, patriotic one which enables us to achieve the cause for the country's reunification by recognizing and tolerating two mutually differing two systems, taking into consideration the situation in our country, the basic interests of the people, the desire of our people and the situation in areas surrounding our country. This new proposal is a most rational and practical one which can be accepted by those who love the country and people. It meets the desire of the world's people for fairly resolving the Korean question.

Voices have been raised at home and abroad in demanding the implementation of the proposal for founding a confederal state. This proves the justness and vitality of this proposal.

To resolve the national question in our country, we should force the U.S. imperialist aggressors to withdraw from South Korea and should end their maneuvers meddling in the internal affairs of our country.

While hindering the reunification of our country by occupying South Korea for 37 years, the U.S. imperialists, brazenly meddling in the internal affairs of Korea, have wickedly maneuvered to perpetuate division and fabricate two Koreas. To hinder the reunification of our country, the U.S. imperialists have converted South Korea into a nuclear base by increasing aggressive forces in South Korea and by shipping to it mass destruction weapons, including nuclear weapons. To justify their occupation policy, while continuously kicking up war exercise rackets against us, they have heightened tension on the Korean Peninsula.

Proceeding from an aggressive aim of perpetuating the division of Korea at any cost and of continuously holding on to South Korea as their colony, the U.S. imperialists, while strengthening their maneuvers for aggression and war, have obstinately hindered the reunification of our country. To conceal its policy for colonial control over South Korea, the United States has called it an independent country. However, the U.S. imperialist aggressors are the real rulers in South Korea who, seizing power, including the prerogative of supreme military command, have exercised influence over everything there. The South Korean regime is a tool executing the U.S. imperialists' policy for colonial control.

The U.S. imperialists are the ringleaders who have hindered the reunification of our country and violated the sovereignty of our people. Ending the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea and thwarting their policy for aggression are keys to resolving the national question in our country. The question of the reunification of our country is an internal affair which can only be settled by our people. The U.S. imperialists have no grounds whatsoever for meddling in the internal affairs of our country. The U.S. imperialist aggressors should not meddle in the question of the reunification of our country, immediately withdraw from South Korea and take their hands off Korea.

To achieve the country's reunification, we, along with forcing the U.S. imperialists to withdraw from South Korea, should thwart and check the maneuvers for division by the Chon Tu-hwan ring -- their stooges. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is a most wicked executor of the U.S. imperialists' policy for colonial rule. Of the successive puppets in South Korea, it is a group of the most brazen splittists.

Deep-rooted in South Korea today is the rancor of the South Korean people against the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring -- their stooges. Their anti-U.S. struggle for independence has intensified with each passing day. The South Korean people clearly understand that only by eliminating the fascist, military colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring and by founding the DCRK can they completely restore national sovereignty, achieve the democratization of South Korean society and extricate themselves from today's disasters. Upholding slogans reading "Yankees must withdraw," and "Let us overthrow Chon Tu-hwan," they are resolutely waging an anti-U.S. struggle to achieve independence and democratization and to oppose fascism.

The South Korean people's anti-U.S. and anti-fascist nation-saving struggle reflects the unanimous desire of the people for building in the fatherland a single reunifiefd Korea -- a society of independence where there are no foreign aggressors and traitors.

Implementing the proposal for founding the DCRK at the earliest possible date is the vital demand of the people and is a guarantee for resolving the reunification question — a national question. We will make every effort to fulfill the long-cherished desire of the people for leading a happy life in a reunified fatherland free from fascism, treacheries and division. No force can thwart the desire of our people for the fatherland's reunification. Nor can it block our advance to completely resolve our national question. By founding the DCRK through smashing the hindering maneuvers of the enemy at home and abroad, our people will surely accomplish the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification -- the sacred cause of solving the national question.

SEOUL SINMUN ON POSSIBILITY OF REAGAN VISIT

[Editorial: "The Rumor About President Reagan's Visit to Korea"]

[Text] It has been learned that the Korean Government has been informally notified on U.S. President Reagan's plan to visit Korea. According to the report from the Washington correspondent of this newspaper, President Reagan plans to make official visits to allied countries in east Asia, including Korea, during the first half of next year and accordingly, the U.S. administration is discussing detailed itineraries and agenda with the related countries.

We wish to, first of all, express full support for President Reagan's plan to visit east Asia, because it is important today for the leader of the United States, which has close relations directly and indirectly with the countries in this region, to make a breakthrough in the diplomatic field by paying a visit to the region.

As is known, U.S. policy toward east Asia is "to develop the tripartite cooperative system among the United States, Japan and Communist China to cope with the Soviet Union." This was the so-called logic of one versus three. In other words, the United States attempted to check the Soviet policies of expansionism and of upsetting the status quo with the tripartite cooperative system and to maintain peace and stability in east Asia based on it.

However, the U.S. logic of one versus three has not been effective. It has been revealed, first of all, that Communist China has had difficulties in building modern military strength capable of fulfilling its part within the tripartite system because of its domestic poverty. At the same time, Japan is hesitant to increase its military forces to the level the United States expected. The ambiguous policy of the Reagan administration toward Communist China and Taiwan had the side effect of applying the brakes on the growth of the tripartite cooperative system. The clash of economic interests between the United States and Japan also exerted a similar influence.

In this situation, the Soviet Union actively maneuvered for "reconciliation" with Communist China. Accordingly, a delicate change began taking place in the attitude of Communist China toward the Soviet Union.

The possibility of "reconciliation" between Communist China and the Soviet Union, which was laughed away even a few years ago, has been cautiously reviewed recently by not a small group of experts, showing a new trend of the times.

At this point, diplomatic observers stress the necessity of new "resolution" on the part of the United States. In essence, they propose that the United States, reconsidering its previous policy on east Asia, launch a new stable international order with more durability. Its new choice would be none other than the common body of the Pacific rim. As stressed many times by President Chon, the center of international policies is moving toward the Pacific area. Thus, it is desirable that the countries in the Pacific rim establish a firm regional cooperative body transcending their ideologies and systems.

When a regional cooperative body develops soundly based on mutual respect for sovereignty and on the principle of friendship and reciprocity, it will surely serve as a breakwater against the forces distrubing peace and as an effective guarantee for the peace and prosperity of the countries within the region.

From this standpoint, we firmly believe that President Reagan's visit to Korea would be an occasion for frank discussions between the leaders of Korea and the United States for the advance of the Pacific era.

The Fifth Republic, realizing its role as a motive force of the new Pacific era, firmly believes that a consensus of views on this matter between the leaders of Korea and the United States and a common program designed to this end would greatly contribute to peace and prosperity in East Asia.

Needless to say, this is the sound direction in which to develop Korea-U.S. relations, marking the centennial of their establishment.

JAPAN'S OFFICIAL STAND ON TEXTBOOKS QUESTIONED

SK280102 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 27 Aug 82 p 2

[Editorial: "We Will Watch the Future of Japan"]

[Text] With what attitude should we accept the Japanese Government's official view on its distortion of historical facts? What troubles us above all is the part of the textbooks which will be used in 1983. We have urged Japan to immediately correct the distorted historical facts on Korea in the textbooks before they are distributed among students, who are sensitive. In its memorandum to our government and in the statement issued by the chief cabinet secretary in a press conference, the Japanese Government has announced its policy that, because of the textbook review system, it will correct erroneous parts in 1985. By this, the Japanese Government means that it will officially respond to our demand for correcting distorted historical facts on the condition that it will do so not immediately, but 3 years hence.

Japan's textbook review system prescribes that textbooks may be corrected on a 3-year basis. This means that the textbooks in question can be corrected in 1986. The Japanese Government intends to use corrected textbooks not 3 years later, but 2 years later -- that is, in 1985, 1 year ahead of the scheduled year. It said it will conduct on-the-spot correction of errors by 1985 by issuing education bulletins.

In view of the attitude taken by some Japanese politicians and government officials in doggedly opposing correction and in outrageously defining the demand for correction as interference in Japan's internal affairs, we accept as a positive step the attitude of recognizing the distortion of historical facts as an erroneous act and of promising to take corrective action.

We regard as a sincere attitude the Japanese Government's official recognition of its distortion of historical facts as an erroneous act and its vow that it will assume responsibility for correction. The Japanese Government said it would not correct textbooks immediately because of the textbook review system and strife between the rightwing and leftwing forces.

We doubt whether the Japanese Government, without facing serious objection, can correct textbooks 2 years hence, when a conservative trend might increase, as we view the present trends in Japan. What situation will develop if the education minister appointed 2 years from now is more conservative than the incumbent minister and if the former is nostalgic about the restoration of militarism? Thus, the biggest problem in our evaluation of the Japanese Government's official stand is whether we can trust it.

The Japanese Government has conveyed its decision to our government in the form of a memorandum. Contrary to our government's use of a note in submitting its demands, the Japanese Government has used a high-level diplomatic gesture. The Japanese Government has promised that it will conduct on-the-spot correction of erroneous sections for 3 years and that it will strive to correctly reflect in school education and in textbooks the feeling of repentance for its past deeds as clarified in the South Korea-Japan joint statement issued after the signing of the basic treaty between the two countries. This is an attempt to convince us that Japan will take corrective action 3 years from now.

When a country deals with foreign affairs, just as in handling domestic politics, from time to time it bends its principles on the pretext of pragmatism. Our government has accepted Japan's official stand as affirmative. If Japan regards this as concession as far as our principles are concerned, it will make a grave mistake. We will never withdraw or concede as far as our principle of defending our dignity by correcting distorted historical facts is concerned.

For the sake of good will and friendly relations between the ROK and Japan, we do not want to drive the Suzuki Cabinet into a corner. Instead, we are greatly concerned about a climate in Japan in which the spirit of aggression prevails against us because of the distortion of historical facts. Therefore, we do not consider that the issue concerning the distortion of historical facts will be settled by the Japanese Government's memorandum in which it said it will take corrective action 3 years later.

What we have learned from Japan's distortion of historical facts is that, while continuously making every possible effort to correct distorted historical facts, we should be vigilant against Japan's nostalgia about its past -- the cause of the issue.

In addition to those already found to be erroneous, we should strive to correct distorted historical facts which will possibly be found in the textbooks of Japanese schools of all levels. To achieve this, we should cooperate and make joint efforts with Japanese academic circles and government authorities.

In maintaining relations with foreign countries, Japan should draw a lesson from the issue. If Japan forgets its past and behaves arrogantly to its neighboring countries, this will only result in its international isolation.

CHON CONCLUDES STATE VISIT TO AFRICAN COUNTRIES

Communique With Senegal

SK270246 Seoul YONHAP in English 0112 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Dakar, Aug 26 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan and his Senegalese counterpart Abdou Diouf agreed Thursday that Korea and Senegal would start negotiations at a proper time on the early conclusion of bilateral pacts on maritime transport, prevention of double taxation and investment guarantee.

In a joint communique issued by the two presidents following Chong's state visit to Senegal, the two leaders also agreed that Korea and Senegal should promote their cooperative relations. The communique said the official delegations of both sides reaffirmed the need for accelerated "South-South" cooperation, and discussed concrete programs, which can contribute to the development of Senegal.

Korea will participate in the fifth international fair of Dakar in November 1982, and Senegal will take part in similar exhibitions to be held in Seoul, according to the communique. It said the two presidents expressed the hope that Korea would become a member of the African Development Bank in an effort to expand Korean-African cooperation.

The two leaders reviewed the latest developments in the southern region of Africa, and strongly condemned the apartheid of South Africa and its illegal occupation of Namibia. They agreed to sign a protocol for the enforcement of a bilateral cultural agreement concluded in Seoul in 1979, the communique said.

The Senegalese president accepted President Chon's invitation to visit Korea, the date of the visit to be decided later through diplomatic channels, it said.

Trade With Senegal Discussed

SK270152 Seoul YONHAP in English 0118 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Dakar, Aug 26 (YONHAP) -- Korean and Senegalese business leaders met Wednesday to explore expanded bilateral economic ties in the wake of the summit talks between President Chon Tu-hwan and his Senegalese counterpart Abdou Diouf. During the meeting, held at the Dakar Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Korean side expressed hope for active participate in major development projects envisaged in the Senegalese four-year economic development plan.

Among 40-odd Korean businessmen who attended the meeting were Chong Su-chang, president of the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and Chong Chu-yong, charman of the Federation of Korean Industries.

A top Dakar business leader said that the Korean chief executive's visit here was expected to accelerate economic cooperation between the two countries.

The Korean side decided to send a working-level mission of the Korea Federation of Small Businesses to Senegal to pave the way for joint ventures and technical cooperation between the two countries. Both sides also agreed on possible extention of financial facilities from Korea to Senegal for the African country's purchase of Korean fishing vessels. Senegalese business circles expressed their willingness to form joint ventures with Korean firms in the fields of power generation, oil refining, housing construction materials and dyeing, and import 30-odd Korean commodities including electric and electronic products, farm tools and medical supplies.

Stopover in Las Palmas

[Text] Las Palmas, August 26 (YONHAP) -- Korean President Chon Tu-hwan arrived in this Spanish island Thursday afternoon for a two-day stopover at the end of his state visits to four African nations -- Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal.

At the airport, the president and First Lady Yi Sun-cha were greeted by Korean Ambassador to Spain Yon Ha-ku and Spanish military commanders and Las Palmas officials. About 500 Korean nationals on the island, a base for Korean deep-sea fishermen, were also at the airport, waving flags to greet their president.

Before leaving Dakar, Senegal, earlier in the day, Chon issued a press statement in which he said he is "very satisfied" that the four African nations have firmly expressed their willingness "to join hands with us in our resolute determination to open a new era of mutual cooperation."

Chon is to leave here Saturday for Canada, the last destination of his two-week overseas tour.

FOREIGN MINISTRY CONDEMNS PRC 'ILL WILL' TO SRV

BK290321 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1445 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Aug (SPK) -- The spokesman of the PRK Foreign Ministry today issued a statement condemning Beijing's ill will regarding the Vietnamese proposal to cease all armed provocations and hostile activities along the Sino-Vietnamese border on the occasion of the national days of the two countries.

The full text of the statement reads:

On 14 August 1982 the SRV Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent a message to China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs asking it to agree to cease all armed provocations and hostile activities along the border of the two countries from 0000 on 27 August 1982 to 0000 on 8 October 1982, Hanoi time, in order to create favorable conditions for the peoples in the Sino-Vietnamese border region to celebrate their national days on 2 September and 1 October in security and peace.

The constructive proposals put forward by the Vietnamese side in response to the aspirations of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples to contribute to reducing tension at the border and leading toward good relations between the two countries were, on the contrary, completely rejected by the Chinese side on 26 August 1982. Despite this rejection, however, the Vietnamese side has declared a unilateral cease-fire.

All of this shows that in the past as well as at present the Chinese ruling circles persist in maintaining their big-nation hegemonist-expansionist, bellicose and aggressive position and remain indifferent to the desire for peace of their own people as well as that of the neighboring countries in order to intensify tension and instability along the border between the two countries as well as with other countries in the region.

This is regrettable. The three Indochinese peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos have always preserved the tradition of coexisting peacefully with the fraternal Chinese people, but the Chinese ruling circles always stubbornly insist on opposing this offer.

The government and people of the PRK declare that they very firmly support the SRV's good will proposal for security along the Vietnam-China border. They resolutely condemn the incompatible and dangerous attitude of the Chinese leadership and demand that it put an end to all provocative activites in order to ensure a peaceful life for the peoples at the Vietnam-China border.

KONG KORM PAYS VISIT TO PDRY, ETHIOPIA

PDRY Visit 17-20 Aug

BK280700 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1450 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 25 Aug (SPK) -- Kong Korm, deputy minister of foreign affairs and special envoy of Chairman Heng Samrin, arrived in Aden on 17 August for a visit to the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen [PDRY], according to a report from the capital of Yemen.

He was greeted at the airport by Bamasade Abdula Abouta, deputy minister of foreign affairs, and other personalities. Also present were SRV Ambassador Tran Viet Dung and the acting charge d'affairs of the USSR accredited to the PDRY.

During his stay, Kong Korm was received by Mahmud Nigasbu, under secretary of the Yemen Socialist Party Central Committee, and Salim Salih Muhammad, minister of foreign affairs. Kong Korm transmitted a letter from Chairman Heng Samrin to Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad.

The leaders of the PDRY affirmed their total support for the PRK and the peace initiatives concerning Southeast Asia put forward by the sixth conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers.

A reception was hosted by the PDRY deputy foreign minister in honor of his Kampuchean counterpart.

The special envoy of the chairman of the PRK Council of State left the PDRY on 20 August for a visit to Ethiopia.

Arrives in Ethiopia 20 Aug

BK280707 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0359 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Aug (SPK) -- Chairman Heng Samrin's special envoy, Kong Korm, deputy minister of foreign affairs, arrived in socialist Ethiopia on 20 August following his visit to the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.

He was greeted on his arrival by Deputy Minister Tibebu Behele and other cadres of Ethiopia's Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The ambassador of Vietnam and the USSR accredited to socialist Ethiopia were also present.

During a meeting with Ethiopian Minister of Foreign Affairs Felleke Gedle-Giorgis, Kong Korm handed him a letter from Chairman Heng Samrin addressed to Ethiopian President Mengistu Haile Mariam. Kong Korm informed the Ethiopian foreign minister of the situation in Kampuchea and described the initiatives taken by Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos in order to reestablish peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Felleke Gedle-Giorgis affirmed his total support for the PRK in its struggle against the maneuvers of the reactionaries both inside and outside the country. He stressed that the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" of reactionary Khmers headed by Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan is in reality none other than the Pol Pot gang in disguise. He pledged to do his utmost to make known the real situation in Kampuchea and affirmed Ethiopia's soldiarity with Kampuchea in the struggle against their common enemy.

ROMANIAN LEADERS' WELCOME FOR SIHANOUK SCORED

["Commentary: A Not Too Praiseworthy Act" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Aug (SPK) -- During his trip to rally people to serve the interests of the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionist-hegemonists, Sihanouk stopped over in the Socialist Republic of Romania between 15 and 18 August where, as "president of Democratic Kampuchea," he received "a warm welcome" from Romanian leaders.

It was a culpable act on the part of the Romanian leaders,who are fully aware of the true nature of the "Democratic Kampuchea" represented by Sihanouk. It was as true a hell as could ever exist in the civilized world as more than 3 million Kampucheans perished in different forms of massacre of which only Hitler could be jealous! Social and economic structures were disrupted and done away with, schools were transformed into prisons and people lived like animals and slaves.

Furthermore, it is widely known that the ruling clique of "Democratic Kampuchea" was the cat's paw of the Chinese expansionists as the Pol Pot gang subjected Kampuchea to this experiment in Maoist strategy -- one of the most reactionary in the world. This archcriminal undertaking was broken halfway by the people's uprising with the assistance of our brothers from Vietnam. Attempts over the past more than 3 years to bring the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang back to power have also been frustrated.

Chinese expansionism in collusion with U.S. imperialism and international reaction thus turned to the "Sihanouk card" by making him president of a "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" in order to avoid the anticipated collapse of the last support they still enjoy at the United Nations. Therefore, as the well-known Australian journalist Wilfred Burchett has observed "...Pressures exerted on him (Sihanouk) by Washington, Beijing and the ASEAN countries -- all in the Washington-Beijing orbit -- and his illusions and nostalgia for power have led him to take the fatal step of aligning himself with the worst enemies of the Kampuchean people..." Sihanouk, retrieved thus from the trash can of history by Chinese expansionism and U.S. imperialism, is only Pol Pot wearing a mask: a Pol Pot disguised and manipulated by Beijing and international reaction. A 20 August cable of the Italian news agency ANSA was reveling in this regard when it noted that "Sihanouk, who usually lives in Pyongyang, has traveled frequently to Beijing since he became president of the tripartite government."

The reception granted to Pol Pot's Sihanouk by the leaders of the Socialist Republic of Romania was therefore in difiance of the will of the Kampuchean people who are determined to opposed categorically the return of the genocidal regime under Sihanouk's label. Not only does this Romanian policy fail to contribute to easing the existing tension in Southeast Asia but it also runs against the world movement for peace, national independence and socialism.

KAMPUCHEA LAUDS 'SUCCESS' OF ASSEMBLY SESSION

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Warmly Acclaim the Success of the Third Session of the National Assembly's First Term" -- date not given]

[Text] In the third week of August 1982, the PRK National Assembly solemnly opened its third session in an atmosphere full of solidarity and unity between the entire party, people and army. This session was convened at the time when the whole country has welcomed great successes achieved in all fields during the past 7 months of this year. It successfully ended its work.

During 6 days, genuine representatives of the people from 20 constituencies of the People's Republic of Kampuchea responsibly fulfilled their noble mission to examine, discuss and solve various important issues for the defense and construction of the country. The supreme institution of our nation was satisfied to notice the steady advance of the Kampuchean revulution and highly praised various revolutionary gains achieved by our people between the second session of the National Assembly and the third session. It also was pleased with the success of the sixth conference of the three foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, the signing of the accord on historic waters between Kampuchea and Vietnam and the progress of other diplomatic work.

The National Assembly discussed and unanimously adopted the national budget for 1982. The draft law on the protection of state property and the draft law on investigation and settlement of contentious administrative affairs and denunciations filed by citizens. The entire Kampuchean people warmly acclaim the high decisions during the third session of the National Assembly. These resolutions aim to raise the sense of responsibility of state employees and the people. They also intend to make state finances and the state budget have a strong base to improve the efficiency of economic management. They are aimed at heightening the national conscience to ensure thrift and the protection of public property. They also guarantee the genuine right and interests of citizens.

In his closing address, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly, solemnly stated: The situation of the country is stable. The rebirth process of the country is better. The revolutionary forces are developing.

The strategic relations between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and the forces of international solidarity are steadily increasing. Various maneuvers of the enemies are being defeated successively.

In this glorious atmosphere, we must develop the factors which guarantee our victory and sharpen our determination to struggle for and reach the important goals in the final months of 1982. We must make efforts to correctly fulfill the following indispensable requirements:

To always heighten the vigilant and revolutionary spirit. It is necessary to always avoid subjectivity or negligence. We must be determined to defeat all enemies' tricks in the next rainy and dry seasons. In particular, we have to smash dirty, tricky maneuvers and the cheating psychological war of the Beijing Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and reactionaries in the Thai power-holders circle on their formation of their so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

To always wage a struggle according to our slogan: "To live and work according to the state Constitution and laws." We must make efforts to score good achievements on the battlefield of agricultural production during this year's rainy season. The surface of land for crops and yields have to be increased. We have to struggle hard in all fields to successfully achieve economic, cultural, educational, health, social-affairs plans and so on. We must heighten the spirit of mastery, improvement and self-reliance. We must assist and cooperate with each other in emulation drive movements. Production in all fields must be increased. Concurrently, it is necessary to carefully implement the habit of good thrift and the protection of public property. We must always promote the slogan: "To produce is to love the nation. To practice thrift is to love the people."

To actively participate in the strengthening of the real force of the revolution by making efforts to build various institutions of the state power, the armed forces, the security forces, the party's organizations at all levels, the mass organizations and production solidarity teams. These institutions and organizations must be strengthened and become the property of the people, be created by the people and work for the people.

To uphold the banner of proletarian internationalism by being determined to always defend, care for and strengthen the strategic and revolutionary alliance between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. Concurrently, it is necessary to increase solidarity and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. Relations with progressive, peace- and justice-loving forces in the world must also be developed.

SIHANOUK PLANNING AFRICA TOUR PRIOR TO UN MEETING

OW281640 Paris AFP in English 1446 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, Aug. 28 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the recently-formed anti-Vietnamese Cambodian coalition, plans to make a six-country tour of Africa before going to the United Nations in New York next month, a reliable source said here today.

The trip would be part of a diplomatic offensive by the coalition, which has the backing of Southeast Asia's non-communist states and China, to win the support of countries of the Non-Aligned Movement for the coalition's struggle against the regime installed in Phnom Penh by the Vietnamese.

Prince Sihanouk, who generally resides either in Beijing or the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, has just paid visits to Yugoslavia, which is influential in the Non-Aligned Movement, and to Romania. A reliable source said that the prince had made contacts with a view to visiting Algeria, Guinea, Mali, Tanzania, Tunisia and Zambia.

Prince Sihanouk is expected to take part in the upcoming annual meeting of the United Nations General Assembly, at which Vietnam and its Soviet bloc allies are expected to contest the Cambodian representation as they have every year since 1979. The anti-Vietnamese coalition is expected to have the support of China and members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which groups the region's non-communist states: Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

VODK: SRV 'INTENSIFYING SUPPRESSION' IN PHNOM PENH

[Commentary: "The Vietnamese Enemy Is Intensifying Suppression in Phnom Penh"]

[Text] The Vietnamese aggressors are intensifying the suppression of our people in Phnom Penh, arresting and detaining them for no reason at all. At the same time, they established four prisons in Phnom Penh -- at the Catholic church north of Vat Phnum monastery, Ta Khmao, Prey Sar and near the Interior Ministry -- and another prison in Trapeang Phlong, Ponhea Krek District, Kompong Cham Province. Each prison is capable of detaining from 1,000-2,000 persons. All the wardens and investigators who torture the Kampuchean people are Vietnamese. Our people, who are being imprisoned by the Vietnamese aggressors, are fettered day and night. These prisoners are allowed to eat only a little food and drink only once a day. Worse still, the Vietnamese enemy has mixed poison into the food and water to kill our people in the prisons. Many of our people have been killed every day.

Because of the current intensified arrests and detention of our innocent people, all the old and new prisons of the Vietnamese enemy are now packed with our people, just like sardines in boxes. Since there is no more space in these prisons, the Vietnamese enemy kills hundreds of our people from these prisons every day.

The Vietnamese enemy has intensified the arrest and massacre of our innocent people living in its zone in a more barbarous and cruel manner because it has faced a serious impasse militarily and politically on the Kampuchean battlefield, and because our Kampuchean people from all walks of life and of all nationalities have united as one under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Covernment and launched vigorous struggle in all forms available, thus isolating the Vietnamese enemy from the Kampuchean people and plunging it into greater difficulties. Particularly in Phnom Penh, which is the lair of the Vietnamese aggressive administration, the Vietnamese enemy is intensifying the suppression, arrest and detention of our Khmer people in a most barbarous and cruel manner for fear that if the Khmer people's intensified struggle against it is revealed to world public opinion, Vietnam would be exposed as the aggressor and a most cruel, barbarous, fascist and cowardly murderer.

This intensified suppression against our people attests to the failure of the Vietnamese enemy's Khmerization policy in Kampuchea. The Vietnamese aggressors can never smash the will to fight, the desire for independence and the spirit of patriotism and heroism of our Kampuchean nation and people. The Kampuchean people will always unite as one under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government and rise up to fight against the Vietnamese aggressors and race exterminators until all of them are driven out of our Kampuchean territory.

VIENTIANE RALLY FOR PEACE, AGAINST ARMS RACE HELD

BK281207 [Editorial Report] Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao at 2300 GMT on 27 August begins a live broadcast from the That Louang ground in Vientiane city of a mass rally to "stage a display of force for peace and against the arms race and the nuclear war adventures of the U.S. imperialists who are instigating their stooges to create confusion in various parts of the world."

Prior to the official opening of the rally, the announcer describes the disastrous effects of a nuclear war and the increasing number of nuclear weapons produced in "imperialist" countries and their satellites.

At 2320 GMT the announcer says that more than 10,000 people have arrived at the site of the rally. He goes on to describe the current world situation, noting "aggressive by nature, the U.S. imperialists have encircled the Soviet Union and other progressive countries with more than 2,500 bases located in more than 10 countries. They have stationed more than half a million troops and thousands of nuclear weapons at their bases. In Europe alone, they have forced their NATO allies to increase military budgets and installed medium-range nuclear missiles in these countries. All these missiles are aimed at the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, which are the main forces for peace."

According to the announcer, placards with the following slogans are displayed: "Long live world peace;" "Wholeheartedly support the peace initiatives of the Soviet Union, Mongolia and the three Indochinese countries;" "Resolutely support the movements for peace, national independence, democracy of the various nations in the world;" "Long live the unity among the various nations struggling for world peace and happiness;" "Stop producing neutron bombs."

At 0012 GMT on 28 August, the announcer says that more than 20,000 Vientiane residents have arrived at the That Louang ground. At 0030 GMT an unidentified male master of ceremonies is heard to announcer the following:

"My respects to Buddhist monks, respected members of the presidium of the rally, dear comrades and friends: While the entire party, army and Lao people are jubilantly concentrating their efforts on implementing the resolutions of the Third LPRP Congress, today, the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction [LFNC], the Lao Committee for the Defense of World Peace, the LFNC committee of Vientiane city, the Central Federation of Lao Trade Unions, the Central Committee of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union, and the Central Committee of the Lao Patriotic Women's Union are jointly holding a rally as a show of force for peace by the people of various tribes uniting under the LPRP and to display their resolute struggle against the arms race and the new world war adventures of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges."

According to the master of the ceremonies, the participants in this rally include: "Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister and minister of education, sports and religious affairs; Khampheng Boupha, member of the LPRP Central Committee, member of the Supreme People's Council [SPC], and chairman of the Lao Patriotic Women's Union; Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, chairman of the Lao Committee for the Defense of World Peace; Souk Vongsak, member of the LPRP Central Committee and chief of the party's mass mobilization and front committee; Mrs Phetsamon, member of the LPRP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Lao Patriotic Women's Union; (Inpeng Vongsana), member of the Vientiane municipal party committee and chairman of the LFNC committee of Vientiane municipality; Thongphoun Anantasounthom, chairman of the Lao Unified Buddhist Organization; Savang Chanthepha, member of the SPC and vice chairman of the Federation of Lao Trade Unions; (Taiphet Silavit), member of the mobilizing committee of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union; other SPC members; ministers and deputy ministers; chiefs and deputy chiefs of ministerial-level committees; members of the LFNC Central Committee; representatives from various ministries and mass organizations; Buddhist monks; workers, cadres and state employees from various offices and organizations; and Vientiane residents."

At 0034 GMT, the master of ceremonies invites Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani to address the rally in his capacity as chairman of the LAO Committee for the Defense of World Peace.

Spelling out the purposes of the rally, Singkapo Sikotchounlamani says: "Today cadres, combatants, state employees and people of various strata and tribes in Vientiane municipality, representing the peace-loving Lao people of various tribes throughout the country, have marched from various parts of the municipality to rally here in a joint show of force for peace and against the arms race and the nuclear war adventures of the U.S. imperialists who are instigating their stooges to create confusion in various parts of the world, in an attempt to risk a war to exterminate the lives and property of the peace- and justice-loving people."

Describing U.S. activities in various parts of the world, Singkapo notes "U.S. imperialist" support for the Israeli Zionists in their aggression against Lebanon and the U.S. role in "instigating" the South African racists to suppress the patriotic people and occupy Namibian territory for use as a springboard for intervention and aggression against Angola and Mozambique.

Assailing the Chinese leaders' current policy, Singkapo says: "The bellicose line of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists is clearly evidenced by their threats to peace and national independence and by their aggression against the three Indochinese peoples." He continues: "The historic victory recorded by the three Indochinese countries in 1975 constitutes a defeat for the Beijing reactionaries' vicious scheme. The Indochinese countries have achieved peace, and this has become a great obstacle to China's expansionism and hegemonism. This is why they are bitterly indignant and are seeking every possible way to sabotage the unity among the three Indochinese countries. To achieve their vicious scheme, the Beijing reactionaries, supported and assisted by the U.S. imperialists, continue to support and encourage the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary genocidal clique."

Regarding the SRV, Singkapo says: "Since sustained heavy setbacks in their aggression against Vietnam early in 1979, the Beijing reactionary ruling clique has threatened to teach Vietnam a new lesson. It continues to carry out armed provocations along the Vietnam-China border both of land and at sea. At the same time, it has rejected the Vietnamese Government's proposals for renewed talks to peacefully settle bilateral problems."

Touching on Laos, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani says: "Displeased with Laos' policy of independence and self-determination, the Beijing reactionary ruling clique has mustered and fed exiled Lao reactionaries in China and sent them to plunder and carry out provocations along the Laos-China border. Moreover, it has pressured that Thai reactionaries to assist the exiled Lao reactionaries in carrying out provocations along the Lao-Thai border in order to harm the relations between Laos and Thailand. The Beijing reactionary ruling clique, carrying out its cruel scheme, is seeking to separate Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea from the ASEAN countries."

Then Singkapo describes the balance of forces which is now shifting in favor of peace, national liberation and social progress. He discusses the peace initiatives put forward by the Soviet Union at the 26th CPSU Congress and at the 17th USSR trade union congress, which include measures to limit nuclear weapons, end nuclear arms tests and production and reduce armaments.

With regard to Laos, Singkapo says: "The Lao people of various tribes -- victims of imperialist wars of aggression for several decades -- are well aware of the ruthlessness and ferocity of wars and understand very well the price of peace, national independence and justice. The Lao people always wish to live in peace so as to build their country. We desire to have friendly relations and mutually beneficial cooperation with all countries for the sake of peace, friendship and stability in the world."

He continues: "We wholeheartedly support the people's struggles throughout the world for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress and against arms race and nuclear war adventures. We demand that the U.S. Government completely end the arms race and nuclear war adventures. We strongly condemn the U.S. role as an international gendarme, threatening world peace and stability. The U.S. imperialists must immediately stop implementing their bellicose policy of aggression against other countries and, at the same time, withdraw their troops from the various bases in foreign countries. They must immediately dismantle such bases."

Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani continues: "We solemnly condemn and demand that the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles immediately give up their expansionist and hegemonist policy of following the U.S. imperialists and opposing the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. The Beijing reactionaries must completely abandon the policy of swallowing up the three Indochinese countries and expanding their influence to Southeast Asia. They must respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the three Indochinese countries as well as of the various countries in Southeast Asia. Meanwhile, they must adopt an appropriate attitude toward the Indochinese countries' peace proposals. For example, they must urgently and sincerely respond to the SRV's reasonable proposals for continued talks."

In conclusion, Singkapo calls on compatriots at home and abroad to unite closely, contribute to peace movements against the arms race and concentrate their strength, capability and intelligence on building and defending the LPDR. His speech ends at 0117 GMT.

Immediately after the speech, the master of ceremonies invites a representative of the participants to read a resolution adopted at the rally. It says:

"Support various proposals for peace and disarmament, particularly the proposals put forth by the Soviet Union at the 26th CPSU congress and the Soviet declaration at the United Nations that it will not be the first to use nuclear weapons, absolutely support the peace initiatives of the MPR and the three Indochinese countries, aimed at creating an atmosphere of peaceful coexistence in this part of the world; wholeheartedly support the struggles waged by all nations in the world for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress and against the arms race and nuclear war adventures by the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen; resolutely demand that the U.S. Government and its satellites stop the arms race and completely halt nuclear arms production and nuclear war adventures; vehemently condemn the U.S. role as an international gendarme, which is threatening world peace and stability; the U.S. imperialists must immediately stop implementing the bellicose policy of aggression against other countries and, at the same time, withdraw their troops from various bases located in other countries in the world and completely dismantle such bases; the Lao people, under the leadership of the LPRP led by Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, will further strengthen unity among all tribes, continue to strengthen the special solidarity with the fraternal Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples, continue to strengthen all-round solidarity with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries in order to defend and build the country and advance along the path of socialism, continue to safeguard and promote the friendly relations with the various neighboring countries on the basis of peaceful coexistence and will resolutely contribute to defending peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia and the rest of the world."

At 0125 GMT, the master of ceremonies leads the participants to shout the above-mentioned slogans. After this, he announces the end of the rally at 0128 GMT. The live broadcast ends at 0129 GMT.

VOFA DENIES VNA REPORT ON BORDER VIOLATIONS

BK271317 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] On 23 August, citing a report by the so-called Voice of the Kampuchean People, VNA reported that Thailand had violated Kampuchean airspace, territory and waters many times from 13 to 19 August. It also reported that during that week Thailand fired many types of shells into Kampuchea and allowed various patriotic Kampuchean groups to use its territory to attack Kampuchea. The Voice of Free Asia wishes to state that the above report is totally false and that it is propaganda aimed at slandering Thailand and at misinforming other countries about Thailand.

SRV TROOP REINFORCEMENTS ON THAI-LAO BORDER NOTED

[Text] Uttaradit -- Local authorities along the border with Laos have been put on alert following a new mobilization of the Vietnamese forces on the other side, a senior police official here reported.

Provincial police chief Pol Col Sanoe Loetphan said about 700 Vietnamese soldiers were despatched from Luang Prabang to a border village facing here. The unit was supported by two tanks and two antiaircraft guns, he said. He said the Vietamese soldiers were also sent to other border areas opposite here and Loei. It was suspected that the Vietnamese were planning some kind of a military action against the Laotian rebels.

Uttaradit Governor Kan Rakmani said yesterday Laotian authorities had, since the beginning of this month, stopped their people from crossing the Mekong River to Thailand here while at the same time conducted frequent mobolizations visible from this side. He said the military movements were more frequent since early this month in areas around Sayaboury opposite Loei.

Further Report

[Text] Hanoi recently reinforced its forces along the Thai-Lao border with three new divisions pulled out from Kampuchea, a reliable source told the NATION over the weekend. The source, who closely monitors the Indochinese situation, said Vietnam recently sent about 20,000 new soldiers into Kampuchea to replace the withdrawn three divisions which moved to Laos.

The mobilization was reported in the middle of last month in the wake of a claim by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, who said during his Southeast Asian tour that Hanoi would withdraw part of its troops from Kampuchea as a good will gesture for the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

The source, who asked not to be named, said the overall threat to the security of Thailand substantially increased following the so-called partial withdrawal, given that three new divisions of Vietnamese combat troops were deployed along the Thai-Lao border. He estimated that each of the three divisions comprises about 5,000-7,000 soldiers.

Earlier intelligence reports show that the Vietnamese in Laos have been supporting the subversive operations of a pro-Hanoi faction of communist insurgents, who had broken away from the Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) and set up their own "Phak Mai" party, in the northeast of Thailand.

The source linked the removal of the three Vietnamese divisions to the Thai-Lao border to a veiled threat of backing communist insurgency in Southeast Asian countries delivered by Thach during his visit to Singapore as part of his Southeast Asian tour recently.

He said that Hanoi did pull out some other forces back to Vietnam, but confirmed earlier statements by government leaders that the soldiers summoned back were suffering from fatigue, wounded in the prolonged war, and contracted diseases in Kampuchea.

The source also said that Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea recently started to step up their military operations aimed at discrediting the newly-formed coalition government of the three Khmer resistance forces. "The three resistance groups actually maintain their separate forces and the formation thus should not affect the situation in Kampuchea, from a military point of view, but it did create political impact both within and without the country," he said.

POST REPORTS KHMER ROUGE ATTACK ON SRV STRONGHOLD

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Five Vietnamese soldiers were killed in a Saturday night battle after an all-out Khmer Rouge offensive against a Vietnamese stronghold near here, field military sources said.

The Khmer Rouge suffered one dead and two injured but seized four AK-47 rifles from the Vietnamese during the fierce fighting opposite Ban Khlong Namsai, about 17 kilometres south of here.

The sources said the attack against the Vietnamese Highway No 502 stronghold at Sihanoukville took place after a few days of quiet caused by heavy rain that flooded the Thai-Kampuchean border area.

The fighting started when the Khmer Rouge attacked at about 8:30 p.m., the sources said. The Vietnamese reportedly put up strong resistance and the battle in pitched darkness lasted for about one hour with both parties using rockets and mortars. The battle ended with sporadic clashes which were still continuing yesterday morning, the sources said.

They said the Vietnamese soldiers have sent for reinforcements and have started building additional bunkers to prepare for any further Khmer Rouge offensive.

OBSERVERS EXPECT NEW SRV ASSAULT ON COALITION

BK290444 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 29 Aug 82 pp 1, 3

[By The Chongkhadikit]

[Text] Thai Armed Forces are braced at key border points for any incursion resulting from an anticipated Vietnamese offensive to "break" the new Democratic Kampuchea coalition before the United Nations General Assembly late next month, military sources said yesterday.

Intelligence reports have reached Bangkok that fresh Vietnamese troops flown in from north and south are being prepared for operations near the Thai frontier with 400 new Soviet T-54 tanks, Soviet 130-mm artillery (reputedly with a longer range than the U.S. 155-mm guns) and AKM-47 personnel weapons (with higher capability than the old AK-47's).

The Vietnamese soldiers have been flown to Siem Reap for dispatch to border areas where they are expected to attack not only the Khmer Rouge but also the Khmer People's National Liberation Front [KPNLF] and the Sihanoukists, all forces of the coalition headed by President Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Thai defence forces will not allow any troops involved in the armed conflict -- Vietnamese, Heng Samrin, Khmer Rouge, KPNLF or Sihanoukists -- to cross into Thai territory.

Official Thai observers have been watching for signs of Vietnamese military moves designed to "test" the coalition, and they believe that the indications are clear that the crucial assault is imminent, although there are still two more months of the rainy season left. In the past two years Vietnamese forces had been quiescent during the last part of the rainy season, waiting to attack with the start of the dry season.

Thai military sources noted that all this activity had given the lie to Hanoi's propaganda about a "partial withdrawal."

Because the tanks will not be able to operate effectively in the mud of the rainy season, an all-out offensive is not considered feasible, but operations to dislodge Democratic Kampuchea coalition forces are expected. Heavy fighting is anticipated at the camps of the various coalition forces near the Thai border.

These troop movements are believed to have a political as well as military objective, the military target being to disable the coalition forces and the political purpose being to damage the credibility of the coalition itself. The latter is seen as a tactic by Hanoi to try to get the General Assembly to evict Democratic Kampuchea from the U.N., leaving the Kampuchea seat vacant. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach had preached the "vacant seat" solution to the Kampuchea problem during a tour of Europe before he visited Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand.

Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong said that if the UN ever threw out Democratic Kampuchea, it would be setting a "dangerous precedent -- which could lead to an attempt to toss out Israel."

Meanwhile, Prince Sihanouk, Democratic Kampuchea Vice President for Foreign Affairs Khieu Samphan (Khmer Rouge) and Prime Minister Son Sann (KPNLF) are already lobbying countries in various regions of the world for their support in the U.N. Credentials Committee and at the General Assembly. Efforts are being made for Prince Sihanouk to speak to the non-aligned conference scheduled to be held in Baghdad.

MINISTER RETURNS FROM MALAYSIA BORDER MEETING

BK271442 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot has returned from Kuala Lumpur, where he participated in the joint Thai-Malaysian general border committee meeting from 25 to 27 August. Speaking to newsmen upon arrival at Bangkok airport at 1950 today, General Sitthi said the meeting proceeded in good atmosphere -- there were no disagreements, as reported by some newspapers. The meeting reviewed the security situation along the Thai-Malaysian border in an effort to improve it. Both sides expressed satisfaction with the economic and social development efforts in the border areas and agreed to conduct surveys of various economic and social development projects for the mutual benefit of the people of both countries.

The meeting also noted with satisfaction the progress of the survey and delineation of the border despite the existence of some difficulties. Since October 1973, border posts have been erected along 292 km of the total border distance of 576 km.

The next meeting of the joint Thai-Malaysian general border committee -- the 18th -- will be held in Thailand in 1983.

Discusses Guerrilla Suppression

[Text] Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot said yesterday that Thailand and Malaysia agreed to continue their joint offensive to wipe out communist guerrillas along their common border.

Speaking to reporters on his return from Kuala Lumpur after a two-day meeting to discuss matters relating to the Thai-Malaysian border, Gen Sitthi said officials of both countries agreed that the situation along their common border has improved following suppression by the authorities, who also succeeded in seizing several camps of the outlawed Communist Party of Malaya (CPM). He added that Thai and Malaysian officials also reviewed their past cooperation along the border on security and economic aspects as well as their joint naval and air exercises.

The problem of insurgency by CPM on the border has to be jointly solved by Thailand and Malaysia, while the separatists movement is our internal problem which we will have to solve by ourselves, the interior minister said.

In Kuala Lumpur, Malaysian Home Minister Datuk Musa Hitam said yesterday that the continued vigilance of the security forces of both countries should be much more aggressive to deny "our common enemy any movement one way or the other to threaten the security of the countries." He was speaking to reporters before Gen Sitthi left for Bangkok.

He said the regional border committee (RBC), comprising Thai and Malaysian security personnel, had been ordered to conduct area military, political and psychological security operations, to deny access to the guerrillas. Datuk Musa said the RBC, which meets every month, had been told to produce up-to-date maps of the particularly sensitive Betong-Kroh District to enable security personnel to know the area better.

He said they agreed that social and economic development of the area should supplement their campaign against guerrillas sheltering in the jungle along the frontier.

JAPAN, SINGAPORE FOREIGN MINISTERS STOP OVER

[Text] Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi assured Thailand yesterday that Japan will work closely with ASEAN over the Kampuchean issue in the upcoming United Nations General Assembly.

Sakurauchi made the assurance during a brief meeting with Director General of the Political Department Asa Sarasin while making a stopover at Don Muang Airport on his way to India yesterday.

Asa quoted the Japanese minister as saying that Japan will keep a close consultation with ASEAN so that they will adopt a common stand in their efforts to drum up support for the Kampuchean coalition at the U.N.

The Japanese foreign minister, according to Asa, also proposed to talk to countries in Africa and the Middle East friendly to Japan for their support for Democratic Kampuchea. Sakurauchi also reiterated the Japanese Government's pledge to continue its relief aid to Indochinese refugees in Thailand, Asa said.

Meanwhile, Singapore Foreign Minister S. Dhanabalan yesterday also made a brief stopover at the airport on his way back from a trip to Burma. Asa and Dhanabalan had a meeting, but both refused to say what was discussed.

JAPAN TEXTBOOK ISSUE SAID NOT TO AFFECT THAILAND

BK290959 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] According to a report from the Foreign Ministry, the revision of school textbooks on the history of World War II by the Japanese Government -- which has triggered strong protests from the PRC and South Korea -- does not affect Thailand. The Thai Embassy in Japan has sent translations of the textbook to the Foreign Ministry, and the revised portion of the textbook simply says that Thailand was an ally of Japan during World War II.

Japan has reportedly promised to correct the revisions, strongly opposed by China and South Korea, within the next 2 years.

Japan's new history textbook plays down the Japanese soldiers' brutality against the Chinese and Korean peoples before and during World War II, and were originally planned to be introduced into schools next April.

PLO REPRESENTATIVE'S VISIT, ACTIVITIES REPORTED

[Text] The Palestine Liberation Organization is seeking permission from the Thai Government to open a PLO information office in Bangkok, a representative of the organization told reporters yesterday.

Mr 'Ali Fayyad, an officer of the PLO Political Department (foreign affairs), who is in Thailand as an official guest of the Thai Foreign Ministry, said that the request has been met with a "positive response." Fayyad, who earlier met with Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs M.R. Kasem Samoson Kasemsi, and Director-General of the Foreign Ministry Political Department Asa Sarasin, said that the officials have received his request for further consideration.

The former PLO ambassador to Hanoi, presently in charge of Southeast Asian affairs, is on a tour of the Indochinese and ASEAN countries and has already visited Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea, Indonesia, Singapore, and Malaysia. He will leave today for the Philippines.

Fayyad said that his organization deeply appreciates Thailand's and ASEAN's support for the national rights of the Palestinian people in various international and regional forums even though Malaysia is the only ASEAN country that rocognized the PLO. Vietnam and Laos also recognized the PLO, which has embassies in Hanoi and Vientiane.

Asked about his organization's stance on the Kampuchean problem, Fayyad said that the PLO wants to maintain good relations with all countries and does not want the Kampuchean problem to stand in the way of developing relations with either the Indochinese or the ASEAN countries.

On the present evacuation of PLO guerrillas from west Beirut, Fayyad denied that it constitutes a major setback for the PLO. "The pullout does not mean the end of the PLO as a military and political force. We still have a large number of guerrillas in the east, north, and southern parts of Lebanon. And the pullout has created political sympathies in many countries, including those in Europe. Already media and public opinion in the United States is swinging towards us," he said.

Western media and observers have noted that the ongoing PLO evacuation is a setback that could destroy the organization as a military and political force, since its fighting force, which was concentrated in west Beirut, will now be scattered.

[Text] A special envoy of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) yesterday wound up his four-day visit here as part of his tour of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to drum up support for the movement's cause against Israel, a spokesman of the Foreign Ministry said yesterday.

The envoy, identified as Ambassador-at-Large Sami Ahmad [name and title as published], arrived here on Monday as the fourth leg of his ASEAN tour, the spokesman said.

He added that the PLO delegate had paid a visit to Director General of the Political Department Asa Sarasin to discuss the situation in Beirut, Lebanon, and express the movement's gratitude for Thailand's continued support. Thailand recognizes United Nations resolutions supporting the self-determination of the Palestinian people.

The source said the PLO delegate did not renew the movement's request for permission to set up its office here.

After Thailand, the special envoy would visit the Philippines as the last leg of his ASEAN tour. He had earlier visited Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia before coming here, according to the spokesman. He added that Sami Ahmad, who had requested to visit here as guest of the Foreign Ministry, had originally been scheduled to arrive here on August 20, but later postponed the trip to Monday.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH VENEZUELA ESTABLISHED

POST NOTES KING 'FULLY RECOVERED' FROM RELAPSE

[Text] His majesty the king has fully recovered from a relapse and his health is mending daily.

Officials at the office of his majesty's principal private secretary yesterday said the general condition of his majesty has improved significantly and that he has recovered from the relapse which occurred two weeks ago. His illness was caused by mycoplasma, a pneumonic virus, which resulted in inflammation of the lungs.

Officials said the team of doctors have recommended that though fully recovered, his majesty should recuperate for at least three months, during which time his majesty should not be burdened with official duties.

His majesty, therefore, will for the duration of his recuperation be represented at official functions and duties by her majesty the queen, HRH Crown Prince Wachiralongkon and Her Royal Highness Princess Maha Chakri Sirinthon -- in that order, the officials said, adding that HRH Princess Chulaphon has not been appointed to represent his majesty as she is expecting a baby in a few months' time.

TWELVE CAPTURED CHINESE REPATRIATED 28 AUG

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 28 -- Authorized by the Vietnamese Government, the Huu Nghi border station, Lang Son Province, at 9 a.m. (Hanoi time) today returned to the Chinese side 12 Chinese captured while illegally intruding into Vietnamese territory.

The release was made in accordance with a communique sent by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi on August 14.

The Chinese returnees pleaded guilty, and expressed their gratitude to the Vietnamese Government and people for their humane treatment and leniency towards them during their captivity.

SRV TO ACT ON PROPOSAL TO PRC 'UNILATERALLY'

OW280757 Hanoi VNA in English 0729 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 28 -- It was "unwise" of China to turn down Vietnam's proposal for cessation of all armed activities and other hostile acts along the Sino-Vietnamese border on the occasion of the Vietnamese and Chinese National Day, comments NHAN DAN today.

The paper says: There can be no doubt about our good intention, which was prompted by our concern for peace and stability to the population on either side of the common border. We want to enable Vietnamese citizens in border areas to join the rest of the country in celebrating independence day without being harassed by shelling or firing from China. We also respect the historical date which the fraternal Chinese people are commemorating shortly, and we seek to create an atmosphere of peace to pave the way for settling peacefully problems concerning the two countries.

NHAN DAN continues: This was not the first time Vietnam made such a proposal, nor was it the first time China rejected our good will. In fact, China has not budged an inch from its stubborn policy of maintaining tension on the border. It has not done a single thing to improve relations with Vietnam. Such an attitude is unwise.

The paper says: The Vietnamese people put a great store on their long-standing friendship with the Chinese people. In this spirit, the Vietnamese Government has declared to unilaterally act according to its proposal, and has demanded that China respect Vietnam's good will. On the other hand, the Vietnamese people, in the face of the Chinese refusal, will be all the more vigilant in defending peace and their territorial sovereignty.

We believe that our sincerity will have the sympathy and support of the Chinese people and the public in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world, the paper concludes.

VNA REPORTS PRC BORDER PROVOCATIONS FOR 19-24 AUG

OW272300 Hanoi VNA in English 1517 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 27 -- China has taken a series of provocative actions along the common border with Vietnam.

On August 19, groups of Chinese soldiers intruded into the area of Si Lo Lau in Phong Tho District, Lai Chau Province, firing at villages. Considerable damage was caused to the population.

In Hoang Lien Son Province on the following day, Chinese forces repeatedly attacked with small-arms fire the area of marker post 8 in Muong Khuong District, killing a number of cattle. Again, on August 27, a number of houses in Lao Cai and Ban Qua areas where destroyed by Chinese shellings and strafings.

On August 20 and 22, Chinese soldiers, in many groups, broke into the areas of Tai Van and Po Hen in Quang Ninh Province. The intruders committed looting and destroyed a number of houses.

In Ha Tuyen Province, Chinese forces on August 23 fired more than 300 cannon and mortar shots and many rounds of small-arms ammunition on Dong Van District, killing a number of cattle and destroying many houses.

On August 24, ten Chinese soldiers intruded into the area of marker post 56 in Trung Khanh District, Cao Bang. They took away by force one inhabitant.

Meanwhile, Chinese combat planes made hundreds of single sorties over border areas. On August 25, one flight overflew Loc Binh District, Lang Son Provinve, from six to eight kilometres this side of the border.

DENG XIAOPING'S POLICY, RESULTS CONDEMNED

[Station commentary: "What Has Deng Xiaoping Brought to the Chinese People After 4 Years in Power?"]

[Text] China's propaganda machine recently has worked overtime to publicize Deng Xiaoping's line, which it labeled as that of the third plenum of the CPC Central Committee held in 1978. It boasted that this line has helped achieve stability and unity in Chinese society, bring about economic development, improve the Chinese people's living conditions, and so forth. This bragging was aimed at boosting the Deng faction's prestige on the eve of a new round of political wrestling at the 12th CPC Congress.

As a popular adage goes, a thin cloth cannot frustrate a sharp eye. The noisy propaganda campaign mounted by the Chinese press can in no way conceal the stark reality from the world. What has Deng Xiaoping brought to the Chinese people after 4 years in power?

The first things Deng did were to renounce China's national sovereignty, implement the shameful policy of giving in to U.S. imperialism over the Taiwan issue, and actively oppose the Soviet Union and Vietnam to realize his dreams of hegemony and expansion.

It is a fact that, after returning to power in late 1978 and early 1979, Deng feverishly promoted China's alliance with U.S. and Japanese imperialism. Then, casting principles to the wind, he signed with the United States and Japan a document restoring relations among the three countries on the basis of opposition to hegemonism, which is in fact opposition to the Soviet Union and the world revolutionary movement.

In this respect, it can be said that Deng Xiaoping has exceedingly outdone Mao Zedong. In the past, Mao only invited Nixon, the ringleader of U.S. imperialist aggressors, to China. Deng has now thrown its doors wide open for top U.S. politicians and military men and let them in on many of China's military secrets. He has allowed the U.S. imperialists to build electronic eavesdropping stations at the Sino-Soviet border to serve U.S. military purposes. From their political alliance with the United States, the Chinese authorities are gradually advancing to a military partnership with Washington, firmly tying China to the U.S. war chariot at the expense of Chinese national security.

In the past, Mao Zedong betrayed Vietnam's sacred anti-U.S. cause by signing the Shanghai Communique with Nixon. Deng Xiaoping has doublecrossed the Vietnamese people by mobilizing 600,000 troops to invade Vietnam in an attempt to subdue and annex it. In so doing, he hoped to win U.S. trust and assistance in carrying out his modernization plan designed to transform China into a superpower.

This action by Deng Xiaoping has tarnished Chinese history and has seriously undermined the traditional friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples. It has, therefore, been strongly condemned by the Chinese people.

To win Washington's friendship, Deng Xiaoping has renounced Chinese national sovereignty over Taiwan. Before concluding the agreement on normalizing relations with the United States in early 1979, Deng Xioaping declared: The Taiwan problem can be set aside for our offspring to resolve 100 years from now. This means that, in reality, Deng has agreed to give up Chinese sovereignty over Taiwan in order to secure relations with the United States.

Recently, to cope with Chinese opinion which has strongly denounced Deng's submissive pro-U.S. policy, the Beijing and Washington authorities hatched the so-called Shanghai communique II, allegedly to settle the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. In fact, this was a move aimed at alleviating Deng's predicament and sheltering him from strong criticism at the forthcoming 12th CPC congress. The daily RENMIN RIBAO, China's official paper, stated: This communique will be scrupulously implemented. In a letter to the UN secretary general, who visited China recently, Deng himself asserted: This agreement was a correct step.

One wonders how this communique could be a correct step when it affirmed the existence of the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act, which included an important provision allowing the United States to continue its arms sales to Taiwan.

Scrupulously implementing a communique which affirmed the existence of the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act as RENMIN RIBAO promised means that Deng Xiaoping will continue to seriously and obsequiously carry out the policy of selling out Chinese national sovereignty to U.S. imperialism.

This was the first result Deng Xiaoping's policy has brought about for the Chinese people.

The second result of Deng Xiaoping's line, over the past 4 years, was the attempt to create military strength for implementing Chinese hegemonism and expansionism by ceaselessly pursuing a policy of arms race, squandering untold amounts of the Chinese peoples' wealth in the production of nuclear weapons and delivery mechanisms for these arms.

In its 17 February issue, China's English-language paper CHINA DAILY disclosed that China still gives priority to designing and improving modern weapon systems and that its military spending has reached new heights.

According to a radio Australia broadcast on 2 January, a spokesman for China's National Defense Scientific and Technological Commission revealed that over the past 15 years China has unceasingly concentrated on carrying out very costly nuclear tests. In 1980 and 1981, China successively test fired various types of medium-range and intercontinental missiles, necessitating an appropriation of more than 40 percent of the national budget for military spending. Thus, China's military expenditures still account for the largest portion of its budget, while its appropriations for education, public health and the Chinese people's welfare trail far behind even those of many underdeveloped countries.

Military modernization is the essence of Deng's four modernizations program. Such a policy has created additional difficulties for China's weak economy and has thwarted the efforts to ensure a decent life for the Chinese people. No less than 200 million people still suffer from malnutrition in China. A flood in early 1981 alone was sufficient to drive 130 million people into famine.

Third, we must mention Deng's policy of internal purge. Over the past 4 years, this policy has repeatedly caused upheavals in Chinese society.

The Chinese and foreign press have revealed power struggles and purges in various Chinese organs and enterprises which seriously hampered official work and production. Contradictions between the administration and the armed forces have become so acute that they may wreck the stability of Chinese society. Moreover, the administrative and structural reforms Deng has carried out since early this year have also encountered stiff resistance from the opposition since they were essentially a blatant purge campaign.

According to an issue of HONGQI magazine published early this year, Deng had to admit that the first-phase administrative structural reforms had encountered considerable difficulty and that the second-phase reforms in the central organs of China had faced even greater difficulty.

Deng's policy of nonstop purge has continued to upset Chinese society, which has suffered more than 10 years of violent upheavals. This was the true nature of the so-called unity and stability which Deng has achieved for China.

The last, but not least, result of Deng Xiaoping's line was the consequence of its open-door policy for Western capitalists at the expense of national independence and sovereignty. This policy has had a baneful influence on the Chinese economy and society, has firmly tied China's economy to those of foreign capitalist countries, and has linked China's economic crisis with the general crisis which is gripping the capitalist economies around the world.

These were what Deng Xiaoping's line brought to the Chinese people. Far from helping to resolve the two political and economic crises which beset China in the wake of the Cultural Revolution, this line has caused them to become even more serious. That is why the opposition has exploited the failures of Deng's line, giving his faction many a rough time and causing a sharp drop in its prestige on the eve of the 12th CPC Congress.

In early 1981, the paper BEIJING RIBAO carried the following question of some Chinese: Wasn't the line of the third plenum of the CPC Central Committee -- that is, Deng Xiaoping's line -- the origin of all of China's troubles, difficulties and sufferings?

With the consequences arising from Deng's policy and the problems faced by China and its people over the past 4 years, there is now reason to affirm that this remark by the BEIJING RIBAO readers was totally correct.

Despite the strenuous efforts of Beijing's propaganda machine to embellish Deng Xiaoping, the consequences of his policy on China have clearly pointed out to the Chinese people the sources of their sufferings, thereby prompting them to struggle even more resolutely to take their country back to the road of genuine socialism.

COUNCIL OF STATE HOLDS SESSION 26-27 AUG

BK280218 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] On 26 and 27 August the Council of State held a regular meeting under the chairmanship of Chairman Truong Chinh. Attending the meeting was Chairman of the Nationalities Council Hoang Truong Minh.

1. The Council of State heard Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach report on his visit to Burma, Singapore, Malaysia and the Kingdom of Thailand from 16 to 30 July.

The Council of State warmly welcomed the fine results of the visit, which has further strengthened the friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Burma. The visit has also accelerated the trend toward dialogue among the countries in the region in order to build a Southeast Asian zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation, thereby contributing to world peace.

2. The Council of State heard Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Tran Quynh report on the 36th CEMA conference. The Council of State unanimously noted that this conference has strengthened the fraternal cooperation among and helped accelerate the process of socialist construction in the member countries.

3. The Council of State heard Minister of Home Trade Le Duc Thinh, on behalf of the Council of Ministers, report on the implementation of the regulation on the suppression of speculation, smuggling, producing fake goods and conducting illegal business.

The Council of State discussed this matter and stated that a scrupulous and consistent implementation of this regulation must be carried out and that close supervision and inspection must be continued in order to stop speculation, smuggling, producing fake goods and conducting illegal business. Putting an end to such practices will contribute to stabilizing the cadres' and people's daily lives and eliminating negative phenomena in the economy and society.

4. The Council of State heard Minister of Justice Phan Hien, on behalf of the Council of Ministers, and Chief Procurator of the Supreme People's Organ of Control Tran Le report on the program for drafting laws and regulations in the last 6 months of this year. National Assembly Judiciary Committee Chairman Tran Quang Huy reported on the ideas of his committee in this regard.

The Council of State discussed and adopted the proposed program.

5. On the occasion of the National Day, 2 September, and at the recommendation of the Council of Ministers, the Council of State has decided to grant an amnesty and reduce jail terms for culprits who have satisfactorily improved their conduct.

USSR ANNIVERSARY EMULATION DRIVE ANNOUNCED

[Text] The VCP Central Committee Emulation Department recently issued a circular instructing various sectors, localities and the people to organize a nationwide emulation drive to greet the 60th founding anniversary of the USSR -- 30 December 1922-30 December 1982.

After stressing the significance of the establishment of the USSR -- the first nation which brought together many people of various nationalities -- the events of historical significance following the October Revolution and the vigorous development of Soviet-Vietnamese friendship and solidarity, the circular says: At the conclusion of the emulation drive to mark Vietnam's National Day, 2 September, various sectors and localities must urgently review and draw experience from their activities and organize a further emulation drive to greet the 60th founding annivesary of the USSR as a demonstration of the friendship and solidarity between the Vietnamese and Soviet peoples.

The circular also urges localities and sectors to strive, through this emulation drive, to accelerate the advancement of the nationwide socialist emulation movement.

BRIEFS

HAI HUNG PADDY COLLECTION -- As of mid-August, the Hai Hung provincial food sector had collected more than 18,700 tons of paddy beyond the compulsory quota through the exchange of nitrogenous fertilizer and goods and cash purchase. Hai Hung is encouraging its peasants to sell another 2,300 tons of paddy to the state so that it can fulfill the target set for the collection of 21,000 tons of grain beyond the compulsory quota. PRC CLAIM TO PART OF NATUNA ISLANDS REPORTED

SK271132 Hong Kong AFP in English 1115 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 27 (AFP) -- China has lodged a claim for part of the oil-producing Natuna Islands in the South China Sea -- the subject of a territorial dispute by Indonesia and Vietnam -- according to press reports here today.

The reports said China has claimed an area as far as the waters near the Indonesian island of Bangka, east of Sumatra, which is the country's main tin producing island.

The eveninger SINAR HARPAN (RAY OF HOPE) in an unsourced report said that the current talks between Indonesia and Vietnam on the continental shelf boundaries on the Natuna Islands were important and had made satisfactory progress.

Foreign Ministry officials refused to comment on the paper's report.

An agreement on the delineating of the border between Indonesia and Vietnam would help solve the problem of oil exploration near and on the Natuna Islands, the paper said. The paper dismissed American press reports that Hanoi had dropped its claim, saying the reports were not true.

The VIETNAMESE NEWS AGENCY (VNA) also denied the saying that Jakarta and Hanoi were still negotiating and Vietnam held foreign oil companies responsible for all the consequences of their exploration in the disputed areas.

Indonesia had abandoned the principle of "median lines" and Vietnam had stopped using the "thalwed" system in the talks following the law of the sea convention last April, the paper said. Indonesia has allowed five foreign companies to conduct off-shore oil exploration near the Natuna Islands, believed to contain substantial oil deposits.

The paper said that before the fall of the south Vietnamese government, Indonesia had sent warships to the disputed Natuna Islands to protect the foreign firms from south Vietnamese planes. Indonesia has built an airbase at Ranai, one of Natuna Islands, which was recently inaugurated by Defence Minister General Mohammad Yusuf. A number of F-5E skyhawk jet fighters and Hercules C-130 transport aircraft are based there.

USSR OFFERS TO HELP WITH TRANSMIGRATION PROGRAM

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 29 (AFP) -- The Soviet Union wants to help Indonesia makes its transmigration program a success by providing more agricultural equipment, Soviet deputy trade attache here, Vitaly I. Boiko, said last night. The Soviet Union was eager to help modernize agriculture in Indonesia so that the transmigration scheme would be successful, he said.

Trade relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union have always been in favour of Indonesia with a surplus of $43 million in 1980 and $35.6 million last year, he said. The Soviet Government was taking steps to balance the trade ties between the two countries by exporting more products to Indonesia, he added. The Soviet Union exports to Indonesia machinery, cotton, factory equipment, tractors and other heavy tools and imports from Indonesia rubber, oil, leather, pepper and other spices.

ENVOYS' ACTIVITIES AT ICO CONFERENCE REPORTED

BK260812 Jakarta ANTARA in English1702 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 26 (ANTARA) -- An amendment proposal of the Indonesian delegation toward a Moroccan draft resolution dealing with solution of the Iran-Iraq armed conflict was unanimously approved by the session of the political and infomation commission of the foreign ministers of the Islamic Conference Organization (ICO) lasting in Niamey, Niger, from August 23-26.

The Indonesian delegation,represented by director for international organization affairs of the Indonesian Foreign Ministry, Wisber Lubis, forwarded to the session the Indonesian stand that the conflicting parties, Iran and Iraq, should seek peaceful solution to end the Persian Gulf war under the spirit of Islamic brotherhood.

Such an Indonesian stand was also contained in the earlier speech of Indonesian Foreign Affairs Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, who had stressed the importance for promoting unity and integration among all the Islamic countries the world over.

The Indonesian delegation also called on the floor that the earlier statement of President Seni Kountche dealing with peace appeal to the Iran-Iraq warring parties be made as one of the clauses of consideration of the draft resolution. The Indonesian appeal was also fully agreed upon by some countries attending the Islamic countries meeting.

The draft resolution which will further be discussed in the ICO's coming plenary session appreciated efforts made by the peace commission which was established in the third Islamic summit in At-Ta'if in seeking solution of the Persian Gulf armed conflict.

The conflicting parties were also called upon to immediately cease fire and accept proposed Islamic peacekeeping troops supervising the truce. The ICO conference was participated in by 43 Islamic countries except Egypt and Afghanistan.

BORDER TALKS WITH PAPUA NEW GUINEA END

BK280920 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0710 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] Jakarta, August 28 (ANTARA) -- The three-day Indonesia-Papua New Guinea joint border committee meeting ending in Denpasar, Bali, Friday stressed the importance for promoting a special bilateral cooperation dealing with traditional border crossing, exchanges of information on border development and communications.

Non-traditional border crossing between the two countries was also among the important issues taken up in the meeting.

The Indonesian delegation to the meeting, led by Sudarmono, and its PNG counterpart, led by Paulias Matane, shared the same opinion that the two countries should stick to the 1975 agreement dealing with solution of the possible common border problems.

The Indonesian and PNG delegations also expressed satisfaction over the mutual understanding and goodwill shown by the two sides to maintain proper neighbouring relations between the two countries. Meanwhile, Indonesian delegation leader Sudarmono said he was convinced that any common border problem could best be solved if the two countries' governments showed more openness in dealing with the issue.

The PNG delegation leader, Paulias Matane, on the other hand, stressed the need for the two countries to maintain the balance of development around the common borders with a proper respect to traditional rights of the surrounding people. The two sides also agreed to continue the bilateral meeting in Papua New Guinea next year. [Words indistinct] Matane, who is secretary general of the PNG Foreign Ministry, visited some tourist objects in the paradise island of Bali following conclusions of the meeting. Friday night the PNG delegation was scheduled to return home.

PRESIDENT'S SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES SUCCESSION ISSUE

HK280225 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 27 Aug 82 pp 7, 14

[Speech of Presidential Spokesman Adrian Cristobal before Manila Rotary Club, 5 August 1982 -- Part I]

[Text] Last month when President Marcos went to Saudi Arabia, there was an understandable but quite unwarranted consternation about a secret memorandum to the chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. Being human we Filipinos love a good story, specially when it is of extreme confidentiality, and we'll probably be unhappy with full disclosure. Perhaps, the doctrine of executive privilege has been formulated to indulge this propensity.

Anyway, what did this secret memorandum to the chief of staff contain? First of all, President Marcos directed Gen. Fabian Ver that in case of any doubt as to the latter's action in the event that the president may not perform his duties, he, the chief of staff, should see to it that the provision on succession, Article VII, Sections 4 and 7, of the Constitution are complied with. Then the president cited the armed forces' enviable tradition of complete subordination to civilian authority and the Constitution. Finally, the president said: "You are well aware that under the channel of command, only the president as the commander-in-chief of the armed forces can directly command the chief of staff, the various service commands and the commanders of field units...no direct authority in the civilian government and the military can direct the armed forces, dispose of various operating units, officers and personnel, or deploy them, except the commander-in-chief, or the chief of staff, when so authorized by the commander-in-chief."

This is nothing more or less than a clarification of the channel of command and crystallization of constitutional duty in the event of an emergency involving the capability of the chief executive where conceivably some confusion may arise. Significantly, the Constitution emerges here, as it should, as the bedrock of our stability.

What seems to be worrying some of us is the probability of a constitutional crisis. This is rather strange, since we have never had one. The closest we came to a constitutional crisis was at the turn of the century when the Paterno Cabinet proposed to the Americans -- without much success -- an autonomous government for the Philippines. Mabini vigorously opposed this on the ground that it violated the very constitution which Paterno and his group had framed and ratified in Malolos. Proclamation 1081, which came a little more than two generations later, although challenged before the Supreme Court, was an issue whose resolution could have been anticipated; for it was based on a strict construction of the commander-in-chief provision of the previous Constitution. Now, a constitutional crisis might have arisen out of the present Constitution if its validity had not been upheld by the Supreme Court. But it was. And the constitution stands. If, then, the anxiety about a constitutional crisis is ill-founded from the point-of-view of both experience and logic, why is there apprehension about presidential succession, which is a constitutional matter?

Article VII, Section 4 provides: "If at the time fixed for the beginning of his term, the president-elect shall have died or shall have failed to qualify or if the president shall not have been chosen, the Executive Committee, headed by the prime minister, as hereinafter provided, shall exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the president until a president shall have been elected and qualified. If the Batasang Pambansa withdraws its confidence in the prime minister, the speaker of the Batasang Pambansa shall act as president until a president shall have been elected and qualified.

"In the event of death or failure to qualify as herein provided, the Batasang Pambansa shall call a special election in the manner provided in Section 7 hereof."

Section 7, in turn, specifies that if "the permanent disability, death, removal from office or resignation of the president occurs earlier than 18 months before the expiration of his term, the Batasang Pambansa shall, within thirty days from the time the vacancy occurs, call a special election to be held not earlier than 45 days nor later than 60 days from the time of such call to elect a president to serve the unexpired term."

It must be said, therefore, that any apprehension about presidential succession is unfounded, but to the extent that it is also a sincere apprehension, it must be directly addressed.

Some say that the Constitution, being new, is untested, but this ignores two obvious and basic facts. The first is that our people's adherence to constitutions is a matter of record. We have had three and our people have always supported them. The second fact is that the constitution is the source of our present stability.

But a deeper source of anxiety is, ironically, our very stability now. It is President Marcos who has been keeping this country together in its most dangerous years of passage. There are those, therefore, who ask if there is, or what would be, life after Marcos? This anxiety recognizes the personal authority and power of the man who as a consequence is regarded as a national anchor on the one hand and villified as a dictator on the other. But sentiments are misguided. Any freshman in political science understands that Marcos' powers, quite apart from his personal qualities, derive from the Constitution and any successor will have the necessary powers for the maintenance of stability.

It is apparent, however, that the anxiety over succession stems from varying considerations about the identity of the probably successor. Not process, or the how, but the who is the nagging question in some peoples' minds.

REACTION IN U.S. TO ANTI-MARCOS GROUPS HAILED

HK280152 Manila TIMES JOURNAL in English 27 Aug 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Do Americans View Us Differently Now?"]

[Text] Finally, some Americans are waking up to the reality that radical Filipino elements in the United States have become potential threats to public safety and could be possible causes of public disorder in the immediate future.

The revelation is timely, coming as it does on the eve of the scheduled state visit of President Marcos to the U.S. sometime next month.

The statement of U.S. Rep. MacDonald (Democrat-Georgia) on the threat posed by anti-Marcos pressure groups in America should not be taken lightly. Hundreds of Filipino radicals sought refuge in the United States when President Marcos imposed martial law on this country in 1972. The bulk of these refugees consisted of die-hard communists, political oppositionists or disgruntled elements.

Of them, Rep. MacDonald said: "I ask my colleagues to consider carefully the anti-American goals of these militant pressure groups and to recognize that the ultimate beneficiaries of the U.S. withdrawal from the Philippines will be the Communist Chinese and the Soviet Union."

The handful of activists opposing Marcos and expected to give the president some embarrassing moments during his state visit call themselves CAMD and Philippine Solidarity Network. They have been lambasting President Reagan's "stronger America" foreign policy and Washington's invitation for Mr. Marcos to visit the U.S.

America has always been the bastion of liberty and freedom. Within its complex democratic processes, peoples of various colors, ethnic background and religious creeds came together to breathe the free air of an enlightened and free republic. That radical ideologues have taken advantage of these rights to spout their subtle propaganda to undermine the very pillars of American democracy is just one of those things in the U.S.

But in a developed and highly industrialized and educated country like America where people are fully aware of the perils posed by anarchism, nihilism and communism, Filipino leftists can only become a nuisance and, at worst, a threat to peace and order.

It is good to know that the pendulum has begun to swing backward. Where in 1975 many American legislators were openly critical of the martial law administration of Mr. Marcos and even openly symptathized with his radical critics, today they have become more understanding of the steps taken by the Filipino chief executive to stop the incursion of communism.

A fresh breeze may be sweeping across the American heartland. It is hoped that the breeze bears with it the same warmth and understanding most Filipinos have of Americans, despite past differences.

ARRESTS OF DISSIDENTS BY MILITARY REPORTED

HK290022 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] The military has arrested several key members of the dissident movement engaged in the conspiracy to stage violence and terrorism nationwide next month. This was announced yesterday by President Marcos after a conference with intelligence officers. He said the arrests took place in various parts of the country.

Those arrested included high-ranking members of the Communist Party of the Philippines, the New People's Army, the Socdem [Social-Democrat] United Democratic Front, and the Moro National Liberation Front. Those apprehended were led by Isagani Serrano, a leading member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Philippines, in charge of mass action, and Jocelyn de Guzman, a well-known subversive. Serrano was identified as the organizer of demonstrations, especially violent ones.

SURRENDER OF 1,445 MNLF MEMBERS REPORTED

HK290045 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] Military authorities said 1,445 Moro National Liberation front members and sympathizers in Zamboanga del Norte surrendered yesterday. Brig. Gen (Serillo Bueno), PC [Philippine Constabulary] Region IX commander, accepted the surrender in a ceremony in Dipolog City. The group was led by MNLF combatants, who yielded 37 high-powered firearms.

AGRICULTURE MINISTER TAZAWA LEAVES FOR PRC

OW021241 Tokyo KYODO in English 1142 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sep 2, KYODO -- Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa left Tokyo for Beijing, Thursday on a 12-day official visit to make an on-the-spot investigation of an agricultural development project in northeastern China. He will confer with his Chinese counterpart Lin Hujia in Beijing, Friday and exchange views on the Japan-China agricultural cooperation program.

The Japanese minister will proceed to Heilongjiang Province in northeastern China next Tuesday to closely inspect the joint development project by Japanese and Chinese agricultural experts in marshy ground located at the junction of three big rivers. Tazawa will return to Beijing later and pay a courtesy call on Vice Premier Wan Li at the latter's office before returning home September 13.

SUZUKI TALKS TO PRESS ON SEALANE DEFENSE

[Text] Tokyo, Sep 3, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Friday, Japan's policy to defend its sealane extending 1,000 nautical miles from its shores should be carried out within the framework of Japan's independent defense policy.

Speaking to newsmen at his official residence here, Suzuki said strict constraints should be imposed on such sealane operations under the peace Constitution, if such defense operations are to be carried out under the collective security measures between Japan and the U.S. and other allied nations.

The prime minister made his comment on the outcome of the defense consultations with the U.S. in Honolulu, where the U.S. officials urged Japan to drastically increase its air defense, antisubmarine and ground defense capability.

Government on Bonds, Sealanes

OW030607 Tokyo KYODO in English 0534 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sep 3, KYODO -- The government Friday reiterated its official pledge to end dependence on deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1984, but did not rule out the possibility of floating huge amounts of such bonds during fiscal 1982 and 1983. This was in reply to questions submitted to the government by Seiichi Inaba, Socialist member of the House of Representatives, about the pledge made earlier by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and his political responsibility in this regard.

However, the government promised its maximum efforts to realize the pledge aimed at achieving fiscal health. The Cabinet adopted such an official position paper Friday morning.

The government is expected to suffer a revenue shortfall of nearly yen 6 trillion (dollar 23 billion) in fiscal 1982 ending next March. As a result, it will have to issue huge amounts of deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1982 and 1983.

In its position paper, the government refuted Inaba's claim that former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka practically controls the Suzuki government.

It also rejected the allegation that Japan has committed itself to the defense of sealanes extending up to 1,000 nautical miles off the Japanese coast at a meeting of Japanese and U.S. defense officials in Honolulu. "Japan has not made any pledge to the U.S. for the defense of such sealanes, though it is strengthening its sea defense capability by stages," the position paper said.

ENGINEERING TEST SATELLITE LAUNCH 'SUCCESSFUL'

[Text] Tanegashima, Kagoshima Pref., Sept 3, KYODO -- Japanese space engineers successfully launched an engineering test satellite (ETS) III into earth orbit Friday afternoon from the space center on Tanegashima Island, southern Japan. The National Space Development Agency which operates the satellite named it as Kiku (Chrysanthemum) IV.

The satellite is to revolve around the earth every 105 minutes at an average altitude of some 1,000 kilometers from the surface of the earth, the agency said. The artificial moon was launched atop a three-stage N-rocket developed by the agency and it was placed into orbit some 27 minutes after launching by disconnecting it from the final stage of the N-rocket while flying over Santiago, Chile, a spokesman at the agency said.

The cubic satellite 85 centimeters long each side and weighing about 385 kilograms, is equipped with two big wings of solar batteries capable of generating 300 kilowatts per hour. The satellite cost some yen 4.3 billion.

Space experts will study the functions of the satellite's solar batteries and three-axial-altitude-control system which is necessary for orbit controll of large satellites such as marine observation satellites and a large geostationary satellite weighing some 500 kilograms to be launched in 1985.

TRANSPORT MINISTRY DRAWS UP FY 83 BUDGET REQUEST

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 28, KYODO -- The Transport Ministry said Saturday that it will ask for a fiscal 1983 budgetary appropriation of 1.51 billion yen ($6 million) to prepare for the construction of a 5,000-ton helicopter carrier.

The ministry explained that such ships will be needed by the Maritime Safety Agency (Coast Guard) when Japan assumes responsibility in the future for search and rescue operations over 1,200 nautical miles from its coasts under international convention. At present, Japan conducts operations only within 500 nautical miles of its coasts, the ministry said.

A 5,000-ton-class ship capable of carrying two helicopters actually costs about 10 billion yen ($40 million). But the ministry said it will ask for 1.51 billion yen in the initial year only for design and other preliminary necessities for the construction of the vessel.

The ministry said that it will also ask for another 3 billion yen ($11 million) to be earmarked in the fiscal 1983 national budget as an initial appropriation for the expansion work at the Haneda International Airport. To meet increasing demand for the use of the airport and solution of the noise pollution caused by airplanes at the time of landing and takeoff, the ministry said it plans to expand the area of the airport 2.7 fold through land reclamation. The whole expansion, including construction of three new runways to be completed in about 10 years' time, will cost about 500 billion yen ($2 billion), the ministry said.

The total budgetary appropriation requested by the ministry for fiscal 1983 will come to 11.08 billion yen ($44 million), the ministry added.

SOUTH KOREA'S CALL FOR DIALOGUE DENOUNCED

SK030438 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2238 GMT 2 Sep 82

[NODONG SINMUN 3 September special article: "The Splittist Scheme Being Committed Under the Pretext of Reunification"]

[Text] Through pro-government propaganda mouthpieces, the South Korean puppets are now staging commotions about dialogue, reunification and national harmony with each passing day, pretending that they are interested in the question of national reunification.

The puppets' babbling about reunification is not new. It is nothing but an old document which the puppets formerly advertised but were forced to throw into the waste basket in the face of public denunciation at home and abroad.

The fact that the South Korean puppets are preaching an old document at the same time when they are engaged in frenzied diplomatic visits under the pretext of improving external relations is a ridiculous commotion staged by those who are trying to emerge from the isolation and rejection faced at home and abroad. The puppets will never be able to mislead public opinion by such deceptive propaganda.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean authorities have assumed the role of shock brigade, following splittist lines, abandoning the conscience of the Korean people and the pledges they have committed before the nation in the North-South joint communique.

South Korea, which is under the military occupation of the U.S. imperialists, is a complete colony of the U.S. imperialists. The U.S. imperialists are the practical rulers of South Korea, making all decisions and exercising all control ranging from the exercise of the military prerogative of supreme command to control of the domestic and external policies of the puppet regime and supervising and controlling the execution of those policies.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring is nothing but a tool fabricated by the U.S. imperialists to maintain South Korea as their colony. For this reason, the puppets have no other duty but to obediently execute orders and directions from their masters.

The theory of reunification that the South Korean puppets are raving about is what was given to them by the U.S. imperialists in an effort to cover up their splittist maneuvers, whose chief purpose is to perpetuate the division under the pretext of reunification.

This is well manifested in the so-called proposals for reunification that the puppets have been preaching under the control of the U.S. imperialists.

The deceptiveness of the puppets' theory of reunification written by the U.S. imperialists is completely shown in the so-called 22 January proposal, which is centered on a provisional agreement on the basic relations between the North and South and general elections.

If we are to reunify the divided fatherland, we naturally should demolish the wall separating the North and South and abandon the act of encouraging division. In short, the question between the North and South is not a question between different peoples and it cannot be resolved through an agreement.

Despite such clear facts, the puppets clamored about concluding an agreement. The puppets do not mean to demolish the wall separating the North and South, but to build a still higher wall.

The fact that the South Korean puppets proposed in the agreement to maintain the existing armistice in force and to respect treaties and agreements concluded with third countries is nothing but a scheme to perpetuate the U.S. occupation of South Korea, to maintain the aggressive and sell-out treaties and agreements that the puppets have concluded with their U.S. masters and to maintain the existing division.

The so-called principle of national self-determination and general elections based on democratic procedures that the puppets clamored about are also preposterous. Under the conditions that the U.S. imperialists are occupying South Korea and trampling upon the nation's independence, are elections on the basis of the principle of national self-determination possible? Also, under the condition that in South Korea numerous politicians are imprisoned and people are taken away if they speak about reunification, can we still talk about democratic procedures?

The puppets' advocating talks between the supreme leaders is not for reunification but for perpetuation of division. The question of our country's reunification can be successfully resolved only through the united strength of the broad patriotic forces of the North and South on the condition that U.S. troops are withdrawn. This is a national demand arising from the pan-national character of the question of national reunification.

Reunification of our country is work for the benefit of the entire Korean people in the North and South and work that can be resolved only when all the Korean people are united. To solve the basic problems for national reunification, it is necessary to eradicate the misunderstandings and distrust between the North and South caused by continued division, promote confidence and understanding and achieve national unity.

Dialogue between the North and South which is to reflect the consensus of the people cannot be monopolized by a few people. As we have persistenly asserted, North-South negotiations should become negotiations for reunification and, to this end, people who oppose division and aspire for reunification should sit face to face.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is encouraging confrontation between the North and South by staging anticommunist commotions and suppressing the patriotic people demanding reunification, is not qualified to speak about reunification. By proposing the talks between the supreme authorities, the puppets exposed their intention to monopolize dialogue, to perpetuate division by continuously laying obstacles to a solution to the question of reunification and to permanently offer South Korea to the U.S. imperialists as a colony.

History shows that as long as the U.S. imperialists continue occupying South Korea and the South Korean puppets -- becoming tools serving the U.S. imperialists in enacting their policy of subjugation and colonialization -- continue to execute their masters' splittist maneuvers, nothing will be solved, no matter how much dialogue is carried out, and we cannot achieve the cause of reunification. In particular, we have nothing to gain from having dialogue with the Chon Tu-hwan clique -- a group of most vicious executors of the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy and splittists.

Reunifying our divided country cannot be achieved through only [word indistinct] but through the course of taking practical measures to eradicate the obstacles laid to reunification. Forcing the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops to withdraw from South Korea is a prerequisite for the achievement of the national reunification.

Not only has the Chon Tu-hwan clique dispensed with uttering a word about forcing the U.S. imperialists -- the fundamental obstacle to our country's reunification -- to withdraw from South Korea, but it also is begging for the permanent occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists.

It is like putting the cart before the ox to speak about reunification with obstacles laid to reunification left untouched, and it is a stark lie. Essentially, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is not the least interested in reunification. It is a dirty imperialist stooge which is devoted to the perpetuation of division on orders from its U.S. masters. Dialogue, elections and reunification babbled about by the puppets are all false. The puppets' real intentions are to maintain South Korea as a U.S. imperialist colony, by perpetuating division.

It is widely known that the Chon Tu-hwan clique, ever since it usurped power by bayonet, babbled that reunification with the North is impossible and has hindered reunification by offering such proposals as simultaneous UN admission of the North and South, cross recognition of the North and South and even the theory of reunification in the 2000's.

The first thing the Chon Tu-hwan clique did after taking power was to visit its U.S. masters and beg for a permanent occupation of South Korea by U.S. troops -- the basic obstacles to reunification -- and massacred the patrioitc people in Kwangju, imprisoning democratic personages such as Kim Tae-chung en masse.

As clearly exposed in all facts, the proposals put forth by the Chon Tu-hwan clique are nothing but camouflage designed to cover up the maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas by the U.S. imperialists. Nonetheless, the puppets put the label of reunification on them and are now sticking to splittist maneuvers. This is nothing but a trick to raise its popularity and to cover up its stooge-like nature by pretending that South Korea is an independent country.

Voices now supporting and welcoming our proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] and voices calling for an earlier realization of it are growing with each passing day at home and abroad. Embarrassed at this, the South Korean puppets are trying to prevent our most realistic and just and fair proposal for reunification from having any influence at home and abroad by pretending that they are interested in the question of reunification.

In South Korea the people's struggle to oppose fascism and division and to achieve democracy and reunification is continuing. Faced with an irretrievable situation, the puppets, following the U.S. imperialists, are trying to stop tthe people's struggle by misleading public opinion under the pretext of false reunification.

The South Korean puppet clique's game of reunification is the dance of a puppet dancing to the tune of the U.S. imperialists. The puppet's game only further exposes its nature as a shock brigade executing the splittist lines of the U.S. imperialists -- the wicked enemy of reunification.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique should immediately abandon the criminal maneuvers of mocking the nation over the sacred question of reunification.

All the Korean people of the North and South will surely crush the splittist maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique, and see to it that the historic cause of national reunification is achieved.

VRPR CRITICIZES CHON TRIP TO AFRICA, CANADA

SK030349 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Dialogue from "Focus of Topics" program]

[Text] [First speaker] How are you? Despite the strong protest and condemnation at home and abroad, the Chon Tu-hwan ring's junket to the African nations and Canada has been completed. Now, let us talk about the purpose of his current visit to the five nations first.

[Second speaker] Before I talk about the purpose of Chon Tu-hwan's trip to Africa, let me first talk briefly about the background of his African trip. As you know, we can say that the time of Chon Tu-hwan's trip to Africa synchronized with a time when the crisis of the U.S. colonial rule over South Korea has been further aggravated and Chon Tu-hwan's military fascist rule of seeking reliance on the United States has been subjected to stronger condemnation and rejection at home and abroad.

The anti-U.S. sentiment, which has rapidly increased since the Kwangju incident, has risen to a flood tide recently. As a result, such bold anti-U.S. struggles as the burning of the U.S. flag at Kwangwon University and the arson case by patriotic youths and students at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan were waged.

Besides these, the voices "United States, withdraw from South Korea" and "Yankee, go home" are spreading throughout the country.

Furthermore, because of various forms of swindling incidents which have taken place in succession, the economic stagnation which has reached the worst situation, the increasing economic plight of the people, the frantic anticommunist policy for confrontation and the policy of division and war, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist ring has been not only subjected to condemnation and rejection at home and abroad but also isolated internationally.

Chon Tu-hwan visited the African nations and Canada precisely at such a time.

[First speaker] From what you have said, I think we can easily and clearly see the purpose of his recent visit.

[Second speaker] Yes, it's true. In a nutshell, Chon Tu-hwan's recent visit was aimed at escaping these crises and isolation at home and abroad. In other words, Chon Tu-hwan's recent visit to these countries was intended to conceal his dirty nature as a colonial puppet and murderer and to recover his lost popularity, deceiving and deriding public opinion at home and abroad. His visit was also intended to court the good graces of the African countries by making South Korea appear to be a sovereign state so that he can escape the international isolation.

[First speaker] You are right. This can be clearly proved by Chon Tu-hwan's remarks in the African countries and Canada. Upon arriving in Kenya, the first country to visit, he shamelessly clamored that he would be completely faithful to the ideal of anticolonialism. This is indeed preposterous.

[First speaker] I agree with you. It is indeed shameless and ridiculous for the U.S. colonial puppet to talk about opposition to colonialism and faithfulness to anticolonialism.

[Second speaker] All people of the world know well that South Korea is a U.S. colony occupied by U.S. forces and the United States is acting as the master. It is the United States that controls the internal and external policies of the South Korean Government and supervises the implementation of these policies. It is the United States which grasps the arteries of the South Korean economy and exercises strong influence over it. It is also the United States that exercises the prerogative of supreme command over the South Korean Army.

Chon Tu-hwan is also a stooge fostered by his U.S. boss, like the successive rulers of South Korea. He is a colonial errand boy who has faithfully executed the U.S. boss's colonial rule and policy of aggression against Korea.

[First speaker] That's right. In fact, South Korea is a sovereign state in name only. It is virtually a colony like Manchukuo, which was the puppet state established by the Japanese imperialists in the northeast region of China in the past.

[Second speaker] It is indeed ridiculous and preposterous for such a colonial stooge to clamor about the struggle against colonialism, the ideal of anticolonialism and so forth. This is nothing but Chon Tu-hwan's trick to cover up the fact that South Korea is a U.S. colony and that he is the dirty double colonial stooge, like Yi Wan-yong and Son Pyong-chu, who sold out the country to the Japanese imperialists in the past.

Judging from the fact that he is the U.S. colonial puppet who cannot move even one step without directives from the United States, it is only clear that his recent trip to Africa and Canada was made in accordance with U.S. directives.

[First speaker] Yes. During his recent junket, Chon Tu-hwan, it is said, begged for support for the so-called threadbare reunification policy or proposal for direct talks between the highest responsible persons in the North and South -- which have worn out and been denounced and rejected at home and abroad -- while conducting propaganda about them. What do you think of it?

[First speaker] Originally, Chon Tu-hwan is the national splittist who is not even qualified to talk about reunification or talks. He is punishing and murdering those who cry our for reunification, while saying that the only way to deal with the North is confrontation and that no one should imagine peaceful reunification. While begging for the permanent stationing of the U.S. forces -- the obstacle to the reunification -- in South Korea, they are inspiring anticommunist racket and the North-South confrontation.

[Second speaker] You are right. When Chon Tu-hwan vociferously conducted a propaganda about reunification and so on in Africa, he inspired the sense of North-South confrontation by waging a large-scale war game called "Ulji Focus Lens '82" on the assumption of the northward invasion, while keeping tune with United States.

Nonetheless, Chon Tu-hwan went so far as to even conduct abroad propaganda about the so-called reunification policy -- which he had conducted propaganda about in Seoul. Such a policy is nothing but a disguise aimed at covering up their antinational and anti-popular criminal nature and cheating and ridiculing public opinion.

The so-called proposal for simultaneous entry into the United Nations, which Chon Tu-hwan spread propaganda about, is also a freak variety of the fraudulent splittist policy. This proposal is nothing but a ruse aimed at fabricating two Koreas and perpetuating the country's division.

[First speaker] Yes. During the recent junket, while depicting himself as a partner of the developing African nations, Chon Tu-hwan babbled about mutual cooperation and the promotion of friendship. He even made remarks supporting the cause of the Namibian and Palestinian people. This is really shameless gibberish.

[Second speaker] Yes. It has been well known to the world that South Korea's successive rulers -- as the twin stooges of the United States along with the South African racists Israeli aggressors -- have acted as the enemy of the peoples of the Third World, nations including the African and Arab peoples.

Despite such facts, Chon Tu-hwan, pretending that he has become an angel, babbled as if he were supporting the cause of the African and Arab peoples and opposing the South African racists and Israeli aggressors. His purpose in doing this is to boost his dirty image in these countries and win their support so as to emerge from the isolation he faces.

[First speaker] I think Chon Tu-hwan, no matter how much lipservice he may pay, will never be able to cover up his dirty nature as a U.S. stooge and as an enemy of our people and peoples of the African countries.

[Second speaker] It is nothing but a political farce that a dirty colonial stooge should prattle about partnership or about promoting friendship. In addition, it is more ridiculous that a person who is sitting on a mountain of debt totalling billions and billions of dollars and begging for more money should clamor about cooperation. Such acts on the part of Chon Tu-hwan's visit to the African countries and Canada is nothing but a visit of deception to cover up his dirty nature and to mislead public opinion at home and abroad so as to emerge from the isolation he faces in the international community. It is also a splittist visit to win support for the two Koreas line and eventually to perpetuate national division.

However, he cannot cover up his dirty nature with such poor tricks nor can he emerge from the isolation he faces in the international community. I think our people will condemn and reject the Chon Tu-hwan clique's criminal acts of embellishing its visit to African countries and Canada and will bravely join the sacred struggle to overthrow it.

[First speaker] Right. We have run out of time. We must end our program now. Thank you for speaking to us.

[Second speaker] Thank you.

REGIONAL SEMINAR ON IMPROVED RICE YIELDS HELD

Delegations' Arrival

SK010345 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0331 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 1 (KCNA) -- Delegations and delegates to the study tour and Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to be held in Pyongyang arrived here on August 31 by plane. They are:

A delegation of the People's Republic of China headed by Lu Liangshu, president of the Agricultural Academy of China; a delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by U Tin Hlaing, director of the Agriculture Corporation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry; delegate of the Republic of India V.B. Chai, director of the rice development of the Ministry of Agriculture; delegate of the Kingdom of Nepal Amresh Man Pradhanang, deputy director general of the Department of Agriculture of the Ministry of Agriculture; a delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan headed by Muhamad Afzal Malik, director general of the Runjab Provincial Agricultural Bureau of Pakistan; a delegation of the Kingdom of Thailand headed by Suvit Pushpavesa, researcher of the Rice Research Institute of the Agricultural Bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives; and delegate of the People's Republic of Bangladesh Kazi Azizul Haq, researcher of the Bangladesh Rice Research Institute.

The guests were met at the airport by Vice-Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol and personages concerned.

Opening Day Proceedings

SK020936 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] The study tour and Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the DPRK opened in Pyongyang on 1 September. At the study tour and consultation, the successes and experiences in agricultural production, particularly in achieving stable high yields of paddy rice by brilliantly applying the chuche farming method in the DPRK under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song will be studied and the successes and experiences gained by Asian countries in this field will be exchanged.

The study tour and consultation, which is being held under the circumstances in which the demand of food is increasing throughout the world with each passing day and, accordingly, top priority is being given to work to increase the production of food, is of great significance in increasing agricultural products by achieving stable high yields of paddy rice and in developing friendly and cooperative relations among the countries participating in this study tour and consultation.

Present at the consultation are the PRC delegation led by Lu Liangshu, president of the Agricultural Academy of China; the delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma led by U Tin Hlaing, director of the agricultural corporation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry; delegate of the Republic of India V.B. Chai, director of the rice development department of the Ministry of Agriculture; delegate of the Kingdom of Nepal Armesh Man Pradhanang, deputy director general of the Department of Agriculture of the Ministry of Agriculture; the delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan led by Muhamad Afzal Malik, director general of the Punjab Provincial Agricultural Bureau of Pakistan; the delegation of the Kingdom of Thailand headed by Suvit Pushpavesa, researcher of the Rice Research Institute of Agriculture and Cooperatives; and delegate of the People's Republic of Bangladesh, Kazi Azizul Haq, researcher of the Bangladesh Rice Research Institute.

The DPRK delegation, led by Vice Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol, is also present.

Comrade Kim Chang-chu, vice premier of the Administration Council and chairman of the Agricultural Commission of the DPRK, made a congratulatory speech.

Yi Hak-chol, vice chairman of the Agricultural Commission and head of the DPRK delegation, announced the opening of the meeting. Ardently welcoming the delegations and delegates from various countries to participate in the study tour and Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the DPRK, he said: The study tour and consultation is of significance in the development of agriculture of each country.

He further said: Through this opportunity, we will exchange and learn good experiences of each country, including our experiences gained in the domain of the cultivation of paddy rice. This will greatly help each country achieve high and stable yields of paddy rice. He continued: The study and consultation will be an excellent opportunity to exchange and learn from each other's experiences. Through this cooperation, friendly relations among the countries participating in the meeting will be closer.

At the meeting, Comrade Kim Chang-chu, vice premier of the Administration Council and chairman of the Agricultural Commission of the DPRK, delivered a congratulatory speech. Following this, the head of the PRC delegation, Lu Liangshu, delivered a congratulatory speech. Expressing pleasure with his participation in the Asian regional consultation and study tour on the achievement of stable and high yields of paddy rice, he extended deep thanks to the DPRK Government.

He went on to say: Under the leadership of the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and the KWP, great successes and rich experiences have been attained in agricultural production. I firmly believe that the current study tour and consultation will greatly contribute to the development of the cultivation of paddy rice in Asian region.

He noted: Developing the production of paddy rice in the Asian region, which holds the top position in the size of area under the cultivation of paddy rice and its production, is a question affecting everybody and is of great significance in resolving the demand for food throughout the world which grows with each passing day.

He stressed: The production of paddy rice in the DPRK holds an important proportion in grain production and has reached a very high level. There are technical problems in the country which are valuable for us to study.

He continued: Managing water well, extending irrigation networks, nursing seedlings in cold beds, increasing paddy field cultivated with the help of machines and introducing rational planting method are the most effective methods to increase the output of rice per chongbo. We think that your country's technical measures to increase the production of paddy rice are of significance in the development of the cultivation of rice in the Asian region.

He pointed out: Rice is among the staple grains in China. In 1980, the area in which rice was cultivated accounted for 29 percent of the total area under grain cultivation and rice production was 43 percent of the total grain output.

He continued: China has a long history in the cultivation of paddy rice and good experience in the rice cultivation. Since the PRC was founded and socialist agriculture was created, rice production has increased and rice research work has greatly developed. He added: Through the exchange of experiences among the delegations of countries participating in the meeting, China will gain assistance in the production of paddy rice. He concluded: I firmly believe that we will register successes in the study tour and consultation.

A congratulatory speech was also made by Muhammad Afzal Malik, head of the delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan. He said: On behalf of delegations and scientists present at the consultation and study tour, I express thanks to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to the Korean people for having made it possible to arrange the study tour and consultation in the DPRK.

He noted: Only when we continuously increase agricultural production can we feed an increasing population and guarantee the supply of materials in good time for industry based on agriculture.

He pointed out: For good soil and water management, the selection of good strains of rice and the modernization of farming machines, functionaries and scientists in the agricultural sector should receive great, wise, devoted and encouraging guidance. Without such guidance, we cannot expect high yields in agricultural production. He went on to say: Since they are holding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in high esteem and are under his leadership, the Korean people are registering great successes in agricultural production and leading the happiest lives.

He added: The DPRK is reaping high yields of over 7 tons per chongbo. We hope that we will learn of your experiences during the consultation and study tour. I once again extend thanks to your country for warmly welcoming us. I firmly believe that the consultation and study tour will bring about great successes.

Amresh Man Pradhanang, delegate of the Kingdom of Nepal, said in his congratulatory speech: On behalf of delegations and delegates present on the study tour and the Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of rice in the DPRK, I express deep thanks to you for having made it possible to arrange the meeting in the DPRK.

He further said: Increasing agricultural production when population and the demand of food are increasing throughout the world with each passing day is a very important question to which the first priority should be given. He noted: Rice is a staple in many Asian countries. The consultation and study tour is of great significance. He concluded: The successes attained by the DPRK under the leadership of the great leader President Kim Il-song in achieving stability in rice production and increasing its output carry weighty significance. We think that we will learn precious experiences during the consultation and study tour. I am convinced that the discussions at the consultation and the recommendations to be adopted at the meeting will be very useful for increasing rice output and agricultural production in Asia.

The consultation elected a chairman, vice chairman and rapporteur general. Vice Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol, head of the DPRK delegation, was elected chairman; director of the Rice Development Department of the Ministry of Agriculture of India V.B. Chai, delegate of the Republic of India, vice chairman; Abdul Majid Chaudhry, member of the delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, rapporteur general.

The agenda items adopted at the consultation include general studies on the stable high yields of paddy rice in Korea, Korea's experiences in achieving stable high yields of paddy rice, experiences of Korea in other agricultural dmains, presentation of experiences by delegations of other countries and a study tour.

Vice Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol, head of the delegation of the DPRK, delivered a key-note speech on "general studies on stable high yields of paddy rice in Korea".

The consultation continues.

Call on Kim Chang-chu

SK021226 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0803 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 2 (KCNA) -- Kim Chang-chu, vice-premier and chairman of the Agricultural Commission, on September 1 met and had a friendly conversation with delegations and delegates of various countries to the study tour and Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea who paid a courtesy call on him.

Present on the occasion were: the delegation of the People's Republic of China headed by Lu Liangshu, president of the Agricultural Academy of China; the delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by U Tin Hlaing, director of the agriculture corporation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry; delegate of the Republic of India V.B. Chai, director of the Rice Development Department of the Ministry of Agriculture; delegate of the Kingdom of Nepal Amresh Man Pradhanang, deputy director general of the Department of Agriculture of the Ministry of Agriculture; the delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan headed by Muhammad Afzal Malik, director general of the Punjab Provincial Agricultural Bureau of Pakistan; the delegation of the Kingdom of Thailand headed by Suvit Pushpavesa, researcher of the Rice Research Institute of the Agricultural Bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives; and delegate of the People's Republic of Bangladesh Kazi Azizul Haq, researcher of the Bangladesh Rice Research Institute. Vice-chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol and personages concerned were on hand.

DPRK UNFAO Committee Banquet

[Text] Pyongyang, September 2 (KCNA) -- The DPRK National Committee of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization and the Agricultural Commission arranged a banquet yesterday evening at the People's Palace of Culture in honour of the delegations and the delegates of different countries participating in the study tour and Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Present there were Vice-Premier and Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Kim Chang-chu, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Pak Hyong-ku, Vice-Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Yi Hak-chol and other personages concerned.

Addressing the banquet first, Vice-Premier and Chairman of the Agricultural Commission Kim Chang-chu said: The current study tour and consultation will prove to be an excellent occasion in finding a way for successfully solving the food problem, one of the most vital problems in peoples life. Noting that it is very important to increase the production of rice, a high-yielding crop, in satisfactorily solving the food problem, he said: Notably in our Asia, rice has traditionally been the staple grain crop. Therefore, to achieve its stable high yields is the key to the overall solution of the food problem in this region.

Saying that, if all countries exchanged their good experiences in rice cultivation and introduced them to suit their specific conditions, they would actively contribute to securing stable high yields of rice, he stated. In this sense, the study tour and consultation taking place in our country at the proposal of the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations is, indeed, of great significance.

He spoke of the great successes made by the Korean people in overall agricultural production, particularly in rice cultivation, under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our party. He expressed the belief that the study tour and consultation would serve as a good occasion in developing understanding and friendship between the Korean people and other Asian peoples.

V.B. Chai, delegate of the Republic of India, took the floor next on behalf of the delegations and delegates of different countries. He said he would like to express, first of all, thanks to the great leader President Kim Il-song and the people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea for the invitation extended to the delegates of Asian countries so they could learn the successes and experiences of scientific farming in the DPRK which reaps a bumper harvest every year. The stable high yield of paddy rice in the DPRK, we believe, is a result of a series of steps such as strengthened scientific researches, establishment of a complete fertilizing system and enhancement of the level of management, he said.

Noting that many farmers of the Asian region are now facing difficulties in irrigation, drainage, extermination of blight and noxious insects, fertilizing, and other problems, he said: We lay high hopes on your experiences in solving these basic problems.

The attendants of the banquet drank toasts to the development of friendly relations between our country and other Asian countries, to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il and to the good health and long life of the heads of state of the countries represented by the delegations and delegates present there.

KIM IL-SONG GREETS SRV LEADERS ON NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Pyongyang, September 1 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on September 1 sent a message of greetings to Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, and Comrade Truong Chinh, chairman of the State Council of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, on the occasion of the National Day of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The message reads:

I, on behalf of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people and on my own, extend felicitations to you and, through you, to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Vietnamese people on the occasion of the National Day of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

After the independence of the country, the Vietnamese people achiev d the complete Liberation and reunification of their country through their arduous struggle and are struggling for the fulfilment of the third five-year plan.

Believing that the friendly relations between the peoples of our two countries will develop, I take this opportunity to wish the Vietnamese people success in their struggle for building socialism.

KIM IL-SONG GREETS LIBYA ON 1 SEP ANNIVERSARY

SK311601 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1553 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Text] Pyongyang, August 31 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings on August 31 to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the great September 1 revolution of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, on the occasion of the 13th anniversary of the September 1 revolution of the Libyan people. The message reads:

On the 13th anniversary of the September 1 revolution of the Libyan people I warmly congratulate Your Excellency on behalf of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Korean people and on my own.

I take this opportunity to wish you and the friendly Libyan people greater successes in your struggle to create a new life.

UN DISAPPROVAL OF NORTH OVER RICE SEMINAR NOTED

[Text] Seoul, Aug 31 (YONHAP) -- An international conference on agriculture slated to be held in North Korea became almost abortive because Pyongyang denied South Korea's participation, the Foreign Ministry said Tuesday.

The conference, entitled "Study Tour and Regional Consultation on Achievement of Stable High Yields of Paddy Rice," was scheduled to begin Sept. 1 in Pyongyang under the co-auspices of North Korea and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations. Pyongyang, has however, been persistently trying to write off South Korean presence in the ten-day conference to be attended by 11 member countries in the Asian and Pacific region.

North Korea has been preparing to host the conference on orders from Kim Il-song since late June when FAO Director-General Edouard Saouma visited the North Korean capital, according to the ministry. Ever since that time, Pyongyang has consistently opposed the entry of the South Korean delegation into the meeting in defiance of an international convention guaranteeing the participation of every member country of an international organization.

In response to North Korea's diehard stand, the FAO decided not to participate in the Pyongyang conference and the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) withdrew a financial aid to the program, the ministry said.

South Korea intended to take advantage of the conference for the exchange of export opinions among the member countries as well as between South and North Korea, according to the ministry.

Observers here predict that North Korea might be compelled to go ahead with the conference without any participation or financial assistance of the FAO and the UNDP.

PAPER ANALYZES REAGAN'S POLICY TOWARD MIDEAST

SK030152 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 3 Sep 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Reagan Plan for Mideast"]

[Text] Closely following the evacuation of the last Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, President Ronald Reagan announced a new U.S. plan for settlement of the Middle East question, placing its focus on the establishment of Palestinian self-government in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip under Israeli occupation since 1967. The proposal, though cautiously described as a reflection of what the United States thinks is the best formula for a lasting peace, is meaningful in that it is the first coherent and overall peace blueprint enunciated by the Reagan administration for the Mideast.

While various ideas suggested and roles played by Washington during the past 20 months were more or less expedients if not follow-throughs of initiatives taken by the previous administration, the latest Reagan proposal squarely hits the right nail -- the Palestine issue -- and aims to bring Jordan, an integral party so far sitting on the sidelines, into the peace process.

It thus should be seen as a new American approach upgrading or superseding the Camp David formula which, despite its explicit provisions, has failed to provide a breakthrough in prolonged negotiations between Egypt and Israel on Palestinian autonomy.

The 1978 accord worked out by the Carter administration -- with which the new plan is supposed to be consistent, according to U.S. official insistence -- is after all virtually dead, since it has achieved its primary goals, the Egypt-Israel approchement, followed by the return of the Sinai Peninsula to Egyptian hands last April.

Like the Camp David framework, the Reagan formula, even if fully implemented, will be short of achieving an ultimate and comprehensive resolution of the Middle East problem. For instance, it does not envision the establishment of an independent Palestinian state, the core of the regional question, against which the president voiced categorical opposition, as he did against the Israeli annexation or permanent control of the occupied territories.

But then, the stark tension-ridden and intricate conditions in the region prohibit any once-and-for-all formula which, however desirable it might be, would not be feasible as a base for actual negotiations.

Accordingly, the new American overture is realistic, as it aims to pave the way for an evolutionary, ste-by-step process for Middle East peace, the Palestine problem included. In fact, Mr. Reagan himself described his plan as "part of a fresh start formula" for a durable, just and lasting peace.

What is particularly notable is that the proposal was made just hours after the last group of Palestine Liberation Organization fighters left Beirut, a departure for which the Israelis had vehemently fought to augment their security and in which the United States had been involved as an intermediary.

Their evacuation has indeed provided a rare momentum for starting negotiations among the parties concerned in a new dimension, and Mr. Reagan has quickly seized the moment in an action that is also obviously designed to check attempts by the Soviet Union and hard-line-Arab states to complicate the situation.

The U.S. plan must be a bitter pill to swallow for the Israelis, especially Premier Menahem Begin and his hard-core supporters. If so, it is a price these intransigent Israelis have to pay for the havoc they have created in the recent invasion of Lebanon. After all, Israel's security and peace rest on negotiated settlements of outstanding questions, not on forcible means.

It is hoped that the Reagan principles, though lacking specific provisions in many respects, will change the tide in the Middle East and prompt meaningful negotiations for peaceful coexistence and common prosperity between Arabs and Israelis.

DISCORD OVER POSTPONEMENT OF TOKYO MEETING NOTED

SK030249 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 2 Sep 82 p 2

[Article from column "News Behind the News"]

[Text] On 31 August the Seoul side of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League put off the joint general meeting of the league, which was scheduled to be held in Tokyo in September, until early December on the grounds that it is difficult to convene the meeting under the circumstances in which the Japanese side has not adopted tangible measures to correct the controversial textbooks.

In connection with this decision, some concerned personages of the government are for and others are against the decision. A concerned personage of the government said: The decision to postpone the general meeting of the league is an effective method to urge Japan's sincerity. In consideration of public opinion in Korea, the convocation of the meeting is not desirable. However, another personage concerned asserted that the Korean side of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League has followed public opinion. Politicians should try to resolve problems facing them with a challenging attitude toward the problems, sometimes even countering public opinion.

Severely denouncing the Korean members of the league for putting off the meeting, he said: They have no willingness to unfold their demands in a systematic and resolute manner by participating in the meeting. They seem to have postponed the meeting for fear of being denounced by public opinion at home.

FOLLOWUP REPORTS ON CHON STATE VISIT TO AFRICA

New Diplomatic Ties Slated

SK021213 Seoul YONHAP in English 1030 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 2 (YONHAP) -- Encouraged by the diplomatic and economic achievements of President Chon Tu-hwan's African visit, the South Korean Government has decided to make efforts to establish new diplomatic relations with 15 more African countries, it was learned here Thursday. The list of 15 nations was not immediately available.

The government also decided to finalize within this year the various agreements proposed and agreed upon in principle in the joint communiques issued by Chon and the heads of the four African states Chon visited in August -- Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal. For example, the South Korean Government will join the African Development Bank in January 1983 with 22 million U.S. dollars in capital investment, a government source said.

Preparations for Korean visits by the heads of the four African states, whom Chon invited during his visits there, will also get underway by the Foreign Ministry, the source said.

Economic Group To Be Sent

SK021218 Seoul YONHAP in English 0845 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept 2 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government will dispatch an economic delegation to Africa soon to accelerate economic cooperation agreed upon during President Chon Tu-hwan's recent visit to the four African nations of Kenya, Gabon, Nigeria and Senegal.

Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song, who accompanied Chon, told reporters Thursday that the delegation will comprise working-level officials from economy-related ministries and will survey possible sectors where Seoul and those countries can cooperate.

Kim said the South Korean Government will finance Korean firms planning to extend their businesses to the region and will revise the country's financial system so that domestic banks operating overseas will be able to finance those firms.

The top economic planner also said the African nations could be possible markets for goods semi-finished in Korea. He also noted that repair services for automobiles and TV sets as well as necessities, such as soap and toothpaste, will find markets in the region.

The survey team will also visit other countries in Africa besides the four Chon visited August 17-28, including Liberia.

Resource Development Sought

SK030120 Seoul YONHAP in English 0053 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept 3 (YONHAP) -- The Energy and Resources Ministry plans to undertake joint ventures in mineral resource excavation with the four African countries that President Chon Tu-hwan recently visited, ministry sources said Friday.

The sources said the projects would start with resources like uranium, which are not costly to transport, and gradually be expanded to include other minerals with commercial feasibility. Other projects under study include technical assistance in the construction of a thermal power plant in Nigeria, imports of phosphate rocks from Senegal and coal imports from Canada, according to the sources.

The Korean president returned Wednesday from a two-week tour of Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon, Senegal and Canada.

Business Leaders on Trade Ties

SK020745 Seoul YONHAP in English 0723 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept 2 (YONHAP) -- Leaders of South Korea's four influential economic organizations, who accompanied President Chon Tu-hwan on a tour of four African nations and Canada, Thursday acknowledged the great potentialities of economic cooperation between Korea and Africa.

They shared the view that Korean firms interested in setting up business footholds in the dark continent should focus their efforts on participating in social infrastructure and other development projects and the exploration of vast natural resources there in the form of joint ventures, rather than on increased trading.

They, however, said that careful and thorough preparations are essential for the country's economic advancement into Africa and that Korean firms exploring business relations with Africans should carry out their programs on a long-term basis.

President Chong Su-Chang of the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry said that many African countries are implementing their own economic development plans and they are very eager to learn useful lessons from Korea. "There is an ample room for Korean firms to participate in construction and other civil engineering projects because they have ardent desire to build key social facilities. Establishing small and medium-sized firms to supply daily necessities is especially promising," Chong said.

Noting that the four African countries the chief executive visited are playing leading roles in Africa, President Chong Su-yong of the Federation of Korean Industries cited agricultural development, crude oil imports, uranium ore development, deep-sea fishing industry and iron ore development as promising fields for economic cooperation with Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal.

President Sin Pyong-hyon of the Korean Traders Association said that economic cooperation with the resource-rich countries in Africa will gain further momentum with the chief executive's state visits to them, adding that Korean firms should seek to improve their business relations with the African countries based upon long-term and well-designed programs.

KOREAN-BORN CHINESE LEAVE FOR PRC AFTER ROK VISIT

[Text] Seoul, Sept 2 (YONHAP) -- A Korean-born Chinese couple left here Wednesday for their home in Manchuria following an emotional home-coming trip after 37 years.

An Su-yong, 61, and his wife, Yi Ok-lim, 49, of Wuchang Prefecture, Manchuria, had completed a 100-day visit with their relatives in South Korea at the invitation of An's brother, Su-tong, who now lives at Sunchang in southwestern Korea. The couple, who carry Chinese passports, are known to be the first Korean-born Chinese to have visited their homeland since China became a communist nation in 1945. South Korea and China still do not have diplomatic relations.

Meeting with reporters at Seoul's Kimpo International Airport, the Ans, who were to fly to Hong Kong to get a connecting flight to mainland China, said they were grateful to the Korean Government for granting their homecoming trip.

Saying that they were planning to revisit Korea with their four sons next fall, the Ans said the Korean community in Manchuria would certainly be delighted to learn that the South Korean Government now allows expatriate Koreans to visit their homeland.

A fairly large Korean community is said to be in Manchuria, whose residents include those forcibly deported by Japanese authorities to work at labor camps during WW II years.

"Upon our return home, we would tell your compatriotes of how their relatives are doing in Korea," the Ans said, explaining that, while in Korea, they met with some 20 Koreans, who asked them to convey their regards to their relatives in Manchuria.

South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan, in a Liberation Day message last Aug 15, declared that the Korean Government would welcome homecoming visits by Korean residents overseas, and said the government would ensure a safe trip for visiting expatriates.

BUMPER HARVEST OF RICE ANTICIPATED THIS FALL

[Text] Seoul, Sept 2 (YONHAP) -- South Korea is expected to harvest its best crop of rice in five years this fall despite unfavorable weather conditions caused by a long drought and typhoons, the Agriculture-Fisheries Ministry said Thursday.

Although Korea suffered a heavy drought until mid-July and was partly affected by two typhoons in late July and mid August, the 1982 goal of 194 million bushels of rice will be easily achieved, the ministry said.

Ministry officials attributed the bumper crop to nation-wide efforts to overcome drought damage and to the failure of the typhoons to directly hit the country. The officials added that temperatures during August contributed to the excellent crop.

LEADERS GREET SRV COUNTERPARTS ON NATIONAL DAY

BK021200 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Greetings message from Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly; and Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the PRK, to Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee; Truong Chinh, chairman of the SRV Council of State; Pham Van Dong, chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the SRV National Assembly on the 37th anniversary of the SRV National Day -- date not given]

[Text] On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the Vietnamese people's proclamation of independence on 2 September, on behalf of the KPRP Central Committee, the National Assembly, Council of State, Council of Ministers, KUFNCD and the Kampuchean people and in our own names, we extend warm congratulations to the VCP Central Committee, the National Assembly, Council of State, Council of Ministers, VFF and the Vietnamese people.

On the historic day of 2 September 1945 at Ba Dinh Square in Hanoi, the Vietnamese Communists and hundreds of thousands of people from all walks of life throughout the country celebrated with great joy the initial proclamation of independence of the SRV, marking the Vietnamese people's complete liberation from the more than 80 years of oppression and exploitation by the French colonialist regime. The founding of the SRV marks a historic stage in the struggle of the heroic Vietnamese people and encourages the national liberation movement of the peoples of Southeast Asia and the world, as well as the struggle for independence and social development. This event blazed a trail for the Kampuchean people in their struggle for national liberation and their effort to build socialism.

During the past 37 years, under the clear-sighted leadership of the VCP, the fraternal Vietnamese people checked the aggression of French colonialism and the devastating war of aggression of U.S. imperialism, reunified their fatherland and crushed the war of aggression of the reactionary Beijing expansionist-hegemonists. In addition, they have aided the Kampuchean people in smashing the bloody genocidal regime of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. The Vietnamese people have successfully restored their national economy, which was devastated by a series of wars of aggression. They have succeeded in building the socialist regime throughout the country and are cooperating with the Lao and Kampuchean people in opposing the all-out devastating war of the Beijing reactionaries in collusion with U.S. imperialism and the reactionary forces in the ASEAN countries.

The Vietnamese people have made an appropriate contribution to strengthening and increasing the strategic alliance of the three Indochinese countries which is consolidating the developing role of socialism, peace and progress in Southeast Asia and the world.

As a comrade-in-arms with a common goal and common enemies and who has always shared victories with them, the Kampuchean people are elated at all the wonderful victories scored by the heroic Vietnamese armed forces and people over the past 37 years. The KPRP and Kampuchean people clearly understand that the fraternal VCP has provided the Kampuchean people with disinterested, magnificent, wholehearted and effective assistance, including flesh and blood sacrifices. They will never forget these precious services.

We are convinced that in light of the Fifth VCP Congress resolutions and under the skillful leadership of the VCP, founded and tempered by Chairman Ho Chi Minh, the Vietnamese people will win many more and greater achievements in the cause of building the material and technical foundations of socialism and in the defense of their beloved fatherland, in a most appropriate contribution to the strengthening of relations -- particularly those of the three Indochinese countries -- and to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

May the great friendship, close militant solidarity and multifaceted cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam and among the three Indochinese countries develop further with every passing day.

We wish you the best of health and success in your noble mission.

BORDER VIOLATIONS BY THAI FORCES REPORTED

BK301430 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 30 Aug 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 30 Aug (SPK) -- During the week ending 26 August, 9 Thai planes and 161 Thai boats violated Kampuchea's sovereignty and territorial integrity, not counting the 62 shellings from Thai territory, according to military sources.

Thai planes and helicopters, including I-19's and OV-10's, carried out reconnaissance flights along the border up to 3 km inside Kampuchean territory, while Thai armed vessels operated in the area of Kaoh Kong and Kaoh Tang Island.

Shellfire from 120-mm and 82-mm mortars was directed against Trapeang Kol (Preah Vihear Province), Poipet, Kamrieng, Pailin and Hill 505 (Battambang Province), Smat Deng (Pursat Province and Hills 343, 199 and 172 (Koh Kong Province). During that week, several groups of Pol Pot reactionary Khmers which attempted to cross the border were pushed back toward their bases in Thailand by Kampuchean border guards.

SON SANN INTERVIEWED BEFORE TRIP TO KAMPUCHEA

NC021440 Paris AFP in English 1426 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept. 2 (AFP) -- Democratic Kampuchea, represented by a recently formed tripartite coalition, will continue to be recognized by the United Nations over the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian Government of Heng Samrin, former Premier Son Sann said today.

In an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE before his departure for Cambodia, Son Sann predicted that Democratic Kampuchea -- which now includes supporters of Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his own National Front for the Liberation of the Khmer People -- would obtain a "more significant (UN) success than in 1981" when it was composed only of the Khmer Rouge.

The General Assembly last year voted 79 votes to 36, with 30 abstentions, to keep Democratic Kampuchea seated. Son Sann said Democratic Kampuchea would be represnted at the UN this year by its three principal leaders -- Prince Sihanouk, president, Khieu Samphan, vice-president for foreign affairs, and himself, premier.

Claiming to lead a resistance army of 10,000 men from inside Cambodian territory, Son Sann said the situation there had evolved favourably for the opposition forces. "The populations, traumatised by the excesses of the Khmer Rouge, at first thought they had found a protector in the Vietnamese," he explained. "That period is over." "Our peasants, our daughters and young men are undergoing even harsher treatment by the (Vietnamese) occupiers."

He said the reaction of Hanoi to the formation of the coalition in Kuala Lumpur last June illustrated the "fears of an occupier who finally understands that the Khmer resistance has overcome its divisions to reclaim its national territory."

Son Sann, who will spend about 10 days in Cambodia before flying to New York for the General Assembly session September 21, said he hoped France would back Democratic Kampuchea in the UN vote and would stop sending aid to Vietnam. France, which abstained in the 1981 vote, could be considered as giving a "bonus to aggression" with its continuing aid to Hanoi, he said.

LEADERS GREET SRV COUNTERPARTS ON NATIONAL DAY

Kaysone, Souphanouvong Message

BK030712 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 2 Sep 82

["Text" of joint greetings message, dated 1 September, from Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, and Souphanouvong, president of state and chairman of the Supreme People's Council of the LPDR, to Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee; Truong Chinh, chairman of the State Council, Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly of the SRV, on the 37th anniversary of the SRV National Day]

[Text] Beloved comrades: On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the SRV's National Day, on behalf of the LPRP Central Committee, the Supreme People's Council, the LPDR Government, the Lao people and in our own names, we are elated to convey fraternal salutations, best wishes and special solidarity to you, comrades, and through you, to the VCP, the State Council, the National Assembly and the Council of Ministers of the SRV, and to the heroic fraternal Vietnamese people.

Thirty-seven years ago the Vietnamese people, under the clear-sighted leadership of the Indochinese Communist Party with great Comrade Ho Chi Minh as leader, accomplished the August revolution and established the Democratic Republic of Vietnam on 2 September 1945. Pursuing the glorious revolutionary cause of the Indochinese Communist Party, the VCP has led the Vietnamese people to heroically carry out the hard, protracted struggle against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists. Following the struggle, the Vietnamese people scored a historic victory, the victory which led to the complete collapse of old colonialism and which marked an unavoidable collapse of neocolonialism. They have also defeated the aggression and annexation of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists. At the same time the Vietnamese people have scored great successes in the economic building, cultural development and daily improvement of their living conditions. Simultaneously, they have wholeheartedly fulfilled their international obligations, thereby making significant contributions to the revolutionary cause of the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean peoples, to the maintenance of peace and stability in this region, and to the enhancement of the strength of the socialist community. Their fulfillment of international obligations has constituted a vigorous encouragement for the struggle of various nations for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

As close friends who have shared weal and woe, shared the common ideals and fought together against the common enemies and together won victories systematically, our Lao people would like to wholeheartedly hail the glorious achievements of the Vietnamese people and consider those achievements as our own. We are elated to note that both in the past period of national liberation struggle and the present period of struggle for the cause of national defense and construction the Lao people have always enjoyed support and assistance from the party, government and fraternal people of Vietnam.

On this occasion, we would like to express profound gratitude to the party, government and fraternal people of Vietnam for the aforesaid great, precious assistance. We wish the fraternal Vietnamese people new successes in the implementation of the resolutions adopted by the Fifth VCP Congress and the implementation of the 5-year plan -- from 1981 to 1985 -- so as to continuously march forward firmly to a new culmination in the cause of defense and building of the socialist country.

Long live the great friendship, special solidarity and all-round cooperation between the two parties, governments and peoples of Laos and Vietnam!

Foreign Minister's Message

[Greetings message, dated 1 September, from Phoun Sipaseut, deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs of the LPDR, to Nguyen Co Thach, foreign minister of the SRV, on the 37th anniversary of the SRV National Day]

[Text] On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the SRV's National Day, I am elated to convey fraternal salutations and best wishes to you, Comrade.

Over the past 37 years, the heroic Vietnamese people, under the clear-sighted and talented leadership of the Indochinese Communist Party with great Comrade Ho Chi Minh as head, have carried out a heroic struggle for national independence and freedom, thereby defeating old and new colonialism of the imperialist aggressors. At present, with the correct, indomitable leadership of the VCP headed by beloved and respected Comrade General Secretary Le Duan, the Vietnamese people have overcome various difficulties and have scored great achievements in defending and building their beloved country. They have smashed the schemes of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries to sabotage and destroy the Vietnamese revolution.

On behalf of the LPDR Government, I would like to avail myself of this occasion to wholeheartedly hail the great and glorious achievements and victories of the fraternal Vietnamese people, and consider those achievements and victories as our own. I wish the fraternal Vietnamese people new and still greater success in implementing the resolutions adopted by the Fifth VCP Congress so as to contribute to the strengthening of militant solidarity among the three countries -- Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea -- and to the maintenance of peace in this region and the world.

May the great friendship, special solidarity and all-round cooperation between the peoples of Laos and Vietnam be gloriously developed and strengthened with each passing day, and be everlasting!

I wish you, Comrade, good health and great success in carrying out your noble cause.

FORMER LEADERS' ATTEMPT TO RETURN TO POWER SCORED

BK021115 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Talk entitled "A Traditional Lao Folk Ballad Entitled 'The Story of the Eight Champac Trees'" contained in a bulletin of the Federation of Lao Students in France]

[Summary] "Out of the blue, Outhong Souvannavong has proclaimed himself king. Next time, he may declare that he is a god. Recently, he wrote a letter to various associations. His long letter said that eight former Lao leaders had agreed to cooperate with one another to fight for the liberation of the country. These leaders vowed that they would abandon their old feuds and start anew. They had visited the United States to ask for assistance from that country. The eight leaders are Ngon Sananikon, Khamphan Pan-Gna, Inpeng Souli-Gnathai, Houmphan Sai-Gnasit, Sisouk na Champassak, Gen Koupasit Aphai, Gen Vang Pao and Gen Phoumi Nosavan. Nobody has any doubts as to whether these eight persons have done anything good for the country. Some say they are good -- especially their families -- but these persons were expelled from Laos by the entire Lao people in 1975."

Their pledge to abandon their old way of life shows that they openly confess to having committed numerous crimes in the past. These people are too old to change.

"As for their admission that they have visited the United States, doesn't this show that they are serving as U.S. lackeys?"

As is known, the United States committed an untold number of towering crimes in Laos by dropping tons of bombs on Lao soil to kill Lao people and to destroy their property. During the 20 years of U.S. aggression in Laos, the United States imposed severe hardships on the Lao people, making 70 percent of them illiterate and taking to the so-called American way of life. During that period, these eight persons faithfully served as servants of the U.S. imperialists. They never paid any attention to improving the well-being of the people. When the United States was defeated and driven from Laos, these eight persons also fled with their masters. Therefore, it is very difficult for Outhong Souvannavong to pick up pieces of that shattered corrupt leadership and put them back together again.

"All in all, their ultimate goal is to return to power in Laos so as to revive the old regime. But is there any former kingdom in the world which has been transformed into a republic and then returned to being a kingdom? Is there any country which has been transformed into a socialist entity and then become a capitalist state again?"

The Lao people completely toppled the monarchical regime on 3 August 1975. And now -- 6 years later -- Outhong Souvannavong is trying to revive that rotten corpse. He should know that the Lao people have already put them in the dust bin of history.

SOVIETS HAND OVER SIGNAL TRAINING CLASSROOM

BK010930 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Summary] A ceremony was held at the officers' training school in Xieng Khouang Province on 23 August 1982 to mark the handing over of a signal training classroom to the Lao side by Soviet experts. "Attending the ceremony as guests of honor to witness the handing over of the classroom to the officers' training school were Brig Gen Somsak Soukkhavong, director of the school; representatives of the Soviet Army's political and military experts in Laos; Maj Bounthom, signal committee member attached to the General Staff Department; and a number of Soviet experts."

At the ceremony, a representative of the Soviet Army's political and military experts in Laos delivered a speech handing over the classroom. "He first praised and hailed the close Lao-Soviet spirit of friendship. He said: The Soviet experts have, for a long time, joined with the officers and men of the intermediate and high-level officers' training school in positively constructing the school building and installing the technical equipment used in studies."

He also stressed that the signal corps serves as a significant tool for the Lao army to march forward to fulfill the military tasks entrusted to it by the party Central Committee. He added that the cooperation in setting up the signal training classroom reflects the daily strengthening of the friendship and solidarity between the two parties and armies of the Soviet Union and Laos. With the spirit of profound friendship and solidarity, the Soviet experts have positively performed the task of building the classroom and installing the signaling and technical equipment in it. As a result, a full set of technical materials capable of communicating over long distances has been installed in the classroom.

Brig Gen Somsak Soukkhavong then made a speech accepting the signal classroom. He first expressed profound gratitude to the Soviet experts for their assistance in building the signal classroom. He said: "The success in setting up the signal classroom is the fruit of the implementation of the agreement on mutual assistance signed between the two countries. It also marks a new developmental step in the all-round assistance given to Laos by the Soviet Union." He added that he would do his best to guide the maintenance and effective use of the modern signal equipment in serving the building of the contingent of cadres of the Lao army.

At the end of the ceremony, the two sides signed a document on the handover of the classroom amid an atmosphere of profound friendship and cordiality.

SRV DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER HA VAN LAU VISITS

Arun, Ha Van Lau Talks

BK020408 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 2 Sep 82 p 4

[By Somphong Kittinaradon]

Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong said after about two hours of talks with Lau that the Vietnamese visitor expressed interest in the holding such a meeting, but he went short of proposing it.

Arun said he informed Lau that the ASEAN foreign ministers would be available for talks in New York during September 25-30. The ASEAN ministers will then be attending the UN General Assembly.

Lau, who toured Indonesia and the Philippines before his visit here, confirmed to Arun that Nguyen Co Thach would visit the two ASEAN countries in October and November respectively to continue sounding out the opinions of ASEAN partners on the Ho Chi Minh City statement, announced earlier this year by Vietnam, Laos and the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime, which calls for an international conference on Southeast Asia.

Lau also told Arun that both sides should try to keep open the channels for dialogue in pursuit of a political solution to the Kampuchean conflicts and the so-called regional issues.

Despite reactions from ASEAN countries towards the Ho Chi Minh City proposals, ASEAN has not so far discussed a joint stand on the issue in an official manner, Arun said.

They discussed the details of the Kampuchean issue during the meeting which he described as a follow-up to the latest visit of Nguyen Co Thach here.

"Although Lau suggested no shift in the Vietnamese stands, the Vietnamese would have a better understanding of our positions," he said.

The Vietnamese visitor insisted that Hanoi had partially withdrawn its troops from Kampuchea, but left it a guessing game over the number of the troops alleged pulled out, Arun said.

"He was adamant that the partial military pull-out did take place, regardless of what others have said," said Arun who would only say that it was a problem of how much credence Hanoi has in the eyes of other countries.

However, when pressed by Lau for a definite reaction to the claim, Arun told his Vietnamese counterpart that the Thai anti-Hanoi attitude would be directly proportionate to the extent of the Vietnamese military pull-out.

"In other words, I was telling him that our anti-Hanoi attitude is as partial as the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea," he told reporters.

Another point Lau was trying to get across was that Hanoi sincerely wished to seek a solution to the problems which have hampered improvement of the relations between the Indochinese countries on the one hand and ASEAN on the other hand, Arun said.

Arun did not say how he responded to Lau's supposed "olive branch," but senior Thai officials had earlier made it clear that the issue was not over the intention to improve the cool relations, but rather the terms on which a reconciliation will be based.

"Hanoi might want to accommodate the wishes of Thailand and ASEAN, but on its terms and that's unacceptable to us," a senior Thai official recently told the nation.

International Conference

Lau was quoted as saying that the name and the agenda for an international conference as well as its participants are "negotiable" as it would be a means to achieve a political settlement on the issues between the two regional blocs.

He also accepted that the Kampuchean issue was not a problem between Thailand and Vietnam, but rather a question involving many other parties, particularly the Khmer factions themselves.

The two deputy foreign ministers, however, did not get down to discussing details of the proposed international conference on Southeast Asia, as Arun made it clear that Thailand preferred a political settlement within the framework of the United Nations and that International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK).

"We want to be backed up by the United Nations and the ICK in our search for a political solution to the Kampuchean conflicts," he said.

Lau was also attempting to make it a point that the Kampuchean problem should be left to the Khmer people to settle themselves, according to Arun who was short of confirming that the statement was a mild extension of the Vietnamese charge of the alleged ASEAN interference in the Kampuchean affairs.

"I asked him if the Khmer Rouge weren't Khmer people," he added.

Coalition Government

If anything, Lau came up with a more definite comment towards the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach obviously refrained from referring to the coalition government during his last visit here.

But, this time, Lau said he left [as published] that the formation of the coalition government would make it more difficult for talks to solve the Kampuchean problem.

"He said the formation would strengthen the position of the Khmer Rouge," Arun said.

Nevertheless, Lau took note, without further arguments, of the Thai views that the formation had provided a new option that should be acceptable to both the Indochinese states and the ASEAN five.

Arun said that the meeting did not specifically touch on the growing influence of the Soviet Union in the three Indochinese countries, but they discussed the rivalry of superpowers in the region in general terms.

"If the superpowers extend their hands into the region, small countries like ours would be in trouble. The small countries share an interest to maintain peace in the region," Arun said.

Arun also quoted the chairman of the Hungarian presidium as recounting that he had told an African leader that grass would be trampled when elephants fight each other.

"The African leader responded that grass would be destroyed even when elephants laugh," he said.

Arun said Lau apparently got his message.

Chinese Threat

Lau reaffirmed Hanoi's stand that it would totally withdraw its troops from Kampuchea only if and after the so-called Chinese threat was removed. "He did not clarify the so-called Chinese threat. It's I who clarified on the issue, to him," Arun said.

According to the previous statements by Vietnam, the so-called Chinese threat could be interpreted into four points, Arun said. "First, the Chinese threat means the border conflicts between Vietnam and China. If the threat is on the Vietnamese-Chinese border, then we could do nothing to help Vietnam," he said.

He said that if Vietnam viewed the Chinese threat from the subversive activities allegedly backed by Beijing to weaken the Hanoi government, the threat would not involve Thailand and ASEAN either.

But if Hanoi is afraid of a Chinese attack with long-range weapons, then Vietnam should regard this as a consequence of the superpower rivalry in the region, and not an issue between it and Thailand, Arun said.

"If the Chinese threat was to come from a Kampuchea ruled by the Khmer Rouge, Thailand and ASEAN had already provided a way out for Vietnam: an independent and neutral Kampuchea not hostile to all parties concerned," Arun said.

Lau did not argue or confirm any of the interpretation, but to Arun's amazement, he jotted them down obviously to report it to his superiors.

Arun also said that Lau had promised to study the Thai views himself apart from reporting it to his superiors.

The Thai deputy foreign minister also told his counterpart that Thailand did not want to be anybody's enemy, but it would not take any aggression sitting down either.

The attitudes of both sides were apparently as wide apart as ever, but Arun, who seemed to be optimistic throughout the news session, said that at least the Vietnamese had shown his intention to talk.

The agreement to keep the door open for talks aside, the only consensus between the two deputy foreign ministers [was] that the two countries share interests in some fields.

Arun said: "We agreed that both countries share interests as neighbours in the same region, as small countries and as developing states."

Further Report

BK020930 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 2 Sep 82 p 3

[Text] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach plans to meet with ASEAN foreign ministers in New York during the United Nations General Assembly, Deputy Foreign Minister Dr Arun Phanuphong said yesterday. He said he was told by his Vietnamese counterpart, Ha Van Lau, during a two-hour talk yesterday that the New York meeting -- if it can be arranged — would be beneficial to all parties.

Dr Arun said Lau confirmed the partial Vietnamese withdrawal from Kampuchea and stressed that Vietnam was sincere about finding a peaceful solution to the Kampuchean problem. But the deputy foreign minister told Lau that linking Hanoi's perception of the China threat with its occupation of Kampuchea was unacceptable, as both were entirely different matters.

He said Lau told him that Hanoi hoped talks between ASEAN and Vietnam are continued. Hanoi will do its part by having Thach visit Indonesia in October and the Philippines the following month, after which Vietnam will be able to gauge ASEAN views on a proposed regional meeting on Kampuchea, Arun quoted Lau as saying.

However, Arun told Lau that ASEAN is committed to the UN resolution on Kampuchea and would take part in meetings held only under UN auspices. Lau, he added, had complained that the formation of the new Khmer coalition government had made talks more difficult "because they (Vietnam) regard the coalition as a boost for the Democratic Kampuchea stand."

In spite of some difference in opinion, Dr Arun said both their views had much in common because the two countries have mutual interest at various levels. He said they also discussed the growing Soviet influence in Indochina and its repercussions on smaller countries like Vietnam and Thailand.

Meanwhile, Dr Arun has accepted an invitation from his Russian counterpart, Nikolay Firyubin, to visit the Soviet Union next month. He will leave Thailand after foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila returns from New York. Dr Arun said yesterday that Firyubin last month assigned a director-general of the Political Department to confirm the visit and last week the Soviet ambassador in Thailand reconfirmed the trip.

[Editorial: "Lau's Visit Shows Stand Is Softening"]

[Text] Foreign ministers, deputies or otherwise, do not go gallivanting around the various capitals of the world just for the fun of it, since they are even more protocol-conscious than heads of governments or heads of states. So when Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau, a name we had not heard before, drops by in Bangkok and has a long chat with Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, he had some specific reasons, because his immediate superior, Nguyen Co Thach, had recently done a lot of talking about Kampuchea with leaders in Singapore, Malaysia, Burma and, naturally, Thailand. Almost every conceivable topic that arose subsequent to the formation of the coalition government was discussed at that time.

Before Lau arrived in Bangkok he had dropped by in the Philippines and Indonesia -- two countries Thach did not visit during his recent trip, but intends to visit soon. Obviously, Lau brought a stethoscope and a thermometer with him to check out Thailand as to any possible changes in thinking that might have occurred as a result of Thach's visit. But even he should have known that was a waste of time. He also, obviously, wanted to gauge the possibility of a meeting in New York, when the UN General Assembly convenes, about the possibility of Thach conferring with the ASEAN foreign ministers who would also be there.

Neither Thailand nor any ASEAN partner has side-stepped opportunity that came their way to discuss the problem of Kampuchea because of the basic form belief that a political solution must be found. We cannot ostrich-like ignore that there is a guerrilla war going on in Kampuchea, but ASEAN efforts in the UN and elsewhere have always been geared to end the fighting and get Vietnamese troops out of the country so that the Khmers can run the affairs of their own country. The ASEAN sponsored formation of the coalition government -- whether Hanoi believes it or not -- was designed to bring the political solution closer and not to escalate the guerrilla war.

Lau's visit at this time -- he said that Thach was also making a wing through ASEAN in October and November -- is quite clearly an information gathering trip about the possibility of ASEAN ministers meeting Indochinese ministers, something that is out of the question if the foreign minister of the Heng Samrin regime is included. Thach and Lau cannot have forgotten that most nations of the world, like ASEAN, recognize the coalition government, one of whose key members holds the foreign affairs portfolio.

The framework for discussions toward a possible political solution exists in the international conference of Kampuchea (ICK) and we have a sneaking suspicion that Vietnam wants to take part in it saving as much face as possible. From our point of view the question of face-saving does not arise at all, since nobody need be shy of sitting down and talking about an important subject, whether the final outcome is agreement or disagreement. We are also aware of the fact that, despite the monsoon, the Vietnamese have stepped up their activities against the guerrillas in western Kampuchea in an attempt to hold some more trump cards in their hands. And even these point to Hanoi's acceptance, perhaps partial, of working out things at the conference table.

But we cannot discuss Lau's visit without complimenting Arun for the touch of humour with which he laced his diplomacy. At every opportunity both Thach and Lau had stressed the "Chinese threat" without spelling it out. So Arun took it upon himself to explain to Lau what exactly is the Chinese threat! And Lau carefully took notes!

SRV REQUEST TO RETRIEVE PLANE PARTS APPROVED

[Text] Vietnam's request to retrieve only some important communications equipment from its Antonov transport plane which crash-landed inside Thailand early this year was approved by Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon yesterday, informed sources said. The sources said that Hanoi will take the retrieval of the communications equipment as a "symbolic return" of the plane, whose wreckage is now being kept at Sa Kaeo District of Prachin Buri.

Hanoi sent a team of technicians to inspect the plane wreckage on June 25 and found that it would be too costly to ship the whole thing back to Vietnam, according to the sources. They decided to ask Thailand for only some of the communications equipment to be returned.

The plane, carrying 13 people on board, crash-landed in Sa Kaeo on February 11 after Thai jetfighters tried to intercept it. One of the Vietnamese on board was killed in the incident, and the remaining 12 crewmen were detained for a brief period before being repatriated in May.

The sources said that Hanoi will leave the wreckage of the plane to Thailand which, "for the sake of friendship," had agreed to pay for the cost of removing the communications equipment. They said Gen Saiyut officially signed an approval for the return of the communications equipment yesterday morning. "And this brings the whole incident to an end. There will be no more problem concerning the plane," the sources said.

Thailand had initially offered to allow the Vietnamese to take back the plane by sea from Sattahip deep-sea port. The Thai Government had demanded an official apology from Hanoi as a condition for the return of the crewmen and the aircraft.

FURTHER ACTIVITIES COMMEMORATE NATIONAL DAY

Truong Chinh Addresses Meeting

OW011815 Hanoi VNA in English 1623 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Hanoi, VNA, September 1 -- The 37th anniversary of the August revolution and the National Day of Vietnam were solemnized at the Ba Dinh Conference Hall this afternoon.

Among the participants were Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly; and other Vietnamese leaders, such as Pham Hung, Vo Chi Cong, To Huu, Van Tien Dung, Le Thanh Nghi and Vo Nguyen Giap; and representatives of political parties, nationalities, religions, the armed forces and the population of the city. Lao Vice Premier Phoumi Vongvichit was seated on the presidium.

The meeting, which was also attended by foreign diplomatic enboys and foreign visitors and experts, was opened by President Truong Chinh, who said: Over 37 years of hard struggle, under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese people had to carry out a 30-year war for national liberation against the French colonialists and U.S. imperialists in order to win glorious victory, accomplishing the cause of national liberation and reunification, taking the country into the period of transition of socialism.

Since the complete liberation of South Vietnam seven years ago, our state and people have endeavoured to heal the wounds of war, to rehabilitate and develop the economy, develop culture, carry out socialist transformation in the south, consolidate and perfect the socialist relations of production in the north, step by step build the material and technical basis for socialism along the general line for the transitional period worked out by the fifth [as received] party congress.

Taking advantage of the fact that our country had just emerged from the war and was still facing numerous difficulties the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists used their lackeys, the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary butchers, to commit genocidal crimes against the Kampuchean people, at the same time to attack our country at the southwestern border and sent 600,000 troops to invade our country at the northern border.

Once again our people rose up in defence of the fatherland, successively defeating the enemies on both battlefronts. But the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists have not yet given up their sinister design of weakening and invading Vietnam. Colluding with U.S. imperialists, they have carried out a many-sided war of destruction against Vietnam, unceasingly provoking it on the norther border. Our people, while striving to solve the problem of which will win in the struggle between socialism and capitalism, are fighting against the schemes and acts of destruction and aggression of the enemies. These two struggles are closely associated.

Today, our people are facing extremely great and heavy tasks. The recent fifth party congress affirmed the correctness of the general line charted by the fourth party congress. It also concretized that line and made it more diversified. Numerous difficulties still lie ahead of us, yet advantages are fundamental, while difficulties are temporary. The prospects for our revolution are bright.

Phan Hung on Public Security

[Text] The national security defense movement has over the recent past made much progress both in depth and in width.

This mass movement has exerted a realistic effect on the tasks of ensuring political security, protecting socialist property and maintaining social order and safety. On the occasion of this year's 2 September National Day, on the morning of 1 September the Hanoi public security force organized a friendly get-together with more than 100 outstanding representatives of the national security defense movement.

Addressing the meeting, Pham Hung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently minister of interior, commended the results obtained and the outstanding individuals of the movement. He urged all party and administrative committee echelons in the capital city to pay attention to leading and guiding the movement more closely and regularly. The youth, the army and all sectors and mass organizations must coordinate their actions closely in ensuring political security, maintaining social order and safety and protecting socialist property. Juridical organs must rely on the mass movement to resolutely and appropriately punish speculators, smugglers, producers of fake goods, stealers of the state and people's property and professional hooligans who disrupt social order and safety.

NHAN DAN Lauds Security Forces

[NHAN DAN 1 September editorial: "Bright Examples in Safeguarding the Fatherland's Security"]

[Text] On the occasion of the celebration of the August revolution anniversary and the 2 September National Day, the Council of State has granted the "VPA hero-" title to 11 units and 5 cadres and combatants of the people's public security force for their many combat exploits and achievements in safeguarding the fatherland's security and maintaining public order and security. This is an honor for the people's public security force and reflects the pride of our people.

We warmly congratulate these units, cadres and combatants of the people's public security force. They are the progressive models of the heroic people's public security force and also the bright examples in the movement for the defense of the fatherland's security. Regardless of where they are stationed -- be it in the remote northern border highlands, in the southwestern border jungles or on the furthermost off-shore islands on the borders of the country -- all of our heroic units, cadres and combatants have always upheld their wonderful revolutionary determination to endure hardships and overcome difficulties. With their optimism for the revolution, they have always fulfilled their assigned missions in an outstanding manner.

Faced with a difficult and complex situation, the people's public security forces of Lang Son Province and of various districts, such as Hai Ninh in Quang Ninh and An Son in Thuan Hai, have always remained loyal to the country and faithful to the people. They have fought stalwartly, bravely and resourcefully. In addition, they have contributed to foiling many perfidious schemes and tricks of the enemies as well as of the counterrevolutionaries and other criminals and to safeguarding various villages and hamlets, thereby protecting the people's lives and property and maintaining the border security.

The political security office of the Lam Dong provincial people's public security force, the antireactionaires office of the Thuan Hai provincial people's public security force and the serious crime suppression squad and the antireactionaires office of the Hua Giang provincial people's public security force have acted as an advisory staff for the local party committee echelons and have directly organized the capture of many enemy espionage and commando teams and notorious bandit groups.

The Tien Lanh convict management and reeducation camp in Quang Nam-Danang has reflected the humanity of our party and state in its reeducational and correctional policy aimed at paving the way for those people who have embarked on a wrong path to return to the people and the fatherland so that they can earn their living honestly.

Stationed at sparsely-populated Minh Chau village on a small island 40 km from the mainland, the people's public security force there, which includes three female members, has coordinated its activities with the people's armed forces and the local people of various strata, thus creating a localized fighting strength. It has captured tens of Chinese boats and junks and hundreds of the enemy's spies and commandos when they intruded into our country's territorial waters.

The people's public security forces of Loc Thanh village in Lang Son and Bat Dai Son village in Ha Tuyen have relied on the people and have coordinated with the people and the local armed forces in frustrating many of the enemy's cunning schemes.

People's public security agents Nguyen Thai Binh, Lam Van Thanh, Luu The Ha, Duong Minh Ngoc and Nguyen Duc Thinh are the outstanding sons of the people and the country who have sacrificed themselves for the country and wholeheartedly served the people.

All the brilliant combat exploits and outstanding achievements of various heroic units and individuals have stemmed from the correct lines and policies of our party and state in combination with the vigorous leadership of the party committees and local administration at all levels and the Ministry of Interior. By thinking and acting in accordance with great President Ho Chi Minh's teachings, these units and individuals have always imbued themselves with a sense of diligence, frugality and honesty, loved and helped their comrades, remained absolutely loyal to the government, and respected the people while performing their work devotedly and struggling resolutely and resourcefully against the enemy.

Although our country is now in a state of peace, we still have to deal with a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. We also have to remain ready to cope with the threat that the enemy could launch a war of aggression on a large scale. Meanwhile, despite noteworthy achievements in the economic field, our people's daily life is still rife with difficulties and the situation concerning political security and social order and safety in our country is still affected by complex developments.

In its resolutions, the fifth party congress has entrusted our entire party, armed forces and people with two strategic tasks -- to build and to defend the socialist fatherland. Our people's public security force is duty-bound to understand thoroughly and implement satisfactorily these resolutions aimed at successfully carrying out the campaign to make itself pure and strong and accelerating the mass movement to safeguard national security.

Constantly upholding their revolutionary awareness, let all the combatants of the people's public security force devote every hour and minute to the struggle against the enemy's multifaceted war of sabotage. Let them actively and continuously suppress violators of socialist property and maintain social order and safety with valor and resourcefulness.

By following the examples of various heroic units and individuals, coordinating closely with the army and mass organizations, and by relying on the public and respecting and developing the working people's right to collective mastery, our people's public security force will certainly be able to fulfill all its assignments, thus contributing actively to the struggle to build and defend the socialist fatherland.

NHAN DAN Greets National Day

BK020814 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 1 Sep 82

[NHAN DAN 2 September editorial: "The Revolution Is Advancing"]

[Text] Our nation has some memorable days in which we can take pride. The day of 2 September 1945 was a glorious historic day on which great President Ho Chi Minh proclaimed the founding of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, the first worker-peasant state in Southeast Asia. Ever since, with an administration mastered by themselves, our people have been living in an era of independence and socialism.

On this great festival, with feeling and with boundless gratitude, we look to extremely respected and beloved President Ho Chi Minh, the founder of our party and state and the educator, organizer and leader of our people in their persistent revolutionary struggle to achieve today's glorious victories.

The past 37 years consisted of stages of continuous and stalwart struggle by our entire party, people and troops who have surmounted countless difficulties and hardships and have withstood many sacrifices and ordeals. We have successively and gloriously defeated the truculent and perfidious forces of aggression -- the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese reactionaries -- to defend the independent, free and unified fatherland firmly and advance the entire country to socialism.

We celebrate this year's National Day at a time when the Fifth VCP Congress has just adopted resolutions specifying the tasks, objectives and guidelines for our people to advance in the 1980's. In the light of the VCP congress resolutions, our national construction and defense has undergone new changes and has scored new achievements which, though small, are of great significance.

This year, we have harvested a bumper winter-spring crop with the largest ever recorded production volume, despite much poorer material and technical conditions than in previous years. The cultivation of the 10th-month crop has been accelerated throughout the country. In particular, drought and waterlogging in the north have been overcome. Unless there are serious typhoons or floods, we are likely to have a good harvest.

This year, our people are striving for the first time to produce a considerable quantity of grain domestically instead of having to import large quantities, as we have for the past few decades. The amount of state-collected and purchased grain has increased fairly well. In the rural areas, the enthusiastic labor movement has reached high tide and the peasants' lives have clearly improved and stabilized.

Despite many difficulties and shortcomings, all industries, including the handicrafts and artisan industry, have optimally used domestically available raw and other materials and have developed their initiative and creativity to turn out many products for society.

As we have concentrated our efforts and materials on various major projects, our capital construction work is not too dispersed as it was in previous years and has generally kept up with the planned rates.

On the distribution and circulation front, there are some complicated developments. This year, the state has done better in collecting and purchasing agricultural and industrial products. Despite its effort, it has not fully met requirements for ensuring the livelihood of cadres, workers and civil servants, especially in major cities and industrial complexes.

Initial measures to change the managerial system and to eliminate the ills of a centralized and bureaucratic administration of subsidization, and policies of material and moral incentives which are based on the correct application of socialist economic laws, are bringing about a new atmosphere and new ways of thinking and working in society and among workers.

Our educational, scientific, cultural, artistic, public health and social tasks continue to develop.

The above achievements demonstrate the party's correct lines, the country's great potential, our people's sense of self-reliance and our realistic ability to overcome the present towering difficulties so as to achieve the socio-economic targets set by the party congress. All our party, people and troops are emulating in fulfilling the two strategic tasks set forth by the Fifth VCP Congress to build socialism successfully and defend the socialist fatherland firmly.

We are in the initial stage of transition to socialism. This is the stage of fierce class struggle between the two paths of socialism and capitalism to resolve the question of who will defeat who and to carry out socialist transformation and construction in our country. This is the stage of the most positive and profound revolutionary changes in every field.

Consequently, we must firmly grasp proletarian dictatorship, develop the laboring people's collective mastery, and carry out the three revolutions simultaneously; accelerate socialist industrialization; build large-scale socialist production, a new culture and new socialist men; and consolidate national defense and firmly maintain political security and social order.

Moreover, in our country's present situation, there is also our people's fierce and complicated struggle against the multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. These two struggles are proceeding very fiercely and complexly in all domains, especially on the economic battlefront encompassing distribution, circulation, culture and ideology throughout the country, but mainly in major cities.

Our party, people and troops are dutybound to win total victory in these two struggles. All of our present thoughts, actions, guidelines, measures and policies must be aimed at winning victory for our people in these two struggles in order to contribute to fulfilling the two strategic tasks set by the party congress.

Stabilizing and improving the people's livelihood and building the material and technical bases of socialism are aimed mainly at boosting the industrial production of consumer and export goods. Completing socialist transformation of the south, consolidating socialist production relations throughout the country, heightening vigilance, consolidating national defense and maintaining security and order firmly always remain the objectives which we must fulfill.

All the people's enemies are hanging together to besiege, sabotage and press our country so as to weaken us economically and cause us to collapse politically. They have miscalculated. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the heroic Vietnamese people have stood firm and have developed and advanced steadily.

The deciding factor in the successful implementation of the party resolutions is building and making our party politically, organizationally and ideologically firm and strong.

Through the current political indoctrination drive to prepare for the second round of party congresses at all echelons, we should carry out the educational tasks in depth among party members to teach them socialist revolution so as to ensure that an identity of views prevails in the entire party on the socialist revolution line. We should indoctrinate cadres and party members on revolutionary ethics; oppose petty bourgeois and capitalist thinking, individualism and opportunism; and overcome all manifestations of political, disciplinary and organizational deterioration, of degeneration and depravation in lifestyle, of bureaucratic bearing and of conservative views on things.

We are in a bright situation. The position of our country in the international arena has been increasingly enhanced. The revolution is clearly advancing. The socio-economic situation is improving. The situation of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries is also very beautiful. The comprehensive strength of the great Soviet Union and the socialist community as a whole is being increasingly consolidated to become one of the important factors in protecting peace and in opposing the arms race policy of the U.S. imperialists and cohorts.

Despite our many difficulties ahead, our advantages are also great. With our revolutionary will and unselfish labor spirit, with the constantly improved management system, with the great assistance of the Soviet Union and the socialist community as a whole, with the special relations of solidarity with fraternal Laos and Kampuchea, and with the support of all progressive mankind, our party, people and troops will certainly succeed in fulfilling the two strategic tasks of building and defending the socialist fatherland. Let us devote everything to the socialist fatherland for the sake of our people's happiness.

USSR Marks SRV National Day

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 2 -- A mass meeting was held in Moscow on August 31 to mark the 37th National Day of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and open a ten-day program of Soviet-Vietnam friendship in the Soviet Union. The presidium of the meeting included A.S. Barkauskas, alternate member of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. and vice-president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.; V.N. Makeyev, member of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers; Vu Thang, member of the VCP C.C. and secretary of the provincial committee of Binh Tri Thien and vice-president of the Vietnam-U.S.S.R. Friendship Association, head of a Vietnamese delegation on a visit to the Soviet Union; and Dinh Nho Liem, Vietnamese ambassador to the U.S.S.R.

Addressing the meeting, German Titov, president of the Soviet-Vietnamese Friendship Society, said: The August revolution ushered in a new era in the time-honoured history of Vietnam, one of the first nations to gain genuine independence and freedom and who chose the road to socialism bypassing the stage of capitalist development.

Together with our Vietnamese friends, he continued, we sincerely greet the great achievements of the Vietnamese people in national construction. Despite many difficulties, the peace-loving foreign policy of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam is being fruitfully implemented. Vietnam is making an important contribution to the consolidation of socialism, common peace and international security.

On the same day, the book publishing and distribution committee of the U.S.S.R., the Soviet writers society, and the Soviet-Vietnamese Friendship Society held a ceremony to open ten days of publicity for Vietnamese books and photos at the All-Union state library of foreign literature.

TRUONG CHINH ADDRESSES HANOI VOTERS' MEETING

BK021308 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Jul 82 pp 5-7

[Truong Chinh address at Hanoi voters' meeting on 1 July -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] DEAR COMRADES AND COMPATRIOTS: The Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly has concluded with great success. At this session, the National Assembly examined the following issues:

-- The establishment of our criminal law code.
-- The work of the Supreme People's Court and the Supreme People's Organ of Control.
-- The draft 1982 state budget.
-- The new national anthem.
-- The byelections of members of the Council of State and chairmen of National Assembly standing committees.

The most important point of the session, however, was to EXAMINE THE DRAFT 1982 STATE BUDGET. After listening to reports on this issue and heated discussions of it, the National Assembly issued a resolution approving the draft 1982 state budget presented by the Council of Ministers. The National Assembly also entrusted the Council of Ministers with the task of providing close guidance for all sectors, echelons and grassroots units so that they can fulfill or overfulfill all the targets of the 1982 state plan and state budget already approved by it.

The draft state budget constitutes an important part of the state plan. Therefore, the guidelines for the successful implementation of the 1982 state plan are closely linked with all the current important and urgent tasks on the economic front. On this occasion, I would like to tell you very briefly about the guidelines for the implementation of our state budget and financial policy, which have recently been discussed by the National Assembly.

These guidelines call for our efforts to increase the sources of income in support of the state budget while paring down unreasonable or still unnecessary expenditures in order to ensure that the state is provided with sufficient funds for necessary spending, and gradually surmount overdrafts and achieve a balance between revenue and expenditure. If we want to achieve this objective, it is necessary for us to satisfactorily carry out the following tasks:

-- STEP UP PRODUCTION because it is the source of financing. Efforts must be made to successfully fulfill or overfulfill all production plans, especially those involving the important products of the national economy and those products which are necessary for the people or which can ensure substantial income for the state.

Development of production should be carried out along with the effort to improve production efficiency and the quality of products, economize on the use of manpower, materials and capital, and reduce production and circulation costs.

-- MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO PLACE THE SOURCES OF GOODS AND MONEY UNDER STATE CONTROL. All state-operated enterprises must scrupulously implement the systems concerning the delivery of goods and the turnover of various revenue producing items. It is necessary to expand the socialist trade network, step up the collection and purchase of goods, strengthen market management, and struggle resolutely against theft, speculation, smuggling, the production of fake goods, and illegal businesses. It is also necessary to satisfactorily carry out the collection of taxes and debts, ensuring that all industrial, commercial, agricultural and other taxes are collected in accordance with policy.

-- APPLY THE MOTTO THAT THE STATE AND THE PEOPLE WORK TOGETHER, AND THE CENTRAL AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES WORK TOGETHER in the economic, cultural, educational, artistic, medical, and sports and physical education fields. Strictly practice thrift in production, construction, and daily life.

-- All sectors, echelons and units must CARRY OUT FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT SCRUPULOUSLY UNDER A UNIFIED SYSTEM established by the state.

While the responsibility over these tasks rests heavily on various state organs and enterprises, our workers, peasants handicraft workers, small merchants and citizens should also shoulder an important part of this responsibility by enthusiastically expanding production, practicing thrift, participating in the construction of various central level and local projects, selling products and paying taxes and debts to the state in accordance with the set norms, implementing all the policies concerning market management, and struggling against all manifestations of negativism and violations of policies and law in society.

By satisfactorily carrying out these tasks, we will be able to not only implement the draft 1982 state budget, but also be able to create favorable conditions for new changes in the country's general economic and financial situation.

DEAR COMRADES AND COMPATRIOTS, it is the responsibility of Hanoi -- our capital -- to take the lead among other localities in making new changes in the economic and social fields in the present stage. I hope that the municipal people's council and people's committee will transmit the spirit of the recent National Assembly session to all people in the municipality, and will adopt specific and creative measures to outstandingly carry out all the tasks which have been laid down by the party and the state.

May I heartily wish all of our compatriots in the capital good health so that they can participate enthusiastically in the socialist emulation movement, thus helping to make the 1982 state plan and state budget a success.

Thank you, comrades and compatriots.

NHAN DAN ON PRODUCTION, CONSTRUCTION UNITS

BK281500 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 27 Aug 82

[NHAN DAN 28 August editorial: "Rearrangement of Production and Construction Installations"]

[Text] In our advance from small- to large-scale socialist production, we are gradually overcoming imbalances in our economy. In the years ahead, our problems of energy and raw and other materials will still remain acute while our financial and transportation capacities will be limited. Meanwhile, the organization and division of productive labor and the distribution of factories and farms is still irrational in some respects.

There are still some managerial problems in relations between the central and local governments and among various sectors. Quite a number of industrial and agricultural installations are still unable to determine the production guidelines and product projects for their specific material conditions. They cannot, therefore, stabilize and accelerate production.

Although many installations have made great efforts in production and business, the economic activities in general still yield few results because the output of equipment has not been used optimally and production capacity is still wasted. Too many construction projects have been established, surpassing our capacity in terms of materials and capital, and construction work is dispersed, prolonged and inconsistent.

This situation calls for quick action to rearrange the production and capital construction installations in our economy. To arrange does not mean to decrease production. On the contrary, it is to exploit all capacities and latent potentials to revamp and improve the organizational and managerial systems and structures. It is a rearrangement of primary installations in line with our practical capacity in terms of energy, materials and transport. At the same time, it agrees with the economic development guidelines and tasks of the Third 3-Year Plan and for subsequent years. This is aimed at creating favorable conditions for production to develop steadily in the right direction, at achieving ever-higher results and at creating new balances in the economy.

The guidlines for rearranging production and construction installations are to concentrate forces on fulfilling, by all means, the vital objectives of the economy, of which the center is agriculture, namely, grain, food products and some important industrial plants. We should strive to develop the production of consumer goods, especially those commodities which serve the people's livelihood and export, and create a large source of revenue for the budget. We should also develop the major heavy industries such as electricity, coal, chemical, engineering and construction materials.

The production and business systems of various sectors and branches from the central down to local and grassroots levels will be rearranged into a rational structure of many components, which will mesh and link closely one to another, to produce the dynamism to overcome the phenomena of dispersion, duplication and excess intermediary levels which lead to waste.

According to this guideline, the production and construction installations of each sector and in each locality should be classified and organized as specified in Directive No 120 of the Council of Ministers: Major installations are given sufficient energy and materials on a priority basis in order to develop production steadily. Those installations to which the state has not assured such supply will be authorized to independently procure additional raw and other materials in order to maintain and develop production. Their business methods should be appropriate and in strict compliance with the state laws and regulations on production and business. Those installations which cannot procure raw materials to produce under the former guidelines are authorized to adjust their production guidelines and product projects to use material and technical bases rationally and maintain the assigned work force. All other installations which cannot maintain production, despite all efforts to do so, will be authorized to close down temporarily or lose some of their components. They must maintain their equipment well and transfer their workers to other jobs.

Capital construction projects will be rearranged to cope with our capacity in terms of capital and construction materials. The rearrangement is aimed at fulfilling the requirements of expanding production and overcoming the situation in which investment is dispersed, construction work is prolonged and inconsistent and the economic results remain low.

Investment in new construction projects will not be made as long as the capacity of similar projects on hand has not been utilized. We should cancel or suspend those projects which cannot be built because of lack of materials or which can be constructed but will not have enough energy and fuel to operate. The rearrangement of production and construction installations is part and parcel of the reorganization of the entire economy. Its final goal is to develop the economy healthily and to bring about largeer gross national production and nationl income, greater economic results, reduced production costs and ever-increasing labor productivity.

This important task must be organized and implemented adequately by all sectors and authorities at all echelons to bring about practical results.

GOLD STAR ORDER PRESENTED TO GDR'S HONECKER

OW011910 Hanoi VNA in English 1654 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA September 1 -- Accredited by the Vietnamese Communist Party and State, Ambassador Pham Van Kim on August 30 conferred the Gold Star Order -- Vietnam's highest distinction -- on Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee, chairman of the Council of State, on the occasion of the latter's 70th birthday.

Speaking on this occasion, Pham Van Kim said that the Vietnamese Communist Party and state highly value Chairman Honecker's great contributions to the revolutionary cause of the German Democratic Republic.

The decision by the Council of State of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam to confer the Gold Star Order on Comrade Erich Honecker, the ambassador said, manifests the deep gratitude of the Vietnamese Communists and people for the strong and warm support of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany and the fraternal G.D.R. people, and for the outstanding contributions of Comrade Erich Honecker to the consolidation and development of the close friendship, military solidarity and all-round co-operation between the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Socialist Unity Party of Germany as well as (?that of) the S.R.V and the fraternal G.D.R."

In his reply, Chairman Erich Honecker highlighted the close relations between the two parties and peoples, and said that the solidarity [words indistinct] for the Vietnamese people had been deeply engraved in the hearts of the GD.R. people in the anti-U.S. struggle, for national salvation in the past and remain so in the present national reconstruction and defence.

TRUONG CHINH SENDS MESSAGE ON LIBYAN ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, August 30 -- Presidents of the Council of State Troung Chinh today sent greetings to Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the First of September revolution of the Socialist People's Libyan and Arab Jamahiriyah on the 13th anniversary of this revolution.

In his message, President Truong Chinh said: The Vietnamese pepole rejoice at the great achievements which the Libyan people, under your leadership, have recorded since the first of September revolution in various fields of building and defending the country, frustrating all aggressive schemes and acts of sabotage and the positive policy carried out by Libya against imperialism and Zionism, and its support for the national liberation movement, have incessantly raised the prestige of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah in the Middle East, Africa, the Non-Aligned Movement and the world at large.

On this occasion, I would like to sincerely thank the Libyan people for their support and valuable assistance to the Vietnamese people during their war of resistance in the past as well as in the cause of building and defending the country at present.

I wish the Libyan people many new successes in defending and building a prosperous country. May the friendship and cooperation between the peoples of Vietnam and Libya consolidate and develop with every passing day.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also sent greetings to 'Abd al-'Ati al-'Ubaydi, secretary of the People's Committee for Foreign Liaison of Libya.

FOREIGN SUBMARINES' USE OF LOCAL STRAITS VIEWED

BK010825 Hong Kong AFP in English 0745 GMT 1 Sep 82

[By Gilles Bertin]

[Text] Jakarta, Sept. 1 (AFP) -- Indonesia does not oppose the passage of foreign submarines through its straits as this poses no immediate danger to the country's security in the present international situation, well-informed sources here said today. The statement is contrary to some press reports from Thailand, which quoted Thai Security Council Chief Prasong Sunsiri as saying in Bangkok on Monday that the Soviets' interest in the Straits of Sunda and Lombok represents a great danger to the future of Indonesia.

"It has been known for a long time that Soviet, U.S. and other countries' submarines have been using the (1,500 metre-deep) Lombok Strait, but this poses no threat for Indonesia," an Indonesian official said. "It is very difficult for submarines (especially during wartime) to pass through either the Malacca Strait (which links the Indian Ocean with the Java Sea) because of its shallowness (about 50 metres), or the Sunda Strait which is also shallow and is troubled by turbulent undersea currents, a foreign military expert here said.

The Lombok Strait, which is a very deep fault between the islands of Bali and Lombok, 1,300 km (806 miles) east of here, provides the easiest passage for the submarines, the expert said. However, the straits can be controlled with monitoring equipment to detect the submarines, their tonnage and power system, he added.

In case of war, the straits can be turned rapidly into important defence points without incurring heavy expenses by planting deep-water explosives, the well-informed sources said.

The Malacca, Lombok and Sunda Straits, which are important maritime routes for oil tankers and merchant ships sailing between the Indian Ocean and the Pacific Ocean, are also seen as vital strategic points in the event of conflict.

Indonesia is aware of the interest of several foreign powers in these straits, the sources said, recalling that in February this year, a Soviet diplomat and an Aeroflot chief were expelled following an espionage affair in which an Indonesian marine officer of the topographic service had supplied the Soviets with sea-charts and military document, particularly information on sea routes.

SUBROTO SAYS 'NO INTENTION' TO NATIONALIZE CALTEX

BK011119 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1054 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Jakarta, Sept 1 (ANTARA) -- The Indonesian Government has no intention whatsoever of nationalizing the American oil company Caltex nor any other foreign company with which it has signed a contract.

Mines and Energy Minister Subroto made this statement Wednesday in connection with a widely publicized proposal by the Riau branch of the All-Indonesia Federation of Labour (FBSI) that the American company shouldbe nationalized rather than allowed to operate further under a production sharing contract. The labour organization had suggested the drastic action in reaction to the news that the government was trying to renegotiate the conditions of a production sharing contract signed with Caltex in 1971 and due to take effect in November 1983. "All contracts the government has signed with oil companies will be honoured. There is no plan to deviate from the existing contracts," Subroto said.

Referring to the 1971 contract with Caltex Subroto said it was normal procedure for a foreign company to sign a new contract in anticipation of the expiry of a current contract. The "work contract" under which Caltex has been and is still operating in Indonesia is to end in November 1983. The minister said talks with Caltex to change the conditions in the 1971 contract were still going on.

In its talks with Caltex the government was obviously trying to obtain better conditions than are provided in current contracts with other companies, he said.

The change from "work" to "production-sharing" contract was to enable Caltex to increase its investment and thus to increase its production. The change was also meant to bring about increase in transfer of technology especially technology required in recovery of old wells, he said. With the talks going on the minister was hopeful that an agreement (on new conditions) could be reached with Caltex before November 1983. National Security Agency Chief Admiral Sudomo Wednesday corroborated Subroto's statement rejecting the idea of nationalization.

Subroto and Sudomo were both speaking to newsmen minutes before attending a limited Cabinet session on economic, financial and industrial affairs chaired by President Suharto.

PERTAMINA TO BUILD GAS PLANT IN NATUNA ISLANDS

BK030047 Hong Kong AFP in English 0413 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Jakarta, Sep 2 (AFP) -- Indonesia is to build a liquified natural gas (LNG) plant on one of the Natuna Islands in the South China Sea, which is being disputed with Vietnam, said president of the state owned Pertamina Oil Company, Yudo Sumbono. The Natuna plant is expected to produce some eight million tons of LNG after 1990, he said in a television interview last night.

Indonesia is expanding its two LNG plants at Arun (North Sumatra) and Badak (East Borneo), he said, adding that the combined LNG production of Arun, Badak and Natuna is estimated to reach 25.3 million tons in 1994. Indonesia's LNG exports reached some one third of the world's consumption and Pertamina plans to increase annual LNG exports from 10 million tons at present to over 14 million tons in 1990, he said.

TV BROADCASTING STATIONS -- Jakarta, Aug 25 (ANTARA) -- Early after its establishment some 20 years ago, the TVRI (Indonesian Television System) could only broadcast one hour daily and only for Jakarta. But at present it is able to broadcast eight hours daily. The TVRI has now nine broadcasting stations, 210 relay stations and ten mobile stations which are able to operate in rural areas. This was stated by radio, television and film director General Dr Sumadi in his report at the inauguration of the newly built TVRI production centre and at the symbolical dedication of the perumas-built low-cost houses in Dili, East Timor, by President Suharto here Tuesday. [Excerpts] His majesty the yang dipertuan agung has again stressed the need for Muslim countries to close ranks. This would enable Muslims to face the challenges in a more effective manner. The king said this when he received the credentials of the Iranian Ambassador to Malaysia, Mr Mohammad Sadeq-Ayatollahi, at the National Palace in Kuala Lumpur today.

Later, when receiving the credentials of the Vietnamese ambassador to Malaysia, Mr Nguyen Can, the king said the two countries should work toward establishing peace and stability in the region. This should be developed on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence and mutual cooperation.

CULTURE MINISTER ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

BK011515 Hong Kong AFP in English 1453 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, Sept 1 (AFP) -- Culture, Youth and Sports Minister Datuk Mokhtar Hashim was today refused leave by the high court here to apply for an order to quash two certificates issued by the attorney-general relating to his trial for murder. Datuk Mokhtar's application which also sought leave to apply for the quashing of the order by the Tampin magistrate transferring the case to the high court here was refused by Justice Hashim Veop Sani. The certificates were issued by the attorney-general, Tan Sri Abu Talib Othman, under the essential (security cases) regulations 1975 on July 10, when Datuk Mokhtar and four others were charged with murder in the Tampin Magistrate's Court.

Datuk Mokhtar, together with a company manager, Mohd Nordin Johan, 33, Kampung headman Rahmat Satiman, 54, businessman Aziz Tumpuk, 53 (now deceased), and Aziz Abdullah, 65, were alleged to have murdered former Negri Sembilan State Legislative Assembly Speaker Datuk Mohamad Toha Talib. The offence was alleged to have been committed at Kampung Sri Asahan, Gemenchih, Negri Sembilan, about 60 kilometres south of here on April 14 this year.

Justice Hashim Yeop, in dismissing the application by Datuk Mokhtar, said the nature of the certificates in themselves made them unreviewable.

VOMD: CPM SENDS GREETINGS TO PRC CPC CONGRESS

BK021606 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Congratulatory telegram greeting 12th CPC Congress sent to CPC Central Central Committee, signed by CPM Central Committee; dated 31 August 1982]

[Text] Beloved brothers: On the occasion of the successful convocation of the 12th National Congress of the CPC, on behalf of all CPM members and all officers and men of the Malayan People's Army, we extend our warmest congratulations to you, comrades, and through you to all CPC members.

The congress is taking place during a new historical era. Since the Third Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee and thanks to the correct ideological, political and organizational guidance and the correct leadership of the CPC Central Committee, socialist China is moving ahead step by step on the correct road of building a strong and modern country in line with China's own situation and has attained one victory after another in the great struggle for material and spiritual progress.

The decisions regarding a number of historical questions of the party since the establishment of the PRC, which were adopted at the Sixth Plenary Session of the Sixth Central Committee, have (?established) correct dialectical and historical materialism and have formulated a scientific conclusion dealing with the party's historical experience since the founding of the PRC. By seeking the truth (?of the fact), the party has made correct evaluation of the historical position of the great teacher, Comrade Mao Zedong, and Mao Zedong Thought. (?They) have exerted and will certainly continue to exert a great and far-reaching influence on the Chinese revolution and the country's development as well as on the international communist movement.

We are fully confident that the successful convocation of the 12th National CPC Congress and its decisions will no doubt vividly contribute to further (?consolidating the opinion) of the entire party, army and people of all nationalities throughout China, strengthening the close relationship between the party and the masses, pushing forward the four modernizations of China, uniting the fatherland, fighting hegemonism, building world peace and completing the great task in a new historical era.

Both parties and the peoples of Malaya and China have a very close revolutionary friendship and strong militant unity. The friendship and unity, which are based on proletarian internationalism, can certainly be further strengthened and developed.

Long live the great CPC!

Long live the revolutionary friendship and militant unity of both the Malayan and Chinese parties and peoples!

Long live Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought!

LEE ON U.S., U.K. SUPPORT FOR ASEAN ON KAMPUCHEA

BK011401 Hong Kong AFP in English 1706 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Excerpt] Singapore, Aug. 31 (AFP) -- Both the United States and Britain have pledged continued support for the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to find a political solution to the Cambodian problem, Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew told Parliament here today.

Such a solution would involve the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and the holding of United Nations-supervised elections under the terms of the resolution passed at last year's International Conference on Cambodia in New York, the prime minister said.

The expression of support was made in talks with President Reagan and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher during Mr Lee's visits to the two countries last month.

Mr Lee said he felt reassured by Washington's commitment to Thailand's security and to its obligations under the Manila Pact.

Mr Lee, who was answering a question by opposition member of Parliament, J.B. Jeyaretnam, said he brought U.S. and British leaders up to date on developments in Southeast Asia drawing particular attention to the dangers posed by Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia. "American and British leaders were aware of the implications for ASEAN of Vietnam's continuing occupation of Cambodia," he added. Mr Lee said he also explained the circumstances leading to the successful formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, which is opposed to the Heng Samrin Government in Phnom Penh.

ARRESTS OF COMMUNIST SUSPECTS CONTINUE

HK030015 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] Constabulary authorities continue to arrest suspects in the subversive conspiracy of terror, sabotage and assassination and to seize the government. Six more members of the Communist Party of the Philippines who have infiltrated the labor movement have been arrested in several raids. They were all linked to the subversive plot supposed to be carried out starting this month.

Arrested in dawn raids in Metro Manila were (Veronica Razon), (Irene Jose), (Richard de Leon), (Enrique Tangalin), (Marcelo Estrela) and (Conchita de la Cruz). The military traced their whereabouts and confirmed their identities after intelligence authorities broke down the subversive code. Their names were found in the documents seized earlier in the offices and residence of Kilusang Mayo Uno Chairman Felixberto Olalia Sr.

The arrest of the 6 brought to 23 the number of Communist Party members now in military custody. Authorities said they are among the brains of the conspiracy of terror and rebellion.

In a related development, the army's engineering brigade yesterday augmented the planks of security to Metro Manila's vital public utilities, to thwart possible sabotage attempts by subversives. Elsewhere, perimeter security was doubled for on-going government projects. The commanding general of the 51st Engineering Brigade, Brig Gen (Simeon Ver), told newsmen that the moves formed part of the red alert status enforced Tuesday. The general made the move after President Marcos announced a plot to paralyze the nation's economy through widespread bombings and arson this month.

MARCOS' DAUGHTER RESIGNS FROM GOVERNMENT POSTS

OW 021225 Hong Kong AFP in English 1120 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Manila, Sept 2 (AFP) -- Philippine First Lady Imelda Marcos last night confirmed daughter Imee, whose secret marriage to a dashing sportsman was heady headline stuff early this year, had resigned all her government posts. Mrs Marcos told the AFP that Imee, 26, had only six months to finish her law studies at the state-run university of the Philippines and needed every chance to concentrate. Mrs Marcos also told AFP, at the Malacanang presidential palace last night, that as a result, Imee would not be able to join President Ferdinand Marcos' state visit to the United States this September.

MARCOS CREATES COCONUT INVESTMENT COMPANY

HK020025 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Excerpts] A new coconut investment company, to be owned by coconut farmers, has just been formed. President Marcos issued Executive Order 825 to this effect, directing the Philippine Coconut Authority to immediately proceed with the incorporation and organization of the company, under the corporation code. The new company will have an initial fully-paid capital stock of at least 100 million pesos, paid from proceeds of the levy imposed under the law on the Coconut Investment Fund. All the shares of stock will be owned by the coconut farmers who have duly registered their coconut investment fund receipts. Pending the distribution of the shares of stock to the coconut farmers, the shares will be voted by the Philippine Coconut Producers' Federation, or Cocofed, since it is the recognized national association of coconut producers.

MOLOTOV COCKTAILS THROWN AT EDUCATION MINISTRY

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 7, KYODO -- Molotov cocktails were hurled at the Education Ministry and the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party headquarters here Tuesday night apparently in connection with the textbook revision controversy, but no damage was reported. Police believe the actions were taken by radical elements, either leftists or rightists, against the government's response to the diplomatic row over the textbook controversy.

Police said a young man wearing a white helmet rode a motorcycle to the Education Ministry and hurled two Molotov cocktails at the ministry's east entrance in Kasumigaseki in central Tokyo around 7:30 p.m. The man fled after scattering leaflets denouncing the ministry for admiring Japan's aggressive war against China and censuring the Japanese imperialists' aggression against the peoples of China, Korea and other Asian countries.

Some five minutes later, two Molotov cocktails were hurled by a motorcyclist at a parking lot of the LDP headquarters. He fled after scattering similar leaflets.

In both incidents, the Molotov cocktails burst into flames but caused no damage. The incidents occurred in the wake of a demonstration staged by about 800 rightists at the Education and Foreign Ministries Tuesday afternoon criticizing the government for its "weak-kneed" diplomacy in connection with the textbook issue.

While hunting for the attackers, police took strict precautions at the prime minister's official residence, the Foreign Ministry, and the Chinese and South Korean embassies in Tokyo.

STEEL PIPE REPRESENTATIVES VISIT MOSCOW FOR TALKS

OW070827 Tokyo KYODO in English 0458 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 7, KYODO -- Japan's big four steel pipe mills have sent representatives to Moscow for talks on the price, volume and other terms for the supply of big-diameter pipes for shipment in 1983, Nippon Steel Corp. (NSC) said Tuesday. An NSC official said Sadao Irie, managing director, and Yoshihiro Tsutsui, deputy general manager of the pipe export department, both of NSC, would negotiate with V/O Promsyryeimport (Soviet Iron and Steel Products Export-Import Corp.) over supply terms.

The official said the big four mills -- NSC, Nippon Kokan K.K., Sumitomo Metal Industries, Ltd. and Kawasaki Steel Corp. -- are ready to supply about one million metric tons of large-diameter line pipes -- pipes for pipeline -- to the Soviet Union over a one-year period starting next January, if agreement on the price and other terms is reached.

The Soviet corporation in 1980 expressed a wish to import about one million tons of large-diameter line pipes from Japan yearly in the coming years. Last year, the Soviet corporation contracted with the big four mills for the purchase of 795,000 tons for shipment from April 1982 to March 1983.

The governmental Export-Import Bank of Japan (Eximbank) extended a five-year yen loan to the Soviet Bank for Foreign Trade carrying interest at 8 percent per annum.

Mill sources said the loan terms would be the No. 1 problem in new line pipe export negotiations with the Soviet Union. Under the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) guidelines, the minimum interest rate on officially supported export credit from Japan is set at Japan's long-term prime lending rate plus 2.3 percent. Japan's long-term prime lending rate rose 0.5 percent to 8.9 percent per annum, effective September 1. Thus, the new Eximbank loan interest will be 9.2 percent, according to an Eximbank official.

PRC PRESS DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR 12-DAY VISIT

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 7, KYODO -- A five-member Chinese press delegation arrived for a 12-day visit to Japan which includes a meeting with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

The delegation, led by Tan Wenrui, deputy editor-in-chief of the PEOPLE'S DAILY, official paper of the Communist Party, came at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry. While in Japan,the delegation will also visit industrial plants and farming areas.

WATANABE, PRC FINANCE MINISTER MEET IN TORONTO

[Text] Toronto, Sept 6, KYODO -- A Japanese official said Sunday International Development Association (IDA) loans should not be concentrated on a specific nation, indirectly criticizing lending to India.

Tomomitsu Oba, head of the Finance Ministry's International Finance Bureau, made the indirect criticism at an annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank. Meeting sources said the IDA, called second World Bank, was lending more than 30 percent of its loans to India.

Oba was addressing at a joint development committee on behalf of Finance Minister Michio Watanabe, who met with his Chinese counterpart Wang Bingqian earlier in the day and was told China want Japanese support to get more IDA loans or at least equal to India's level. Watanabe told Wang Japan does not think it good for IDA loans to be concentrated on a specific nation.

Oba told reporters after the committee, however, that he did not have China in mind when making the address. But the sources said Japan was apparently putting importance on China in its overseas assistance through international organizations.

Besides the IDA loan issue, Chinese Finance Minister Wang told Watanabe that China plans to raise its gross national product (GNP) per capita to dollar 1,000 in the year 2,000 from the current dollar 291 in its long-term economic plan. China is aiming to achieve the goal by scoring an average 7.2 percent GNP growth in the first half and another 10 percent rise in the latter half of the planning period, Wang explained to Watanabe.

Otsuka is currently constructing a medical fluid factory in Tianjin to be operated from autumn next year. [Excerpt] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0438 GMT 31 Aug 82 OW]

SR-71 FLIGHT INTO DPRK AIRSPACE REPORTED

SK071720 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1709 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 7 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors infiltrated the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane deep into the airspace east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, at around 12:02 on September 7 and then into the airspace above the Kangyong Peninsula, the southwestern part of South Hwanghae Province, at around 13:38 for espionage purpose.

The U.S. imperialists' espionage against the northern half of the DPRK is getting more frequent, timing to coincide with all forms of military exercises they are staging one after another in South Korea and the vicinity of our country, while hastening new war preparations.

The espionage acts committed by them through the infiltration of spy planes into the eastern and western airspace of our country and into the air above the area within the military boundary numbered 20 since August and more than 130, entering this year.

This clearly shows once again that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are the very one aggravating the tensions in Korea and the robbers crudely violating the sovereignty of our people.

They must end their occupation of South Korea and immediately withdraw from our country and discontinue at once espionage against the northern half of the DPRK.

VRPR ON U.S. SOLDIER'S REASONS FOR DEFECTING

SK070815 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Feature "Hour for the Armed Forces": station commentator Madame Yun's talk entitled "Why Did PFC White Seek Political Asylum in the North?"]

[Text] Men and officers of the armed forces: On 28 August, Joseph T. White, PFC of the 3d Squad, 3d Platoon, A Company, 31.1 Battalion, 2d Division of the U.S. forces in South Korea, sought political asylum in the North. What made PFC White, who said he has parents, two brothers and two sisters back at home in Missouri, the United States of America, seek political asylum in the North?

In his press conference held on 4 September in Pyongyang with reporters, both Korean and foreign, he said: I came over to North Korea crossing the Military Demarcation Line, seeking political asylum on 28 August last. Nobody instigated me to come over to North Korea. I sought political asylum not by any passing emotion but by my own deep conviction.

Saying that, he explained his motivation for seeking political refuge. He said that the first reason why he sought political asylum in North Korea was that he thought it unjustifiable for the U.S. Government to send U.S. troops to South Korea.

PFC White enlisted in the army in October 1981 and came to South Korea last March. Although high-ranking officers told him when he was sent to South Korea that the U.S. troops were being sent to South Korea to protect South Korea from aggression from the North, when he was actually serving in South Korea he came to doubt the mission of the U.S. forces there. He, who had found repugnant what he saw of the Kwangju incident in South Korea on U.S. television, has recently come to know of the preposterous loan scandal in which Chon Tu-hwan's direct involvement has been exposed. He once again felt that the Chon Tu-hwan regime is corrupted and barbarous.

The United States, however, is giving this corrupted Chon Tu-hwan clique lots of U.S.-made weapons and money, deploying even nuclear weapons in South Korea. Saying that the purpose of the United States in doing this is to have South Korea forever as a U.S. military colony, PFC White exposed the United States as the practical ruler of South Korea and South Korea as a U.S. colony.

While performing duty at the Military Demarcation Line since last July, he came to realize that the words "threat of aggression from the North" are a sheer lie. He saw through his binoculars that the North Korean farmers were farming peacefully in a vast plain with tractors and that a happy and peaceful life was blossoming in beautiful villages. Such a reality made him think many things.

Why should the American soldiers be at the demarcation line dividing another's country into two? Thinking of this, he came to feel shame over his situation. Noticing the South Korean people's eyes of curse focused on the American soldiers on the streets and in the villages in South Korea, he came to be disillusioned while feeling that hatred toward him.

He did not want to dedicate his youth to the wrongs the U.S. administration forced upon him. He came to think that he should free himself from such a disgraceful life as early as possible. He said: I wanted to express in action my opposition to the unjustifiable policy enforced by the U.S. administration. I also wanted to indict to the world the vulnerability of the U.S. Government, which indulges in corruptness, criminality, immorality and hedonism. My political asylum is an expression of my indignation against the internal and external policies of the corrupt U.S. Government.

He also said that his political asylum was to seek a genuine life as a man. PFC White is said to have grown up in a poor family. His father works at an automobile factory. His two brothers are unemployed. He had to leave college because of financial difficulties. Knowing well that the United States is an unfair society that is a paradise for the rich and powerful but a hell for the working people who are suffering from starvation and poverty, he knew he could not even hope for a bright future after his discharge from the army. He has longed for a fair society free from exploitation and oppression.

While working in the Demilitarized Zone, he came to know that there is a society in which he can lead a truly worthy life, within a very short distance. So he infinitely yearned for the North.

As early as in his middle school days, he came to know many anecdotes about President Kim Il-song, the great leader of our nation and a great man of the 20th century. Not long ago, he happened to see pictures carried in the U.S. magazine LIFE showing the 70th birthday celebrations of President Kim Il-song. He was greatly impressed by the pictures. Since then, he has collected pictures and other materials about the North.

PFC White said: In this way, I came to firmly believe that the people in the North are leading happy and stable lives under the wise leadership of the great leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Kim Chong-il. I came to firmly believe that the society in which I can enjoy a free and happy life is precisely the North where the great leader President Kim Il-song is enforcing the policy for the people.

This firm belief made him take a brave and determined action to seek freedom and happiness. Thus, he finally went over to the North on 28 August, braving all risks and difficulties, and requested political asylum. Saying that that day was a significant day on which he entered a bright new world, PFC White said he would never forget it.

PFC White, in a press conference in Pyongyang, expressed his opinion to the U.S. government and American soldiers in South Korea. Saying that while living in the peaceful North he came to more clearly understand that it is unjustifiable for the United States to occupy South Korea and to make preparations for a nuclear war, he continued: I think the U.S. Government should not waste huge amounts of money and resources in such reckless things but should give poor people food and jobs so that they may enjoy a peaceful life. The U.S. Government should not hinder the Korean Peninsula's reunification and should withdraw the U.S. aggression forces from South Korea.

Saying that soldiers of the U.S. forces in South Korea, too, have no reason whatsoever to oppose the North, PFC White added: It is a criminal act to hinder the reunification of the Korean Peninsula. U.S. soldiers should demand the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea.

Officers and men of the South Korean Army: This is not the outcry of a single U.S. soldier but the outcry of all conscientious U.S. soldiers. It is also the demand of our times and of our nation . You should insist on the withdrawal of all nuclear weapons deployed in South Korea and the U.S. forces from South Korea in response to this voice and embark on the road of anti-U.S. struggle for independence in high spirits to achieve national liberation and to regain the prerogative of supreme command of which you have been deprived by the U.S. aggression forces.

U.S.-JAPAN-SOUTH KOREA ALLIANCE PLAN ASSAILED

OW041854 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1606 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 4 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialists are now scheming to knock into shape a triangular military alliance of the U.S., Japan and the South Korean puppets and thereby form a new aggressive military alliance in the the Asian and Pacific region, trump up a larger aggressive military organisation in the future in this region with it as a mother body and, furthermore, perfect a global military strategic system by connecting it with a military alliance now projected in the Middle East region and with "NATO."

In this connection NODONG SINMUN today prints an article, saying that the maneuvres to form the triangular military alliance have become very dangerous. It goes on: The triangular military alliance is a product of the U.S. imperialists' Asian strategy. The U.S. imperialists, saying that their relations of alliance with Japan are a "pillar of Asia," direct all efforts to strengthening the military tie-up with Japan.

The Japanese reactionaries, on their part, plan to take a road of overseas expansion with the backing of the U.S. imperialists through the formation of the triangular military alliance and realise their reinvasion of South Korea as an immediate goal by strengthening the political and military collusion with the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique.

And the South Korean puppet clique intends to block the struggle of the people against fascism and for democracy and for the reunification of the country and remain in power indefinitely in reliance on the "strength" of the U.S. imperialists and Japanese reactionaries.

The triangular military alliance is a military alliance based on the commonness of the interests of the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries and the South Korean puppets and the master-servant relations, with the U.S. imperialists as the master. The U.S. imperialists have long projected to form the aggressive military alliance.

Now there exist the "U.S.-Japan security treaty" between the United States and Japan and the so-called "mutual defence treaty" between the United States and South Korea. Through these bilateral treaties the triangular military alliance has been virtually formed with U.S. imperialism as the axis.

To make closer military relations between Japan and South Korewa which do not exist in form in the U.S.-Japan-South Korea trianglar relations, the U.S. imperialists are zealously instigating the Japanese reactionaries and South Korean puppets to strengthen their military collusion and tie-up.

Noteworthy here is the U.S. defence secretary's tour of South Korea and Japan some time ago. During his tour of Japan and South Korea Defence Secretary Weinberger was closeted with their military brasshats to strengthen the triangular military alliance with the United States as the axis.

The U.S. imperialists have already established the "combined armed forces command" with the South Korean puppets and formed the "Japan-U.S. defense cooperation sub-committee" with the Japanese reactionaries.

In particular, the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries, at "the 18th U.S.-Japan security consultative meeting" in Tokyo early this year, discussed "the situation of northeast Asia and the world," "Japan-U.S. defense cooperation" and other problems and reached an agreement to start "study of emergency in the Far East."

"Emergency in the Far East" precisely means "emergency in the Korean Peninsula" and its "study" is mainly aimed to extensively mobilise the self-defence forces of Japan, using Japanese territory as a sortie, operation, ordnance and logistics base in case the U.S. imperialists start another war in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are intensifying the scheme to establish a military command system of Japan and South Korea. All facts show that the triangular military alliance system of the U.S., Japan and South Korean puppets is being further perfected and geared to ignite another war in Korea.

JAPANESE PROVOCATIONS AGAINST CHONGNYON FLAYED

SK030451 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0416 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 3 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comes out with a commentary titled "Premeditated Provocations for Undermining Patriotic Work of Chongnyon" denouncing the ever more wanton provocative acts of the Japanese reactionaries against the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon) and Koreans in Japan.

The author of the commentary cites concrete facts exposing the criminal acts of the rightwing gangsters of a Japanese anti-communist plot-breeding organisation and police in slinging mud at the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Chongnyon, using telephones for threats, committing arson, etc.

He said, the unbroken chain of provocations of the Japanese reactionaries are unpardonable hostile acts obstructing the patriotic work of Chongnyon and infringing upon the democratic national rights of the Korean citizens in Japan.

Hating Chongnyon as a thorn in their flesh, they have committed such criminal acts as keeping a watch on and spying into the activities of the Chongnyon organisation and stretched their hands of suppression to it under one and another pretext.

When voices are growing louder among the Koreans in Japan against the embellishment of the Japanese imperialists' brigandish aggression on Korea and their colonial rule and the flagrant distortion of stark historic facts through the recent revision of textbooks, the Japanese reactionaries, displeased with this, are intensifying their hostile acts against the DPRK and the Chongnyon organisation.

This shows that the unceasing provocative acts of the Japanese right-wing gangsters against Chongnyon and Koreans in Japan are an undisguised expression of their hostile policy toward our republic and that they are committed in a planned way under the patronage of the Japanese authorities.

By threatening Chongnyon, a legitimate overseas compatriots organisation of the DPRK, and intensifying their hostile policy toward our country, the Japanese reactionaries attempt to lull the voices denouncing them which are growing louder with the revision of textbooks and reverse the situation which has turned unfavorable to them. But this is a futile act.

The Japanese authorities are under legal and moral obligation to fully guarantee the democratic national rights of the Korean citizens in Japan either in view of the historic background of their question or in view of the principles of international law and international usage.

Denouncing with national resentment the Japanese reactionaries' unlawful acts of infringing upon the just patriotic activities of Chongnyon and the democratic national rights of the Koreans in Japan, remaining hostile to our republic, our people strongly demand the Japanese authorities to take necessarv measures to prevent the recurrence of such criminal acts and ferret out and severely punish those involved in the recent provocative acts.

If the Japanese authorities persist in their illegal acts against Chongnyon and Koreans in Japan, defying our repeated protests, they will be entirely held responsible for the grave consequences arising from this.

SOUTH KOREA CALLED ENEMY OF THIRD WORLD

[NODONG SINMUN 4 September commentary: "A Clumsy Trick of Masquerade"]

[Text] On the occasion of the Day of Namibia, the puppet South Korean foreign minister unbecomingly babbled that he supported the Namibian people's right to national self-determination and independence. Simultaneously, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique itself, which had toured a series of African countries, also babbled that it supports the cause of the Saharan, Namibian and Palestinian peoples.

Such ignominious sophistry and deceptive maneuvers by the puppet hooligan Chon Tu-hwan clique will not work.

It is absolutely ridiculous that a puppet clique which, as a dirty colonial stooge of the U.S. imperialists, has committed all kinds of evil acts against the newly emerging countries, should clamor that it supports the national self-determination and independence of someone.

Essentially, the so-called regime in South Korea is a puppet colonial regime fabricated at gunpoint by the U.S. imperialists and maintained by them. Also, it is nothing but a tool faithfully executing the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war policy. For this reason, the puppet South Korean clique, a U.S. imperialist stooge with no peer, has opposed the just cause of the peoples of the newly emerging countries, including the peoples of the Asia and Africa, devoting itself to disturbing peace and security.

Whenever war broke out in the Middle East in the past, the puppets, under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, maneuvered against the Palestinian and Arab peoples by even sending pilots, choosing sides with the Israeli Zionists. Also, running counter to the unanimous will and interests of the African peoples, the puppets, at orders of the U.S. imperialist masters, established friendly relations with the South African racists, who were rejected and denounced by the African peoples. They have run wild to crush the struggles waged by the South African peoples, such as the Namibian people, for national liberation by even sending a military advisory group and dispatched several tens of the puppet military officers to West Sahara to join in the punitive expeditions against the Saharan people.

People still vividly remember that in the past some puppet South Korean envoys, returning from visits to African countries during which they paid lipservice to economic cooperations and exchanges with the African state leaders and personages of all strata, indescribably slandered the African people by saying that there are no clear-cut lines in African politics, economy and culture because Africa is a dark society, that there is neither culture nor art that the Negroes cannot even count for they are extremely forgetful and, therefore, it is impossible to do business with them and that they are peoples with no history.

What is more, as for the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, it is a vicious murderer who has been trained in the U.S. imperialist brutality and in the consciousness of a human butcher and an intolerable criminal who, rushing to the battlefield of the U.S. imperialists in Southeast Asia and taking the lead in the scorched-earth operations of burning all, destroying all and killing all, committed all kinds of brutalities such as killing innocent residents in surprise attacks on peaceful villages there.

How ridiculous that such persons today are wily playing tricks to make them appear as friends of the African and Arab peoples! This is nothing but an insult and mockery of the African and Arab peoples, who love national independence, peace and justice.

The purpose of the Chon Tu-hwan clique's attempt to shamelessly pretend that it is a friend to the African and Arab peoples and to win their favor is as clear as daylight. The bungling masquerade trick by the puppets is a foolish trick to cover up their nature as a fascist hangman and as a dirty U.S. imperialist stooge, eschew the isolation they face in the international community by misleading public opinion at home and abroad and, eventually, to join the ranks of the newly emerging countries.

No matter what wily tricks it may try to employ, the puppet South Korean clique will never be able to cover up its dirty and wicked nature. It is well known to everybody that the puppet South Korean clique, a bunch of vicious and ignominious, two-faced persons, is playing the role of the perpetrator executing the imperialists' policy of aggression and war policy while preaching freedom and peace, is devoted to subversive acts and slander while preaching prosperity and is hindering the national cause and independent development of other countries while advocating friendship and cooperation.

It is no accident that more and more people, such as the peoples of the nonaligned countries, are condemning and rejecting the South Korean Chon Tu-hwan clique as an imperialist stooge and as a fascist murder.

Dependence on outside forces, national division, fascism and maneuvers for war pursued by the South Korean flunkeyist and sell-out group are incompatible with the just cause of the peoples of the newly emerging countries, including the African and Arab peoples, who are struggling for sovereignty, independence and peace against all kinds of subjugation and domination.

The peoples of the newly emerging ocuntries, including the African and Arab peoples, who are aware of the South Korean puppets' criminal nature, will never tolerate their ignominious and slanderous maneuvers of deception.

PAPER URGES CATCHING UP WITH, SURPASSING JAPAN

[Editorial: "On the Day of National Disgrace, We Think About Overwhelming Japan -- Let Us Grasp the Nature of Japan, Catch Up With It and Gain Superiority Over It"]

[Excerpts] August 29 is the 72d anniversary of the day of national disgrace. However, it is regrettable that, these days, we often forget to remember the day.

Now that the textbook issue has been settled, at least diplomatically, we think it worthwhile to ponder the significance of the day of national disgrace. Reviewing the day 72 years ago on which the nation was completely deprived of its sovereignty is not done because of reactionary sentiment, but is done to make a firm determination not to be deprived of national sovereignty and have the national dignity defiled again in the ruthless international community, where we see no signboard of imperialism but the logic of strength is still dominant.

The growing national campaign to gain superiority over Japan which has been kicked off in the wake of the textbook dispute must not end up in a chorus of slogans or in braggadocio. The campaign to overwhelm Japan is a long-range and future-oriented task to nurture national strength and reinforce the base for national prosperity and, thus, is a start of the movement to promote the might of the nation to defend the dignity of the nation.

What we have learned in the wake of the textbook dispute is that we have few Japanese experts who know everything about Japan. This is, we consider, an outcome of our extreme taboo on Japan. This state of ignorance concerning Japan has been created by the cultural mechanism of the past era in which study of Japan was considered as pro-Japanese and unconditional denunciation of Japan as patriotism.

Now, we must do away with the self-defense mechanism against Japan and begin an active study of Japan to better understand it. Rather than continuing to emphasize the history of Korea's conveyance of culture to Japan, we must make efforts to eliminate the remnants of Japanese imperialism which began to accumulate with the opening of Korea to the world, and must demonstrate continental nobility by making an affirmative evaluation on the merits of Japan.

Our country will soon reach the goal of $2,000 per capita GNP and, as a semi-advanced nation, is constantly moving forward to join the ranks of the advanced countries. However, GNP is not the only measurement for an advanced nation. In order to become a truly advanced nation, the citizens must grow in proportion to the development of the society. At the same time, they must become citizens with polished and matured manners towards other nations. At the same time, they must abandon the all-or-nothing concept and the principle of uniformity and, based on pluralism for variety, must seek the common good of the nation and individual happiness as well. This is the characteristic of a truly advanced nation.

In a nutshell, the slogan for overwhelming Japan is to do away with the emotional anti-Japanese sentiment. It is the concept of highly rational competition and the issue of self-revolution, not to seek to depend on foreign forces, but to seek self-cultivation. At the same time, it is a movement of our times for self-nurturing, and not a reactionary anti-Japanese campaign, but a future-oriented movement to understand Japan.

The history of the day of national disgrace shows that, if national consensus is not achieved and efforts of the nation are not concentrated, national dignity and sovereignty cannot be defended. For the nurturing of national strength and the development of history, we must mobilize the national consensus achieved in the wake of the textbook dispute. By so doing, we must reinforce the foundation of the nation. This is, we must remember, a true victory over Japan and the way not to repeat the day of national disgrace.

CHON SEES POTENTIAL FOR ROK-AFRICA COOPERATION

[Text] Seoul, Sept 8 (YONHAP)--President Chon Tu-hwan said Tuesday that there is great potential for cooperation between Korea and Africa. Addressing a reception hosted by Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop at the Capitol Building, Chon said Korea and Africa have much to offer each other. Chon, who recently visited four African countries and Canada, said that technology and skilled manpower are the most desirable forms of assistance that Korea can offer to Africa. Chon also noted that his African tour provided "a turning point" in diplomatic competition with North Korea in Africa.

Touching on his trip to Canada, the president said he and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau agreed that Chon's proposed Pacific summit may lead to "a Pacific era" as well as contribute to South Korea's diplomatic activities.

FINANCE MINISTER KANG PAYS VISIT TO CANADA

Departure From Seoul

SK040726 Seoul YONHAP in English 0703 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sep 4 (YONHAP) -- A 16-member South Korean delegation, led by Finance Minister Kang Kyong-sik, left here Saturday for Toronto to attend the 37th annual general meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development Sept 6-9. Before returning home Sept. 18, the delegation will conduct seminars on the Korean economy in Chicago, New York and Los Angeles.

Remarks in Toronto

[Text] Toronto, Sept. 7 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Finance Minister Kang Kyong-sik says Korea will have no difficulty servicing its foreign debt, noting the Korean economy is "making visible improvement." Kang was briefing Korean community leaders and representatives of Korean trading firms based in Toronto Monday evening. He said Korea's debt servicing ratio was 14 percent, well within a manageable level, with an outstanding external debt of 33.5 billion U.S. dollars as of last July. The figure is an improvement compared with the debt servicing ratio of 25 percent in the early 1970's with an outstanding debt of only three billion dollars, he said. A debt servicing ratio of 20 percent or more is considered dangerous.

The IMF-World Bank annual meeting now underway here is dominated by concern over a looming international debt crisis.

Kang admitted there were a number of economic problems facing the country, including a slow growth rate of exports. He said, however, the nation's strength lies in its 'problem solving capacity,' adding that Korea will be able to overcome any future economic difficulty as it has in the past. Kang said the Korean economy was poised to make a 'second leap' that would put the nation firmly in the ranks of industrialized nations in the not too distant future.

MEETING WITH EGYPT ON ECONOMIC TIES OPENS

SK270129 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 27 Aug 82 p 5

[Text] The second joint meeting of the Korea-Egypt and Egypt-Korea economic cooperation committees was held in Seoul yesterday, sponsored by the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KCCI).

The one-day Seoul meeting was attended by Kum Chin-ho, vice minister of commerce and industry; Ea Chae-hang, executive vice president of the KCCI; Dr. Mohamed Ibrahim Dakrouri, member of the Egyptian parliament; Yun Cha-chung, president of the Korea Trade Promotion Corp. (Kotra); and some 70 business leaders of both countries.

At the annual event, both delegations reviewed the current economic situations of their countries and emphasized the necessity of further increasing two-way trade and economic cooperation between the two countries. Korea was represented by a 30-member delegation headed by Ea Chae-hang, concurrently acting chairman of the Korean chapter of the committee, while the 15-man Egyptian delegation was headed by Dr. Mohamed Ibrahim Dakrouri, also acting chairman of the Egyptian chapter. Reviewing the current trend of bilateral trade, both sides agreed to expedite the trade of such goods as textiles, electronics equipment, steel products, agricultural tools and machines, plywood, raw cotton, aluminium and grains. Both delegations also agreed to ask both governments to make mutual efforts to materialize an early agreement to double taxation avoidance, and a simplified cutoms clearance procedure for samples. One KCCI official said that Egyptian delegation promised to ask their government to invite members of the Korean business community regularly to the annual Cairo international trade fair.

Calling attention to the general foreign investment policies of the two nations, both delegations agreed to encourage its respective business community to undertake joint ventures in the other country. According to the KCCI official, the Egyptian delegation also pledged to provide financing through the Development Industrial Bank of Egypt, if Korean business concerns participate in Egyptian development projects.

Acknowledging the fact that the respective stages of development of the two economies provide ample chances for cooperative projects in such areas as steel and metal, fertilizers, medicine, textiles, food and construction materials, both delegations exhorted the other to explore those opportunities. It was also agreed to make every possible effort to promote the transfer of technology for small and medium enterprises in both countries, the KCCI official said.

In the opening ceremony, Vice Minister of Commerce and Industry Kum delivered a speech. He said in his congratulatory message that two-way trade volume between Korea and Egypt had expanded to $152 million last year from $18 million in 1976, posting a gain of about 8.5 times in the short period of five years. To find new commodity items with trade potential, he stressed the need to expand the exchange of commercial information and private visits by traders to each other's country.

The KCCI, meanwhile, said that Korea's major export items to Egypt are textiles, electronics equipment, steel products and plywood. Those items occupied very high percentage of Korea's total exports to Egypt last year. Major Korean imports from Egypt included raw cotton, aluminium, and grains. The largest import item from Egypt was raw cotton, which amounted to $13,964,596 last year, capturing some 44 percent of Korea's total imports from Egypt.

NORTH TO BE EXCLUDED FROM THAI SOCCER MATCHES

[Text] Seoul, Sept 8 (YONHAP) -- Thailand will not invite North Korea's soccer team to this year's Queen's Cup football tournament Oct. 10-19 in Bangkok, it was learned here Wednesday. The organizing committee for the soccer tourney reported to the Korea Amateur Football Association (KAFA) that it will invite South Korea's Hanyang University squad, Mainland China, Romania and Poland to the annual soccer competition. A KAFA official said the Hanyang University team had made a strong protest against Thailand's previous plan to invite a North Korean team to the tourney. South Korea finished third in last year's Queen's Cup tournament.

VOPB ARTICLE WELCOMES 43D ANNIVERSARY OF BCP

BK061608 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 0030 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Unattributed article: "The Burma Communist Party Is the Most Faithful Champion of the People of Burma"]

[Text] Let us first salute the tens of thousands of martyrs who have fallen in the struggle to liberate their country and the people of all nationalities. The glory of these martyrs will shine forever and will remain indelibly engraved in the history of our party and the revolution in Burma.

The 43-year history of the Burma Communist Party [BCP] has been a history of struggle against British imperialism, Japanese fascism and successive reactionary governments to liberate the people of all nationalities. Just as it has struggled with utter devotion for the complete emancipation of the people of all nationalities in the past 43 years, it will continue to do so until the people are finally liberated.

Our party's 43-year history is mainly a history of armed struggle. Treasured sons and daughters of our party, who have showed unrivaled bravery and have made unparalleled self-sacrifices in the national war struggles against British imperialism and Japanese fascism, became national heroes. In the same manner, today they are heroically struggling as class heroes in the civil war created by successive reactionary governments since 1948.

From the time our party was founded until now, it has advanced along a path strewn with self-sacrifices and hardships. It was not a march on a bed of roses. The reason our party has to advance along such a tortuous path is because it intends to genuinely liberate our country and our people, and ultimately to establish a new world in which there is no exploitation of man by man, nor oppression of one race by another race; in other words, to establish a new world where all of mankind is liberated.

The main reason why our party has been able to advance along such a tortuous path over the past 43 years is because it is equipped with an ideological weapon of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and a moral weapon of forever upholding the interests of the people and forming an integral part of the masses, as well as because it utterly detests national and class exploitation and oppression and it is immeasurably loyal to the cause of liberating the people. No political party in the history of Burma has ever moved along the type of tortuous path the BCP has advanced along, made self-sacrifices as the BCP has done or shared the same experiences as the BCP has experienced.

Recently, we have heard and read about profusely wirtten accounts of how the Burma Socialist Program Party [BSPP] has completed its 20 years. When the country's power was seized with the backing of the military, when military might was used as a threat or for persuasion, when the country's funds were used lavishly and when a party was formed with the backing of the military, the BSPP came into being instantaneously. When they thought that just having a party was not enough to call it a modern-day party, they hired some people to write an ideology for the party; thus, the birth of a twisted, mixture of an ideology. Such was the way the BSPP and it's ideology -- the system of correlation of man and his environment -- came into being.

Any military dictator can set up such a party. A party like the BSPP, which has never come across any difficult times, has never been tested and does not have a revolutionary line or thinking, and which only serves a handful of persons in the military clique, can never be a strong party. As it had come into being instantaneously, it will disappear in no time at all.

The fascist party established by the Italian dictator, Mussolini, disappeared immediately after the death of Mussolini. The fascist party lasted only for 23 years. Fascism, which became the world's public enemy No 1 originated from Mussolini's fascist party. The Ne Win-San Yu military clique's party -- the BSPP -- will also definitely be noted for its notoriety and go down as a blotch on the history of Burma.

In late 1980 and the first half of 1981, the BCP had two rounds of talks with the military government to end the civil war and to build peace in the country. Giving due consideration to the conditions at home and abroad as well as to the basic interests of the people of Burma, our party made as many concessions as it could during the negotiations. However, the military government did not want to end the civil war or to build peace in the country; it merely clung blindly to the state Constitution which legalizes the one-party dictatorship and which was written by its own hand and passed through the use of threat. It repeatedly demanded only the abolishment of the BCP, the people's army and the base areas. When their demands were not met, they unilaterally terminated the talks.

We the communists, after studying and analyzing the absolute conditions at home and abroad, and with an eye toward the future, ardently desired to achieve the following:

1. To end the civil war and build peace in the country;
2. To give full democratic rights to the people;
3. To build national unity;
4. To raise the standard of living of the people;
5. To oppose Soviet and U.S. hegemonism and domination, particularly the former's hegemonism and domination; and
6. To safeguard world peace.

For these reasons, we pragmatically adopted a flexible give-and-take attitude at the talks.

Since the unilateral termination of talks by the military government, political and economic conditions at home and abroad have taken a turn for the worse. The arms race and the contest for spheres of influence by the world's two superpowers -- the United States and the Soviet Union -- have intensified; economic problems have worsened in the capitalist world; the economic war between the United States and Western Europe has been aggravated; Third World countries are increasingly shouldering the burden of the world's economic problems; the Afghan national war against Soviet aggression continues and there is no sign that Soviet social-imperialism is about to yield; the Kampucheans' national war against Vietnamese hegemonists is continuing fiercely, and there is a possibility that the flames of this war will leap across the border into Thailand; there have been wars between British imperialism and Argentina for the Falklands, between Iran and Iraq and between Somalia and Ethiopia, as well as Israel's war of aggression in Lebanon, national defense wars and regional proxy wars because of behind-the-scenes maneuvering by the United States and the Soviet Union. With each passing day, conditions for a multinational war are becoming more prevalent in the world.

What is the Ne Win-San Yu military government doing under such a tense international situation? It continues to intensify the reactionary civil war, brags about eliminating the communist party in a short time, slanders the communist party unjustly, finds a way out from the economic and financial difficulties it is facing by becoming more dependent on all types of imperialists and reactionaries, blindly clings to its one-party dictatorship system and tries to perpetuate the system for generations to come, continues to deprive the people of their basic democratic rights, creates greater rifts between nationalities and unflinchingly continues the unjust war against minority nationality groups, contributes to lowering the standard of living of the people, and continues to keep the people in the dark when it comes to foreign affairs and to the stand taken by the military government in international affairs.

All of these acts are shortsighted and reactionary because they make the country sink deeper into the quagmire and because they ignore the interests of the people of all nationalities and serve only the interests of a handful of military clique members.

Our party will resolutely oppose and fight such reactionary acts. As long as the military government continues its anticommunist and antipeople reactionary civil war, we shall continue to wage a just war to defend ourselves. At the same time, we will actively continue to struggle to end the civil war and to build peace in the country, to give basic democratic rights to the people by abolishing the one-party dictatorship, to build national unity, to raise the standard of living of the people, and to oppose imperialism and hegemonism and to safeguard world peace.

Our party will join hands and struggle together with any class, race or individual who is for and who supports these programs and objectives.

Unavoidably, our party has been involved in the civil war for more than 34 years. That war was created by the reactionary antifascist People's Freedom League government and continued by successive governments. In order to preserve ourselves, we have to counter this reactionary civil war with our revolutionary war.

In the over 34 years, we have tried many times to end the civil war. But unilateral action by successive reactionary governments has disrupted our attempts. Whenever the opportunity arises, we will continue to endeavor to end the civil war.

There is imperialism and hegemonism in the world today. As long as the two exist we cannot avoid wars of aggression. When there is war of aggression, it is natural for national wars waged by the victims of aggression to emerge. Today, some countries are involved in national wars to oppose imperialism and hegemonism. One day, our Burma may also have to fight in a national war to oppose hegemonism in the same way as Kampuchea and Afghanistan. If a national war were to break out, we, the communists, grasping patriotism, are ready to fight any enemy aggressor in the forefront and in the most difficult position.

Communists took up the same responsibilities during the war against Japanese fascism. This is a historic fact which cannot be deleted or erased by any enemy class. If there comes a time to fight in another national war, communists will once again prove through practice that they match their words with action.

The future of our country and people is bright. We, the communists, will relentlessly fight for that bright future. We shall most faithfully serve the people of Burma. We shall overcome any obstacles that come across our way and attain victory without fail. This is our iron-clad pledge.

Ngo Dien, Vietnamese ambassador to Kampuchea, was also present.

HUN SEN ATTENDS CEREMONY TO MARK NEW AIR SERVICE

BK041638 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1439 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 3 Sep (SPK) -- A ceremony opening the Phnom Penh-Ho Chi Minh City airline run by the Kampuchean Civil Aviation "Akaschar Kampuchea" [Kampuchea Airlines] was organized today at Pochentong Airport in the presence of Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs.

Tea Banh, deputy minister of defense in charge of aviation, and other personalities attended. Also present were USSR Ambassador O.V. Bostorin, Vietnamese military attache Vu Nha and other members of the diplomatic corps accredited to Kampuchea.

On this occasion, Tea Banh made a speech. Since the first days of 1979, he said, with the precious assistance of Vietnam's civil aviation general administration which sent its best cadres and experienced technical employees to Kampuchea and endowed Kampuchean airfields with part of its so precious technical materiel, all favorable conditions have been created to enable us to reestablish the activities of Pochentong Airport. So far, the airport has controlled with no trouble approximately 10,000 landing and takeoff operations and received more than 30,000 passengers and about 4,000 tons of luggage and mail transported between Kampuchea and fraternal and friendly countries.

Also, enjoying the reinforced assistance of the Soviet Communist Party, government and people, he went on to say, the aircraft of the young Kampuchean Civil Aviation "Akaschar Kampuchea" bearing national markings will ensure regular services linking the restored capital of the PRK with the great city bearing the name of the SRV's respected President Ho Chi Minh twice a week, on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Tea Banh affirmed that this fact also eloquently proves that no criminal scheme however perfidious and disgusting of the imperialists, Beijing expansionists and their lackeys can slow down the advance of the valiant and hard-working Kampuchean people on the road to restoration and development, and that the political, economic and social situation in the PRK is unquestionably irreversible.

VODK: KHIEU SAMPHAN MEETS TANJUG CORRESPONDENT

BK080337 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] On 4 September 1982, (Kolpar Ritrak), representative of the Yugoslav news agency TANJUG in Bangkok, arrived in Phnum Malai region for a visit to Democratic Kampuchea.

In the afternoon of the first day, the friendly guest visited villages, schools, laboratories, a workshop (?making artifical legs for the disabled combatants) and hospitals.

On the morning of 5 September 1982, Khieu Samphan, Democratic Kampuchean vice president in charge of foreign affairs, held talks with and hosted a lunch in honor of the friendly Yugoslav guest. Also present during the talks and lunch were Mrs Ieng Thirith and a number of Foreign Ministry cadres. During the talks, the Yugoslav friend spoke of his good impressions of the high patriotic spirit and love of the people by Democratic Kampuchean leaders who are holding high the banner of the sacred great union of the entire nation and sharing weal and woe with the people, male and female combatants in leading the struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. The situation of this struggle has been developing well in all fields and is good at present. The Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators are bogged down and cannot extricate themselves from this situation. They will be completely defeated in the end.

On the afternoon of the same day, the friendly Yugoslav guest left the Democratic Kampuchean zone and returned safely to his bureau.

VODK URGES SUPPORT FOR DK SEAT IN UN ASSEMBLY

BK061644 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 5 Sep 82

[Station commentary: "We Hope That More Peace- and Justice-Loving UN Member States Than Before Will Vote in Support of the Democratic Kampuchean Seat"]

[Text] Every year, at the opening of the UN General Assembly the Vietnamese aggressors use every maneuver to keep the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations vacant, in preparation for introducing their Phnom Penh lackeys.

This year, the Vietnamese aggressors will certainly raise this question of the Democratic Kampuchean seat again. Democratic Kampuchea is the sole legal and legitimate state representing Kampuchea and it is a member of the United Nations, recognized as such by this organization even before Vietnam.

Over the past few years, Democratic Kampuchea has been a victim of the Vietnamese aggressors, who have sent their troops to invade and occupy the country since the end of 1978. Thus, Vietnam is a bandit state which has insolently and savagely violated the laws and practices governing relations between states and the principles of the UN Charter.

As a bandit, Vietnam has no right to propose that the Democratic Kampuchean seat be left vacant. On the contrary, it is the Hanoi Vietnamese themselves who should be punished and expelled from the United Nations, because they are the bandits and aggressors who have violated the UN Charter and the principles of international law and destroyed peace and stability in Southeast Asia in disregard of the UN General Assembly's resolutions and world opinion.

Supporting the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations is a just act and a duty of each member state -- as defined in Article 1 of the UN Charter, which must be followed and implemented in order to preserve the principles of the UN Charter and order in the United Nations so that each country cannot whimsically violate them. It is also necessary in order to preserve order in the world.

This is why at each successive session of the UN General Assembly since 1979, despite Vietnam's tricks and maneuvers to have the Democratic Kampuchean seat left vacant and to have Democratic Kampuchea expelled from the United Nations, all peace- and justice-loving member states have continued to vote to maintain this seat as that of the sole legal and legitimate representative of Democratic Kampuchea. And they have done so in increasing numbers: in 1979 there were 71 votes in favor of this; in 1980, 74; and in 1981, 79.

So, this year we hope that all these countries will continue to vote in support of the Democratic Kampuchean seat and those which have been abstaining will vote in favor of this seat to show their correct stand against aggression and to safeguard the principles of international law, the UN Charter, the rights and freedom and the good order in the Unided Nations and the world. In addition, this will serve as a means to pressure the Vietnamese to abide by the UN General Assembly's resolutions which require them to unconditionally withdraw all their aggressor troops from Kampuchea and respect the Kampuchean people's right to solve their own problem and decide their own destiny without any outside interference.

It is only by providing assistance and support for the Kampuchean people's struggle, voting in support of the Democratic Kampuchean seat in the United Nations, and putting pressure on the Vietnamese to withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea, in conformity with the UN General Assembly's resolutions, that contributions can be made to peacefully solving the Kampuchean problem in a just manner, thus benefiting peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

[Speech by Phoumi Vongvichit, member of LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and deputy prime minister, delivered at 31 August ceremony in Hanoi to present Lao National Gold Order to Truong Chinh, member of VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and president of the SRV Council of State, and Pham Van Dong, member of VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected and beloved Comrade General Secretary Le Duan; respected and beloved Comrade President of the Council of State Truong Chinh; respected and beloved Comrade Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong; respected and beloved Comrade President of the National Assembly Nguyen Huu Tho; beloved comrades:

Today, amidst a joyous atmosphere in which the Vietnamese people throughout the country are celebrating the 37th anniversary of their national day, the delegation of our party and state has the great honor to represent the LPRP Central Committee, the Supreme People's Council and the LPDR Government to present the National Gold Order -- our nation's highest honor -- to Comrade President of the Council of State Truong Chinh and Comrade Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong, outstanding leaders of the Vietnamese party and state and great and intimate friends of the Lao people.

Since the 1930's, pursuing the path of combining nationalism with Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism under the guidance of the great President Ho Chi Minh, Comrade Truong Chinh and Comrade Pham Van Dong have closely associated their lives with the resounding and majestic movements of the Indochinese Communist Party in the past and the Vietnamese Communist Party at present. [Words indistinct] assuming prominent party and state positions in the brilliant leadership built and nurtured by the great President Ho Chi Minh, and members of the current VCP Central Committee headed by respected and beloved Comrade General Secretary Le Duan, the two comrades brought into full play their strength, wisdom, abilities and virtues to serve the party to successfully carry out the August revolution, and to lead the struggles against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists to complete victory, thus fulfilling the task of national reunification. They have also led the struggle to defeat the two wars of aggression launched by the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, thereby securely defending the national independence and sovereignty and writing another glorious page for the history of Vietnam.

On the national construction front, with their tireless movements in many spheres, the two comrades have made efforts together with the entire party to lead the Vietnamese people to overcome numerous difficulties created by the enemies as well as the vestiges left behind by the war until they have scored numerous significant successes, building greater potentials for national defense and socialist construction.

Appreciating the teachings of the great President Ho Chi Minh, who laid a firm foundation for the relationship between the two parties and peoples with solidarity and militant alliance, the two comrades have always coordinated with other Vietnamese party and state leaders to preserve, foster and strengthen this special relationship and solidarity, thus making it bear fruit continuously. The friendly relations, lasting trust and strong unity between the peoples of Laos and Vietnam during both times of difficulty and of triumph, and the mutual assistance and cooperation between Laos and Vietnam which has been gloriously developed in all fields are all the fruits of the correct and exemplary leadership of our two parties in resolving the relationship between our national interests and international interests. You two comrades have made significant contributions to this effect.

Respected and beloved Comrade Truong Chinh and Comrade Pham Van Dong:

Our Lao people are very proud to have two renowned comrades who have scored extravagant meritorious deeds to the revolution of a country as great friends. On this occasion, as you are both to be awarded with the highest-level medals, our party and state would like to express the profound appreciation, respect and gratitude of our Lao people to two indomitable revolutionary fighters such as you, who have devoted their entire lives of heroic, prosperous activities to the cause of struggle for independence, freedom and socialist, for the welfare, prosperity and happiness of the people, and for the solidarity and militant alliance between our two countries.

Beloved comrades: Our Lao people are elated at the great achievements scored by the heroic Vietnamese people in the cause of building and defending their socialist country during the past years. We are firmly convinced that under the correct and creative leadership of the VCP Central Committee, headed by respected and beloved Comrade General Secretary Le Duan -- outstanding activist of the international communist-worker movement who has worthily pursued the cause of great Chairman Ho Chi Minh -- the Vietnamese people will certainly be able to overcome various difficulties and trials and successfully fulfill all the tasks put forth by the fifth party congress so as to lead the Vietnamese revolution to march forward to a new, ever higher level.

In the process of development of their protracted recolutionary struggle in the past as well as in the present, our Lao party and people have always enjoyed sincere, precious support and assistance from the party, state and fraternal people of Vietnam. Our Lao people will always remember this unselfish assistance full of pure international socialist friendship and would like to express their profound gratitude for it.

The third congress of our Lao party, which concluded recently with glorious success, has once again proved that the solidarity with Vietnam is a sacred love of the nation and a law of victory for the Lao revolution. The firm solidarity which has been built and strengthened with the blood of our two nations is most precious. We pledge to nourish and maintain that solidarity like the apple of our eye. We will absolutely not allow any reactionary force to undermine it. Our entire party and people, uniting closely around the party Central Committee with respected and beloved Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan as head, are resolved to concentrate all their abilities on consolidating and further strengthening the special solidarity and militant alliance between the two countries of Laos and Vietnam, as well as among the three countries of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea so as to together safeguard national independence and build socialism in their respective countries. This will contribute to the enhancement of the strength of the socialist community with the Soviet Union as the core in the cause of peace and revolution in Southeast Asia and the world, and to foil and smash all schemes of dividing, sabotaging and destroying the current revolution of the common enemies, namely, the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionary powers.

Long live the special solidarity and militant alliance between Laos and Vietnam and among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea!

May great Chairman Ho Chi Minh last forever in our revolutionary cause!

We wish Comrade Le Duan, Comrade Truong Chinh, Comrade Pham Van Dong, Comrade Nguyen Huu Tho and other comrade leaders of the Vietnamese party and state good health.

Now, allow me to bestow the highest-level medals of the LPDR on Comrade Truong Chinh and Comrade Pham Van Dong.

SRV TROOPS FIRE ON THAI FISHING BOAT, KILLING 1

BK081003 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] The chief police investigator of Muang District police station, Samut Sakhon Province, has reported that a Thai fisherman was killed over the weekend when the Vietnamese fired on a Thai fishing trawler fishing near a Vietnamese island. Another fisherman was also slightly wounded. According to him, the fishing trawler, Thida Nawin went into the Vietnamese waters on Saturday and was fired on by Vietnamese soldiers on the island. It has been reported that the Vietnamese fire killed one of the fishermen and slightly damaged the port side of the trawler. The survivors later reported the incident to the Muang District police.

KAMPUCHEAN REFUGEES ARRESTED IN UBON RATCHATHANI

BK080953 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] A naval spokesman has reported that 14 KHMER people were arrested while attempting to cross the Mekong River from Laos to the Thai bank and 3 Thai men who escorted the refugees were killed in an exchange of fire with a Thai naval patrol boat in Ubon Ratchathani Province. According to him, the three men in one of the boats first opened fire at the patrol boat upon being ordered to surrender and the ensuing fighting resulted in their deaths.

The Khmer people, including women and children, were sent to immigration officials for questioning. The leader of the refugees said they were all ethnic Chinese who fled from Phnom Penh to Laos, hoping to cross the border river to the Thai side. They planned to enter Thailand to join other refugees in holding centers in Ubon Ratchathani Province.

OFFICIAL SAYS PLO OFFICE TO BE CONSIDERED

BK040728 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 4 Sep 82 p 6

[Text] Thailand will consider a request by the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) to set up a liaison officer here, a spokesman of the Foreign Ministry said yesterday. Director General of the Information Department Chet Sucharitkun told a news conference that PLO special envoy 'Ali Fayyad visited here last week to make the request. "We took note of his request and informed him that we will study the call," he said.

The PLO, which is a member of the 95-nation Nonaligned Movement, has now 115 offices of representation worldwide. So far, Malaysia is the only country in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) that has allowed the PLO to set up an office in the country.

Asked whether the Thai contacts with the PLO would irk Israel, Chet said Thailand will base its decision on the PLO request on its interests. "It's our right to accept or turn down the request," he said. Chet said that a PLO political affairs chief had visited Thailand during July 29-August 1 five years ago for talks with then Foreign Minister Uppadit Pachariyangkul, as part of his ASEAN tour to drum up support for the PLO's cause. "The Thai Government then issued a statement in support of the PLO on the conflicts in the Middle East," he said. He said that Thailand recognizes the PLO as a legitimate organization and seconds the UN resolutions involving the self-determination of the Palestinian people.

PREM TO APPROVE MILITARY COMMAND STRUCTURE SHIFT

BK070235 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 7 Sep 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon, in his capacity as defence minister, yesterday said he will approve the proposal that the commanders-in-chief of the three armed forces be automatically made deputy supreme commanders. This move would become effective before the annual military reshuffle to be announced on October 1, Gen Prem said.

"It (the proposal) is a good idea. I think I will approve it, because it will create a closer relationship between the Supreme Command and the various branches of the armed forces, as well as enhance coordination between them," he said. The Council of the Defence Ministry will not have to be consulted on the decision, Gen Prem explained. He added that as defence minister, he will give the order to approve the proposal.

In an exclusive report, the BANGKOK POST revealed details of the proposal on Saturday. The report quoted Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon as saying that he and other senior military officers had suggested to Gen Prem that the commanders-in-chief of the army, navy and air force should automatically be made deputy supreme commanders. Gen Saiyut emphasised that the idea was initiated collectively, and not by himself.

Asked last night to comment on Gen Prem's approval of the proposal, Gen Saiyut said only that he would have to wait "a few days" until he receives an official order from Gen Prem. He said that it was up to the defence minister whether the proposal is taken up by the Council of the Ministry of Defence or not.

Informed military sources said that the automatic appointments would greatly enhance the stature and clout of the supreme commander, as it would place the commanders-in-chief of the army, navy, and air force directly under his command. Under the present military structure, the three commanders-in-chief, who are the real power-holders in the armed forces, are not normally appointed deputy supreme commanders.

Reporters questioned Gen Prem whether assistants would now be appointed to help the commanders-in-chief, since they will have a lot of work to do while occupying two positions at the same time. But the prime minister said that the decision had been well thought out and assistants would not be necessary.

He added that there should be no problems during this year's military reshuffle because the present three deputy supreme commanders are due to retire at the end of the month, and the new commanders-in-chief of the three armed forces can immediately take over their positions. The outgoing deputy supreme commanders are Gen Chao Swatdisongkhram, Admiral Ophat Chamikon, and Air Chief Marshal Amphon Kondi. Gen Prem said that his majesty the king will be informed of the annual military reshuffle in the middle of this month.

He said that the automatic appointments would save the government some 60,000 baht per month in salaries that were usually paid to the three deputy supreme commanders.

GRANTING CITIZENSHIP TO CPM DEFECTORS PROPOSED

[Text] Pattani -- The Interior Ministry has agreed in principle to a proposal to grant Thai citizenship to members of the Communist Party of Malaya (CPM) as an incentive for them to surrender to authorities, a senior army official said yesterday.

Commander of the Fifth Division Maj Gen Panya Singsakda told the NATION that Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot agreed to the proposal as a solution to the insurgency problem in the south. "The minister told me that it was a good idea for solving the problem. He said he agrees to the proposal in principle," Maj Gen Panya added. Maj Gen Panya said that the measure was designed to undermine the armed struggle of CPM. "It is a political offensive to be launched by the Fourth Army Region, and would provide CPM members with a chance to live a peaceful life on the condition that they first lay down their arms," he said.

Not only the CPM defectors who were born on Thai soil, but also any other communist insurgents, would be rewarded with Thai citizenship in exchange for their defection to the government, said Maj Gen Panya, who is responsible for the security affairs in the five southernmost provinces. The commander said that the issue was not raised during the recent meeting of the general border committee in Malaysia. "The meeting mostly touched on the situation in the south and the Malaysian delegates praised Thai officials for our crackdown on the CPM," he added.

GOVERNMENT TROOPS UNCOVER LARGE ARMS CACHE

[Text] Government forces on Wednesday uncovered a large cache of arms and ammunition believed to have been buried by communist insurgents at the junction of Kalasin and Khon Kaen Provinces. The haul included 25 SKS rifles, 23 carbines, one M-60 machinegun, three M-16 assault rifles, three M-3 machineguns, five AK-47 assault rifles, three M-1 rifles and a considerable amount of ammunition and hand grenades. All the weapons were greased and buried in the rugged Dong Mun area straddling Kranuan District of Khon Kaen and Kalasin's Huai Mek and Nong Krungsi Districts.

As ordered by Lt-Gen Phak Minakanit, Second Army Region commander, a border patrol police unit led by Pol Lt-Col Khachon Saiyawat was despatched to Dong Mun to search for arms suspected to have been hidden in the area. The search team carefully combed the Dait stream area, where they uncovered the first haul of arms which included 58 rifles. Later, they found another cache about three kilometres from Ban Na Kam Noi of Tambon Nong Yai, Nong Krungsi District. All the weapons were later taken to the Second Army Region command and shown to the press.

Pol Col Michai Nukunkit, deputy commander of the Second Region border patrol police, said that the mission succeeded with the cooperation of local villagers.

NHAN DAN REJECTS PRC TROOP MOVEMENT ACCUSATION

OW040755 Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 4 -- NHAN DAN today condemns China for joining its voice with the propaganda campaign of the United States and other reactionary forces in cooking up the story that Vietnam has sent reinforcements to the Kampuchean-Thai and Lao-Thai borders.

By mouthing this slander, the paper says, they want to kill three birds with one stone. They aim, firstly, to cover up their crimes and to blame Vietnam for the tension in the region; secondly, to play down the influence of the new reasonable and fair proposal set forth by the Indochinese foreign ministers conference in July last, which have won regional and world-wide support; and thirdly, to lessen the significance of the withdrawal of Vietnamese army units from Kampuchea and to undermine the trend for dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries.

Deception has always been a major policy of imperialism and other reactionary forces, NHAN DAN points out, adding that this policy will never bring them the expected results.

OBJECTIVES OF PRC'S 12TH CPC CONGRESS RIDICULED

OW051441 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 5 Sep 82

[From today's press review]

[Text] Regarding Mr Deng Xiaoping's current party congress in Beijing, today's NHAN DAN carries a "current events" talk entitled "Ten Wrong, Two Right."

The talk says that the two congresses that are praised are Mr Mao's seventh congress and the current congress of Mr Deng, that the first six congresses were scrapped, that history is reckoned only when Mr Mao and his doctrine were legally recognized, that the current congress participants have legalized Mr Deng's "four modernizations" doctrine, and that achievements of the 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th congresses were either partially affirmed or rejected completely.

The main theme of the current congress is the program for economic development, with the set objective of quadrupling China's agricultural and industrial production by the end of this century, that is, every 4 and 1/2 years, China's economy will increase 100 percent. If this rate of development is achieved, by the year 2000 China would produce about 1.2 billion tons of grain because, according to Beijing's publicized statistics, China's annual grain production exceeds 300 million tons. These figures are highly imaginary, exceeding by far those mentioned during the Great Leap Forward period. A four-fold industrial production increase in 18 years for China is obviously greater than that of Japan. Probably, Li Dazhao, Qu Qiubai and Wang Ming, and those Chinese Communists who waged a life-long struggle for the liberation of the Chinese working class and people, would feel sad. As for Mr Mao, he would feel half joyful, half sad -- joyful because his doctrine continues to be implemented, sad because his handpicked successors have been completely ousted. As for Mr Deng's closest international friend, the United States, it has nothing to worry about because the antihegemonist policy has been strongly affirmed at the 12th CPC Congress.

NGUYEN CO THACH GREETS LAOS ON TIES ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 6 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach on Sep. 5 sent a message of greetings to Khamphai Boupha, Lao acting-minister for foreign affairs, on the 20th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. The message says:

We rejoice to note that over the past twenty years, the friendship and militant solidarity between Vietnam and Laos has constantly consolidated and developed and has become a decisive factor of the success of each people in their struggle for national liberation and to build and defend their countries.

The treaty of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Laos signed on July 18, 1977 has vigorously encouraged the two peoples to enhance cooperation and mutual assistance in order to gain new successes in socialist construction in both countries, the message adds.

Nguyen Co Thach expressed the Vietnamese people's gratitude to the party, government and people of Laos for their generous and great support and assistance. He wished the Lao people, under the leadership of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party headed by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, further success in implementing the resolutions of the third party congress, thus taking Laos steadily and firmly to socialism, and positively contributing to the struggle for peace, stability in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world.

It was seen off by Chu Huy Man, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party and vice-president of the Council of State, many other Vietnamese officials, and Lao Ambassador Khampheun Tounalom.

The delegation gave a farewell party in Hanoi, which was attended by President Truong Chinh, Premier Pham Van Dong, Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho, and other high-ranking party and government officials.

DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER VISITS ASEAN COUNTRIES

Visit to Indonesia

OW041902 Hanoi VNA in English 1506 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 4 -- Back from a conference of the developing countries in the Philippines, Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs Ha Van Lau paid a visit to Indonesia from August 29-31.

He was received by Maraden Panggabean, acting minister for foreign affairs, whom he informed of the Vietnamese people's efforts in national construction and defence, and of the peace proposals put forth by the latest conference of the foreign ministers of the Indochinese countries.

Maraden Panggabean, for his part, said he greatly valued the time-honoured friendship between Indonesia and Vietnam, especially in the struggle against colonialism and imperialism, for independence, freedom and national sovereignty. He also expressed the Indonesian people's sympathy with the patriotic fight of the Vietnamese people who, he said, are regarded as companions-in-arms of the Indonesian people.

Ha Van Lau had working sessions with the acting general director of political affairs, and other officials, of the Indonesian Foreign Ministry. He also toured several cultural establishments in Jakarta.

Visit to Thailand

OW061826 Hanoi VNA in English 1517 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 6 -- Ha Van Lau, vice minister for foreign affairs, paid an official visit to Thailand from September 1-3 Upon his arrival in Bangkok on the morning of September 1, Ha Van Lau called at the office of the Thai Foreign Ministry in the company of Do Ngoc Duong, charge d'affaires a.i. of the Vietnamese Embassy. Arun Phanuphong and Asa Sarasin, respectively vice minister and general secretary of the Political Department of the Thai Foreign Ministry, conferred with Ha Van Lau on questions regarding bilateral relations and on regional issues of common concern. The talks took place in an atmosphere of frankness, friendship and mutual understanding, reflecting the desire of both sides for promoting the dialogue on the basis of the concern for each other's genuine interests, without imposition of one party's will on the other and without outside interference. The two sides agreed to continue the exchange of views in preparation for the coming meeting of the foreign ministers of the two countries. On the morning of September 2, Ha Van Lau had a cordial meeting with Vietnamese residents in Bangkok and from other parts of Thailand who gathered at the Vietnamese Embassy for the celebration of the National Day.

BANGKOK POST interview

[Interview with Vietnamese Vice Foreign Minister Ha Van Lau "following his trips to the Philippines, Indonesia and Thailand" -- date and place not given]

[Text] Question: Mr Deputy Minister, you have followed your minister (Nguyen Co Thach) to Thailand and to the ASEAN countries in general. Have you found a different attitude in the ASEAN countries and Thailand because of his visit?

Answer: I went to attend the meetings of the developing countries in Manila, and I took this opportunity to meet my colleagues in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Philippines. Then I went to Jakarta to meet my colleagues in Indonesia, and when I came here I took this opportunity to meet with my colleagues in the Foreign Ministry of Thailand. In my visits to these countries and my meetings with my colleagues in these three countries, I followed my foreign minister.

First of all, I want to express satisfaction of my foreign minister, Mr Thach, with the visits to the countries he visited (Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand). My visit to these countries and my talks had the aim of consolidating what was talked about during the visit of Mr Thach to these countries, and also to meet with my colleagues to see if there are other ways to improve and to better what we have done up to now. In addition, we want to make contributions to peace and stability in the region. We also wish to promote friendship and better the relations in this region.

What I have realised during my visits and talks in these countries is that they also take what my foreign minister has told them, and they have studied it. I have also seen that they have agreed to continue the dialogue. I think we have common wishes, the parties concerned.

Question: When your minister returned to Hanoi after his trip, what was the analysis inside the Foreign Ministry of the trip? Was it as great a success as he thought at that time, or were there more serious thoughts?

Answer: Well, if you mention about the success of the trip of my foreign minister, I have seen that this is also the opinion of the ASEAN countries as well as my country. We also agreed to have a dialogue with each other, which is conducive to peace and stability in the region, on the basis of taking each other's interests into consideration without imposition of views on each other, and without outside interference. All countries in the region have to join hands to find solutions. And this will lead to peace and stability in the region.

Question: Since it is so important to so many countries, why doesn't Vietnam take all its troops out of Kampuchea?

Answer: We know this is very important to other countries, as well as the three Indochina countries of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea themselves. The reason why our troops, the Vietnamese troops, are still there you know already. The Chinese threat to the three Indochinese countries is still there, and continues to exist. In order to show our good will towards Thailand and other ASEAN countries, we decided to withdraw a part of our troops in Kampuchea in July. We felt that although the Chinese threat was there, we wanted to show our good will. As stated in the joint communique from Ho Chi Minh City, if this Vietnamese move on troop withdrawals from Kampuchea has a positive response from Thailand, we will make additional moves to withdraw additional troops from Kampuchea. We will do this right after the Thai side responds positively. If that happens, we will withdraw a more significant number of troops from Kampuchea. Now we are waiting for such a response.

Question: The reality seems to be that the withdrawal has been met quite cynically by many people. In Ho Chi Minh City, for example, newsmen could not find troops that had been withdrawn, and in Thailand there are many reports that in fact, at the Thai-Kampuchean border there are more significant numbers of Vietnamese troops there now. Where does that leave us after this reported withdrawal?

Answer: In the place of our good will in this action, some people play down this move. They are not for the easing of tension in the region, and so they would like to lessen the significance of our troop withdrawal. Some people in Ho Chi Minh City have not seen this withdrawal, and some people here in Bangkok also don't know about this withdrawal (first-hand). But the whole world witnessed this withdrawal through the report of NDN (Nihon Denpa News, a Japanese film agency which filmed Vietnamese troops crossing into Vietnam from Kampuchea). Maybe you know the Vietnamese very well. What we say is, "We mean what we say." If the Thai side responds positively to our move, we will continue to withdraw significant numbers of our troops. We will do what we have said. As far as the withdrawal is concerned, there is such modern high technology in the military field, troop movements cannot be hidden from anyone these days. My counterparts in the region have told me that the fact of a Vietnamese partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea has contributed to easing tension in the region. They told me that. Now my counterparts in the region also expressed their suspicion, yes, about the troop withdrawal. But I said to them, we mean what we say. Whether or not you believe it is entirely up to you.

Question: My point was that the mood seems to be doubtful. Sometimes it doesn't matter what is true, it's what people think about something. It seems that some people doubt this troop withdrawal. If they doubt it, then what does this do to the spirit of dialogue and the search for a solution in Kampuchea?

Answer: You are right in saying that if they doubt, this affects the atmosphere and spirit of dialogue. Among those people, there are some who doubt this. But there are others who admit that it is true, and that's why the dialogue will continue. They also admitted and verified the fact of troop withdrawal. They also expressed their wish to continue the dialogue.

What is behind the mood, the fact that they are doubtful? Well, we want to show good will to them and help to promote the dialogue. We have done that, and this is a result we have achieved up to now. And that's the point of the dialogue, to disperse all the doubts that they have, and to strengthen the understandings. On our part, we also have good will in mind, to contribute to peace and stability in the region. We also advocate peace, cooperation and friendship with countries in the region, and I think no one can be suspicious of such good will on our part and such objectives. And we have no suspicions of the ASEAN countries. They have the same objectives as us. I think if we agree on these objectives, we can find solutions that are acceptable to all the countries in the region.

Question: Is the main part of the Chinese threat to Kampuchea the Khmer Rouge?

Answer: That is just one point. You know also that the Chinese are doing everything possible to carry out their all-sided sabotage against Vietnam and Laos as well as Kampuchea. They use the Pol Pot clique to oppose the rebirth of Kampuchea. But the Chinese also continue to consolidate their troops along our border and carry out their infiltration and hostile activities on the sea and the land. On the occasion of our National Day, we proposed a cease-fire between China and Vietnam along the border, to begin one week before our National Day (Sept 2), to last until one week after their National Day (Oct 1). The Chinese refused this even for their National Day.

Question: It seems inside Kampuchea the Vietnamese troops are there mostly to fight the Khmer Rouge troops. The ASEAN countries, all of them, have stated publicly that they do not like the Khmer Rouge, and do not wish the Khmer Rouge to return to power in Phnom Penh. Why is it then not possible to work towards some solution which would recognise Kampuchean nationalists but eliminate the Khmer Rouge?

Answer: First of all, I would like to mention the guerrilla war conducted inside Kampuchea. They are making a big fuss about that, but they exaggerate. It is not true. I can say that the situation in Kampuchea under the Heng Samrin government now is becoming more and more stable. I can say it is more stable than some other countries in Southeast Asia. If you would listen to the information by the Kampuchean Government in Phnom Penh, you would know that. In addition, many, many journalists and reporters have been in Kampuchea and they have made their own reports about this. But the so-called guerrilla war inside Kampuchea is exaggerated. They would like to interfere in the Kampuchean internal affairs. They would like to create an artificial image that inside Kampuchea there are areas controoled by the Pol Pot remnants. This is for their own purpose. In fact, these Pol Pot remnants are stationed along the border between Thailand and Kampuchea. They receive assistance and also weapons and everything from China to infiltrate deep into Kampuchea. But they cannot do that. You've seen this for three dry seasons now. I spoke to my counterparts in the region on this, and told them that these Pol Pot remnants, if they still exist, will (eventually) turn into bandits and this is very dangerous for the people and governments of this country.

Question: That's my point, why can't there be some agreement to exclude the Khmer Rouge?

Answer: You include two aspects in your question. The first one is the internal affairs of Kampuchea. The second one is foreign affairs. As far as the first aspect is concerned, that is an internal affair. Whatever matters concern the internal affairs must be decided by the Kampuchean Government, the Heng Samrin government itself, and we cannot do anything about this. Pol Pot committed genocide, killing three million Kampuchean people, and they have no rights whatsoever to talk about relations. The second aspect of the question concerns foreign affairs. The fact is that now the Chinese support the Pol Pot remnants against the sovereignty and rebirth of the Kampuchean people. This question must be dealt with. This is the responsibility of the world community to allow the Kampuchean people to live in peace, stability and according to their own ways, their own choice.

Question: It seems that Vietnam has protected its interests in Kampuchea but has failed to take into account the interests of others, most especially Thailand. Is there a compromise possible where everyone's interests in the Kampuchea area are taken into account?

Answer: I can say that other countries don't consider the security interests of Vietnam at all. They would like to impose so-called political solutions on the Kampuchea people. We understand the security concerns of Thailand. We understand this concern. That's why we have decided to withdraw a part of our troops from Kampuchea to show them. If Thailand and ASEAN take the interests of Vietnam into consideration, if they respond positively to this move, we will have further withdrawals of more significant numbers of troops. We have stated this.

As far as peace and stability in the region is concerned, who are also making initiatives towards aspirations for a peaceful and stable region? It is Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea which has made proposals. We have made several proposals towards this aim. We realise that it is not only beneficial for Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos, but it is also beneficial to ASEAN countries themselves. In addition to our proposals for troop withdrawals, we also have made the region's security proposals, the convening of an international conference on Southeast Asia, and such proposals by us are under study by the ASEAN countries.

Question: You were ambassador to the United Nations (until his appointment to the ministry position), so what do you think will be the result of the Kampuchean vote this year?

Answer: We have repeatedly stated that so long as the UN organisation maintains the seat of the Pol Pot regime or the disguised Pol Pot regimes (the three-party coalition led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk), it cannot play any positive and constructive role in contributing to peace and stability in the region. Not at all. You have thus seen there have been many, many resolutions on the so-called Kampuchean question. Up to now, you can see how far they have gone. Even people who vote for those resolutions say the same thing. They say they are in a stalemate in Kampuchea. Why? Because the resolutions don't keep pace with the reality in Kampuchea. These resolutions run counter to the Charter of the UN. The UN recognises a government that is not in control of its own people. It imposes on others its own resolutions. How can they be implemented?

It is our view that the countries in the region must get together to discuss and find a solution on the basis of respect for the sovereignty and independence of each other's countries in the region. We must not impose conditions on each other, and we must not have outside interference. We must take into account each other's interests. That's why the three Indochinese countries recently proposed the convening of the enlarged international conference on Southeast Asia.

I would just like for a moment to comment on the press coverage of my trip here. I had two hours of talks with the deputy foreign minister of Thailand, Mr Arun Phanuphong, and the two sides exchanged views with each other on bilateral and regional questions. Our talks were useful, and were frank and friendly. The two sides listened to the views of each other, and they agreed with each other to continue our dialogue and to have further study of each other's views. It is not that we agreed upon some concrete points; it was an exchange of views. The Thai press, some of them, misquoted what I said and made commentaries on my points which did not conform to what Mr Arun and I said -- for example, on the questions of the Khmer Rouge and on the coalition government. Neither side during the talks mentioned the so-called Soviet influence in Southeast Asia. I don't want to have debate on this, but please make clear the view of my country.

Question: The Non-Aligned Movement has declared the Kampuchean seat vacant. Vietnam will attend the summit, wherever it's going to be now. Will Vietnam oppose a speech to the Non-Aligned Movement by Prince Sihanouk?

Answer: Who will Mr Sihanouk represent at such a forum?

Question: There is a suggestion that Prince Sihanouk is a founding member of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Answer: What about the other founders of the Non-Aligned Movement? Will they insist on making a speech in the meeting?...

Question: So the answer is....

Answer: So anyone who wants to make a speech at the movement can make a speech? That's one aspect. Within the movement, there is no procedure for guests without invitations to attend. An uninvited guest cannot make an address at the movement. That's the practice.

Question: I know Vietnam will not invite Prince Sihanouk, so I presume the answer to the question is that Vietnam will oppose Sihanouk's making a speech?

Answer: You can understand my points. They don't need any more reaffirmation. I would like to make clear the three points to you to avoid misunderstanding. First, on whose behalf could he speak? The second point, if he insists on making a speech as a founding member of the Non-Aligned Movement, other founding members would insist on doing the same. His position as a founding member has no value at all to the current members. If other founding members also insist on making a speech, how can the forum for the movement proceed? [Third], there is no procedure for the uninvited to appear at this forum. So these are the three points.

NAVAL UNITS HOLD 'COMBAT READINESS' EXERCISE

[Text] Executing the VPA General Staff's 1982 training plan, the naval force recently conducted a military exercise for the benefit of commanders and two-echelon organs. The purpose of the exercise was to inspect the combat readiness of naval units and draw experiences for improving naval combat plans and replenishing the documents of the entire armed forces and the naval force concerning the conduct of a military campaign. Prior to the exercise, the naval force staged a trial drill to draw experiences for the preparations for the excersise. The tasks set forth for this naval exercise were to achieve close coordination with the People's Air Force and coastal units, to defeat the enemy's landing from the sea, to foil his war of maritime blockade and to ensure the fatherland's sea communication activities.

The exercise achieved set requirements and objectives, ensured safety, secrecy and economization and, therefore, brought about realistic results for commanders and two-echelon organs. It was truly a useful maneuver. Following the exercise, the naval command organized the drawing of experiences, quickly turned the lessons learned during the exercise into regular tasks and, on this basis, established necessary systems and practices for improving cadres' organizational leadership and command abilities in fulfilling routine and combat tasks.

LEADERS GREET ANGOLAN PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY

OW280004 Hanoi VNA in English 1521 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Aug 27 -- Vietnamese party and state leaders today sent a joint message of greetings to Jose Eduardo dos Santos, president of the MPLA [Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola]-Labor Party of the People's Republic of Angola [PRA], on his 40th birthday. The message is signed by Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers. It says: "We note with joy that under the leadership of the MPLA-Labor Party and the government of the PRA headed by you, fraternal Angola is advancing firmly, and that the friendship between our two countries is consolidating and developing steadily." The message wishes the Angolan president the best of health and new success in his noble mission.

DEFENSE MINISTER GREETS PDRY ARMY DAY

[Text] On the occasion of the 11th founding anniversary of the Yemen People's Army, Comrade Van Tien Dung, minister of national defense, has sent a message of greetings on behalf of the VPA to the comrade minister of national defense of the PDRY. Following is the text of the message:

Respectfully to Comrade Salih Muslih Qasim, minister of national defense of the PDRY, Aden. Dear Comrade Minister: On the occasion of the 11th founding anniversary of the Yemen People's Army, on behalf of all the generals, officers, noncommissioned officers and combatants of the VPA, and on my own behalf, I would like to convey to you and, through you, to all cadres and combatants of the Yemen People's Army, our warmest greetings.

Over the past 11 years, by developing the nation's heroic struggle tradition, the Yemen People's Army, together with all of its people, has smashed all dark schemes and acts of sabotage by various reactionary forces in the country and abroad in collusion with the imperialists, thereby recording many glorious achievements in national construction and defense. As its comrade and brother, the VPA is very elated and proud of the great successes of the people and the People's Army of Yemen over the past years. We strongly believe that under the far-sighted leadership of the Yemen Socialist Party headed by esteemed Comrade General Secretary 'Ali Nasir Muhammad, the people and People's Army of Yemen will continue to score many still greater achievements in the struggle to build and defend their beloved country.

On this occasion, we would like to express our sincere and profound gratitude to the party, government, people and army of the PDRY for the sympathy and firm support they have given the Vietnamese people in their past revolutionary struggle as well as in their present struggle to build and defend their socialist fatherland. May the militant solidarity and fraternal friendship between the peoples and armies of our two countries be further consolidated and developed, and may I wish you, Comrade Minister, good health and many new successes in your heavy responsibility. My respectful regards.

[Signed] Sen Gen Van Tien Dung, SRV minister of national defense

LEE KUAN YEW, DELEGATION ARRIVE 7 SEP FOR TALKS

BK071227 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Singapore Prime Minister and Mrs Lee Kuan Yew, along with a 36-man party, arrived in Jakarta this afternoon for a 3-day working visit in Indonesia. They were received at Halim Perdanakusuma Airport by President and Mrs Suharto and Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik. Also on hand at the airport to welcome the Singapore guests were Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Defense and Security Affairs Minister M. Yusuf, Minister-State Secretary Sudharmono, Coordinating Minister for Politics and Security Panggabean, Coordinating Minister for Economics, Finance and Industry Wijoyo Nitisastro, [Jakarta] Governor Cokropranolo and other invited guests.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew was accompanied by Foreign Minister Dhanabalan, Defense Minister Goh Chok Tong, and a number of senior officials nad Singapore journalists.

This afternoon, Prime Minister and Mrs Lee Kuan Yew paid a courtesy call on President and Mrs Suharto at Merdeka Palace, followed by a courtesy call on Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik at their residence on Diponegoro Street in Jakarta.

At 2000 this evening, the Singapore guests will attend a banquet at Negara palace, hosted by President Suharto and his wife.

First Set of Lee-Suharto Talks

BK080937 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0900 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Jakarta, Sept 82 (ANTARA) -- Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew had a two-hour talk with President Suharto at Istana Merdeka (Presidential Palace) here Wednesday to work out possibilities of closer cooperation in ASEAN (grouping Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Philippines and Indonesia) to reduce the effect of the world recession on each of the member countries.

Secretary of State Sudharmono, following the meeting of the two heads of government, told newsmen that Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew and President Suharto had exchanged views and ideas about world problems encountered by the ASEAN members.

He said that among the world problems affecting the interest of Indonesia and Singapore and other ASEAN members was the world recession. In this conjunction, Sudharmono added, the two leaders had discussed how ASEAN could cooperate in riding over export impediments, for instance, through diplomacy by ASEAN.

The two leaders were said to be optimistic that the world recession would not adversely affect ASEAN countries.

Minister of State Sudharmono further said that the two leaders observed indications that the world recession would subside, for example, by the reduction of bank rates.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew himself told newsmen he was "very satisfied" with his talk with President Suharto which encompassed a great many problems, including the changing international politics, the Pacific area and the Middle East.

He had also talked with the president about the world economic situation. Even though recession was playing havoc at the moment, the two leaders, according to the prime minister, were relatively optimistic about the future of ASEAN and that ASEAN would not be too badly affected by the world recession.

When asked by journalists to give more details, Lee Kuan Yew replied: "We will have another meeting tomorrow."

In reference to the bilateral relation Secretary of State Sudharmono said that the two leaders discussed the possibilities of promoting cooperation in all fields between Indonesia and Singapore.

Lee Kuan Yew, according to Sudharmono, asked his host about the possibility for Singapore to jointly work on joint exploitation Indonesia natural gas. The of [as received] Indonesian natural gas, either liquefied natural gas or liquefied petroleum gas, need further study, he said.

Both leaders also discussed ways and means of promoting cooperation in tourism and the expansion of projects on the Batam Island. According to Sudharmono, Singapore, for example, could supply electricity to the projects on the island. He said the Singapore participation in the projects' expansion in the island could encourage Singaporeans to invest their capital there.

Indonesian and Singapore also discussed the speedy construction of ASEAN industrial projects now under way in both countries, Sudharmono said.

YUSUF ON DEFENSE COOPERATION WITH SINGAPORE

BK080909 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0843 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Jakarta, Sept 8 (ANTARA) -- Expanded and closer cooperation between Indonesia and Singapore in defence and security was discussed by Minister of Defence and Security Army General M. Yusuf and his Singapore counterpart, Dr. Goh Chok Tong, here today.

After the one-hour meeting, General Yusuf, who is concurrently armed forces commander, said both sides agreed to further develop the existing close relations between the two countries, especially within the ASEAN context.

Both sides had also agreed to continue exchanging views on defence and security.

When asked to comment on the security situation in the Philip Strait between Singapore and Bintan Island, where pirates were said to operate and then got away into Indonesian waters, Yusuf said it did not pose any particular problem.

General M. Yusuf also said he had accepted an invitation from his Singapore counterpart to visit the island republic, but that no date had been fixed for the visit, as he was still very much preoccupied.

During the visit to the Department of Defence and Security, Dr Goh was in the company of the permanent secretary at Singapore's Defence Ministry, Lim Siong Gwan, defence director at the ministry [one name, two titles as recieved] and a number of staff officials of the island republic's Foreign Office and the military attached in Jakarta. Dr Goh is member of the entourage of visiting Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

MOKHTAR RETURNS FROM ISLAMIC LEADERS' MEETING

BK050849 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 5 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja this afternoon returned home from visits to Niger in Africa, Austria and Thailand. On his arrival at the Halim Perdanakusuma Airport, Minister Mokhtar told reporters that the 13th annual meeting of the foreign ministers of the Islamic Conference Organization, which was held from 22 to 27 August in Niamey, Niger, discussed the Israeli aggression against Lebanon, the bloody confrontation between Iraq and Iran, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and matters related to economic, social and cultural cooperation.

After attending this meeting, Minister Mokhtar held talks in Vienna with Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr in his capacity as chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea. His talks dealt with efforts to maintain the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea headed by Norodom Sihanouk.

En route home, Minister Mokhtar made a 2-day visit to Bangkok and held talks with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila on ASEAN's diplomatic efforts to help Democratic Kampuchea to retain its UN seat.

PARLIAMENT PASSES NEW DEFENSE, SECURITY BILL

BK061701 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] A bill on provisions for basic defense and security of the Indonesian Republic was passed into law by acclamation at a plenary session of Parliament this morning. The new law, which is based on Pancasila and the 1945 Constitution, will replace law No 29 of 1954, which is based on the 1950 provisional Constitution. Political groups in parliament expressed the belief that the new law provides a (?strong basis) for the dual function of the military.

By passing the bill on provisions for basic defense and security of the state, Parliament and government have established, through the president, a law on defense of the state.

The government will soon take steps to complete discussions on the bills on armed forces volunteers, compulsory military service and national reserves in line with the new defense law. The government will immediately draft bills on (?people's preparedness), Indonesian state police, public protection and utilization of natural energy sources and national infrastructure for defense and security of the state, mobilization and demobilization.

Attending the parliamentary session at which the bill was passed were Defense and Security Affairs Minister General Yusuf, the chiefs of staff of the three branches of the armed forces, the state police chief and senior officials of the Defense and Security Affairs Department.

SUBROTO ON OIL PRODUCTION, CALTEX CONTRACT

BK070923 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0901 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Jakarta, Sept 7 (ANTARA) -- Indonesian crude oil production will be retained at 1.3 million barrels per day (BPD) in line with the production cutdown agreed on by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Minister of Mines and Energy Prof Dr Subroto said.

"But it will not always be 1.3 million barrels exactly, sometimes it may be slightly more, sometimes slightly less," the minister said in reply to press questions here Monday.

Subroto said the some 300,000 BPD slash from 1.6 million BPD previously has been apportioned to only the foreign oil contractor companies, including Caltex, Total and Union. Caltex's daily production, for instance, has been reduced from a previous 700,000 to 500,000 BPD.

On the possibility of Indonesian production being lower than the OPEC-imposed ceiling, Subroto said this could be due to such factors as relatively uncompetitive prices of certain oil types, and certain old wells still in production performing not as expected.

On negotiations now underway with Caltex for an extension of its working contract expiring November next year, Subroto said the government wants a better deal than the 85 to 15 ratio (in favour of the government) that now generally applies in running production sharing contracts with foreign companies.

A preliminary agreement signed by the government and Caltex in 1971 provides for the old working contract due to expire in November next year to be changed into a production sharing agreement to be in force till the year 2001.

But the government wants a better share than the 85-15 ratio now generally in force, the minister said, noting that Caltex as the biggest oil contractor with a long record of operations in the country must have gained back its capital investments a long time ago.

MARCOS PRESS CONFERENCE DISCUSSES U.S. VISIT

HK060446 Manila Domestic Service in English 0206 GMT 6 Sep 82

[News conference held by Philippine President Marcos -- live; location not given]

[Excerpts] [Marcos] Mrs Marcos and I, on the invitation of President and Mrs Reagan, will make a state visit to the United States commencing on 15 September. Frankly, the schedule has not yet been drafted or firmed up, although I expect to be back before the end of the month. And in the light of this announcement, I would like to take this opportunity to appraise our people on matters regarding the visit which I hope to undertake on their behalf.

The forthcoming state visit is the second which I will be making to the United States as president of the Republic of the Philippines. As some of the members of the media will of course recall, I made a visit to Washington in 1966, in September, actually, during the first year of my presidency. Sixteen years have now passed since that first visit, and during this interval many developments have occurred.

We view this forthcoming journey as an opportunity to assess the meaning of these developments on Philippine-American relations across the Pacific, which at this point now span some 84 years. At the same time, our visit to the United States will provide us with an opportunity to return a gracious visit to the Philippines made in 1969 when President Reagan was the governor of California, and he came as a representative of the president of the United States to inaugurate the Cultural Center, in 1969.

I have the feeling that the President of the United States is a little busy. I have been going over his proposal on the Middle East settlement, and I realize the various obstacles and difficulties that they must be confronted with. We of course will have meetings with President Reagan and members of his Cabinet, members of the United States Congress, and with representatives of the American private sector, more specifically, probably the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce, and the Foreign Policy Council. These meetings will no doubt afford useful exchanges to our bilateral relations and to other matters of interest to both our countries.

I wish to emphasize, however, that this is mainly a friendly visit. No formal agenda has been set for these meetings. No agreements are included or set to be concluded or signed. Matters of this nature are of course pending discussion. The textile agreement, the CIQ [customs, immigration and quarantine] agreement on the bases, the [word indistinct], the timing for the renegotiation of the bases -- things like this are all pending. It might be possible that we can set a date for the exact time for the renegotiations of the bases. There are talks that have been going on on tax treaties and the utilization of some of the funds, like security system funds, which they now call their economic assistance fund, although the military bases agreement of 7 January 1979, the [word indistinct] is security assistance fund, which is $50 million a year, signed by the first lady on the improvement of some of the facilities around the military bases. There are many consultations and talks going on, slated not only for this year but for the coming years.

I might add that I really do not wish to impose on President Reagan's time [words indistinct] because the administration is preoccupied with major initiatives, such as he has announced his plan for the Middle East. Our problems in the Philippines and Asia are certainly almost marginal in comparison to the problems of the Middle East.

I see as the main value and significance of this forthcoming visit the opportunity it provides both for our countries to renew their close and historic ties with each other, and to reaffirm our common belief that these ties are best secured and promoted when they are founded on mutual respect and interest.

When we embark on this journey 1 week hence, I hope about a week from now, we do so with our country never more capable and resolved to contribute to the enrichment of these relations, and never more self-reliant and secure as a sovereign nation.

We pride ourselves in believing that we have become mature, and we can look anyone in the face and say that we know exactly what we owe you, but we know exactly what you owe us, and that there are no hard feelings about things in the past, but there may have to be hard bargaining about things of the present.

The discovery in recent weeks of certain efforts to sow disturbances in the country and government -- swift action to contain them in no way will detract from the stability of our national life today. As I have said, the preemptive action taken by the government I believe has aborted the plot. The public and the nation have nothing to fear from these threats, nor should there be any fears about violations of citizens' rights while the government takes action against persons or groups involved. The same forthrightness and strict observance of legal processes that has governed our actions so far will continue, and all those taken into custody will have their day in court. It is instead a manifestation of the importance of relations with the United States that so-called oppositionists heighten their efforts to disrupt an initiative to strengthen relations on our part.

Finally, I wish to announce that in the course of our visit to the United States, I shall have the opportunity perhaps to address the international forum of the United Nations General Assembly and to meet with Filipino-American communities in the United States, as many of them as possible. The former provides us a welcome opportunity to reaffirm our links with the family of nations and to lend our voice and support to the work of building a world order and international cooperation for development, something in which we have participated as a member of the Third World group of nations. The latter continues an effort we have long pursued, the enrichment of ties and the building of understanding between Filipino-Americans and their homeland. I have no doubt that on the eve of this important journey for our country, all our people are more than ever aware of the importance of our relations with other peoples and countries, and that the national caucus is heard where diplomacy is effectively promoted for the attainment of cooperation with other nations.

Now I am ready for questions.

[Moderator] The first question will be asked by the president of the Malacanang press corps, Mr [words indistinct] of the TIMES JOURNAL.

[Question] If you don't mind my saying so, you look so trim and sprightly this morning. Is there a special reason for this?

[Answer] Thank you. I finished exercising about 30 minutes ago. I look trim because I have come down to 127 or 128 from my original 130.

[Question] About this plot to undermine the government by fomenting a series of strikes, assassinations and bombings -- what is the present score, Mr President?

[Answer] Well, I have received all kinds of secret reports, intelligence assessments. We have arrested CPP-NPA [Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army] leaders, etc. etc., and the armed forces, particularly the intelligence, seems to be on top of the situation. As I said during the national "Meet the Press" interview, I think we have aborted the plot. We have eliminated the possibility of an implementation of the original plot to engage in nationwide terrorism. But as you and I know, terrorism can be brought about by a few people. All of us who were in the underground during the Japanese regime, who fought with only a few men, know that all you need is a few dedicated men to start all kinds of sabotage and terrorism, and therefore it is [words indistinct].

[Question] Does this plot include some foreign-based people, Mr President, or is it merely a homegrown problem?

[Answer] There have been some strange vessels that have been observed off our shores. I cannot reveal to you the identity of these vessels, but they have been observed and they have been driven off. We do not believe that they succeeded in landing any firearms or explosives or personnel.

[Moderator] Mr (P. Bresco) of the [words indistinct] press.

[Question] I welcome you on behalf of the foreign press. We are very grateful that you have consented to appear in a news conference this morning. You said that there might be a date set for the talks on the U.S. bases agreement during your visit....

[Answer] Well, as you know, we are supposed to review and renegotiate the military bases agreement, actually they call it now the military facilities agreement, effective 7 January 1979, every 5 years. Therefore, if that is dated 7 January 1979, in '83 or '84 we should be starting.

[Question] Mr President, may I ask you specifically, are you satisfied with the current level of what the Philippines calls the rent which is paid by the United States Government for use of the bases, or would you ask for an increased amount, and if so, what amount over the next 5-year period?

[Answer] Frankly, this matter is not a question of whether it is sufficient rent or not. I don't think I break a confidence by saying that I would like to see exactly what the plans are for Asia, I would like to see what the plans are for the Philippines, I would like to see what the plans are for the United States and the Philippines, and then let us see whether our agreements complement, or rather, implement [as heard], and I suppose if they don't, then we had better start working together; otherwise, let's forget the whole thing. [laughter] Because as you know there are lots of [word indistinct].

[Question] Is there any chance that the Philippine Government will ask to have the bases agreement terminated in the distant future?

[Answer] Well, let me put it this way -- you know that the ASEAN has set as a long-term goal the establishment of a zone of peace, freedom and security, which means that no military bases can be sustained, tolerated, within the region. But we have always stated that this is a long-term goal, and this is sufficiently flexible for everybody to feel comfortable about it. Now, the problem is that events have caught up with us -- Kampuchea, Afghanistan, and now the problem in the Middle East, the question of the present [word indistinct] by the Chinese or the Vietnamese, and the Vietnamese taking over [word indistinct], and so on and so forth -- things like this. We may have to review the.... This is exactly what I mean; where exactly do we stand? What are the plans? What do we anticipate? What are the scenarios? What do we expect in the next, say, 5 years, 10 years, 20 years? I may not be there, but certainly the successors or the people of the Philippines will ask me, why actually didn't this guy Mr Marcos prepare for this? They say he was somebody who knew something about military plans, and yet he never prepared for it! And this may have to be studied, not necessarily on this visit, but, as you know, we have a mutual defense board, and perhaps [words indistinct], and then you have your regular meetings between the two defense officials. All of this, as I said, is still up in the air, it's [words indistinct]; to this extent, it's a little untimely.

[Moderator] We have now Mr (Jan Niscolowski), who is the bureau chief of [words indistinct] and came all the way to ask questions.

[Question] Mr President, as you pointed out, this is your first state visit to the United States in more than 15 years. What are the reasons that you have not traveled to the United States during this time, and could you define for us how you see the changes in Philippine-American relations since the middle 60's, when they were defined in large measure by the cooperation in the Vietnam war?

[Answer] Well, first of all, a leader travels to other lands for various purposes. One of them is principally to enter into negotiations for the attainment of certain limited or distant objectives, and during the last 16 years, I have always felt that the primary responsibility of the political leadership in the Philippines was not to be obtained in delivering speeches or speaking to leaders in the United States. In fairness to the United States, the United States has been generous in sending delegations to the Philippines. What I'm saying is we have quite a voluminous amount of homework to be done in the Philippines.

Look in 1965 -- we were facing problems which we felt were insurmountable. Then in '69, '70, positive anarchy, then the rebellion, and then proclamation of martial law, and all of this prevented any travel abroad. In fact, the only travel abroad was for shifting the diplomatic orientation, for instance, the adherence to the Third World, or the new international economic order, this meeting in Nairobi, Kenya, and then the foundation of the Group of 77 after the meeting here in Manila.

[Question] What would make you happy when you return to Manila at the end of this month after your visit to the United States, in terms of what you have come away with from the United States after your visit?

[Answer] Well, I would be very happy if the President succeeds in attaining not only a successful peace plan in the Middle East, but a plan which would be the beginning of the prevention of nuclear war.

[Question] Is there anything closer to home in terms of Philippine-American relations that you would like to receive assurances on before you come back?

[Answer] I already said I would be very happy to find out exactly what the plans are for Asia. I'm still in the dark about all of this, you see. I suppose Asia is on the back-burner, as it were, because there are too many things being done in South Asia, and the Middle East, but one cannot delay for long the planning for contingencies in this part of the world.

[Moderator] We have Mr (Edward Monroe) from UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, who has been wanting a one-on-one interview with you, sir.

[Question] Sir, you have approved the appointment of 11 people so far to the Executive Committee, leaving 4 seats still unfilled. Do you expect to appoint any military officials to fill those remaining seats?

[Answer] No.

[Question] Why not, sir?

[Answer] Because these are... the Executive Committee is supposed to train the leaders of the civilian government, what you would call the political leadership. The military is not a part of the political leadership. The military supports the political leadership. In fact, this letter which I left behind with General Ver when I went to Saudi Arabia contained nothing but an order that in view of the fact that he is the only other officer other than the commander in chief who has disposal of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and who can deploy forces, he is directed to, he was directed, in that letter, to deploy them in such a manner as to support the duly constituted authority and to enforce the decisions of the Executive Committee. And he was also directed to see to it that any coup would be immediately thwarted, and finally, as chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, he was to convey to every officer and enlisted man my order that the tradition we have established in the Philippines that the Armed Forces of the Philippines is a protector of the civil government and is subordinate to the divil government shall be maintained by every officer and enlisted man and civilian in the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

[Question] Mr President, how do you respond to opposition charges that this plot was concocted by the government as an excuse to crack down on labor unions and to demonstrate to Americans and potential foreign investors that you are in full control?

[Answer] If that is so, why all the evidence that they cannot even deny? We have some evidence which is in the handwriting of some of the accused. I will have it shown to you.

[Question] When will that evidence be produced?

[Answer] It was produced, [words indistinct] the accused were confronted with it. For instance, this particular plot is in handwriting. They were confronted with this; they were asked, whose handwriting?

And at the same time, May I [word indistinct] why is it that all of a sudden we captured 400 firearms in the hands of non-NPA members? Four hundred firearms we have captured since the beginning. I should not have informed you about this, but I might just as well tell you now. Explosives -- they had explosives in the hands of non-NPA members, noncommunists.

[Question] Non-NPA?

[Answer] Non-NPA, no. Why? Where was it being brought in, through some of the most unusual places? None was in the hands of fishermen; if they were in the hands of fishermen, they would tell you they were being used for illegal fishing, but none were in the hands of fishermen. And why the killing of barangay captains in some places? And their councilmen? Not by NPA. Why? Then at the same time, where is the money all coming from? Why have they been able to mount a strong demonstration? And what is [words indistinct]. Why doesn't he come out and tell us, explain to us, where he got all the money? [Words indistinct] we have asked that the organization, the Kilusang Mayo Uno, explain to us, where did this money come from? Who contributed to it?

[Question] Are there opposition leaders, businessmen or intellectuals among the 35 remaining suspects still at large?

[Answer] Yes, there are some. I'd rather not mention any names.

[Moderator] Mr (Alex de Globo) of [words indistinct].

[Question] Mr President, 5 years ago the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization ceased to exist. How would you perceive the future development of relations in the Pacific area? The relations between neighboring countries, would they take share along the lines of military alliances, or would the people of this region find different forms and means to attain the goals of security and prosperity?

[Answer] Well, first of all, let me set the background aright. The Southeast Asia Treaty Organization was dismantled, but the Manila Pact, from the interpretations made by some legalists and scholars, continues to exist, and therefore the obligations under the Manila Pact bind certain countries, including the United States. Now, starting from there you can more or less develop all kinds of scenarios. That is what is happening now. I cannot anticipate to you exactly what is going to happen, but you have heard the United States say that if Thailand is attacked, the United States would be compelled to come in.

[Question] Going back to the Pacific community, how would you perceive the possible shape of this community, what kind of central relationship within this framework?

[Answer] I would prefer it if the Pacific community is a community which would be, would [word indistinct] whatever developments there are in ASEAN, because ASEAN cannot think in terms of any other organization until ASEAN blossoms into a strong aggroupment, which it is developing to be. But right now, for members of ASEAN to think of any other organization would be [words indistinct]. But we would be willing to participate and cooperate with other Pacific countries in the attainment of economic objectives, but military objectives, I don't know; frankly, I have not thought very much of this.

[Question] Your Excellency, there is some concern here about nuclear bases. In your conversations with President Reagan, sir, are you going to discuss even informally the matter of nuclear bases here, as well as the Bataan power plant?

[Answer] Well, I don't know whether I can now reveal to you the contents of the exchange of notes between the two governments, but the two governments have an agreement on this particular matter, and they involve precautions against the Philippines being, in any manner, involved in any nuclear war.

[Question] Does this mean that the unhampered use of the bases precludes the use or storage of nuclear weapons?

[Answer] There is a specific agreement entered into on this. And with respect to the safety precautions at the nuclear generation plan, I'd like you to know that the reason why the price or the cost has gone up is because we have insisted on the inclusion of safety requirements by the United States after the Three Mile Island incident.

[Moderator] Mr Ross Munro would like to ask a question.

[Question] You have said twice this morning that you want to know what are the U.S. plans for Asia. Does this suggest that you are concerned that the United States still pays too little attention to Asia in general, and specifically, are you concerned that the U.S. commitment to ASEAN is still questionable?

[Answer] (laughter] No, probably they never told us. What I said is, probably they just never told us, and I think it's about time that partners told each other exactly what their plans are for any possible contingency.

[Question] So you are seeking something more specific.

[Answer] Well, I think that comparative statement is completely wrong, because I have never asked anything before, and nobody has ever asked anything before. We merely assumed that the mutual defense act was sufficient, but the developments all over the world indicate that it is necessary to determine exactly what possible actions would occur in the event of certain contingencies.

[Question] Another question related to the U.S. visit. You have repeatedly said that the emphasis is going to be on friendship and on communications with the President of the United States, and yet when the leaders of any two major nations get together, whether those nations are rich or poor, friendly or unfriendly, the two leaders who sit down together always have a specific shopping list of one sort or another or they would not be getting together. In the context of the Philippines' economic problems, many of which are of course externally caused, isn't it incumbent upon you as president of the Philippines to seek specific and concrete changes in trade relations or on the bases agreement which would help your country economically? And if so, what are those things on your specific shopping list?

[Answer] Well, frankly, I don't think that President Reagan is the kind of president who deals with detail. I think he is the type who depends upon his staff to inform him about [words indistinct]. If you talked to President Reagan about ladies' dresses [laughter], he probably would say, I really don't know anything about it, and probably he would turn to Secretary Brock and the others. And that is exactly what will happen. But, you are correct, I probably will say, what happened to the list I gave you in Cancun, but that's about all....

[Question] Then you do have a shopping list. You gave him a shopping list in Cancun?

[Answer] I didn't give him a shopping list; he asked me, what are the problems you think are existing between the two countries, the chief ones. Why? Because he was with his advisers, with his White House staff. I don't know if Mr Meese was there, but anyway, one of the advisers was there, and of course, the former secretary of state was there, Secretary Haig, and Secretary Regan, and I saw him, and he said, what are the matters that you think are pending, can you give our people something to work on?

And so we made a listing, and they have been working on it. Secretary Brock sent a committee here on textiles and garments. They couldn't come to an agreement. And then there was the investment act, and that's why the problem of parity and national treatment has come up. And then the matter of the financing of the nuclear power project, and so on and so on. But in all probability, I would probably ask him about the global negotiations that he is [word indistinct] now.

[Question] In an inverview I had with the first lady last week, I asked her about the status in the government of your daughter Imee Marcos, and she hinted to me at that time, but was not specific, that Imee Marcos may have submitted her resignations in the (Kapitan barangay) and the experimental cinema because of the pressure of her law studies. Can you clarify the various reports that are around about that whole matter?

[Answer] Don't you think [laughter] that's something for the young lady, who is 26 years old, to answer? You know, that's really none of the media's business what she does. We have decided that as she is above 21 years old and she is apparently intelligent, she should be allowed to decide what kind of a life she's going to have. I would thank everybody if you would allow her to make her own decisions. To be frank with you, I have not talked to her. The last time I talked to her we agreed that she would take whatever decision she wants to take. All I ask is that she thinks [words indistinct] I said, you know I have always dreamed of a lawyer taking over from me my law books and all my writings on law. Do you feel you would be able to do that? And she said, yes, I think I can. Well, that was it. I don't think she has resigned from any of her positions you are talking about; I haven't received any resignations.

[Question] When you leave for the state visit, who will be left behind to administer the day-to-day affairs of the state?

[Answer] We were hoping that the prime minister would be back by then. [The prime minister is currently in Toronto] But as you know, under the law, it is the Executive Committee; whether it is the prime minister or the deputy prime minister, the fact is they do so with the Executive Committee.

[Moderator] Mr [word indistinct] of CBS.

[Question] The Americans have said that they are interested in parity but are not pushing debate on the matter. If this comes up during what you call the hard-bargaining talks that may arise in your Washington visit, what will be your response?

[Answer] I don't think it will come up, because I don't intend to talk about investment law. I pray it wouldn't come up. Under the investment law, the provision pertaining to the treatment of American investors as to whether they would be given national treatment or the most-favored nation role would be the issue. The issue has repeatedly been raised in the past. The Philippine Government has maintained the position that since midnight of 3 July 1974 parity terminated, and that the United States agreed they would not insist upon a revival of parity rights, and therefore for anyone to now say that the United States is asking for parity rights, you will have to convince me that they have reneged on their promise that was made to us in 1974. So you are saying now that parity is up for question, right? Though we have stressed from the beginning, I don't think the Americans really insist on parity.

[Question] You said that you would have a long hard look at Philippine-American relations when you visit Washington, and if these talks don't come up to your expectations in relation to the basis for [words indistinct], would you be prepared to tell the Americans to pack up and leave?

[Answer] No, no. [laughter] What exactly do we expect with our present role as an ally of the United States? What are the advantages of being an ally of the United States? You know the national interest of the Philippines has to be taken into account. You and I understand our younger generation when they confront us and they ask us, isn't it true that in the last war 75 percent of all our cities were wiped out because we fought with the Americans, beside the Americans? Isn't it true that we lost 1 million men? Isn't it true that we failed to move as fast in development economically because America did not help us as much as the others, but that on the contrary they imposed certain quotas on our exports while they brought in their products into the Philippines free? Things like that, and you and I have been answering this repeatedly, with things like, whatever we do we will get involved in a war anyway, because we [words indistinct] that any fighting here in Asia would involve the Philippines, that is just the basic assumption. Now come some of our strategists saying that is not entirely so, and you see the military men and the strategists, the military academy students, the staff studies going on about this, and the question still arises, all right, suppose we fight beside America, what do we get out of it? And whom do we fight? Then the next question, we are supposed to be protected against an attack from outside, attack by whom? And in what form? Things like this, it is not just a matter of the military bases, it is an overall study. You know for my birthday I wrote a book entitled "The New Philippine Republic -- a Third World Approach to Democracy," which deals with all of this. It includes some appendices also that were (?secret). Perhaps the younger generation that will follow us, the next leadership that will follow us, will find in this book some of the basic facts on which today's decisions, such as even now we must start thinking about, the contingencies. Are we supposed to be fighting Vietnam, China, Japan, the Soviet Union? And if so, with what weapons? I am raising the questions that are being asked, that may appear before some of the young officers in the military, and they ask me this. They ask me point-blank: You fought beside the American soldiers, don't you agree that part of this was adventurist spirit and not just principle? And of course, I had to admit, yes, I wanted to go to battle, I wanted to go to fight, I had soldier's blood in me, I am born of men who fought revolutions in the past.

You remember the joint resolution of 9 June 1944 of the American Congress which authorized the establishment of military reservations in the Philippines, which was approved also by President Quezon. And then you men said, did he have any choice at all since he was in Washington in asylum? That's when he ran out on us; he left Corregidor with MacArthur. Then Roxas signed the parity agreement as a bargain for the Bell trade agreement, 600 million war damage payment. Things like this, all the things we have to think about now. Even my children ask me all about this.

[Question] All these steps that have been taken to bolster the Executive Committee lead me to believe, Mr President, please correct me if I'm wrong, that, are you thinking of stepping down after your term, definitely?

[Answer] Well, it appears I might, but the trouble is that the party hasn't. I asked the party, for instance, will you allow me to rest for a while? Look, I have been working for 16 years without any vacation, why can't I give all the powers to the Executive Committee for 6 months and watch everybody do their job, and let me sit by, probably go to my home town, stay there for 6 months, or [words indistinct], and watch everybody work. If there is any emergency, call me up. But my intention too is that all those who are given these powers be thrown into the water to see if they know how to swim or not. You don't quit the presidency like that. You are elected up to 1987, what kind of a scoundrel are you that you [laughter] just say you quit, you don't do such things. You might sit down and take a rest, but certainly I have been elected up to 1987, and you are responsible if anything goes wrong; they will decapitate you anyway. Now in 1987 we will talk about it, but now what I intend to do is get some people into the Executive Committee, some more people, and let them run things. And I will stay on the sidelines and enjoy talking to you. [laughter]

[Question] Recently you had talks with the Cambodian leaders Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk [words indistinct]. In this context, how would the issue of Cambodia figure in your talks with Mr Reagan?

[Answer] Well, in the first place, as you are well aware, there are some people in the United States that have shown skepticism for the Pol Pot regime. In fact, they have withdrawn support for the Pol Pot regime in the seating in the United Nations. And it is the position of ASEAN that this new consolidation of forces is much more presentable than the old Pol Pot regime. Don't you think so? [sentence indistinct]

[Question] But since they are asking for assistance...

[Answer] I did not ask for any kind of assistance.

[Question] No you didn't, but the two gentlemen are interested in assistance, and how will this figure in your talks with the United States?

[Answer] I do not intend to take it up.

[Moderator] Mr (Ohira) of NHK.

[Question] On this occasion I would ask you to comment about the behavior of Japan. First, there is the Japanese history textbook affair. If you have noticed this, could we have a comment? And sceondly, [words indistinct] Japan recently acted to increase military capability. Could you please comment?

[Answer] About the history books about the war, this has become a very very tender spot in the relations between Korea and Japan and China and Japan. You will notice that the Philippines has kept quiet about this. We look with some sophistication at all of this. We realize that most of the big countries doctor their histories to fit requirements. Have you seen some of the American histories of Bataan and Corregidor? There was no mention of Filipinos at all. They say it was fought by Americans. I did not see any Americans when I was fighting. And so when I read anything like this I laugh to my heart's content. And I also know what happened during the guerrillas. Many of the Americans who [words indistinct] could not move around. They were hidden by us because they would have been caught. But when the Americans landed, they became our commanding officers, so they became the heroes, and when the Japanese general surrendered, [words indistinct] we were not even mentioned. Nor was any Filipino present during the surrender of Yamashita in the house of the American ambassador in Baguio. Did you see the painting of it? The painting is of American officers taking the surrender of two generals [words indistinct], not a Filipino is mentioned. One time, last time I went to Washington, he gave me a copy of the surrender document with an apology [words indistinct]. Do you also know that I was almost executed by Americans because I [words indistinct] I was ordered executed without a court martial. So I recalled all the men whom I had spread among the units under the command of the Americans and said, come and get me, if you can.

Well, I laugh about these things, I think that the Filipino is sophisticated about many things. Most of the casualties were Filipinos. In one combat alone 6,000 died. They preferred to die rather than surrender. Shall I tell you some more about distortions of history? [laughter] That's one reason why I do not think a [words indistinct]. Do you see the pictures that they always splash about the death march? Do you see Filipinos in the pictures of the death march? Never! Only Americans. Why? Probably we should complain against the Americans, not against the Japanese! [laughter]

And secondly, the pursuit of military power, you know, I have always thought, all of us committed errors about underestimating the power of the Japanese. We underestimated the capability of Mao Zedong uniting about 1 million [as heard] Chinese. We underestimated, the French, Americans, everyone underestimated the discipline and character of the Vietnamese. Underestimation was committed also in North Korea. To be frank with you, I feel Japan will become what it wants to become when it wants to, no matter what anybody says. But it will do so this time with a little more grace, knowing the lessons of the Second World War, don't you agree with me? [laughter]

[Question] Mr President, we know that one of the irritants in Philippine-American relations is in the area of trade. Do you or does any minister accompanying you on this trip [words indistinct] will replace the current treaty with a more equitable treaty?

[Answer] Well, that's what we have been working on. We have been working on this for quite a while. But in fairness to America, let me say this, that they have shown willingness to do so. I'm not saying that the bureaucrats have been accomodating, but I find a schizophrenic attitude in the American Government. Their leaders are friendly, the bureaucrats are obscure. Now perhaps this is because the bureaucrats have to demonstrate their capability for meditation. Perhaps that's the reason for this. Now, when this is going to change, I don't know.

I understand also there is some distortion in the media. Some of the mediamen tell me they write sometimes a few pleasant stories that they treat as a joke. But I would think that the bureaucrats are trying to earn their salaries and to establish their credentials as hard bargainers. Now perhaps it's time that we called the attention of the higher-echelon bureaucrats that they are being mean and hostile to us. I don't know, [words indistinct].

Look at sugar. They are just about to bring in a sugar agreement with [words indistinct]. (?China and Thailand) were complaining to us they had a 1-percent quota. We are better off; we have, I think, about a 28-29-percent quota, but we pay a duty. Of course, our export earnings have gone down by 27 percent, our imbalance, deficit imbalance is unthinkable, we really ought to be able to cut it down by the end of the year. But it has hurt us, hurt us so much that we have had to cut down on some infrastructure; that is why it is so difficult to attend to the increase in salaries which we would like to give to some of our government people. But you know with the development of the KKK [Kilusang Kabuhatan at Kaunlaran -- National Livelihood Program], small and medium-scale industries and the new uses for our export products like coconut oil, the new diesel fuel, for instance, these are some things that can cut down on imported fuel.

Anyway, there is no hiding the fact that we are hurting. Just like small countries, even the big ones are hurting. We are hurting, and we are hoping that we will be able to recover before the middle of next year, or the end of the year. But I am also happy that with the present crisis, the KKK took off like a [word indistinct]. Everybody's asking for it, and it has found its domestic market, which is something we had hoped would happen.

[Moderator] Mr President, we have allowed the press conference to go beyond its alloted time. May we thank you not only for ....

[Marcos] Oh, don't thank me. I have enjoyed myself. Thank you very much.

ROMULO: JAPANESE TEXTBOOK REVISIONS 'DISTURBING'

HK060016 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 5 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo described the reported revisions in Japanese textbook accounts dealing with World War II as disturbing and an omen. Mr Romulo made the comments in an interview with the Hong Kong bureau chief of the Japanese Broadcasting Corporation. Foreign Minister Romulo was quoted as saying that the textbook revision has disturbed the Philippine thinking on the probable directions of Japan's future relations with Asian countries. Mr Romulo said the attempt to modify historical facts may be an omen, a dangerous tendency to alter the status of Japanese military invasion in occupied countries during the last world war.

Noting Japan's stated intention to correct the revisions, Mr Romulo expressed hope this would be fully implemented. He said this would be a manifestation of Japanese sensitivity to the sentiments of other Asian countries.

OLALIA, 67 OTHERS CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

HK050031 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Authorities yesterday filed a charge of conspiracy to commit rebellion against 68 persons, including detained Kilusang Mayo Uno Chairman Felixberto Olalia, Sr. The charge was filed by Brig Gen Hamilton Dimaya, armed forces judge advocate-general, before a panel of prosecutors in yesterday morning's inquest proceedings at Camp Crame. Of the 68 persons charged with conspiracy to commit rebellion, 33 have been nabbed and detained by the military on the strength of a presidential commitment order. The rest are still at large.

State lawyers said no court could question the legality of the arrest and detention of persons charged with crimes against national security. Solicitor-General Estelito Mendoza said this in seeking the dismissal by the Supreme Court of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus by (Sultan Abdullah ali Pagasun), customs district collector in Cagayan de Oro. (Pagasun) is being detained by the military on a charge of rebellion. He was arrested on July 14 on the strength of a presidential commitment order. The petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed by (Pagasun's) lawyer, (Eugene Tan) seeking his immediate release. Mendoza said (Pagasun) had been engaged in supplying firearms to the MNLF. He was also accused of involvement in the MNLF plot to carry out armed struggle through destabilization campaign that would include assassinations, bombings and arson in major urban centers.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has warned the country's professionals against political promises of the subversive movement, saying that these are simply falsehoods couched in perfumed language. Enrile particularly referred to the coalition government supposed to be installed in the aftermath of an armed takeover of the government. He said this was provided for in the draft program of the national democratic front, or NDF, of the Communist Party of the Philippines, seized by the military following the capture of NDF Chairman Horacio Morales Jr on April 21. Enrile described the draft program as an attempt to prostitute the ideas of freedom to the ends of tyranny. Enrile spoke before the southern Tagalog-Bicol area conference of the Philippine Jaycees in Calamba, Laguna, yesterday morning.

Enrile said after the so-called revolution, the coalition government will be scuttled and replaced by a totalitarian regime.

SUZUKI DISCUSSES FOREIGN RELATIONS, ECONOMY

OW090929 Tokyo KYODO in English 0911 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 9, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Thursday his conservative government will strive to boost and develop friendly relations with neighboring Asian countries. At the same time, the prime minister said Japan is in a critical situation financially, stressing that the government must make an "all-out effort" to achieve financial rehabilitation. Prime Minister Suzuki made the remarks in a speech at a meeting of the Research Institute of Japan, a private gathering, at a Tokyo hotel.

He touched on a variety of subjects ranging from revision of textbooks which sparked a diplomatic row involving Japan, China and South Korea, to Japan's domestic political issues.

Suzuki appeared to be reluctant regarding the early holding of a special parliamentary session. His predecessors, former Prime Ministers Takeo Miki and Takeo Fukuda, have been calling for a special session of the Diet at an early date to explain to the people the current state of national financial plight.

The prime minister said he wanted to take a little more time before working out new measures to give a shot-in-the-arm to the sagging domestic economy. He pointed out a fairly good economic growth rate -- reaching around 5.1 percent on an annual basis under the national income statistics -- for the April-June period.

This percentage, he said, could be achieved centering chiefly on domestic demand but added that he wanted to study various statistics before drawing up additional economic measures. He said the unusually cool summer weather in July and August also would have to be taken into consideration.

On diplomacy, Prime Minister Suzuki reemphasized his belief that the maintenance of friendly and cooperative relations with Asian nations is important for Japan.

JAPAN-PRC OIL PROJECT SAID TO TRIPLE IN COST

OW040549 Tokyo KYODO in English 0535 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 4, KYODO -- A Sino-Japanese project to develop crude oil in China's Bohai Bay is expected to cost almost three times the original estimation, Japan-China Oil Development Corp. officials said Saturday. The company, a joint venture of the governmental Japan National Oil Corp. and 47 private companies, has told the participating firms revised estimations of the promising project, the officials said.

Exploration funds, all of which are to be financed by the Japanese partners, were newly estimated to cost dollar 590 million -- a 2.8-fold increase from the original dollar 210 million, the officials said. Development costs including funds for production facilities are said to total dollar 4,670 million, a 2.3-fold increase, they said. Japan and China are also expected to extend the exploration period by two years to seven years from the original five years covering June 1980-June 1985.

Under a governmental-level agreement signed between the two countries in December 1979, the development funds are to be 49 percent financed by Japan-China Oil and the rest by China. If the development funds exceed dollar 1,020 million, Japan is responsible for the surplus amount. But since the development funds are estimated to expand, the problem will be how to finance the additional fund, industry sources said.

According to revised projections, the production of crude oil will begin in 1986, yielding 140 million kiloliters of crude oil, up 40 million kiloliters from the original projection, by the year 2008, the officials said.

CALL FOR EARLY DIET SESSION HINTS 'OPEN DEFIANCE'

OW100749 Tokyo KYODO in English 0649 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 10, KYODO -- Two key ministers of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's Cabinet Friday called for an early convening of the next extraordinary session of the Diet (parliament) to discuss business-stimulating measures.

The call, regarded as open defiance of Suzuki, was made by Toshio Komoto, chief of the Economic Planning Agency, and Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, at a Cabinet meeting. It echoed similar urgings by their political masters this week -- former Prime Ministers Takeo Miki and Takeo Fukuda, the powerful bosses of anti-mainstream factions in the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP).

Political pundits said the call by Komoto and Abe is a prelude to a hot contest among LDP leaders before the scheduled November election of the LDP president currently held by Suzuki. Komoto, a businessman-turned politician, recently declared his candidacy for the LDP presidency in the November election.

After Friday's Cabinet session, Suzuki attended a meeting of prefectural governors and said the government should rigidly restrict additional public works spending in compiling a supplementary budget for this fiscal year ending in March. He said additional fiscal spending is to be restrained except in unavoidable cases such as natural hazard rehabilitation works, a remark obviously geared to Komoto, Abe and other rivals in the ruling party.

Finance Minister Michio Watanabe, regarded as a close Suzuki associate, threw his support behind the prime minister by showing a negative stance toward additional public works spending. He told reporters after the Cabinet meeting that the government could not decide on the size and other modalities of pump-priming measures within September.

But Abe made a different statement at a press conference after the Cabinet meeting. He said he believed the national economy is in a serious slump and added the Cabinet should first decide on the basic policy of additional reflationary measures within September. He warned private capital investment and exports are sluggish and consumer spending has slowed down since July.

Susumu Nikaido, LDP secretary general and also a close Suzuki associate, indicated difficulty in convening an extraordinary Diet session within September as demanded by antimainstream factions. He has proposed that the Diet session not be held before October 16 when the party presidential election will be officially announced.

WATANABE REPORTS ON FY 83 'ULTRA AUSTERITY' BUDGET

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 10, KYODO -- Japan will have an 'ultra austerity' budget in fiscal 1983 beginning next April, with particular emphasis laid on defense and foreign aid. This emerged Friday as a tally of budget appropriations requests submitted by various government agencies was reported at a regular Cabinet session by Finance Minister Michio Watanabe.

The total of budget requests was put at yen 50.1 trillion (dollar 192.8 billion), up 0.9 percent over the fiscal 1982 budget. The Finance Ministry said the growth rate was the lowest since 1961, when the ministry began compiling the budget on the basis of appropriations requests by government agencies. The total of requests for the fiscal investment and loan program, generally known as the second budget, came to yen 22.4 trillion (dollar 86.3 billion), up 10.6 percent over fiscal 1982.

With a fiscal 1983 revenue shortfall estimated at close to yen 5 trillion (dollar 19 billion), the Finance Ministry will try to axe the budget requests as much as possible.

But Finance Ministry officials conceded there might be a modest increase in the final budget scale, saying that the total figure reported by Watanabe did not include a repayment of the yen 2.25 trillion (dollar 8.7 billion) the ministry borrowed from the National Debt Consolidation Fund to make up for the fiscal 1981 revenue shortfall.

The general expenditure, which does not include debt servicing expenses and subsidies to local governments, totaled yen 33.1 trillion (dollar 127.3 billion), up 1.5 percent over the comparable figure in the fiscal 1982 budget, the lowest growth rate since 1955.

By government agency, the Defense Agency sought appropriations totaling yen 2.8 trillion (dollar 10.7 billion), up 7.3 percent, the sharpest increase of all. The Foreign Ministry, which oversees Japan's foreign aid, requested yen 359.5 billion (dollar 1.4 billion), up 7 percent. But seven agencies, including the Imperial Household Agency and the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries, cut their appropriation requests below this fiscal year's levels. The Finance Ministry has decided to reduce the amount of deficit-covering bond issues next fiscal year by yen 1.96 trillion.

But mainly due to higher interest rates, the fiscal 1983 debt servicing expenses will increase from yen 7.8 trillion in fiscal 1982 to yen 9 trillion (dollar 34.8 billion) next fiscal year, it said. The 10.6 percent increase in the fiscal investment and loan program is the smallest since 1965. Finance Ministry officials said the total amount of the program will have to be cut to some yen 21 trillion, in view of the bleak prospect for revenue performance.

Bigger appropriations under the program were requested by the agency in charge of building three bridges between Honshu and Shikoku, the Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund, which undertakes Japan's official development aid to poorer countries, and the Export-Import Bank of Japan. The fund, for example, sought appropriations totaling yen 349 billion (dollar 1.3 billion), 58.5 percent more than in this fiscal year.

BRIEFS

LINEAR-MOTOR TRAIN TEST -- Hyuga, Miyazaki Pref., 2 Sep, KYODO -- Heading toward practical use of the linear-motor vehicle now under development, the Japanese National Railways (JNR) Thursday succeeded in a manned test run of the superspeed magnetically-driven "floating train." The success came 20 years after the JNR began a development study for the post-Shinkansen superspeed train. The 2-car test vehicle, "MLU-001," with 3 people on board shuttled twice on a 7-kilometer test line here Thursday afternoon. In the test, the vehicle floated after running 900 meters in 35 secords and went on running for 3.3 kilometers over 50 seconds hitting a maximum speed of 262 kilometers an hour. The maximum speed was more than twice that of a Shinkansen bullet train and equivalent to that of a YS-11 plane. The JNR aims to attain a speed of 500 kilometers an hour in the second-stage manned vehicle experiments. The JNR said the linear-motor vehicle will be put to practical use between 1985 and 1995. It will enable people to travel to Osaka from Tokyo, a distance of about 550 kilometers, in about an hour. [Tokyo KYODO in English 1011 GMT 2 Sep 82 OW]

Second Day's Session

SK030435 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0340 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 3 (KCNA) -- The study tour and the second-day session of the Asian regional consultation on the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was held in Pyongyang on September 2.

According to the agenda, experiences in achieving stable high yields of paddy rice in our country were made public at the consultation.

Yi Man-song, director of a department of the Agricultural Commission, and Kim Chong-kil, Pak Yong-sik and Yi Tae-ho, laboratory chiefs of the Academy of Agricultural Sciences, introduced the successes and experiences achieved in the irrigation, mechanisation and chemicalisation of agriculture and soil control in our country.

They, to begin with, made public experiences in irrigation. They said that the overall irrigation carried out successfully in our country in accordance with the policy put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the rural theses has brought bumper crops in recent years, not suffering natural damages, despite very unfavourable conditions in which whimsical weather continued. This proves that our country did well to define irrigation as the primary task of the rural technical revolution and carry it out with success. Noting that when the irrigation of the paddy fields had been completed in the main, our country undertook extensive projects of dry-field irrigation and drainage systems, they introduced the successes and experiences gained in this field.

Then they presented experiences in readjusting land and establishing a system of land control in rice farming to increase the paddy rice yield in the past period. Presenting experiences in carrying out mechanisation including rice-transplating technique, they noted: We correctly defined the order, scope and ways of mechanisation in conformity with the economic conditions of the country and started it from plains vastly occupied by paddy fields and expanded it to in-between and mountainous areas.

They spoke of the experiences of our country in mechanising rice farming by widely introducing rice seedling-plucking machines, rice-transplanting machines, rice harvesters, travelling rice thrashing combines and other modern farm machines. They said: In our country each 100 hectares of land under cultivation have seven tractors in plain areas and six in in-between and mountainous areas. With the successful promotion of mechanisation in paddy and non-paddy farming, solid material and technical foundations have been laid for our peasants, who toiled with small tools in the past days, to attain high yields, working with ease with the help of machines. They also presented experiences in the chemicalisation of agriculture in our country.

Our country has built solid chemical industrial bases to supply sufficient quantities of chemical fertilizers and herbicides to the countryside every year, they said, and declared: The task of chemicalisation has entered the stage of completion in our country today.

All these successes are a brilliant fruition of the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre.

In the afternoon, the delegations and delegates made a study tour. The guests inspected the National Economy Institute and the Mirim lock gate.

Third Day's Session

SK040413 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0402 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 4 (KCNA) -- The third-day session of the Asian regional consultation on achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was held in Pyongyang on September 3. Experience gained in achieving the stable high yields of paddy rice in Korea was introduced first at the session.

Kim Myong-chan, Choe Sok-tal and Yi Tong-chun, section chiefs of the DPRK Academy of Agricultural Science, dwelt on successes and experiences gained in the cultivation of paddy rice, production of seeds, crop physiology and its utilization, rice harvesting and its after-treatment.

Deputy head of the Chinese delegation, who is vice-president of the Zhejiang Provincial Academy of Agricultural Science, introduced China's experience gained in high stable production of paddy rice; head of the Burmese delegation U Tin Hlaing, director of the Agriculture Corporation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry of Burma, Burma's experience in the cultivation of high-yielding paddy rice; delegate of Nepal Amresh Man Pradhanang, deputy director general of the Department of Agriculture of the Ministry of Agriculture of Nepal, the production of paddy rice in Nepal; delegate of Bangladesh Kazi Azizul Haq, researcher of the Bangladesh Rice Research Institute, high stable yields of paddy rice in Bangladesh; head of the Pakistan delegation Muhammad Afzal Malik, director general of the Punjab Provincial Agricultural Bureau of Pakistan, the agriculture of Pakistan, with main emphasis on rice cultivation; head of the Thai delegation Suvit Pushpavesa, researcher of the Rice Research Institute of the Agricultural Bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives, the rice cultivation in Thailand; and delegate of India V.B. Ghai, director of the Directorate of Rice Development of the Ministry of Agriculture, India's experience in the struggle for the high stable yields of paddy rice.

Also introduced at the session were successes and experiences of the DPRK in the management and operation of cooperative farms, the enhancement of scientific and technical level of agricultural personnel and working people, state policy for the betterment of the life of farmers and utilization of electrical power in the development of agriculture.

The consultation continues.

Fourth Day's Session

SK091124 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0852 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 9 (KCNA) -- The fourth-day meeting of the Asian regional consultation on achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was held in Pyongyang on September 8.

A letter to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, was adopted first at the meeting amid enthusiastic applause of the attendants on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of the DPRK founding.

It was stressed at the meeting that Korea's experience in rice farming and achievement and experience in the agricultural domain which delegations and delegates of various countries studied while touring cooperative farms, reservoirs, pumping stations, factories and schools, etc. are highly beneficial for achieving stable high yields of paddy rice and increasing agricultural production.

Speaking first at the meeting, delegate of Bangladesh Kazi Azizul Haq, researcher of the Bangladesh Rice Research Institute, noted: Korea's agriculture has made rapid development. In particular, Korea has achieved very high yields in rice production.

He stressed that the Korean people owed all their successes in agriculture to the wise guidance of the great leader President Kim Il-song and the Workers Party of Korea.

Head of the Burmese delegation U Tin Hlaing, director of the Agriculture Corporation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry, said that Korea, with a small area of land under cultivation, most of whose land covered with mountain, has overcome unfavorable conditions by introducing irrigation and drainage system and is increasing agriculture production thanks to her scientists who are effectively making researches in this domain. Back home, we will widely introduce in Burma such successes and experience gained in your country, he said.

Deputy head of the Chinese delegation Min Shaokai, vice-president of the Zhejiang Provincial Academy of Agricultural Science, said: Korea's successes serve as a valuable example for and encouragement to us. We will strive to introduce the Korean people's achievements in agricultural science in our agricultural production.

Kim Kwang-un, member of the DPRK delegation, said: The current consultation and study tour not only marked an excellent occasion in finding proper ways for the agricultural development of each country, for the achievement of stable high yields of paddy rice in particular, but also was very fruitful in strengthening the friendship among countries.

Delegate of Nepal Amresh Man Pradhanang, deputy director general of the Department of Agriculture of the Ministry of Agriculture, noted that the great leader President Kim Il-song has provided all good conditions for the consultation and study tour. I am happy to learn this time from Korea's experience in achieving high stable yields of paddy rice, he said.

Head of the Pakistan delegation Muhammad Afzal Malik, director general of the Punjab Provincial Agricultural Bureau of Pakistan, stated that the Korean farmers are highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of hard struggle and applying the chuche methods of farming to increase grain production. What struck us with admiration is that per hectare rice yield is 8 tons or more, he said.

Head of the Indian delegation V.S. Ghai, director of the Directorate of Rice Development of the Ministry of Agriculture, said that to boost agricultural production it is very important to prevent drought damages by properly conducting irrigation. Korea's great achievement gained in the agricultural production including rice cultivation by carefully tending paddy and non-paddy fields and introducing irrigation system gives us a vivid example, he remarked.

The consultation continues.

[Text] Pyongyang, September 7 (KCNA) -- Pompeyo Marques, general secretary of the Venezuelan Movement to Socialism, and his wife arrived in Pyongyang on September 6 by air. The guests were met at the airport by Comrade Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, and Cho Yong-kuk, vice-director of a department of the WPK Central Committee.

KWP Reception

[Text] Pyongyang, September 7 (KCNA) -- The Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea hosted a party on the evening of September 6 at the People's Palace of Culture in honor of Pompeyo Marques, general secretary of the Venezuelan Movement to Socialism.

Attending the party were Comrade Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, Cho Yong-kuk, vice-director of a department of the WPK Central Committee, and other personages concerned.

Vice-Director Cho Yong-kuk spoke first. Noting that the two parties and the two peoples are striving to consolidate peace, democracy and national independence and achieve the independent development of the country, he declared that this commonness is an excellent basis for further development of the friendly relations between the two parties and peoples.

The Venezuelan Movement to Socialism has grown to be a great political force enjoying the support of the broad masses of the people in Venezuela today by vigorously struggling to protect the natural resources of the country from the imperialists, consolidate the national independence and achieve the independent development of the country.

He continued: We highly estimate your party's righteous struggle and sincerely hope that it will bear better fruits in the future.

Speaking next, General Secretary Pompeyo Marques said: Highly important is the role of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea which is strengthening and developing the Non-Aligned Movement and pursuing a peaceful foreign policy under the very strained and complicated international situation in which the danger of war is growing in many parts of the world.

The Venezuelan Movement to Socialism highly estimates the example set by the Workers Party of Korea and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in maintaining the principle of chajusong and the principle of nonalignment, he declared, and continued: We highly estimate the course covered by the Korean people over the past 50 years or more under the guidance of the Workers Party of Korea and its leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

We maintain relations with progressive, revolutionary, democratic and socialist forces on the basis of mutual respect and equality. We have established friendly relations on this basis with the Workers Party of Korea, too.

The attendants drank toasts to the friendship and solidarity between the Workers Party of Korea and the Venezuelan Movement to Socialism, to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il and to the health of respected Comrade Pompeyo Marques.

KIM IL-SONG SENDS LETTER TO PLO'S 'ARAFAT

[Text] Pyongyang, September 8 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a personal letter on September 2 to Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organisation and commander-in-chief of the Palestine revolutionary armed forces, in connection with the fact that the Palestine Liberation Organisation and Palestinian resistance fighters courageously fought against the barbarous armed invasion and massacre committed by the U.S. imperialists and Zionists in collusion with each other and defended with honour the national dignity of the Palestinian Arab people. The letter reads:

Respected Comrade Chairman, I extend fervent militant salute to you, my close friend, expressing firm solidarity with the entire Palestinian resistance fighters who are waging an undaunted struggle courageously overcoming the grim trial that befell the Palestinian revolution.

In the last days the Palestine Liberation Organisation and Palestinian resistance fighters waged a valiant struggle against the barbarous armed invasion and massacre committed by the U.S. imperialists and Zionists in conspiracy with each other and safeguarded with flying colours the national dignity of the Palestinian Arab people.

The Israeli aggressors encircled western Beirut and perpetrated all manner of dastardly and vicious moves for a long period with the mobilization of all kinds of modern military equipment and destructive weapons in an attempt to stifle the Palestinian revolution and the Palestine Liberation Organisation for good. But they could not subdue the Palestinian resistance fighters but failed to achieve their heinous purpose in the end.

We highly appraise the heroic struggle waged by the Palestinian people and resistance fighters against the U.S. imperialists and Israeli aggressors under the correct leadership of you, respected comrade chairman.

Though you sustained much losses in the recent war and had to leave the position in Beirut, the Palestine Liberation Organisation, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, and its revolutionary armed forces have been further tempered and steeled through the struggle and the international prestige and position of the PLO have risen still higher with the unanimous support and sympathy of the world people.

Contrary to this, the Israeli Zionists and the U.S. imperialists who zealously instigated them have landed themselves in thorough isolation, strongly condemned by the world people, as they disclosed to the whole world their true colour as a most shameless aggressor and brigandish criminal.

This tells that you have won victory politically and morally.

Today the Palestine Liberation Organisation and Palestinian people are undergoing temporary difficulties. But if they rally close their fighting ranks and keep up the staunch struggle, more firmly seizing their destiny in their hands in the future, they will certainly achieve the final victory.

As long as the Palestinian people are alive, the flames of the Palestinian revolution will never be quenched.

We strongly hold that in the Middle East region the aggressive moves of the U.S. imperialists and Zionists should be stopped at once, the Israeli aggressors be completely withdrawn from the occupied Arab land and the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people including the rights to return to their native place and found an independent state be restored at an early date.

During the recent war in Lebanon, we made all efforts we can to assist the Palestinian people and other Arab peoples in their just cause.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people will as ever stand foursquare behind the fighting Palestinian and other Arab peoples and render active support and encouragement with might and main to you in the struggle to take back the territory and achieve national liberation and independence and sovereignty.

In closing, I sincerely wish you and the Palestinian people a shining fruition in the sacred struggle for the victory of the cause of the Palestinian revolution as well as your health.

With highest considerations.

KIM IL-SONG TOURS PYONGYANG MACHINE PLANT

SK091135 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0916 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 9 (KCNA) -- The great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song on September 8 went to the east Pyongyang machine plant and saw various kinds of new mining machines and machine tools manufactured at different machine plants of our country. He was accompanied by Comrades So Yun-sok, Hyon Mu-kwang, Cho Se-ung, Hong Song-nam and Hong Si-hak.

The mining machines and machine tools on display are new kinds of modern and efficient machines manufactured at various machine plants through a vigorous technical innovation drive.

Acquainting himself in detail with the structure, efficiency and mechanism of the new machines, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song expressed satisfaction with the fact that the entire party members and workers of machine plants have manufactured efficient machines by giving full play to their revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and highly appreciated their successes.

After seeing round the machines, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward detailed tasks to produce more modern mining machines and machine tools and gave programmatic teachings which would serve as a guideline in developing our coal industry into a new higher stage.

CENTRAL MEETING PRAISES KIM IL-SONG PUBLICATION

SK051326 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 5 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 5 (KCNA) -- A central meeting marking the fifth anniversary of the publication of "Theses on Socialist Education," an immortal classic work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song (September 5, 1977), was held Saturday with a large attendance at the People's Palace of Culture. A portrait of the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song was placed on the platform of the meeting hall.

The meeting was attended by Comrades Pak Song-chol, So Yun-sok, Chong Chun-ki and Hwang Chang-yop, and Kim Il-tae, Kim Man-kum, Choe Tae-pok, Chi Chang-ik, Hwang Sun-myong, Pak Yong-chol and other personages concerned together with central and local educational functionaries and teachers of schools at all levels.

A report was delivered by Comrade Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea. The reporter said: "Theses on Socialist Education" propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a chuche-based, great educational programme fully complying with the demands of revolutionary practice in our era and giving comprehensive answers to all problems arising in socialist and communist education by successfully embodying the immortal chuche idea. The great theses on education is based on and is run through with the immortal chuche idea.

The originality and greatness of the great leader's "Theses on Socialist Education" and the source of its inexhaustible vitality lie in that it is based on the chuche idea ideologically, theoretically and methodologically.

The great leader's "Theses on Socialist Education" is the first to give a perfect answer to the question of bringing up communistic man, paving the way for a successful solution of the fundamental problem of communist construction. Clearly expounded in the theses is the basic principle of socialist pedagogy, the starting point in solving all problems arising in socialist education. The great leader, basing himself on a perfect philosophical exposition of the essential character of man, propounded that the purpose of socialist education is to rear people as communistic revolutionaries with chajusong (independence) and creativity. He taught that the basic principle of socialist pedagogy is to revolutionize, working-classize and communize people.

The fundamental direction of socialist and communist education has been definitely indicated and a basic cornerstone for the development of theory on socialist education on a solid scientific basis provided by the basic principle of socialist pedagogy. Not only the purpose and fundamentals of socialist education but also principles and ways for their realisation are expounded in an allround way in the theses.

The revolutionary principles expounded in the theses, the principles of embodying the party spirit and working-class spirit, thoroughly establishing chuche, combining educatio- with revolutionary practice and organizing educational work on the responsibility of the socialist state serve as a fundamental guideline in putting an end to the outdated mixed education, definitely drawing the working-class line in socialist, communist education, decisively rejecting flunkeyism and dogmatism and conducting educational work independently and creatively in conformity with the demand of the revolution and with the specific reality of one's own country.

The theses also clearly explains the questions as to the revolutionary and scientific content and method of education, the most advanced socialist educational system under which the state educates the entire people on its full responsibility, the tasks and role of educational institutions and guidance and assistance to education. Indeed, the great leader's "Theses on Socialist Education" is an educational encyclopedia giving overall scientific answers to all theoretical and practical questions arising in remoulding people into true communistic men of chuche type and a grand monumental work on education without an equal in the profound and scientific nature, originality and rich content.

Noting that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who published "Theses on Socialist Education" by brilliantly applying the immortal chuche idea has wisely organized and led the struggle for its implementation, the reporter said: Upholding the chuche-oriented idea of the great leader on education, the glorious party centre has wisely guided the struggle for implementing the educational theses.

The glorious party centre put forth the policy of ideological switchover, proceeding from the theory of ideology that idea decides everything, and saw to it that personnel and working people have a correct viewpoint on and attitude toward education. It energetically mobilized the whole party and entire people in the worthwhile struggle for the implementation of the theses on education with the mobilization of all propaganda and agitation means and methods.

"Theses on Socialist Education" has fully displayed its vitality, and new revolutionary changes have taken place in our education over the past five years under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre. The great vitality of the theses on education finds its manifestation, above all, in the fact that the younger generation is growing up to be reliable communistic revolutionaries of chuche type and a new change is taking place in their mental and moral traits.

Strong organization and discipline together with a high ideological level are one of the important features of our youth and children.

The great vitality of the theses on education is also expressed in the general qualitative improvement of education. The contents of education in the domains of common and higher education have been revised on the basis of the demand of the developing reality and the successes of modern science and technology, with the result that the content of education has been firmly based on party policy and its scientific and theoretical level further raised.

Over the past five years since the publication of the theses on education, the content of education in natural science and technology in the domain of higher education has been improved in accord with the requirements of the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientization of the national economy and of the development of modern science and technology and its level raised to a higher stage.

The great vitality of the theses on education finds another expression in that the entire people are studying and the struggle is going on vigorously to implement the policy of intellectualizing the whole of society.

Today in our country there is no one who is uneducated or ceases to study half-way. All people regard studying as the first and foremost task of revolutionaries, continue studying for life and, in this course, the general cultural and technical level of society has been rapidly raised.

As a result of the setting up of farm colleges, fishermen's colleges and the college on TV, along with 21 factory colleges and 12 factory higher specialized schools over the last five years since the theses was published, a great progress has been effected in the struggle to intellectualize the whole of society, the final-stage task set forth in the educational theses.

The great vitality of the theses on education also finds manifestation in the growing social concern for and strengthened social assistance to education. Since the publication of the theses the educational work has been conducted under the care of all people and the whole society as never before and a vigorous movement for social assistance to education is going on in all parts of the country.

The reporter stressed: The last five years, in which we have implemented the theses on socialist education, are a significant period when precious experiences and shining successes have been gained in education and the socialist educational system of our country has further thrown its radiant rays under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre; they are fruitful days in which the validity and vitality of the theses on education have been fully proved.

We came to be firmly convinced through our own experience that only when we advance along the road indicated by the educational theses can we successfully solve the most difficult problem in socialist and communist construction, the problem of remoulding man, the problem of rearing communistic man, and constantly develop our socialist education into a genuine revolutionary education. We also came to make the conviction that we could successfully realize in the not distant future the intellectualization of the whole of society, the high goal set forth in the educational theses.

UNCOVERING OF GROUP OF RESIDENT SPIES ANNOUNCED

SK100458 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0200 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] A group of resident spies, who carried out clandestine activities for 25 years based in Seoul and North Chungchong Province, has been uncovered. The Agency for National Security Planning [ANSP] arrested 29 resident spies who perpetrated clandestine activities for 25 years by taking advantage of blood relations among them in Seoul and North Chungchong Province after receiving training in espionage in North Korea. The ANSP took 12 of them into custody, referring 4 to the Prosecutor's Office without restraint, and released the rest of them with generosity.

The arrested spies and their supporters are as follows: Song Chi-sop, 59, former employee of Military Police Organization; Song Ki-chun, 54, representative of Taejin Chemical Company; Song Ki-sop, 58, former Seoul city administration official; Han Kwang-su, 69, former professor at Ewha Women's University; Song Ki-pok, 40, teacher of Singwang Girl's Middle School; Song Ki-hong, 37, head of (Sillim) Fine Arts Institute; (Song Ki-su), 35, chiropractor; (Han Yong-su), 45, director in Sonkyong Company, Limited; (Han Yong-hui), 51, Tong Saemaul woman activist; (Song Ho-sop), 53, driver; (Song Kwang-sop) 47, bean curd merchant; and (Kim Chun-sun), 52, wife of Song Ki-sop.

Those who were sent to the Prosecutor's Office without restraint are: (O Kuk-myong), 60, wife of Han Kwang-su; (Song Ki-son), 33, daughter of Song Chang-sop; (Song Hui-sop), 45, band player in a restaurant; and (Han Chae-hui), wife of Song Chang-sop, an agent in the North who died in 1977.

The remaining 13 people, including a certain Kim, wife of (Song Ki-hong), were released, as they showed sincere repentance during investigation. According to the announcement of the ANSP, the arrested spies, including (Song Chi-sop), are either relatives or children of Song Chang-sop, now deputy director of the Liaison Department of the North Korean puppets' Workers Party who infiltrated into the South eight times since 1957 and engaged in espionage activities.

After being brainwashed by Song Chang-sop and his wife, (Han Kyong-hui), they crossed over to the North or received espionage training in the South and committed espionage activites for 14 to 25 years. They were thus all arrested by the ANSP. Spy (Song Chi-sop), second cousin of Song Chang-sop, spy in the North, received secret espionage training for 20 days after crossing over to the North in July 1958 and returned to the South taking along with him password documents and operational funds. He perpetrated espionage activities for 24 years, collecting information concerning the military and campuses, and reported to the North Korean puppets nine times. Spy (Song Ki-chun), after being brainwashed by Song Chang-sop in 1960, received espionage training in the North, to which he crossed over in September 1968. He carried out espionage activities for 14 years, collecting information on military and industrial facilities, and reported to the North Korean puppets 11 times.

Spy Song Ki-sop, former Seoul city administration official, and a second cousin of Song Chang-sop, was brainwashed by (Song Chang-sop) and perpetrated espionage activities for 24 years with the callsign of "Soknisan No 114". He reported national secrets, including the method of spotting forced identification cards and the wartime emergency mobilization plan of Seoul city administration and intelligence concerning campuses, to the North Korean puppets.

Spy Han Kwang-su, former professor of Ewha Women's University, is the brother-in-law of Song Chang-sop. He was coaxed and educated for espionage activities by Song Chang-sop, who was sent to the South in 1960.

With the individual call sign of "Han River 125," Han continued espionage activities for 22 years, reporting as many as 13 times to the North Korean puppets on such political and campus information as a name list of the faculty of Ewha Women's University, status of student demonstrations, status of elections, and campus rumors regarding the Kwangju situation.

Spy Song Ki-pok, teacher of Sinkwang Girl's Middle School, is the eldest daughter of Song Chang-sop. She was given education in espionage in 1960 and engaged in espionage activities for 22 years. By having contacts four times with the North Korean spies who infiltrated into the South, she received $10,000 in operational funds to be used for contingenceies. She twice acted as guide for the North Korean spies who were returning to the North, doing black market dollar exchange business which was previously conducted by her mother, Han Kyong-hui, and collecting information on campuses and the national railroad administration, reporting to the North Korean puppets twice on this.

Spy Song Ki-hong continued espionage activities for 14 years, receiving radio messages of the North Korean puppets at the direction of Han Kyong-hui. He reported to the North Korean puppets on such military secrets as the military structural systems and counter-espionage operations.

Spy Song Ki-su was persuaded by Song Chang-sop in 1968 and was educated for espionage activities. Establishing a false company called "Oriental Advertisement Company," he has continued espionage activities for 14 years, playing the role of supplying shelters to the spies sent from the North.

Han Yong-su, managing director of the Sonkyong Company, and Han Yong-hui, chairman of a township committee of the New Community Movement, who have been detained on charges of helping spies, are the brother-in-law and sister-in-law of Song Chang-sop. They worked for spies by conveying operational funds to spy Han Kyong-hui and doing other things.

The ANSP noted that the leading members of the spy ring were a former member of the central Standing Committee of the now-defunct Democratic Republican Party, a college professor, a middle school teacher, a director of a company, an employee of the Seoul city government, and that most of them are intellectuals who were educated in Japan or college graduates.

The ANSP noted that Song Chang-sop, a cadre of the KWP of the North Korean puppets, infiltrated into the South as many as eight times to give directions on the espionage activities and a huge amount of operational funds amounting to 180 million won was conveyed to conduct black market dollar exchange business, an advertising business and a taxi service in a disguised manner in Myong-dong, Chungmu-ro, Chong-no and other places. Thus, the spy ring rounded up this time established a base for prolonged espionage activities and was an intellectual and systematic spy ring, noted the ANSP.

The ANSP further noted that the members of the spy ring had their sons and daughters, who were students of four colleges in Seoul, join in the espionage activities and, through them, collected information on the campus situation, and have instigated students by creating and spreading subersive rumors to bring about political and social unrest, whenever campus disturbances or serious incidents took place.

The ANSP said all must realize that, as disclosed by the spy ring rounded up this time, the North Korean puppets are continuing to go on a rampage with bloodshot eyes in strengthening the underground revolutionary force to communize the South and are employing all means to exploit South Korean relatives in their southward operation by using family connections as a decoy.

The ANSP said that, considering the fact that some former politicians and somewhat high-level intellectuals were exploited by the spy ring consciously or unconsciously, all must increase their vigilance against communists so that they do not bring about individual misfortune and endanger the national security by imprudence and mistakes.

CHUNGANG ILBO VIEWS PRC CPC NATIONAL CONGRESS

SK080500 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 7 Sep 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Wide Open Communist China and the West"]

[Excerpts] Not running counter to the hope of the outside world which wishes Communist China to follow pragmatist lines, the 12th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, with the world's attention riveted on it, has adopted a new constitution and is now reshuffling party organizations.

With the abolition of the party chairman system, six vice chairmen -- Deng Xiaoping, Ye Jianying, Zhao Ziyang, Li Xiannian, Chen Yun and Hua Guofeng -- will have to leave their posts. The retirement of old vice chairmen will, first of all, open the door to power for younger party members, and it will serve as an opportunity for a person tied to the Cultural Revolution like Hua Guofeng as well as an aged party leader like Ye Jianying to leave their posts without friction.

When, following the 12th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, the party's position over the government is weakened by way of reviving the system of president to lead the government with the convocation of the National People's Congress by the end of this month, Communist China is expected to emerge different from what it has been up to now, as the purification movement ends.

Communist China's policy will prefer bread to ideology. In other words, Communist China's policy will give priority to improvement of the people's living standards through economic construction rather than revolutionary zeal, departing from the proletarian internationalism and revolution export lines.

Proletarian internationalism, while bringing no substantial benefits, only strains relations with the advanced Western countries. Since Communist China needs cooperation from these Western countries for economic construction based on pragmatist lines, it is natural for Hu Yaobang to declare a departure from proletarian internationalism at the opening of the congress.

We know perfectly well that Communist China will remain a communist country no matter how many times it transforms itself. Nonetheless, we hope the results of the 12th National Congress of the CPC will lead to a road of dependence between Communist China and the Western countries, and that the outside wind that Communist China accepts will eventually blow over the Amnok River and West Sea to reach North Korea.

We hope Communist China, which is to open its society, will make a contribution to easing relations with Korea and to the preservation of peace and stability in Northeast Asia, including the easing of the tense situation on the Korean Peninsula.

INCREASED CONSUMPTION OF OIL PRODUCTS REPORTED

[Text] Seoul, Sept 1 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's consumption of oil products has increased since the second quarter of this year, an Energy-Resources Ministry report revealed Wednesday. The report showed that the country consumed a total of 15.25 million barrels of oil products in July, up 17.4 percent from the figure registered during the same month last year.

According to the report, the July consumption of naphtha was 1.72 million barrels, a 58.2 percent increase over a year earlier, and that of bunker C oil showed a 15.2 percent gain. South Korea consumed 12.7 percent more light oil in July than during the corresponding month of 1981, and the use of butane and propane rose 83 and 31.2 percent, respectively, from last year's figures. The consumption of gasoline, however, decreased 31.3 percent to 365,000 barrels, the report said. During the first seven months of this year, Korea used 3.1 percent less oil products than during the first seven months of 1981.

TALKS ON BILATERAL RELATIONS WITH SRV HELD

OW091838 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1700 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 9 (MONTSAME) -- A consultative meeting was held here to discuss the bilateral Mongolian-Vietnamese relations and some topical international issues of mutual interest. S. Dambadarjaa, deputy minister for foreign affairs of the M.P.R., D. Chuluundorj, head of the Foreign Ministry department, took part in the meeting on the Mongolian side and Hoang Luong, deputy minister for foreign affairs of the S.R.V., Cao Kien Thiet, ambassador of the S.R.V. to the M.P.R., on the Vietnamese side.

The consultative meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of full mutual understanding. It reaffirmed the identity of views of the two sides on all questions discussed.

TSEDENBAL, BATMONH GREET DPRK NATIONAL DAY

OW091822 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1714 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 9 (MONTSAME) -- Yu. Tsedenbal and J. Batmonh cordially congratulated the fraternal Korean people on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of the formation of the Korean People's Democratic Republic (K.P.D.R.).

A telegram of congratulations by the Mongolian leaders addressed to Kim Il-song and Yi Chong-ok says: The liberation of the Korean people from the Japanese yoke in which the decisive role was played by the Soviet army ushered in a new era in the history of the Korean people and led to the foundation of the Korean People's Democratic Republic. During the years of people's power, the working people of the K.P.D.R. led by the Workers' Party of Korea (W.P.K.) in close cooperation with the socialist countries successfully repelled imperialist aggressions against this country and achieved great successes in the development of its economy and culture and are now working for the implementation of the tasks advanced by the 6th congress of the W.P.K. The just struggle of the Korean people for stopping the imperialist interference into its internal affairs and for the unification of their country through peaceful means earns world-wide support of the peace-loving and progressive forces.

The Mongolian People's Republic, the telegramme points out, abiding by the principle of socialist internationalism, stands for strengthening the relations of friendship and cooperation with the K.P.D.R. which benefit both the Mongolian and Korean peoples and for consolidating peace, democracy and socialism in Asia and the world over.

TSEDENBAL, BATMONH GREET BULGARIAN NATIONAL DAY

OW091847 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1702 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 9 (MONTSAME) -- Comrades Yu. Tsedenbal and J. Batmonh sent a message of greetings to the leaders of the People's Republic of Bulgaria T. Zhivkov and G. Filipov on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the socialist revolution in Bulgaria.

On September 9, 1944, the telegramme says, the Bulgarian people with the decisive help of the Soviet army overthrew the fascist yoke and the monarchic dictatorship and embarked on the road of socialist development, the goal selflessly fought for by the prominent Bulgarian revolutionaries. The Bulgarian people led by the Bulgarian Communist Party, in closeknit cooperation with the socialist community countries, has turned Bulgaria into a developed socialist country in a historically short span of time and is developing now and is succeeding now in the further development of the economy and culture and in raising the material well-being of their country.

Being an inseparable link of the socialist community, a member of the Warsaw Treaty organization and of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, Bulgaria greatly contributes to the cause of consolidating the unity and cohesion of the fraternal countries and of heightening the might of the world socialism. It persistently pursues a peace-loving foreign policy and invariably stands for preserving and deepening detente, for consolidating peace and security in Europe and the world over.

The Mongolian leaders noted with satisfaction that the relations of friendship and close, fruitful cooperation between the M.P.R. and the P.R.B. based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism are deepening and expanding with every passing year. Their vivifying source is the identity of views and close-knit interaction between the M.P.R.P. and the B.C.P.

AMBASSADOR ADDRESSES GENEVA DISARMAMENT TALKS

OW091809 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1730 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 9 (MONTSAME) -- Addressing the current session of the Committee on Disarmament in Geneva, D. Erdembileg, ambassador of the Mongolian People's Republic, emphasized the importance of preventing the arms race in outer space and denounced the U.S. plans to develop a whole series of space armaments.

These far-reaching plans of the United States, the Mongolia ambassador noted, are connected with a possible military application of reusable spacecrafts, which are being developed in the U.S. under the shuttle programme. According to press reports, Pentagon's experts are elaborating projects of deploying military bases in outer space with the help of these vehicles, of placing in space anti-satellite mines and creating large space-borne systems of anti-rocket defence. Work is proceeding on the study of the feasibility of using shuttles as carriers of various weapons. There are also other major projects for militarisation of outer space, pertaining to the use of the shuttles. As Major General G. Welch, assistant chief of state of the U.S. Air Force, stated recently, our activity is ebbing [as received] space and shuttle with its ability to lift heavier and more sophisticated cargo plays here the role of catalizator [as received].

What distinguishes new U.S. projects is that the shuttle is a basic element of these plans which enables the functioning of all devices now under elaboration. These devises include laser weapons based on powerful platforms and light weight instruments for short-term operations in outer space and in the atmosphere. One of the major programmes of paramount importance for the Pentagon is the development of laser weapons. They are designed to destroy ground- and sea-based, air- and space-borne targets. The work on creating such weapons is being carried out within the framework of the so-called triad of space-borne laser weapons, which according to the FOREIGN POLICY magazine, could lead to the emergence of a combat space system in the near future. Tests of the triad elements in outer space are scheduled for 1984-1985. The U.S. also reported on the creation of an anti-satellite system on the basis of a light weight interceptor. It is carried by a small missile launched from a F-15 fighter. The tests of the mini space interceptor are scheduled for early 1983 and it will be put into service in mid-80's.

But the United States is not only developing space armaments. The necessary conditions for their use are also being provided. As is known, since September 1, the near-earth space has become a Pentagon's new potential theatre of military actions. This day a special space command under the U.S. Air Force is to enter into force. The chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force was quoted by the Western press as saying in this connection, that "researches in the field of space armaments will make it possible for us to start soon military operations in outer space". The implementation of these plans and programmes might have a negative influence on the process of disarmament. Therefore, the task to prevent the arms race in outer space is urgent and vital, Ambassador Erdembileg stressed.

SPECIAL ENVOY KONG KORM VISITS SEYCHELLES

[Text] Phnom Penh, 9 Sep (SPK) -- Chairman Heng Samrin's special envoy Kong Korm, deputy minister of foreign affairs, arrived in Victoria, capital of the Republic of Seychelles, on 29 August. He was greeted at the airport by D. Bonlam, secretary general of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Seychelles.

During his stay, Kong Korm was received on 30 August by Jacques Hodoul minister of foreign affairs of the Seychelles. Kong Korm handed him a message from Chairman Heng Samrin informing him about the real situation since 7 January 1979, about the treason of Pol Pot, who seized power in 1975, and about the perfidious maneuvers of the enemies to create the so-called "tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea." Kong Korm affirmed that proposals of the sixth Indochinese countries' conference actively contribute to the strengthening of peace, friendship and cooperation of the countries in the region.

Jacques Hodoul stressed the unchanging position of the Seychelles Government and people in always supporting the peace initiatives of the Indochinese countries and condemned the creation of the so-called "tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea."

Visits Madagascar

BK100705 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0407 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Sep (SPK) -- During his mission to Africa, Kong Korm, Kampuchean deputy foreign minister and special envoy of Chairman Heng Samrin, visited the Democratic Republic of Madagascar.

Deputy Foreign Minsiter Kong Korm was cordially received by his Malagasy counterpart, Michel. On that occasion, special envoy Kong Korm hailed the successes achieved by the Malagasy under the correct leadership of President Didier Ratsiraka. The PRK Government wholeheartedly supports the initiatives advanced by the Malagasy Government to build the Indian Ocean into a region of peace, he affirmed. The Kampuchean diplomat expressed his gratitude to the Malagasy Government and people for their precious support to the Kampuchean Government and people.

The Malagasy deputy foreign minister hailed the great successes scored in all fields by the Kampuchean Government and people since the toppling of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal regime. He affirmed that Madagascar always stands at the side of the PRK in the struggle against the maneuvers and subversive activities of the U.S. imperialists in collusion with the international reactionaries against the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. He applauded the efforts and good will of the PRK in solving differences in this part of the world through negotiation.

The Malagasy diplomat declared complete support for the peace proposals put forward by the conference of Indochinese countries foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City. He strongly condemned the so-called "tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" which he considered as a maneuver of the imperialists and the expansionists aimed at destroying the cause of the PRK's reconstruction, peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

During his stay in Madagascar, special envoy Kong Korm also met many ministers and political and social personalities.

He was seen off on his departure on 3 September by Laurent Fradaddy, deputy chief of the president of the republic's office. The ambassadors of the USSR, Vietnam, Cuba and the GDR to Madagascar were also present.

SIHANOUK STOPS IN PARIS ON WAY TO UNGA SESSION

NC091412 Paris AFP IN English 1406 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 9 (AFP) -- Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk arrived here yesterday for a brief private visit to France.

Head of a newly-formed coalition opposed to the Vietnamese-backed government in Phnom Penh, Prince Sihanouk left Beijing Tuesday and will later fly to New York for the opening of the next United Nations General Assembly session on September 21. Following the UN session, where he will represent the coalition along with former premier Son Sann and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, Prince Sihanouk is expected to go to Washington for talks with U.S. officials.

VODK APPEALS FOR REVOLT AGAINST SRV 'AGGRESSORS'

BK100638 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Appeal to Khmer soldiers -- read by announcer]

[Text] To all brothers and sisters -- Khmer soldiers, militiamen and civil servants -- who were forced by the Vietnamese enemy to serve them:

In 1979, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors shouted loudly and thought that they could completely exterminate our Kampuchean race. But, during the past four dry seasons and rainy seasons, they graoned like rats suffering from fever. Their situation of defeat darkly covers their army and made their soldiers permanently worried. In every passing day many of their soldiers are killed. Many others are injured and disabled. They also suffer from malaria. They lack food, medicine and clothes. They are homesick and worried about their parents and families who are suffering in their country. But, in particular, they do not have any hope of winning their war of aggression in Kampuchea. They are all worried about their death in the future. Many of them deserted. In sum, the situation of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors' troops is deteriorating in all fields. Their manpower has declined. Their physical force and morale are low. The Le Duan Vietnamese group is stubborn, so it drafts the people and youths from its country and sends them to serve in the war of aggression in Kampuchea, but many of them are killed as if they were thrown into a deep crevasse.

Because of a lack of manpower, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors have ordered their troops to surround our brothers and sisters' villages, to arrest and forcefully draft you. They forced you to serve them, to fight and die for them at the frontline or to guard and patrol their supply lines, positions and barracks. Concurrently, they have committed great crimes and inflicted enormous suffering on our people, some of whom were your parents, families and relatives. You have seen with your own eyes how the Vietnamese enemy aggressors robbed and destroyed our people's belongings and foodstuffs, even fish paste filters. They barbarously raped our girls. They savagely tortured our people. They have committed genocide against our people with all their means -- with their weapons, famine and toxic chemical weapons.

Dear brothers and sisters -- Khmer soldiers, militiamen and civil servants -- please do not let the Vietnamese force you to serve them in killing our Kampuchean nation and race. Please do not serve the Vietnamese enemy aggressors as fighters, patrollers of roads and guards of their positions and barracks. Please revolt against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. Please use your guns to fire on them. Please burn down the Vietnamese ammunition dumps and food stores, and please join your Kampuchean nation and people. At least, would you please desert and return to your villages and earn your living as common people. In short, please firmly grasp our Democratic Kampuchean slogan: Khmers categorically do not serve the Vietnamese in killing their nation. Khmers categorically do not fight fellow Khmers. Khmers unite to fight the Vietnamese aggressors to liberate their beloved Kampuchean nation, fatherland and race.

PRK CULTURE MINISTER MEETS SISANA SISAN

BK100349 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 9 September, Sisana Sisan, minister of culture, received a delegation of the PRK Ministry of Culture and Information headed by its minister, Chheng Phon. The delegation is on a friendship visit to Laos at the invitation of the Culture Ministry.

On this occasion, Minister Sisana Sisan hailed the visit to Laos by the Kampuchean delegation. He said the visit will contribute to further strengthening the relations and special cooperation, especially in the cultural field, between Laos and Kampuchea. He also wished the Kampuchean delegation glorious success in its visit to Laos.

Minister Chheng Phon expressed thanks to Minister Sisana Sisan as well as to the Culture Ministry of Laos for the warm welcome accorded to him and his delegation. The guest and host conversed in an atmosphere of cordiality and close friendship.

The Kampuchean delegation arrived in Vientiane at noon. It was welcomed at the airport by Sisana Sisan together with Neou Samom and Nguyen Xuan, respectively ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the PRK and the SRV to Laos.

KAYSONE, SOUPHANOUVONG GREET DPRK NATIONAL DAY

BK100722 Vientiane Demestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Joint greetings message, dated 8 September, from Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, and Souphanouvong, president of state and chairman of the Supreme People's Council of the LPDR, to Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Korean Workers Party Central Committee and president, and Yi Chong-ok, premier of the DPRK]

[Text] On the occasion of the 34th founding of the DPRK, on behalf of the LPRP Central Committee, the LPDR Government, the Lao people and in our own names, we would like to convey our sincere congratulations and best wishes to you, comrades, and through you, to the Korean Workers Party, the DPRK Government and all Korean people.

Over the past 34 years, under the leadership of the KWP headed by Comrade Kim Il-song and with the support and assistance from various fraternal socialist countries, the Korean people have defeated the aggressive war of the U.S. imperialists and their satellites, and have achieved glorious success in building their country. As a result, the status of the DPRK has risen majestically in the international arena. In other fields, the KWP and the DPRK Government have taken the initiative in proposing various measures aimed at reducing the hostilities between the two Korean parts with a view to marching forward to a peaceful and independent achievement of national reunification.

The Lao people have firmly supported the Korean people's just struggle for peaceful and independent reunification of the nation without any interference from outside.

On this glorious occasion, we wish for the daily consolidation and development of the friendship and solidarity between the peoples of Laos and Korea in the interest of peace and socialism. We wish the fraternal Korean people new success in the cause of peaceful reunification of the Korean nation. We also wish the Korean people still greater success in the cause of building and maintaining socialism and in the implementation of the second 7-Year Plan of the DPRK.

BK100104 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 10 Sep 82

Prem Comments

BK100630 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] So far the motive of the party which detonated explosives near the Defense Ministry last night is still unknown. The interior minister said this morning that he does not believe the explosion was the work of the communist terrorists and he disagrees with the speculation that it is related to the upcoming appointment of a new army commander. However, he said the explosion is an act of terrorism committed by people who have ill intentions toward the country.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon, in his capacity as defense minister, said he regrets the incident. He condemns whomever is responsible as a coward. He said he cannot say now who is responsible.

The explosion damaged part of the Defense Ministry building as well as part of the adjacent Foreign Ministry building.

PLAN TO APPOINT SUPREME COMMANDER ANNOUNCED

[Text] From now on, the most senior of the commander-in-chief of the three armed forces will become supreme commander, Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani revealed yesterday. Gen Prayut said that this is part of the newly announced plan for the commanders-in-chief to be automatically appointed deputy supreme commanders.

The general, who was visiting the army welfare department at Bang Pu, said that whoever becomes supreme commander will relinquish his position of deputy supreme commander and this position would be left vacant. He said that this would not set a precedent, pointing out that in the past Field Marshal Thanom Kittkhachon and Gen Soem na Nakhon both held the supreme commander and the army commander-in-chief positions at the same time. The present supreme commander, Gen Saiyut Koetphon, is due to retire next year, Gen Prayut said. He said that one disadvantage about the automatic appointments plan is that several generals in the three armed forces who were expecting to become deputy supreme commanders will be disappointed. Those that were formerly in line will lose out on the three positions that each carried a salary equivalent to that of a field marshal.

However, the government will now not have to pay 60,000 baht a month in salaries to the three deputy supreme commanders, since they will already be paid as commanders-in-chief, Gen Prayut noted. He said this is a sacrifice which those generals who were in line for the deputy supreme commander positions must make.

The main benefit of the plan is that it will improve coordination between the three armed forces and the Supreme Command. The positions of commander-in-chief and deputy supreme commander are interlinked, and the new scheme should improve military efficiency, Gen Prayut said.

He said the supreme commander's power would not really be increased by having the commanders-in-chief work directly under him, because the supreme commander already has power over the three armed forces. "It's not true that the army c-in-c is more powerful than the supreme commander. Look at me. I don't have any power. . . You people are not even afraid of me," he told reporters.

Deputy Defence Minister Phaniang Kantarat said that the three armed forces will have to come to an agreement over the deputy supreme commander positions as a result of the automatic appointments. Something will have to be worked out over the problem of the field marshal payscale that was previously offered to the deputy supreme commanders, he said. ACM Phaniang said that the ministry has already consulted Gen Saiyut on the issues involved and the matter now rests with the minister of defence, Gen Prem Tinsulanon. Asked if the plan was proposed because the supreme commander wants to have closer control over the three armed forces, ACM Phaniang admitted that this was probably true.

Neither Gen Prayut nor ACM Phaniang would comment, however, on the forthcoming military reshuffle or give any hint on whether Gen Pramot Tawonchan or Gen Athit Kamlangek would be appointed army commander-in-chief.

FOUNDING MEMBER OF CPT SURRENDERS IN BANGKOK

BANGKOK POST Report

[Text] One of the founding members and a member acting secretary-general of the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand (CPT), Udom Sisuwan, and his wife, Comrade Maitri, surrendered to government authorities in Bangkok on Monday. It is also believed that another 12 CPT members, all of whom are relatives or friends of Udom, planned to surrender soon. They are said to include CPT spokesman Pluang Wannasi.

Udom, 62, also known under aliases of Uncle Som and Comrades Su (fight) and Saha, is the highest-ranking CPT member ever to surrender to the government. He is a member of the CPT's seven-man Politburo, one of the 18 members of its Central Committee, and chairman of the Committee for Coordinating Patriotic and Democratic Forces.

Pol Maj-Gen Ari Karibut, deputy commissioner of Central Investigation Bureau, said yesterday that he had received a telephone call at his home last Saturday from a woman who identified herself as Udom's wife. He said that the woman, who told him that her husband wanted to surrender unconditionally, later came to his house and took him to see Udom at a hideout in Bangkok.

The deputy commissioner quoted Udom as saying that he was satisfied with announcement No 66/2523 of the government and hoped that he would be treated fairly by government officials. He said Udom had complained of failing health and of the rift within the CPT. He said that he expected more communists to give themselves up to the government following Udom's surrender.

Udom and his wife, Comrade Maitri, were sent to the Bangkok interrogation centre on Monday to be questioned by its chief, Pol Col Kasem Saengmit. Pol Maj-Gen Ari said that Udom and his wife would not be detained because there were no criminal charges pending against them. "We will question them only when necessary and they can go to the centre (interrogation centre) anytime they wish," he said.

Udom and a number of communist suspects, including Pluang Wannasi, were arrested and detained without trial by the late Field Marshal Aarit Thanarat in a purge of communist elements in 1958. Udom was released in 1965 and fled with his close friend Chit Phumisak to the densely-jungled Phuphan ranges in the northeast.

Udom, who was born in northern Lampang Province, was among the first group of Thai communists to attend the Marxist-Leninist Institute in Moscow. He is the only member of the Politburo who can speak Russian fluently. He was elevated to the Politburo in 1976, replacing Phin Bua-on, who was apprehended in Bangkok several years ago. He was named acting secretary-general of the CPT when the post's previous holder, Charoen Wangam, died in Beijing two years ago.

Udom, who was in charge of CPT front affairs, was one of three nominated for the post of secretary-general at a regional meeting in April this year which the party described as its fourth congress. The other two were party ideologue Prasit Taphianthong and Thong Chaemsi, who is in charge of military affairs. Udom is thought to have become disgruntled when Prasit was elected to the post.

Commenting on Udoh's surrender, Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot said that he didn't believe a top-ranking communist such as Udom was sincere in giving himself up to authorities. Gen Sitthi said that he still mistrusted Udom and several others who had defected before him. He said that the claims of starvation and a hard life in the jungle which ranking communists gave as the reason for their defection were neither logical nor believable.

"I used to work in anticommunist affairs and, therefore, have enough experience..." he added.

Hailing the surrender as a sign of the extent of the rift within the CPT, Army Commander-in-chief Gen Prayut Charumani said he believed Udom was upset after he was not elected party secretary-general because of his pro-Hanoi line, which is opposed by the predominately pro-Beijing faction within the executive. He also described the CPT's claim to have held its fourth congress this year as propaganda designed to bolster the sagging morale of members.

Meanwhile, Thoetphum Chaidi, a former labour leader and a CPT defector, said he suspected Udom might not have relinquished his Marxist ideology, and may try to prove to the party that he could perform his "front" affairs more efficiently in Bangkok. Thoetphum said Udom's surrender was clear indication of a rift between Udom and the other Politburo members, particularly Prasit.

Another Politburo member, Damri Ruangsutham, was arrested by Fourth Army Region troops in Ban Na San District, Surat Thani Province, in April last year and is awaiting trial.

NATION REVIEW Report

BK080505 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 8 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] In a way, the defection of Udom Sisuwan from the trouble-plagued Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) marks another major turn in the power struggle within the CPT leadership.

The Maoist wing, led by party strongman Wirat Angkhathawon, has further consolidated its power and might have even emerged the most powerful force in the outlawed party. If the intelligence reports suggesting that another Politburo member, Prasit Taphianthong, was elected by the recent CPT Fourth Congress, were correct, then undoubtedly Wirat has successfully taken control of the outlawed party.

Udom and Prasit, believed to have been backed by Wirat, were reportedly two major candidates vying for the post of party secretary general before the fourth congress, according to authoritative sources. Udom, who was elected a Politburo member, did not confirm to government authorities that he had decided to surrender because he was not given the party's top post, but officials believed his disappointment might be part of the motivation, considering the earlier intelligence reports that Udom himself was fighting hard to take over the party's top post.

Anyway, the fact that Udom has declared himself the advocate of a new line of thinking in the party (which was obviously defeated in the party congress) indicated that the pro-Beijing faction has at least fundamentally succeeded in maintaining its influence over the party platform.

Authoritative sources have told the NATION that Prasit might have been elected to the party's top post because of his tilt towards Wirat's faction recently. Prasit had originally belonged to a faction which grouped late party Secretary General Charoen Wangam and another Politburo member, Thong Chaemsi, who have been trying to keep a distance from the Chinese influence in the outlawed party. "But since Charoen died of a liver disease a few years back, Prasit was prompted to adjust his stance to strike a compromise with Wirat's faction. This is necessary for him to remain in power," a usually reliable source told the NATION.

Meanwhile, Thong was reportedly under heavy pressure from the pro-Chinese factions in the party because of his Vietnamese origin. He recently was said to have confided to his close aides that he would like to quit the party. Both civilian and military intelligence sources have said that Udom had tried to keep alive the "united front to coordinate the patriotic and democratic forces" of which he was chairman to help him achieve his goal. "This is an indication of his zeal to get the party's seniormost position. You know, the united front has virtually been rendered defunct, as most members have defected to the government," a source said.

He said that Udom was not elected to the party's top post partly because of the lurking skepticism among the rank and file within the party over his loyalty to the party. Udom was once arrested in the Sarit administration and during his detention at the Latyao detention centre, he had developed friendly relations with senior police officers of the Special Branch Division. Among them is former Special Branch Division Commander Pol Maj Gen Ari Karibut, to whom he surrendered on Monday. According to some intelligence reports, some of his opponents even charged him with being a "fifth-column" for the government.

Apart from Wirat's faction and the grouping led by Udom, there is also another pro-Chinese faction, led by former Politburo member Damri Ruangsutham. The group has been dubbed "Deng-ist group," after Deng Xiaoping. Damri and Wirat have been engaged in bitter conflicts in the past years. The controversy could be traced back to 1965, when the CPT moved the Voice of the People of Thailand (VOPT) clandestine radio station from Vietnam to southern China in Kunming. Wirat then managed to replace Atsani Phonlachan, a member on the party Central Committee attached to Damri's faction, with his follower, Sak Suphakasem, as head of the radio station, official sources said.

A source quoted an intelligence report as showing that Sak then castigated Atsani for adhering to the "feudalist style" of working. Sak also removed Suchin Akkharasamit, who is Atsani's follower, from the clandestine radio station, when he took over his new post.

The rift between Damri and Wirat, however, appeared to reach a peak in late 1970, when Damri launched a campaign against Wirat, criticizing his opponent for failing to pay adequate attention to the strengthening of party strongholds. The source, citing an intelligence report, said that at one time during the nine-month ideological debate, Wirat charged Damri with "revisionism". Both Wirat and Damri have their proteges in important slots in the party organization and it was not until the downfall of the "gang of four" in China that the balance of power between the two powerful factions tended to change in favour of the Dengist group, the source said.

"Damri should have been elected the new party secretary general, if he had not been arrested in April 1981," the source commented.

Damri's arrest had the effect of reversing the trend and helping Wirat remain as powerful as ever, if not leader of the most powerful faction in the pro-Chinese party. His arrest, the election of Prasit to the party top post, and the defection of Udom from the party thus indicated that the Maoist faction has finally emerged the most powerful and dominant force in the Thai Communist Party.

On the other hand, Udom's surrender to the government also confirmed the official analysis that the pro-Chinese line of thinking still plays the dominant part in the struggle of the party for control of the country.

Udom told officials after his surrender that he decided to defect because of his disillusionment with the pro-Chinese influence over the party. He was also quoted as saying that he was upset over the pro-Chinese "diehards" in the party leadership who refused to shift the party platform to a more nationalistic direction. "For one thing, Udom has not undergone education at the Marx-Lenin Institute in Beijing, the same way most of the other CPT leaders had. And this might be why he does not blindly adhere to the Chinese line," an authoritative source told the NATION yesterday.

The surrender of Udom, the seniormost CPT member ever to have defected to the government, also reaffirmed official belief about the serious ideological cracks within the party and suggests that more senior CPT members may follow in his footsteps in the foreseeable future.

Documents released by CPT after the fourth party congress have shown that the party would still place emphasis on its armed struggle based in the rural areas in line with the Maoist strategy of using the rural areas to gradually "strangle" the urban areas, despite growing pressure from the nationalistic and pro-Vietnam elements for a shift of importance to the struggle in the urban areas. The documents also show that the party still adheres to the traditional analysis that Thailand is a "semi-colonial, semi-feudal" society vis-a-vis the new line of thinking which says that the "capitalist conditions" have already prevailed in the country.

Footnote: The balance of power within the CPT leadership might have to be re-assessed if new intelligence reports that "party Secretary General Pracha Thanyaphaibun" is not Prasit, but Thong, proved to be true.

A highly authoritative source told the NATION yesterday that officials now tend to believe the new intelligence reports. "I am 80 percent confident that the party secretary general is Thong," he added. He said that although Thong does not carry much influence in the organization, he was probably the most respected person among the rank and file in the outlawed party. "This might be the reason why he was elected to the party top post," said the source, who added that Wirat and his followers have been much abhorred by party members for his nepotism.

[Editorial: "Udom's Defection: Who Now Controls CPT Hierarchy?"]

[Text] Udom Sisuwan is a symbol. Udom Sisuwan was a man who rose high in the hierarchy of the Communist Party of Thailand. Udom Sisuwan was 24 years in the jungle, except for the periods he was in China for brief periods. Udom Sisuwan surrendered to the Thai authorities unconditionally. Does all that make sense? Taken together, the life of a man for 24 years -- the prime between the ages of 38 and 62 -- are the most productive, be he a dockworker or a cabinet minister. Why did Udom do what he did?

We do not have the answer, and we doubt very much that Udom has the answer. We have, unfortunately, more questions. Did something happen to him that soured him against the Pibulsonggram regime, during which his intellect started working the wrong way, so much so that he was quickly under detention when Sarit Thanarat snatched the reins of power? Or was it that Udom had a puerile intellect that told him that communism was the panacea for Thailand? We are not interested in how high he worked himself up in the CPT hierarchy, but we are really interested in what goes on in the mind of people who arrogate to themselves the right to find solutions for all problems.

In one of our rare statements we agree with Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot that Udom did not defect because of bad food and hard life in the jungle -- if he had stood it for 24 years he certainly can stand it as a top-ranking member of the CPT even if he is a sexagenarian. But unfortunately, Sitthi, as usual, came up with the non sequitur so typical of him -- that Udom thought that he could be more useful to the CPT by surrendering to the police than otherwise. For goodness' sake -- didn't Sitthi think that being underground in Bangkok and laying the foundation of urban terrorism would have served the cause of the CPT better?

Udom's surrender, logically, relates to statements made by two persons who cannot be more dissimilar in their outlook -- National Security Council Secretary General Prasong Sunsiri and Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach. The one thing they are agreed on is that there is a split right now within the CPT as to whether the Chinese or Vietnamese are controlling them. Thach actually threatened Thailand while he was in Singapore that Hanoi would become more active in the CPT if Thailand did not show any "positive reaction." No better proof is necessary than the helicopter incident about which Thailand complained to the United Nations.

The obvious conclusion, definitely illusory, is that Thailand can sit back and wait for the leadership "battle royal" between China and Vietnam for the control of the CPT, but such a lackadaisical attitude must not lull the attitude of the government, more especially the internal security operations command (ISOC). Udom was a top man in the CPT and he is a victim of the Sino-Vietnamese rivalry for the control of the CPT. His defection should be taken very seriously, whether he is still a communist or not. There is no question that during the days of Udom's CPT activities he was pro-Chinese.

Does his defection mean that the Vietnamese are gaining the upper hand in the CPT? Let us not forget the words of Deng Xiaoping (we do not know what designation to use for him) when he was in Thailand: The Chinese Communist Party supports the CPT while the Chinese Government supports the Thai Government. That is a statement, openly made, which we thought we could live with, but if the Chinese are losing their grip over the CPT, a logical conclusion to be derived from Udom's defection, then ISOC has a real headache.

PRAYUT COMMENTS ON ARMY POSTS, UDOM SURRENDER

BK080725 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Speaking to newsmen yesterday, Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani said the planned appointment of commanders of the armed forces to become concurrently deputy supreme commanders would enhance coordination between the supreme commander and the commanders of the armed forces.

It would also save money from the national budget because the payscale for three field marshal posts would be eliminated. Prayut expressed the belief that the new appointment system will be followed in the coming years. He also expressed the hope that from now on the most senior and suitable commander from one of the three armed forces would be appointed supreme commander.

Asked about the surrender of a leading member of the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT], General Prayut said Udom Sisuwan contacted the 2d Army Region some time ago to convey his intention to surrender, possibly due to conflicts within the party. He said that so far he had received no report to confirm that Udom Sisuwan had surrendered. He said it would be good news if Udom had surrendered.

Prayut said the Fourth Congress of the CPT was different from previous congresses in that it took over a month to complete and it was held in separate places. The usual practice was for the congress to be held in a single place. The new practice could have irritated Udom Sisuwan.

Asked if the successful suppression of the communist terrorists in the hills would force them to move into the urban areas or on the plains, Prayut said it would not be easy for the communist terrorists to do so because it would require prior preparations. In any event, some of them would be able to infiltrate into the urban or plains areas but the authorities would be able to verify their presence. Prayut said most of the communist terrorists have lost confidence in their colleagues due to widespread distrust among them.

INTERIOR MINISTER COMMENTS ON COMMUNIST DEFECTORS

BK100650 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot says that defected members of the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand will be closely watched and help will be given to those who really want to reform. General Sitthi says that the number of defections of high-ranking members of the outlawed communist party has been extraordinarily high during the past months. He says that the reason for the marked increase of the defectors is the effects of the government's order No 65/25 which persuades the communists to lay down their arms and participate in the country's democratic system.

This minister adds that requests for protection by some of the defectors will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Those who have committed criminal offenses will be dealt with in the court of law.

HILLTRIBE INSURGENTS SURRENDER TO AUTHORITIES

BK090738 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] A total of 82 hilltribe insurgents surrendered to Thai authorities on Monday. About 7,500 hilltribe people, including women and children, have left the jungles in the northern provinces of Phetchabun, Loei and Phitsanulok and come over to the government side.

Thai Army Commander in Chief Gen Prayut Charumani earlier said that the high defection rate was the indicator of victory for the government. In a major suppression earlier this year, government forces crushed most of the insurgent strongholds, obstructing the insurgents' bid to secure a corridor to the northeast. In May alone the government forces seized two bases, killing 12 insurgents and wounding 16 others.

VNA REJECTS THAI ALLEGATION ON FORCE BUILDUP

OW091534 Hanoi VNA in English 1525 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Sept 9 -- Japanese KYODO news service on September 7 quoted Thai military sources as saying that Vietnam had increased its forces in Kampuchea and was massing troops along the Thai-Kampuchean border for an attack after the rainy season.

VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to reject this fabrication. Similar allegations have often been made in an attempt to discredit Vietnam which, out of good will, has withdrawn part of its armed forces from Kampuchea, to serve the purpose of Beijing expansionism and hegemony to perpetuate tension and confrontation among Southeast Asian countries, thereby undermining peace and stability (?in the region).

CPC CONGRESS SAID TO REAFFIRM PRO-U.S. POLICY

BK091359 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] At the current 12th Congress of the CPC, Hu Yaobang said that China is siding with the Third World countries in the struggle against imperialism, hegemonism and colonialism, a lofty internationalist duty. But, in fact, who are the friends and foes of the Chinese authorities?

The 12th party congress has been held in Beijing with the participation of nearly 1,600 delegates. No foreign guest except former U.S. President Nixon was invited to attend. Busy as they were, China's top leaders -- Deng Xiaoping, Hu Yaobang and Zhao Ziyang -- took spare time to hold talks with Nixon on the need to strengthen Sino-U.S. relations against the Soviet Union and the world revolution.

Before the opening of the congress, Washington and Beijing at the same time made public a joint communique on the U.S. reduction of its arms sales to Taiwan. In fact, this agreement is nothing new because the United States continues to sell weapons to Taiwan. This agreement is a political investment Reagan supplied in time to Deng Xiaoping for his preparation of this congress.

Deng's closest international friend is the United States, who does not need to be worried about Hu Yaobang's statement, because at this congress the close, pro-U.S. policy is reaffirmed.

UNDERSTANDING, STUDYING CONGRESS DOCUMENTS URGED

BK081448 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Jul 82 pp 1-4

[Editorial: "Carry Out Well the Political Activities on the Resolutions of the Fifth Party Congress" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] The Fifth VCP National Congress has reviewed the actual situation of our nation's revolution and set forth strategic tasks for the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage. The congress has determined tasks, orientations and targets, especially economic and social targets for the period 1981-85 and the 1980's. The congress has adopted policies and measures aimed at bolstering the party's fighting strength, the state's management capability and the workers' role in collective mastery. The congress documents are of great theoretical and practical significance and illuminate the way for the entire party, people and armed forces to score new achievements in the cause of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland.

Organizing discussion of the party documents for the entire party to grasp and implement the VCP congress resolutions is a very important task. The political report of the VCP Central Committee at the congress states: "After the Fifth VCP Congress A POLITICAL EDUCATION DRIVE will be carried out profoundly throughout the party using the discussion of the party congress resolutions as a means of educating party cadres and members on the party's line and policy. Serious criticism and self-criticism will also be conducted to criticize erroneous thoughts and enhance the revolutionary impetus and sense of responsibility of the VCP members in the new situation and task." (Footnote: political report at the Fifth VCP Congress, TAP CHI CONG SAN, issue No 4, 1982, p 84).

Implementing the resolutions of the national party congress, the VCP Central Committee Secretariat has decided to CARRY OUT A POLITICAL ACTIVITY DRIVE WHICH IS AIMED AT ENABLING ALL PARTY CADRES AND MEMBERS TO UNDERSTAND PROFOUNDLY THE CONTENTS OF THE VARIOUS DOCUMENTS OF THE CONGRESS AND DISCUSS THE IMPLEMENTATION OF ITS RESOLUTIONS.

The VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and the Council of Ministers have further concretized the party national congress resolutions by implementing them in decisions of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and those of the Council of Ministers, especially decisions on urgent and immediate tasks. Tasks concerning the study and implementation of the Fifth VCP Congress resolutions must be associated with those concerning the study and implementation of the decisions of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and the Council of Ministers. This political activity drive is aimed at meeting the following REQUIREMENTS:

-- To enable the party cadres and members, particularly the leading and managerial cadres in various echelons and sectors, to formulate uniform views and reach high unanimity on the basic contents of the documents; to firmly grasp the spirit of the decisions of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and the Council of Ministers; and to criticize the erroneous views which run counter to the party's lines and policies.

-- On this basis, to review in depth the situation of the movement in localities, sectors and grassroots units and review the leadership activities of the party organizations in these places; to draw experience from the movement; and to strengthen solidarity and heighten the revolutionary offensive spirit, the sense of responsibility and work ability of party cadres and members.

-- To map out realistic programs of action for localities, sectors and grassroots units with effective measures for resolving urgent and immediate socioeconomic problems, successfully implementing the resolutions of the party congress and the decisions of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and the Council of Ministers and overcoming mistakes and shortcomings at all costs.

The study of the party documents during this political activity phase is not similar to the discussion of draft documents during the previous first-round congresses of party organizations at various levels. In these first-round congresses, party members and delegates discussed draft documents with a view to contributing ideas for the formulation of documents to be presented at the party's national congress. At that time, party members and delegates had the right to make suggestions or amendments to the contents of draft documents in accordance with their knowledge in order to contribute positively to the common tasks of the party. These draft documents, after being discussed, amended and unanimously passed by the party's national congress, have become congress resolutions. The party's national congress of delegates is its highest leading organ. Its resolutions must be thoroughly understood and seriously implemented by the entire party. Every party cadre and member must speak and act in accordance with the spirit of the resolutions of the congress. This question pertains to the party's organizational principle.

This political activity drive is aimed at enabling party cadres and members to hold uniform views and reach a high unanimity of views on the basic contents of the documents. Therefore, efforts must be made to understand the contents of the documents clearly and to discuss further the various problems which were not discussed extensively at the first-round congresses, as well as problems and views relating to the present urgent tasks. Meanwhile, it is necessary to criticize erroneous views which run counter to the party's lines and policies.

We must overcome the tendency to neglect the study of the congress documents and the argument that the contents of these documents were already discussed at the first-round congresses. This tendency is reflected clearly in the perfunctory study of party resolutions. The documents approved by the national party congress contain important changes and amendments to the drafts. Failure to understand the contents of these documents thoroughly will make it impossible for us to correctly organize their implementation.

During this current phase of political activity, discussion should be organized among party cadres and members so that they will firmly grasp the contents of the documents of the congress and its views concerning such matters as the party's lines, the assessment of the present revolutionary situation and the strategic tasks of the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage.

As for the party's lines, the views of the congress affirm that the general socialist revolutionary line and the line on building the socialist economy set forth by the Fifth VCP Congress are correct. To accelerate socialist construction in our country, party cadres and members and the people must continue to grasp and implement these lines correctly.

As for the assessment of the revolutionary situation, the views of the congress represent a unanimity of views on the victories and achievements which our people have scored over the past years, and on the present actual economic and social situation of our country and the objective and subjective causes of this situation as mentioned in the documents.

As for tasks, the views of the congress reflect a clear understanding of the present two strategic tasks -- successfully building socialism and firmly defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland. They display an understanding that building socialism is the primary task and an awareness of the unyielding struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism, the close association of these two strategic tasks, the initial stage of the period of transition to socialism in our country, the acuteness and complexity of the struggle between us and the enemy and the struggle between socialism and capitalism. They are in unanimity with the four objectives and major economic and social policies and measures -- especially the requirements of socialist industrialization and the question of advancing agriculture a step further toward large-scale production in the immediate future -- as well as with the main tasks of the 1981-85 5-year plan and other urgent economic tasks. They also reflect a firm grasp of the system of party leadership, people's mastery and state management -- a system which has been, significantly, further concretized in the documents of the party congress.

For more than half a century, our party cadres and members have maintained their fine tradition of achieving a high unanimity of views on matters concerning the party's lines and views on domestic and international affairs, and placed their firm confidence in the clear-sighted leadership of the party Central Committee.

However, aside from these basic strengths, a number of party cadres and members, due to their lack of correct and scientific thinking, their inadequate knowledge of the actual multifaceted situation or their wavering in the face of the present shortcomings, obstacles and difficulties, are entertaining views that are opposed to those of the party. Therefore, in this phase of political activity we must, through the study of the party congress documents, enable all party cadres and members to enhance their views, overcome erroneous thoughts and have a high unanimity of views on the basic contents of the documents.

First of all, it is necessary to overcome vague thoughts about the acuteness and complexity of the struggle between us and the enemy and the current struggle between the socialist and capitalist paths in our country.

It is necessary to eliminate the method of perceiving things onesidedly, subjectively and unscientifically, and not from a historical viewpoint. For example, some people see only military, political and diplomatic victories, while underestimating and even denying the economic and cultural achievements which our people have scored in their arduous struggle. They have failed to understand the necessary cause and effect relationship between these victories and achievements or have emphasized only mistakes and shortcomings in leadership and supervision while failing to properly evaluate the objective difficulties in analyzing the cause of the situation.

Localities and establishments are currently preparing for the second-round congresses of party organizations at various levels. This political activity phase must contribute positively to these preparations. On the basis of enhancing the understanding of the contents of the party congress documents and the spirit of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau's decisions, party cadres and members must contribute their sound ideas to the work review reports and draft programs of action of their party committees and sectors, using them as a basis for preparing reports to be presented at the second-round congresses of party organizations.

In implementing the party congress resolutions, various party committee echelons must not only grasp the spirit of these resolutions, but must also correctly evaluate the actual situation of various aspects of their sectors, localities and units. They must extensively review strengths and weaknesses in their leadership and supervision over the implementation of the party's lines and resolutions in the past months. On this basis, they must positively and steadily formulate programs of action in order to, first of all, fulfill the 1982 state plan satisfactorily.

To implement the resolutions of the party congress, there must be a marked improvement in the qualities and capabilities of party cadres and members. Only when they strive to enhance their qualities and abilities and are determined to overcome their shortcomings and weaknesses will they be able to contribute positively to the implementation of the resolutions of the party, their sectors, their localities and their units. This political activity phase, in association with the review of the distribution of party membership cards, must be instrumental in improving the party cadres' and members' qualities and abilities.

In this political activity phase, all party cadres and members must use resolutions of the party congress as a guide for scrupulously reviewing their tasks over the past 5 years and carry out serious self-criticism in order to improve their revolutionary qualities and work abilities. The review of past tasks must be centered on -- as specified in a directive of the party Central Committee Secretariat -- awareness of current events and the party's lines and policies; the implementation of major tasks over the past 5 years; and the improvement of revolutionary qualities according to the requirements specified in the party political report. On the one hand, each party cadre and member must think and prepare carefully for the serious and realistic review of their tasks according to these requirements; in particular, leading and managerial cadres must set an example in this matter. On the other hand, party organizations must make party cadres and members aware of their mistakes and shortcomings and help them to have correct views and the determination to strive to meet the requirements of the revolutionary tasks in the new stage. In general, self-criticism and criticism by party cadres and members will be conducted in party chapters in close association with the review of the party membership card issuance and the holding of congresses of grassroots-level party organizations. The ideas, criticisms and remarks of the masses may be collected if they are needed. As for cadres involved in the preparations for the second-round congresses of all-level party organizations, they must carry out self-criticism under the supervision of party committee echelons.

The resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress are the light to illuminate the way for the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage. To turn these resolutions into reality, party cadres and members must firmly grasp the basic contents of these resolutions. The current political activity phase is aimed at helping the entire party to understand thoroughly the contents of the documents of the congress and discuss their implementation. It is of great significance in that it contributes to strengthening the solidarity and single-mindedness within the party on the basis of the party's revolutionary lines and views. In association with party membership card issuance and the holding of the second-round congresses of all-level party organizations, it helps to increase the party's fighting strength and create conditions for the party to fulfill its role as a vanguard party of the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage. All party committee echelons and party cadres and members must be fully aware of the significance of this political activity phase and strive to make it a splendid success.

VCP CONDOLENCES, TRIBUTE ON DEATH OF GOMULKA

Condolence Message Sent

OW061824 Hanoi VNA in English 1515 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 6 -- The Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee today sent the following message of condolences to the Polish United Workers Party:

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam is deeply shocked at the news of the death of Comrade Wladyslaw Gomulka, former first secretary of the Polish United Workers Party Central Committee, a well-known activist of Poland and of the international communists and workers movement. Comrade W. Gomulka made great contributions to the founding of the Polish Workers Party and the Polish United Workers Party, to socialist construction in Poland, as well as to the development and consolidation of the friendship and militant solidarity between Poland and Vietnam. "We extend our heartfelt condolences to you and the bereaved family."

CHAZALI, FRASER DISCUSS KAMPUCHEAN PROBLEM

BK070259 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1110 GMT 6 Sep 82

[From the "Australian Insight" program]

[Text] Malaysia's Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie has made a surprise, unofficial visit to Canberra for talks with Australia's prime minister, Mr Fraser, and the foreign minister, Mr Street. Political correspondent (John Lombard) reports from Canberra:

[Begin recording] Although no announcement had been made by the Australian Government and the Malaysian High Commission in Canberra -- it was unaware of it -- officials confirmed that the three men had lunch at Mr Fraser's official residence in Canberra. Mr Street also had separate talks with his Malaysian counterpart, who has been in Australia on a private visit.

The discussions fulfilled an undertaking given by Mr Fraser during his trip to Kuala Lumpur last month. Then, Mr Fraser promised to brief the Malaysian Government on talks he was to have with the Chinese Government in Beijing -- the next stop on his Asian tour. When Mr Fraser heard at the weekend that Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie was making a private visit to Australia, he arranged for the Malaysian foreign minister to fly down to Canberra from Sydney.

I understand that prominent in the discussion was the issue of the new coalition that has been formed in Kampuchea. In June, the leaders of the three anti-Vietnamese Khmer factions signed the declaration setting up the new coalition. This was welcomed by the states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- ASEAN -- and China. Vietnam was predictably critical and claimed the coalition was an attempt to put a new face on the Khmer Rouge, who have been accused of committing genocide in Cambodia.

The issue of the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations will come later this month at the General Assembly meeting in New York, and sources told me that the Australian cabinet is to decide its decision in the next few weeks. Despite opposition from ASEAN, Australia abstained for the first time when the credentials question came up in the world body last year.

I understand that Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie was particularly interested in what Mr Fraser could tell him of China's view on the Kampuchean coalition, and a source told me that the Malaysian minister did not put any pressure on Mr Fraser or Mr Street to change the Australian vote at the United Nations.

The talks over lunch were described as very friendly and was said to be a good indication of the close relationship that has been built up between the two governments. [end recording]

VISA BAN ON SOVIET SCIENTISTS BEING REVIEWED

BK081021 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Australia is considering modifying its policy of not granting entry visas to top Soviet scientists. The minister for foreign affairs, Mr Street, told a meeting of the joint government parties today that the policy adopted in protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was more severe than that of other countries including the United States. Mr Street said Australia was considering bringing its policy into line with other countries.

The statement followed Australia's refusal some weeks ago to allow two Soviet scientists to visit Perth for an international conference of biochemists.

MIGRATION MINISTER DISCUSSES AGREEMENT WITH SRV

BK100119 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1110 GMT 9 Sep 82

[From the "Australian Insight" program]

[Text] After 4 years of negotiations, the Australian Government has reached an agreement with Vietnam's government which will permit Vietnamese migrants to come to Australia. (John Lombard) reports from Canberra:

[Begin recording] Since the fall of Saigon, now known as Ho Chi Minh City, in April 1975, Australia has accepted more than 52,000 Indochinese refugees, most of them Vietnamese. About 2,000 of them fought pirates and stormy seas to arrive off the Australian coast in boats, and the rest were accepted by Australia from various refugee camps in Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand. But for the last 4 years, the Australian Government has been trying to deal directly with the Vietnam Government in Hanoi over about 6,000 people who have been sponsored by Vietnamese who have already arrived in Australia. Most of them are close family, but there has been a reluctance from the part of the Hanoi government to allow them to leave.

There have also been difficulties, according to sources here, in getting access to Vietnamese officials. In fact, it is only relatively recently that the Vietnam Government has allowed Australian immigration and health officials into the country to carry out essential medical checks on the prospective migrants. However, the way now seems to be clear for the first group of about 450 Vietnamese migrants to come to Australia. Australian officials are now in Ho Chi Minh City processing the applications. They'll probably be flown out either directly to Australia or via Bangkok, although negotiations are continuing on that score. I spoke to the minister for immigration, John Hodges, and asked him about the progress being made on the processing of the migrants:

[Hodges] Well, I am very pleased to report that the orderly departure of people from Vietnam is about to take place. It has taken now 4 years for my department to reach agreement with the Vietnamese authorities on this subject. Lists have been agreed to, and currently -- indeed this week, I understand -- processing of the first 450 people of a total of about 6,000 has actually commenced. So, I am confident that in 2 or 3 months time we will probably see first arrivals in Australia.

[Question] Are you hopeful that all of the 6,000 will eventually be able to come to Australia?

[Answer] Yes, I am. There are some very touching cases here, of course. You have children who have made it to Australia... I have got one particular case referred to me where two young children about 4 years ago came to Australia. Their father drowned on the boat coming across to Malaysia and their mother, they have discovered, is back in Vietnam. So, hopefully, we can get some priority to cases of that nature. Yes, I am hopeful that the 6,000 will be able to come.

[Question] What are the problems that you mention of negotiating with the Vietnamese?

[Answer] Well, there have been protracted negotiations and it has just been a case of reaching agreement with the Vietnamese authorities. We have been prepared to put officers in there now for many years and have only just recently achieved that result. We've got officers in there, the normal health checks are taking place, I understand, using Vietnamese doctors. And so the process is really rolling.

[Question] Now, these people, most of them would have come, presumably, from the south of the country?

[Answer] Yes, it is my understanding that the majority of them have, and they will be primarily, I understand, from Ho Chi Minh City. [end recording]

HAYDEN CHALLENGES FRASER TO HOLD EARLY ELECTION

BK091104 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The prime minister, Mr Fraser, says the government is considering as a matter of urgency whether to extend the powers of the royal commission into the ship painters and dockers union. In documents tabled in Parliament earlier this week, the commissioner, Frank Costigan, called for powers to issue search warrants and writs that would legally compel people to appear before the commission. Meanwhile, legislation enabling the government to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate tax evasion schemes has been passed in the House of Representatives. The schemes were revealed in an interim report by Mr Costigan.

The federal opposition leader, Mr Hayden, has challenged Mr Fraser to call an early election over the issue of tax avoidance. Mr Hayden said the Australian people should be able to decide on, what he termed, this national scandal. He said tax evasion on a huge scale had become a way of life with Liberal Party members and supporters. However, Mr Fraser and Mr Hayden's call for an early election showed how inconsistent the opposition leader could be.

WEST SAMOAN CITIZENSHIP ACCORD -- The New Zealand and Western Samoan Governments have signed an agreement which deprives nearly 100,000 Western Samoans of the right to automatic New Zealand citizenship. The agreement is a special addition to the bilateral friendship treaty signed by the two governments in 1962. It overturns a recent Privy Council ruling which said most Samoans were New Zealand citizens, whether they were living in New Zealand or Western Samoa. Under the annex to the treaty, which was signed in the Western Samoan capital of Apia, only Samoans now living in New Zealand are granted automatic right to New Zealand citizenship. Included are more than 20,000 people, among whom are several thousand overstayers -- islanders staying illegally in New Zealand after the expiry of their temporary entry permits. Only 1100 Western Samoans a year from the island will be allowed to seek permanent residence in New Zealand. The ruling had caused concern in Canberra. As there are no restrictions on New Zealanders migrating to Australia, it was feared federal immigration targets could be severely affected by an influx of Western Samoans. PLO OFFICIAL DISCUSSES PLANS FOR 'ARAFAT VISIT

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, Sep. 6 (AFP) -- Palestine Liberation Organisation Chairman Yasir 'Arafat plans to visit Malaysia as part of a wider regional tour, the PLO representative here, Ahmad al-Farra, said today. Mr. al-Farra said Mr. 'Arafat wished to personally thank Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed for Malaysia's support of the Palestinian cause. The PLO representative was speaking to reporters after calling on the parliamentary secretary to the Foreign Ministry, Abdul Kadir Sheikh Fadzir, at the Foreign Ministry here.

Mr. 'Arafat, he said, wished to visit several countries in the region and wanted to start with Malaysia. However, no date had yet been set for the visit as Mr. al-Farra was still making the arrangements. Mr. al-Farra noted that Malaysia was the first Asian non-Arab country to grant Al-Fatah (the largest Palestinian group within the PLO) an office in Kuala Lumpur as early as June 1969.

The Al-Fatah office was elevated to the office of the PLO in 1974.

LEE KUAN YEW JAKARTA PRESS CONFERENCE REPORTED

BK091523 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Singapore has reached agreement in principle with Indonesia on the purchase of Indonesian liquefied natural and petroleum gas, LNG and LPG, for Singapore's power stations. Mr Lee Kuan Yew told a news conference in Jakarta today that he had raised with President Suharto certain specific areas of interest. One is the possibility of a pipeline from the Natunas to Batam, from where Singapore can tap the gas. Singapore expressed a willingness to enter into a firm commitment provided a pipeline is laid to Batam and Singapore will make the connection from Batam to Singapore.

Another possibility is a second source from the Conoco gas field about 400 kilometers northeast of Singapore. The size of this field has not been determined but if it is found sufficiently large to justify an investment of a pipeline, again this can be done through Batam down to Singapore.

The third possibility is a purchase of LPG from the Arjuna field about 600 kilometers southeast of Singapore. In this case, however, a Japanese firm, called C. Itoh, will be involved. This is because Singapore will not be able to use all the fractions in the LPG. It will only use the heavier fractions. The proposal will be subject to negotiation between C. Itoh and Pertamina.

The prime minister and President Suharto also discussed the joint promotion of tourist projects and the development of Batam. On tourism, Mr Lee said Singapore now has four times the number of tourists that Indonesia has. There is a mutual advantage if we can make tourists come to Singapore in larger numbers, because from Singapore they can go on package tours to Yogyarkata, Borobudur, Bali or other Indonesian tourist destinations. The prime minister said he believed there is tremendous potential to be tapped.

Singapore, he pointed out, convinced the Malaysians that there was a potential to have a direct flight between Singapore and Penang and vice versa. The result has been a tourist boom in Penang.

On Batam, Mr Lee stressed that progress had been made. He said the Indonesian minister in charge of the Batam project, Dr Habibie, would be visiting Singapore later this year. He will meet members of the international chambers of commerce and industries and others who want to clarify certain issues.

The prime minister said he explained to Dr Habibie that the decision to invest in Batam was made by the industrialist, but Mr Lee stressed the Indonesian promoters must pick the kind of industries they want and interest the industrialist in them.

Asked to clarify cooperation between Singapore and Indonesia on defense, Mr Lee pointed out that there has been bilateral cooperation both in intelligence and security matters. There have been some joint naval and air exercises. At a later stage, the exercises will become trilateral and at least [as heard] quadrilateral. It is a matter which will have to evolve naturally. The idea will be multinational exercises and encompassing all members, so that there will be no misunderstanding as to the perception of the communist threat.

Mr Lee said he and President Suharto shared the same perception of the nature of the long-term threat to this region. They want no communist influence, aggression or subversion either from the Vietnamese, Chinese or communist [as heard] or any of these from a major power or a major power acting through a surrogate. Me Lee said we were doing well, and if they left us alone, we would do better still. Mr Lee said if they left our internal elements and dissidents alone instead of encouraging them, then we could all be friends.

Asked to explain his perception of the long-term threat from the Vietnamese, Mr Lee said he did not think the Vietnamese were by themselves a threat. To be a threat, they must have a military productive capacity. They only have fighting men and no industrial capacity. Their threat emerges from the supply of weaponry by the Soviets.

Mr Lee said the bone of contention between China and Vietnam and the Americans supporting China against Vietnam is not just over Kampuchea, it is the increasing Russian influence in Vietnam, particularly in Danang and Cam Ranh Bay. He pointed out that as long as there was Soviet presence and the danger of long-term increased capacity to use Vietnamese bases, Vietnam must expect the present situation to continue. The Americans will go on denying them economic aid and diplomatic recognition until they cut off their links with the Soviet Union.

On Kampuchea, Mr Lee said the tragedy of the whole conflict was that Kampuchea was really the side issue. The main issue was whether the Soviets will become a major power in the region because of Vietnam.

There will be a telecast of the prime minister's news conference after the 9:45 English news on TV.

The prime minister and Mrs Lee Kuan Yew are back in Singapore. On their departure from Jakarta, they were seen off at Halim airport by President Suharto and Mrs Suharto, Vice President Adam Malik and Mrs Malik and several senior cabinet ministers.

BULLETIN TODAY VIEWS PROBLEMS OF U.S.-RP RELATIONS

Part I -- U.S. Press Criticism

HK090144 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 8 Sep 82 pp 7, 12

[Article by correspondent Joe L. Magbanua: "Marcos To Come Face to Face With U.S. Criticism (first of a series)"]

[Text] An American news weekly once featured the Philippines in its cover story as the "Powder Keg in the Pacific." Filipinos who knew better just laughed off the canard as typical of the American press which, according to REUTERS NEWS AGENCY, "five out of six" Americans no longer believe in.

The "powder keg" that TIME reported would blow the Philippines sky-high must have been dud, as TIME itself usually is, because exactly three years to the month after that Sep 24, 1979, issue, the president of the much-maligned country in the Pacific, Ferdinand E. Marcos, will go on a state visit to the U.S.

The presence of the Filipino leader in Washington, D.C., (his first was in September 1966) should also blast the myth that TIME and its ilk had woven, about the state of his health. President Ronald Reagan invited President Marcos to his country while both were attending the summit conference at Cancun, Mexico, last year. While there, Marcos water-skied, to the consternation of the Western media; and he is, today, strong enough to go 15 rounds of boxing with his ill-wishers.

Thus, come September, the president will come face to face with his critics, the doubting Thomases, and of course, with those who had applauded him. For it is not correct to say that all Americans didn't like the president's resort to martial law "in order to save the republic and to reform society." It was precisely because Marcos had considerable U.S. approval for what he did, which approval rose to crescendo as martial law turned out to be good for the nation after all, that the U.S. Government agreed to play host to him for the second time.

And why not? Despite predictions among American cynics that martial law would turn out to be another Frankenstein that would destroy its creator, despite warnings that the Philippines would be another flashpoint in this part of the world and despite jeers from certain Filipino expatriates, this nation had not only survived manmade and natural disasters but had also emerged stronger from the martial law experience.

The Philippines, in its moment of crisis, did not involve U.S. forces in the solution of its domestic problems despite its being an ally, as evidenced by the three agreements between them: the mutual defense pact, the military assistance pact, and military bases agreement. In the Vietnam fiasco, some 50,000 Americans died; here, not a single American soldier was ever drawn to the secessionist "front." Filipinos fought their own battles alone against homegrown rebels and subversives, and against foreign-backed separatists in the south.

President Marcos goes to the United States not as a mendicant with palms outstretched praying for alms, nor as an errant prodigal son asking for forgiveness for past transgression, nor as a weak commander-in-chief asking to be bailed out of a military situation which has gone out of control. He goes as a leader of a nation which has undergone a transformation from one controlled by the oligarchy to a nation with new ideology -- the Filipino ideology.

Addressing the joint session of the U.S. Congress in 1966, the Philippine president warned Americans of the grand design of communism to create world hegemony, if not world domination. He reminded them that the communists eventually gobbled up the vast Chinese mainland by first winning the rural folks to their side. Once the rural areas fell, the cities also fell. From the standpoint of Red global strategy, the rural areas of the world are Asia, Latin America, and Africa, while the United States and Western Europe constitute the cities.

Thus, looking back and, at the same time, appraising contemporary events, observers would immediately notice that the communists had faithfully adhered to their battle plan. Their incursions in the Asian mainland, in South America, as well as in neighboring island countries, unerringly point to the rural-areas-first-and-then-the cities priority scheme to cover the world with their ideology. Filipinos do not have to look beyond their shores to be convinced of this scheme. In their bid to conquer the archipelago, the communists' thrust start in the rural areas.

Part II -- Anti-Marcos Drive

HK100133 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 9 Sep 82 p 7

[Article by correspondent Joe L. Magbanua: "'Demo' on FM State Visit in United States Collapses Even Before It Has Started (second of a series)'"]

[Text] There could have been no better timing of the second state visit of President Marcos to the United States than at this stage of RP-U.S. relations and in the context of the presidential image before the world.

The president and the first lady, Madam Imelda R. Marcos, minister of human settlements and governor of Metro Manila, had journeyed to the mainland China where they formalized relations between the two countries. They had also gone to Soviet Russia where they signed agreements on economic and cultural matters. Moreover, in that epochal sojourn to Saudi Arabia, they secured assurances that the Philippines would have continuous supply of much-needed oil, patronage of Filipino labor and increased trade relations.

China, Russia and Saudi Arabia -- relations between each of them are sufficient credentials for a country to be held in esteem in the family of nations. It is the triumphant aftermath of the first couple's historic journeys to these prominent states of the world that they go to the White House in Washington, D.C.

As he prepared his U.S. state visit, President Marcos has observed that every time the Islamic Conference board is about to commence, separatist remnants in the south would go on a binge of terroristic activities in order to impress the conference that they still constitute a force to reckon with and, therefore, deserve continued financial and military aid.

Similarly, Filipino "rebel" stragglers in the United States had bally-hooed in the Western press their projected "demo" timed for the president's arrival. This was obviously to drumbeat once more a self-serving fund drive, for their coffers are virtually empty after one-time contributors had turned their backs on them -- in disgust.

Where have all the collected funds all these years gone? What have the self-proclaimed "rebels" done that should merit the continued support of Filipino communities in the U.S.? These are among the queries that the "rebels" had not answered satisfactorily to this day. As a matter of fact, the demoralization that has been sweeping what remained of "rebel" ranks has been attributed to discoveries that supposed "common funds" went to the wrong pockets.

Equally furious over the fund anomalies are contributors who claimed: "We were gypped by our fellow countrymen in the name of national liberation." They were sweettalked into parting with their hard-earned money for "patriotic rallies and demonstrations" mostly by paid mask-wearing non-Filipino, for attending luncheon and dinner meetings at exorbitant administration prices, for financially supporting propaganda sheets and for other "logistical purposes."

Today, former contributors to the "rebel" cause know better. Thus, "rebel" stragglers have to invent new gimmicks which they think would be free from suspicion from members of the Filipino communities across the vast American Continent.

But the much-publicized and talked-about "demo" on the state visit of the Philippine president has collapsed even before it has started. At any rate, the Philippine president will go on a state visit to the U.S. When he did it for the first time in 1966, he had just received his first four-year mandate, and any issue against him was out of order.

How the president will be received in the U.S. and what he would say there this time, of course, remain to be heard. One thing is certain, though; the Americans will see and hear for themselves the man who availed of the constitutional measure that the Americans had incorporated into the Filipinos' fundamental law during their colonial administration here. They will, for sure, be in for a surprise. For while the American governors-general had utilized martial law to prevent the "native" from staging an uprising, as they also did in Hawaii, Puerto Rico and other colonies, the Filipino president used it not only "to save the republic" but also to "reform society."

Saving the society from the onslaught of those who would assume state power through force and violence and maintaining law and order, constitute the inescapable rationale of martial law wherever it is availed of. The Philippine president gave meaning and substance to the emergency measure by utilizing it to extirpate the roots of rebellion by introducing novel and unprecedented reforms in all facets of society.

The declaration of martial law "to reform society" appears to be the bone of contention of those who opposed, and still criticize, the Philippine president in imposing "1081," but the country's Supreme Court sustained its exercise. And to Filipinos who adhere to the rule of law, it was enough that the high tribunal had spoken. To them, that's what matters.

MRS MARCOS DISCLOSES PLOT TO DISCREDIT HER

HK100017 Manila Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] The first lady, Mrs. Imelda Romualdez Marcos, has disclosed a plot of anti-government elements to create disorder in Metro Manila while she is out of the country accompanying President Marcos. Mrs Marcos revealed this plot during a meeting with Metro Manila mayors, vice mayors, barangay leaders, police and military officers. She said the plot was similar to the abortive plan of subversives and labor leaders to destabilize the government through violence.

In the case of Metro Manila, the first lady said, the objective of the antigovernment elements is to discredit her as Metro Manila governor and as wife of the president. Mrs Marcos said the planned disorder is also intended to embarrass her and the president while they are in the United States.

She called the meeting to adopt measures which will ensure the peace and stability of Metro Manila, especially during her absence.

CUBA'S FOREIGN MINISTER MALMIERCA VISITS

OW071231 Hong Kong AFP in English 1142 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Manila, Sept 7 (AFP) -- Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca today said "negative" U.S. policy toward his country would likely remain unchanged despite Cuba's expressed (?willingness) to normalize its relations. Mr Malmierca told newsmen that Cuba had encountered a "non-cooperative attitude" from the United States in the past when it brought up its desire to normalize diplomatic relations.

Mr Malmierca, 52, arrived here today from Frankfurt, Germany, for an official visit to the Philippines to exchange opinions over various international issues, particularly those which might be taken up in the seventh meeting of non-aligned countries next year.

Cuba is the present chairman of the non-aligned countries whose scheduled meeting in Baghdad [words indistinct] through this year. Mr Malmierca said that the meeting would most likely be held in New Delhi early next year.

Technology Agreement Signed

OW091249 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] The president today hailed the signing of a technological and scientific agreement between the Philippines and Cuba as an auspicious start in the transfer of technology to Third World countries. The chief executive pointed out that it is now necessary for those in the Third World with new knowledge and progress to spread these to the developing nations. At the same time, the president emphasized that the Philippines and Cuba are getting closer to each other because of this policy among Third World countries.

SUSPECTED CPP MEMBERS ARRESTED IN QUEZON CITY

OW091251 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Military intelligence operatives have foiled an attempt by antigovernment forces to hold a top-level meeting in Quezon City, with the arrests of three suspected members of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP]. Arrested were (Isagani Sarano) who carries a 150,000-peso reward on his head, (Ricardo Reyes) and (Joselyn de Guzman), all alleged members of the national commission for mass movement of the CPP. The three were arrested while they were waiting for other participants of the top-level meeting to arrive. The aborted conference would have brought together ranking officials of religious groups, oppositionists, CPP members and representatives of labor groups. Those arrested were charged with conspiracy to commit rebellion.

KYODO EXAMINES SCOPE OF ABE'S COMING VISIT TO PRC

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 11, KYODO — Japanese Trade Minister Shintaro Abe will leave next Tuesday on a six-day visit to China in a bid to reaffirm the two countries' determination to expand their bilateral economic cooperation.

The visit, first to be made to China by a Japanese political leader in the wake of the diplomatic settlement of the row over the textbook issue, is regarded here as the "litmus test" on China's future stance toward Japan. The settlement came earlier this week when China accepted Japan's proposal for mending the government's revision of school textbook accounts of Japanese wartime acts in China.

Abe, minister of international trade and industry, is making the visit prior to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's visit to China later this month. He is expected to hold talks with top Chinese leaders in Beijing, including strongman Deng Xiaoping and Premier Zhao Ziyang. The official purpose of the visit to is to attend a ceremony to be sponsored by the Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO) there to mark the 10th anniversary of the restoration of Japan-China diplomatic relations.

According to informed sources here, the talks with the Chinese leaders will cover the proposed increased in financial support for the Japan-China joint project to develop oil resources in Bohai Bay and Japanese participation in other Chinese oil development projects, including those in the Yellow Sea.

LEFTIST GROUP CLAIMS EDUCATION MINISTRY BOMBING

OW130641 Tokyo KYODO in English 0621 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Sept 13, KYODO — A radical leftist group has claimed responsibility for attacking the Education Ministry and the headquarters of the Liberal-Democratic Party with Molotov cocktails last week, police said Monday.

Handbills distributed by the League of Communists Saturday said the armed attack was carried out in response to struggles by Asian peoples against Japanese imperialism, police officials said. They said the handbill is headlined: "Textbook Prettification of Invasion Should Be Condemned," in an obvious reference to the just-settled school textbook dispute involving Japan, China and South Korea.

NATIONAL DEFENSE COUNCIL APPROVES SPENDING HIKE

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 13, KYODO — The National Defense Council Monday approved the Defense Agency's request for a 7.3 percent increase in defense spending in fiscal 1983 starting next April. This compares with the 7.8 percent hike this year. The approval came after hot debates for and against the defense spending increase, government sources said.

While Finance Minister Michio Watanabe called for restraint on defense spending in view of the current deficit-ridden national budget, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and Economic Planning Agency Chief Toshio Komoto said the first priority should go to defense budget. "We were asked by the United States to make greater defense effort at the Japan-U.S. security consultative meeting at Honolulu earlier this month," Sakurauchi was quoted as saying in endorsing the 7.3 percent defense spending hike. Komoto echoed and said the defense budget increase is necessary to put Japan's 1983-87 defense buildup program "into orbit," according to the sources.

Watanabe recently tendered his resignation to take responsibility for a yen 2.88 trillion (dollar 11.3 billion) tax revenue shortfall in fiscal 1981. But he has stayed in the office at the request of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

The government plans to keep its overall national spending in fiscal 1983 below the level of the current fiscal year.

SUZUKI TO DECLARE FINANCIAL 'STATE OF EMERGENCY'

OW101305 Tokyo KYODO in English 1244 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sep 10, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, in an unusual public gesture, will declare on September 16 that Japan's national finances are in a "state of emergency," informed sources said Friday. The declaration, to be made at a special news conference, was billed as an effort by the prime minister to seek the nation's understanding for the serious fiscal crisis resulting from tremendous revenue shortfalls.

The sources said, however, that it was actually intended as a political compromise -- an alternative to an early convocation of an extraordinary Diet session, which has been demanded by prominent figures within the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP). These politicians, including three former prime ministers, have urged him to call the Diet into an extraordinary session at an early date and frankly explain the fiscal crisis to the nation.

The decision to issue a declaration of a state of financial emergency followed a series of meetings held this week by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa with four former prime ministers -- Takeo Fukuda, Takeo Miki, Kakuei Tanaka and Nobusuke Kishi -- the sources said. Of them, all but one -- Tanaka -- called for an early convocation of an extraordinary Diet session. However, Suzuki is reluctant to comply with the demand.

The sources said the prime minister's unusual news conference would produce no small repercussions in the political world at a time when the Cabinet and the LDP are increasingly split over the assessment of the economic situation and the need for pump-priming measures, with only about a month to go before the public announcement of the date for the LDP's presidential election. After explaining the fiscal plight at the news interview, they said, Suzuki would answer questions from the press corps.

The focal point of attention is how far Suzuki will go in clarifying specific measures to fulfill his public pledge to eliminate deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1984, the sources said.

Fukuda and other LDP leaders critical of Suzuki's policy are urging him to abandon the public pledge which they contend is already far removed from reality. By so doing, they want to call Suzuki to account for what they consider the failure of his economic policy, with an eye to the LDP's upcoming presidential election, the sources said. Under these circumstances, they said, the prime minister's unusual statement on the fiscal crisis will no doubt result in further fueling an intra-party jockeying for political advantage with the approach of the presidential election.

In the statement, the prime minister is expected to note that tax revenue shortfalls for the current fiscal year ending next March will amount to yen 5-6 trillion (dollar 19-23 billion). He will also say that this will have a serious effect on the fiscal 1983 budget.

As another indicator of the fiscal crisis, Suzuki will point out that the outstanding balance of public bond issues will add up to yen 100 trillion (dollar 385 billion), the sources said. He is also expected to stress the necessity of taking emergency measures to tide over the fiscal plight, including a drastic curb or freeze on government workers' wages, the sources said.

MIYAZAWA URGES EXPEDITION OF ECONOMY PACKAGE

OW101313 Tokyo KYODO in English 1247 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 10, KYODO — Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa instructed officials of three government offices Friday to expedite preparations for the adoption of a new business-stimulating package. Miyazawa issued the instruction when he summoned ranking officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI), the Finance Ministry and the Economic Planning Agency to his office to adjust views on the necessity for the government to adopt a new pump-priming package.

Miyazawa's action came amid a growing discrepancy of views between Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and other key members of his Cabinet on the advisability of the government adopting such a package under the present circumstances.

At a regular Cabinet meeting earlier Friday, Toshio Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency, and Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, called for early convening of an extraordinary Diet session for the adoption of a new set of measures to shore up the faltering economy.

Prime Minister Suzuki, however, has been showing a negative attitude regarding the advisability of taking such measures, pointing out that reconstruction of public finances takes precedence over pump-priming measures in view of the soaring fiscal deficit.

While admitting that the Japanese economy is now in a slump, Suzuki told a meeting of prefectural governors earlier Friday that he had no intention of pledging additional fiscal spending on general public works projects in compiling a supplementary budget for this fiscal year ending next March. Suzuki said any additional public works investments should be limited to such projects as natural disaster rehabilitation projects.

In this connection, Miyazawa indicated at a press conference after the meeting with the officials of the three government offices that the government would have to pledge additional general-purpose public works spending in the supplementary budget. Miyazawa's statement, political observers said, was apparently prompted by the heated discussions which took place at Friday's Cabinet meeting about the advisability of adopting a new pump-priming package and the fact that the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party had also decided it was necessary for the government to adopt it by the end of this month.

In a related development, Kazuo Sugiyama, director general of MITI's Industrial Policy Bureau, reported the results of meetings held between Abe and 21 representatives of key industries this week to review the present state of the domestic economy. At the meetings, the industry leaders reported that business conditions are deteriorating rapidly in most industries.

Ministry sources said MITI had decided to enforce business-stimulating measures as soon as possible under such circumstances. Based on this decision, the sources said, the ministry would work out a pump-priming package by around September 25.

Meanwhile, a government leader indicated the formal adoption of the new package by the government would be delayed until the second week of October. It is difficult for the government to adopt it by the end of this month due to such factors as Suzuki's scheduled China visit starting on September 26 and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's arrival in Tokyo next week, said the official, who refused to be identified. The government leader also pointed out that Abe was scheduled to visit China and the United States later this month and in early October.

He added that the compilation of the fiscal 1982 supplementary budget would be delayed until late next month since preparation takes about two weeks after the adoption of a pump-priming package.

PUBLIC SUPPORT FOR SUZUKI DROPS TO 32.6 PERCENT

OW130825 Tokyo KYODO in English 0721 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 13, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and his Cabinet have slipped to the lowest level of public esteem since Suzuki became prime minister, a KYODO news service poll has shown.

The results of the poll (ninth in a series) conducted September 4-5 put the support rate at 32.6 percent, down 3.4 percent from the previous survey, and the non-support rate at 50.3 percent, up 4.5 percent. The poorest showing in the two years and two months of the Suzuki administration apparently reflects growing numbers of middle-aged and elder supporters of his governing party "bolting" from the prime minister.

Liberal-Democratic supporters' confidence rate for Suzuki dropped to 52.1 percent from 65 percent in the previous poll conducted in June, and the non-confidence rate rose to 32.9 percent from 25.9 percent. Support for the LDP itself maintained a still favorable rate of 48.1 percent.

The latest survey followed guilty verdicts for some politicians implicated in the Lockheed payoff scandal and the closure of a regular Diet (parliament) session which hotly debated state deficits and administrative and National Assembly reforms.

The latest findings are understood to have reflected wariness of the Suzuki Cabinet's failure to keep public pledges concerning important political problems as well as his personal lack of leadership in the recent school textbook dispute.

Analyzing non-support for Suzuki, the most cited reason was economic policy -- 30 percent. Even 35.7 percent of LDP supporters criticized his economic policies as unfavorable. The survey also said 20.2 percent of people monitored said they could not trust Suzuki himself, and that 12.4 percent said they could not agree with his diplomacy.

Meanwhile, the popularity rating for the Japan Socialist Party increased by 3.1 percent to 16.6 percent while that for opposition parties as a whole rose by 4.8 percent to 34 percent.

BRIEFS

BIPOLAR TRANSISTOR -- Tokyo, 3 Sep, KYODO -- Hitachi Ltd. said Friday it has come up with a new "bipolar" type of transistor claimed to perform twice as fast and permit more than three times as much circuit integration as conventional products. It is expected to go a long way toward improving the performance and reducing the size of computers, video cassette recorders and other electronic equipment, officials said. Based on what is called a sidewall base contact structure (Sicos), the Hitachi product features symmetrical location of three key transistor components -- emitter, collector and base areas -- that permits reduced electric power consumption as well as faster performance and greater integration. The symmetrical feature also allows the Sicos transistor to amplify electric current in both forward and reverse directions, enabling both analogue and digital circuits to be integrated on a silicon wafer chip. This has opened the way for mass production of large-scale integration circuits (LSIS) with new performance, the officials said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0516 GMT 3 Sep 82 OW]

GOVERNMENT MEMORANDUM PROTESTS 'U.S. CRIMES'

SK070513 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0425 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 7 (KCNA) -- The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea published the following memorandum exposing the crimes of the U.S. imperialists in turning South Korea into their complete colony and the colonial dependence of the South Korean "regime" and its true color as the U.S. imperialists' instrument for aggression, upon the lapse of 37 years since the U.S. imperialist aggressors occupied South Korea:

Memorandum of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea

September 8 this year is the day of the 37th year since the U.S. imperialist aggressors occupied South Korea. Thirty-seven years have elapsed since one country, one nation was divided into two. In this prolonged period of tragic division, South Korea has been reduced to a complete colony of the United States, and its people have been forced to suffer the fate of colonial slavery.

The relationship between the United States and South Korea is most typical of that between the Suzerain state and colony. The U.S. imperialists now advertise that South Korea is an "independent state" in order to deceive the people of the world. The South Korean puppets try to cover up their true colours as a hatchet man of the imperialists, join the ranks of the Non-Aligned Movement while clamouring about "independence" and get recognition from the socialist countries and the newly emerging countries. It is the United States which acts the master in South Korea. The South Korean "regime" is, de facto, a tool of the U.S. imperialists for their aggression.

The master and stooge talk about "independent state" and "independence", refusing to face the stark reality. Their clamourings are aimed at neutralizing the anti-U.S. struggle of the South Korean people for independence, justifying their colonial rule in South Korea and executing their criminal policy of permanently dividing Korea into "two Koreas".

This is an unpardonable criminal act, a mockery of the Korean people and the peace-loving peoples throughout the world who are fighting for national independence and sovereignty.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea hereby publishes this memorandum, deeming it necessary to show up the crimes committed by the U.S. imperialists, who have turned South Korea into their complete colony, and the South Korean "regime's" colonial dependence and its true colour as an instrument for aggression.

Establishment of the U.S. Imperialists'
Colonial Ruling System in South Korea

Aggression and plunder, domination and subjugation are inherent in the nature of imperialism and these are the mode of its existence. Everywhere the imperialists set foot, bloody aggression and plunder are committed and a policy of colonial enslavement is imposed. South Korea under the occupation of the U.S. imperialists is no exception to this case.

U.S. imperialism which had grown rich on huge amounts of war profits during the Second World War emerged as the chieftain of imperialism and the bulwark of modern colonialism. It defined world conquest as the general line in its external policy and openly revealed their wild ambition to show itself to be a new ruler in Asia in place of the defeated Japanese imperialists.

The U.S. imperialists, who had harboured already from more than 100 years ago the vicious ambition to reduce Korea, which is of military strategic importance and abounds in natural resources, into their colony, entered the soil of South Korea under the pretext of disarming the Japanese aggressive army after the Second World War. All acts of the U.S. imperialists, who had occupied South Korea without shedding even a drop of blood under the guise of "liberator", were aggressive from the beginning. Everything was geared up to the creation of colonial structures. They considered that an easy way of turning South Korea into their colony was to keep the colonial ruling system and apparatuses of the Japanese imperialists intact in its early period.

In this regard, John Hodges, commander of the U.S. imperialist aggressive army occupying South Korea, confessed as follows: "I am using Japanese ruling machines because at present it is a most effective way of management." ("People's World", September 19, 1945.)

The U.S. imperialists showed no interest in disarming the Japanese aggressive army in South Korea and, on the contrary, they saw to it that Japan kept the colonial system in South Korea until they made full preparations to enter South Korea. On August 20, 1945, in pursuance of the policy of the White House, MacArthur, the commander-in-chief of the U.S. Army stationed in the Pacific, demanded of Abe, "governor-general of Korea," full responsibility for "public peace" in South Korea.

On September 2, John Hodges issued a "proclamation" announcing that the South Korean people must be patient obediently even if they disliked the rule by the Japanese imperialists.

The U.S. imperialists who made an entry into South Korea on September 8 published the notorious "MacArthur Proclamation" to announce the establishment of the "military administration" and forced the South Korean people to obey it unconditionally.

MacArthur stated in "Proclamation" No. 1 as follows: "... By virtue of the authority vested in me as commander-in-chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, I hereby establish military control over Korea south of 38 degrees north latitude and the people thereof". "Territory of Korea south of 38 degrees north latitude and the people thereof will obey promptly all my orders and orders issued under my authority." "Proclamation" No. 2 stated that any person who did any act of violation of "Proclamation" No. 1, should suffer "death or other heavy punishment" upon conviction by military occupation court. (The collection of proclamations by the military administration. 1947 ed. p.1.)

The MacArthur "proclamation" was the open declaration of the establishment of the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists in South Korea.

Following the announcement of the "MacArthur Proclamation", the U.S. imperialists set up "the South Korean military government," an alias "military government office" on September 11.

The South Korean people who were liberated from the yoke of vicious colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists desired to exercise their sovereignty. However, the U.S. imperialists pursued a policy of colonial enslavement which required the unconditional sacrifice of South Korea for the sake of their strategic interests.

The U.S. "military administration" was the colonial ruling machine which took over the ruling system of the Japanese imperialist "Government-General of Korea", the brutal colonial ruling machine unprecedented in the world.

Arnold, the first U.S. "military governor," said: "I myself, Military Governor Arnold, am holding the powers and rights exercised by the Korean ex-governor-general." Then he declared: "There exists only one government in Korea south of 38 degrees north latitude and it is the military government established on the basis of the proclamation of MacArthur, general order of Hodges and civil administration orders of the military government. ... It monopolizes domination and authority in all aspects of politics." (South Korean newspaper MAEIL SINBO, September 16, 1945, "People's World," January 5, 1946 This was the declaration [with which] Arnold took office as a new governor-general of South Korea.

In the wake of Arnold's arrogant utterance, John Hodges said haughtily: "Two governments cannot exist within one country. At present in South Korea the U.S. military government is the sole government. Sovereignty cannot yet belong to the Korean people. Since the supremacy over Korea belongs to our military government, the sovereignty of the People's Committee must be abrogated, and it must exist as a political party or otherwise it must be dissolved."

In South Korea the people's committees established on the initiative of the people were all dissolved and the patriots and other people who turned out to the struggle for the genuine freedom and independence of the country were savagely suppressed. However, the direct rule and brutal repression by the U.S. imperialists through the "military administration" encountered strong resistance on the part of the South Korean people.

The U.S. imperialists mercilessly massacred the patriotic people who rose up against their policy of colonial subjugation. In Cheju Island alone, they killed or wounded over 70,000 people, one-third of the whole inhabitants, converting the whole land of the island into a sea of blood.

As they could no longer continue their colonial subjugating policy with the undisguised colonial rule through the "military administration", in the face of strong resistance of the South Korean people, the U.S. imperialists began to resort to the more sinister and nefarious neo-colonialist method. Ostensibly, the U.S. imperialists staged a farce of transferring the sovereign power in South Korea to the Korean people and withdrawing from it. In the meantime, they tried to maintain their colonial rule in South Korea through the instrumentality of their faithful henchmen.

The U.S. imperialists impelled the faithful pro-U.S. lackey, traitor Syngman Rhee who had been groomed carefully by the billionaires of the Wall Street for 40 years, toward putting up the deceptive slogan of the "union", and marshaled the reactionary forces. On May 10, 1948, the U.S. imperialists staged a separate election in South Korea in defiance of the unanimous opposition of the Korean people, thus setting up the Syngman Rhee puppet "regime."

This was a move to divide Korea artificially and establish a neo-colonialist ruling system in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists misled the internal and external public opinions to give a false impression that the separate election which might lead the country to ruin was a "democratic election under U.N. supervision" in an attempt to attach any "legality" to the election opposed by the entire Korean people.

The historical facts, however, eloquently show how this May 10 separate election was held. Just before the "election" was held, the U.S. imperialists set up the "special guard headquarters" in the U.S. "military administration" and deployed the mobile forces equipped with tanks, artilleries and machine-guns throughout South Korea, putting planes into the air and ordering fleets in Pusan and Inchon to be on standby alert.

They had barricades built around the "polling stations" and posted armed police and terrorists in every nook and corner. The so-called "polling stations" were under the strict supervision of the agents of terrorist organizations and "voting" was carried out in their presence.

James Roper, UP correspondent who inspected the "election", said that "the atmosphere of election resembled that of a city under martial law" and a "representative" of the "U.N. Commission on Korea" confessed that "in South Korea no air of free election prevailed." In the North Kyongsang Province alone, 10-20 per cent of "voters" turned out for the "election" and 30 constituencies failed to announce the "voting result" even ten days after the "election." This was how the puppet regime of South Korea advertized by the U.S. imperialists as an "independent state", came into being.

A publication of the United States wrote: "South Korea started functioning with Syngman Rhee as a head on the basis of the first election on May 1948. However, this independence, in fact, is no more than an actual extension of the system under the U.S. occupation."

As the stark historical fact shows, what is called "government" in South Korea is nothing but a puppet regime that the U.S. imperialists concocted in order to forcibly repress the will of the popular masses, cover up and justify their policy of colonial subjugation and prolong their colonial rule in South Korea. This puppet regime was toppled by the heroic uprising of the South Korean people in April, 1960. This proved graphically that it was not the legitimate government established on the initiative of the people, but the bogus government cooked up by the United States.

U.S. Imperialism Is Real Ruler of South Korea

Everything in South Korea is completely subject to the United States. The U.S. imperialist colonial rule extends deep to all fields of politics, economy, military affairs and culture. Convincing proof is provided by all historical facts produced and reality brought about by the U.S. imperialists in South Korea.

Political Domination

An independent state must have its sovereignty and real power to independently work out its internal and external policies and implement them. However, the so-called "government" of South Korea is devoid of sovereignty or independence. Through a number of shackling "treaties" and "agreements" concluded with South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have fixed by law the master-servant relations and trampled down the sovereignty of the South Korean people at will with the backing of tens of thousands of their occupation troops.

No determination of the puppet regime is represented in the internal and external policies now in force in South Korea. Their drafting and execution are strictly subject to the "approval" and "ratification" of the White House. The U.S. imperialists exercise unlimited power by which they can kill or replace even a South Korean "president" at will if they want. In South Korea there are "National Assembly", "government" and "political parties" in name, but they are none other than a screen to cover up the neo-colonialist character of the U.S. imperialists.

The real ruling apparatus politically controlling South Korea is the American "Embassy" in South Korea. The American "Embassy" seizes the right to political control on South Korea, defines the orientation of all the internal and external policies of the puppet regime and supervises and controls its drawing and implementation; it takes all the rights of personnel management including the right to select the highest representative of the puppet government and organizes and controls the political forces in favour of their colonial rule.

Whenever the South Korean puppets' politics had been in a critical phase, it directly or indirectly intervened in it, always playing the principal role.

As disclosed in the "Genealogy of the South Korean Military Government," Syngman Rhee, who was toppled by the April 19 popular uprising in 1960, withdrew from "Chongwadae" after making a "resignation statement" on the "strong order" of the U.S. side from McConoy, the then U.S. "ambassador," and the nomination of "Ho Chong caretaker government" was also decided by his role. At the time of "May 16 military coup d'etat" in 1961, too, the American "Charge d'Affaires" Marshal Green was charged with the mission to carry out on the spot the grand undertaking of the "military coup d'etat" and did exactly according to the libretto of the U.S. CIA.

Chang To-yong, former chief of the General Staff of the South Korean puppet army, in the "second trial on the case of counter-revolution in the army" confessed that he, who had taken a passive attitude to the "military coup," was given the instruction from the American "Embassy" to cooperate with the Pak Chong-hui clique in a "military coup."

The fact that the "May 16 military coup" was intervened [as received] by the American "Embassy" and staged according to the libretto written by the U.S. CIA became clearer by the confession of Allen Dulles, former director of U.S. CIA, made on May 23, 1964, in his resignation statement that "most successful in the overseas activities of the U.S. CIA during his tenure of office was the military revolution in South Korea."

It was none other than the American "Embassy" in South Korea that took its share in the murder case of Pak Chong-hui who was shot dead by his right-hand man, that instigated traitor Chon Tu-hwan to stage the "December 12 army purge coup" and take "May 17 measure to expand martial law throughout South Korea," and that proposed transferring to him a force tens of thousands strong and heavy military hardware under the U.S. imperialist aggressor army command to suppress by force of arms.

Former American "ambassador" to South Korea, Gleysteen, said in the luncheon with the "members of parliament" of ruling and opposition parties on May 23, 1980, that "the American side had already expressed its understanding of and consent to the nation-wide extension and strengthening of the martial law."

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan, too, told the editors and publishers of South Korea that all incidents were "reported to the U.S. authorities beforehand" and obtained their consent.

It is also a well-known fact that traitor Chon Tu-hwan acted under the instructions of his advisors, i.e. John Lamazza, administrative councillor [as received] of American "Embassy" in South Korea, Frederick Krause, deputy president of the "American Chamber of Commerce and Industry" in South Korea, a retired armyman calling himself "colonel" who served long in the 8th Army command of the U.S. imperialist aggressor army occupying South Korea.

Touching on such state of affairs, a South Korean newspaper pointed out: "The present government focuses its attention on the moves of the American Embassy in South Korea. When South Korea falls into a deep political crisis people cannot but turn their eyes naturally to the American Embassy to steal a glance at its moves." Another newspaper wrote that "their influence on the South Korean Government is strong enough to say that their policy towards South Korea was changed whenever the American ambassador is replaced."

Pak Chong-hui had once admitted the U.S. imperialist colonial rule with these words: "Thanks to the God for enabling America to lead South Korea". Traitor Chon Tu-hwan said that "the politics of South Korea has been controlled by the United States" and that he was acting according to the "instructions of the American advisors."

This proves that the political ruler of South Korea either in the past or at present is none other than the U.S. imperialists.

Economic Dependence

Depending on outside forces economically becomes a satellite of other countries politically, and the economically subjected nation cannot free from colonial slavery. [sentence as received] South Korea is completely dependent on the U.S. imperialists economically. U.S. imperialism is lording it over as the greatest plunderer in South Korea.

From the very beginning of their entry into South Korea, the U.S. imperialists seized the major arteries of the South Korean economy under the name of the "vested property", through the instrumentality of the system of military occupation. The "vested property" plundered by the U.S. imperialists was a colossal amount of property accounting for 91 per cent of the total capital of the South Korean stock company at that time. Even according to the doctored data released by the U.S. State Department, its total amount was more than 80 per cent of all properties of South Korea.

U.S. economic control over South Korea has been established through the so-called economic "aid", various "treaties" and "agreements", apparatus for plunder and the investment by U.S. monopoly capital. Economic "aid" of the U.S. imperialists is a means of realizing the crafty neo-colonialist domination, that is, to administer medicine after giving disease. Through the "aid" the U.S. imperialists have seized the economic arteries of South Korea and subjected it to their military and political purposes, and plundered 120,000 million dollars, 10 times more than the total sum of the "aid" since their occupation, thus opening to view their predatory nature as the colonialists.

How U.S. imperialism has established its control over the South Korean economy and seized the economic arteries is clearly seen by the following shackling "treaties" and "agreements" concluded by force with the South Korean puppets.

It is stipulated in the "agreement on the transfer of finance and property" concluded in September 1948 that the puppet government "shall keep in full force all the present laws, ordinances and regulations of the U.S. military government in Korea". It provides for the right of the U.S. Government to the property and its annexes in which it is interacted, be it corporeal or incorporeal, movables or immovables, and points out that "ownership shall be transferred to the U.S. Government at its request". The "treaty of friendship, trade and navigation" signed in November 1956 confirmed that under this treaty the United States is vested with the unlimited right "to engage in all kinds of trade, industry, banking and other profit-making activities no matter what form they may take."

Earlier, the "convention of the ROK-U.S. joint economic committee on planning for economic reconstruction and financial stability" was signed in December 1953. This resulted in strengthening the local apparatus of the U.S. imperialists for economic domination in South Korea.

By this "convention", the U.S. imperialist "economic coordinator" obtained the "right" to "examine all the provisions of economy and planning" of South Korea. And through the "Joint Economic Committee" the U.S. imperialists could force on the puppet government the decisions of "Office of the U.S. Economic Coordinator" and fully grasp and control all economic activities including the implementation of the "economic aid plan".

The U.S. imperialists' control over the South Korean economy has been further strengthened through the "agreement on economic and technical aid" in February 1961, which was the synthesis of previous economic "agreements". This "agreement" allowed the U.S. imperialists to legalize the "joint examination" of the South Korean "budget". It was stipulated that they were to be invested with authority to directly control and use the "budget" of the puppet regime at will, and American merchants and their families in South Korea were to receive equal treatment with "diplomats" and were exempt from all taxes. Indeed, this "agreement" was a replica of the "Korea-U.S. Treaty" which facilitated the U.S. imperialists aggression and economic plunder on Korea 100 years ago. Even the South Korean "parliament members" blamed that this "agreement" resembled the "Ulsa Treaty" concluded between the Japanese imperialists and the feudal rulers of Yi Dynasty. (South Korean TONGYANG NEWS, Seoul, Feb. 19, 1961.)

The U.S. imperialists' control over the South Korean economy is further backed up by the investment of monopoly capital of the United States in South Korea.

The direct investment of the U.S. monopoly capital in South Korea amounted to 427 million dollars as of 1981, which occupied 24.3 per cent of the direct foreign investments. The trans-national enterprises of the United States have concentrated their investments on such key industries of South Korea as oil refinery, petro-chemical and automobile industries and, thereby seized its economic arteries to accelerate economic subordination and militarization.

The U.S. monopolies which rule supreme in South Korea, while enjoying extraterritorial privilege and every special favour, are working its workers like beasts of burden and obtaining excessive profits by the means of tricky price and unequal exchange in trade. As a result, the South Korean puppets are now handicapped by heavy foreign debt amounting to more than 35 billion dollars most of which is due back to the U.S. imperialists.

The U.S. imperialists also exercise their control over the South Korean economy through their resident local ruling establishments such as the "U.S. Agency of International Development" in South Korea. No wonder that the Japanese journal SEKAI described the "U.S. Agency of International Development" in South Korea as a "government hidden in the South Korean regime."

As is shown above, the South Korean economy has become an appendix economy completely subordinated to the U.S. imperialists and South Korea has been converted into a market of U.S. surplus commodities, and its source of raw materials and supply centre of cheap labour.

Dependence of the South Korean economy on the U.S. is daily increasing. Agricultural production, in particular, has been destroyed. South Korea, once a granary, has been converted into a land of famine which has to import more than 8 million tons of grain every year. All this results from the policy of dumping surplus agricultural products and the policy of expropriating land for military use.

There are over 7 million unemployed or semi-unemployed, 300,000 prostitues and over 3 million children of non-school attendance. A human trade policy is officially recognized. Thus, people are suffering from the worst hardships of living.

Seizure of Military Command

Military command is one of the important criterion of an independent state. An independent country naturally exercises command of the army. If a country fails to assume command of the army, it cannot be called an independent state.

Command of the South Korean puppet army 700,000 strong is entirely in the hands of the U.S. imperialist aggressors. The U.S. imperialists assume all command of the South Korean puppet army through various shackling "treaties" and "agreements".

In the "temporary administrative agreement on military affairs and public security to be enacted in the interim period" concluded in August 1948, the U.S. imperialists legalized the continued occupation of the U.S. troops in South Korea and the command over the military and police forces of the puppet regime. And they reaffirmed their jurisdiction and command over the South Korean puppet army and took measures to strengthen them in the "mutual military aid agreement" concluded in January 1950 and the "agreement on establishment of U.S. Army advisory group".

In order to further strengthen their direct control and command of the South Korean puppet army, the U.S. imperialists concocted the "agreement on transfer of supreme prerogative" (what they called "Taejon Agreement") in July 1950 aiming at direct subordination of the South Korean puppet army to the commander of the U.S. Army occupying South Korea, while confirming the already concluded military agreements.

Under this "agreement" all supreme prerogatives on the South Korean puppet army were transferred to the U.S. Army commander occupying South Korea and the U.S. military "advisors" were dispatched to the South Korean Army ranging from the "Ministry of National Defence" of the puppet regime to the army corps, division, regiment, battalion and even to military training camps to command and supervise them.

The U.S. imperialists flagrantly violated the armistice agreement which envisaged the pullout of all foreign troops from Korea after the war, cooked up the "South Korea-U.S. Mutual Defence Treaty" in August, 1953 and thereby obtained the indefinite "right" to deploy thier aggressive forces all over South Korea and its vicinity. They even charged the South Korean puppet army with a duty to "cooperate" with the "collective defence" of the U.S. aggressive troops in the Pacific area.

The U.S. imperialists have reaffirmed the permanent occupation of South Korea by their aggressive troops through many other military "agreements" and establishments of military institutions, making it possible to push forward their scheme of converting South Korea into a military base. In this way, the commander of the U.S. imperialist aggression army occupying South Korea could completely seize all supreme prerogatives such as operational command, mobilization of military personnel, reorganization of structural system, personnel affairs of the South Korean puppet army and all civilian forces. Now the South Korean puppet army is not allowed to use even a drop of gasoline as well as weapons and ammunitions without directive or approval of the U.S. imperialists.

Referring to the present reality Yang Yu-chan, former ambassador of the South Korean puppets to the U.S., lamented that "now the United States has placed all our weapons under its control.

In addition, our gasoline consumption is under U.S. control. It supplies us only a part of it. Under this condition, no one can mobilize the national defence force at his will without U.S. consent." (South Korean newspaper TAEJON DAILY NEWS, August 16, 1978.)

The Japanese journal ECONOMIST commented that the South Korean 'Government' is not in a position to exercise any supreme prerogative and carry out any independent operational action without permission and command of the U.S. in all spheres of weapons, ammunitions and equipment.

An American commentator Dwight Kut said that the fate of South Korea is "entirely planned by the United States either militarily or economically" and even the U.S. newspaper WASHINGTON POST commented that the "present South Korean regime is a military government under the instruction of the United States." [REUTERS, Washington, June 21, 1967.)

Cultural Subjugation

The U.S. imperialists are completely dominating South Korea culturally and ideologically, too. Through the U.S. Embassy in South Korea, the "U.S. International Communication Agency", the "cultural centres" and "information centres" set up in all parts of South Korea, the "educational division" and "technical aid division" of the "USAID" and branches of U.S. international organizations, "foundations" and "advisors" they are steering, supervising and controlling all affairs from the formulation of the cultural policy of the puppet regime and its execution to the ideological tendencies of the South Korean people.

Their domination and subjugation of the South Korean ideological and cultural sectors are legalized by the "treaties" and "agreements" concluded with the South Korean puppets. Through the "agreement on exchange of official publications" they seized the right to conduct press and broadcasting activities freely in South Korea and grasp and control publication and broadcasting propaganda in South Korea. And through 30-odd various subjugating "agreements" related to education they even held the right to frame the education policy of the puppet regime and permit or close schools.

They infiltrate into South Korea the reactionary ideas and corrupt culture which were already rejected by human society and denied by history long ago in an attempt to stamp out the independent consciousness of the people and reduce them to impotent beings contaminated by the idea of worshiping or fearing the U.S., pessimism, depravity, flunkeyism and submission. As a result, the brilliant culture of our nation and beautiful manners and customs handed down from our ancestors are vanishing away in South Korea and all sorts of morbid practices and social evils are rampant in society.

Referring to the South Korean reality which has been converted into a garbage bin of all sorts of reactionary ideologies, even a South Korean publication lamented, saying: "Our idea cannot but be reduced to the international slave, because the realm of our thought has become degenerated like this". All the facts clearly show that South Korea is a complete colony which is surbordinated out-and-out to the U.S. imperialists politically, economically, militarily and culturally and that they are the U.S. imperialists, the real ruler who has seized all the power in South Korea.

An American publication pointed out that the U.S. policymakers towards South Korea regard the U.S.-South Korea relations not as "horizontal" but as "vertical ones", and the United States treats South Korean puppet regime merely as a "regime on paper".

Gleysteen, the former U.S. ambassador to South Korea, also declared that talking about "equal relations" between the U.S. and South Korea is "unrealistic" and "there can be no real equality" in all their relations. (South Korean "Radio First", June 29, 1982)

South Korean "Regime" Is a Tool
For U.S. Imperialist Colonial Rule

The whole period of U.S. imperialist colonial rule over South Korea was characterized by annals of bloodshed, aggression, war, division and murder. For a long period of colonial rule, the U.S. imperialists have further strengthened their policy of colonial enslavement, incessantly replacing puppet "regimes" in South Korea, and all the successive South Korean puppet "regimes" fully accepted this policy and carried it into execution as servant of colonial rule.

It has been fully laid bare in the world how all the successive puppet regimes in South Korea have executed the Korea policy of the U.S. imperialist master. The main Korea policy of the U.S. imperialists between the end of the 40's and the beginning of the 50's was it ignite an aggressive war to swallow up the whole of Korea on the basis of their easy occupation on half of the Korean territory. They considered their hand-raised stooge Syngman Rhee to be a well-qualified man in realizing their aggressive Korean strategy, actively induced him to fortify the foundation of colonial rule and trigger off a fratricidal war.

As for Syngman Rhee, he was a pro-U.S. flunkeyist traitor who participated in the First World War "peace conference" on the instruction of his master already in 1919 and behaved himself disgracefully, begging for "freeing Korea from Japanese rule to leave her in the hands of the United States". Being such a pro-U.S. flunkeyist traitor, he waited on the United States hand and foot and made no scruple to sell off even the country and people for his master U.S. imperialists. All the crimes committed by the Syngman Rhee puppet regime, the colonial tool of the U.S. imperialists, were unpardonable ones which were for the sake of his master against the nation. Especially he plunged the whole country and the entire people into the scourge of war by raising a disturbance of fratricidal war at the instigation of the U.S. imperialists. This treachery was a serious crime indelible in history.

After the war, when they found it impossible to realize their wild ambition for "unification by prevailing over communism", the ambition designed to dominate the whole of Korea by force of arms, the U.S. imperialists embarked upon further reinforcing their division and war policy, taking the "two-Koreas" plot as their basic Korean strategy. They took Pak Chong-hui as the only lackey who could inherit such pro-American trait of Syngman Rhee in materializing this Korean strategy.

Pak Chong-hui was a traitor to the nation. Already in the spring of 1940 he, as a second lieutenant of the Japanese Army, cut his finger with a razor and wrote in blood to pledge himself to be "loyal" to the "Japanese empire". He became notorious as a vicious murderer by killing a large number of patriots who had fought sacrificingly for the liberation of the country. On top it it, he was a special agent who was transferred to U.S. intelligence office as a useful spy after the defeat of Japanese imperialism. He was a dyed-in-the wool traitor who had become large-boned with the selling of the country and the betrayal of the nation. He took power through "May 16 military coup" manipulated by the U.S. CIA and then established the notorious "Yusin" fascist dictatorial system to concentrate everything on putting into effect the "two-Koreas" plot and new war provocation manoeuvre of the U.S. imperialists.

Immeasurably serious, indeed, is the crime the Pak Chong-hui fascist dictatorial regime perpetrated against the country and people as the tool of U.S. imperialist colonial rule. In particular, at a time when the entire fellow countrymen were burning with the ardent wish for reunification with the publication of the July 4 North-South joint statement, hw went so far as to openly proclaim the manufacture of "two Koreas" to be their "policy" by announcing the "July 23 special statement" at the instigation of the U.S. imperialists. It was the crime indelible down through generations to come. As he was such a marionette, he begged for the indefinite occupation by the U.S. imperialist aggression army. And at a time when the U.S. imperialists said that "the United States would remain a powerful being" in South Korea even if a dialogue is held between the North and the South, he prattled: The "U.N. forces can not be outside forces" and "as the U.S. Army is our helper and protector it can not be foreign force."

With the backing of the U.S. imperialists, he blurted out: "Though we are of the same blood we can not live with the communists in the North. If we are to live we must defeat them. Defeating the North alone is our way out". He frantically stepped up war preparations and spirited off in broad daylight in the centre of Tokyo democrat Kim Tae-chung who demanded peaceful reunification.

The craftiness of the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy toward South Korea was more concentrically revealed between the end of the 70's and the beginning of the 80's. The serious political crisis in South Korea made Pak Chong-hui useless any longer as well. This led the U.S. imperialists to raise the "October incident" in 1979 and place Chon Tu-hwan, a stooge of special grade with all the traits of the former dictators, in the puppet regime as a new lackey for their colonial rule.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a faithful pro-American stooge picked up and tamed by the U.S. imperialists already 20 years ago. He is an unprecedented fascist tyrant and mankiller. He received the military education for aggression and massacre in the United States when he was a confidant of the former dictator. He slaughtered numerous South Korean patriots and people who demanded democratization and reunification, and went to the Vietnam war front as the commander of the 29th Regiment of the "White Horse Unit" of the puppet army and randomly killed guiltless people there. All his acts committed so far at the instigation of his master U.S. imperialists since the "army purge coup" were aimed at strengthening the colonial ruling system of the U.S. imperialists.

Upon the order of the U.S. imperialists "to suppress with iron-fist", traitor Chon Tu-hwan committed unprecedented tragic crime indelible down through generations to come -- murdering 5,000 compatriots and wounding tens of thousands of people in Kwangju City alone -- in an attempt to block the vibrant trend for democracy and reunification which surged up after the "October incident" and to prop up the colonial rule which was at a crisis. There is no other fascist tyrant in this world who genocided en masse the fellow countrymen in this way at one time.

No sooner had he seized power than traitor Chon Tu-hwan called on his master U.S. imperialists across the ocean and prattled that he "would not forget the benevolence of the United States even if he dies". Recently he even held various "commemoration functions" to worship and curry favour with his master, embellishing the sanguinary history of 100 years aggression of the U.S. imperialists on Korea after the signing of the "Korea-U.S. Treaty", an aggressive, subjugating unequal treaty, as a history of "amity", "friendship" and "cooperation".

Even through atrocious fascist suppression of those involved in the arson of the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan on March 18, he revealed his true colours as a stooge once again. This incendiarism by South Korean youth and students was an eruption of their wrath and indignation pent up against the U.S. imperialist aggressors who occupied South Korea and pursued colonial rule for 37 years. It was a patriotic act to drive out the U.S. imperialists and regain the national dignity and sovereignty which has been trampled underfoot.

Nevertheless, traitor Chon Tu-hwan disgracefully visited the U.S. master and apologized. On the other hand, he committed such an outrageous act as imposing capital punishment including death or life imprisonment upon those involved in the arson.

In accordance with the aggressive Korean strategy of the U.S. imperialists, traitor Chon Tu-hwan now actively turned out as a shock-brigade for the implementation of the policy of aggression, war and division. Clamouring about the "decisive battle in the 80's," he is now taking up a positive attitude to mobilize all manpower and materials for war preparations and ceaselessly perpetrating military provocations against the northern half of the republic. How zealously he behaves himself as a shock-brigade for the execution of the aggressive policy of the U.S. imperialists is furnished by the fact that he is maneuvering to draw South Korea and developing countries in this region into a new political military bloc while croaking about what is called a "summit talk" of the countries in the Pacific region.

As seen above, the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists over South Korea was rooted by Syngman Rhee, branched by Pak Chong-hui and now becomes more poisonous by traitor Chon Tu-hwan, all of whom are successive flunkyist traitors. All the facts prove that the successive South Korean "regimes" were puppet "regimes" devoid of any independence and they differ little from puppet "Manchoukou" faked up by the Japanese imperialists in the northeast region of China in the past.

The American WASHINGTON POST described the South Korean puppet government as "a deceptive false image to camouflage as if it had any independence under the domination of the United States." This patently shows the subordinate relations between the suzerain state and its colony and between the master and his servant in South Korea.

This notwithstanding, traitor Chon Tu-hwan ridiculously tries to place South Korea on the "equal status" with the Third World countries and disguise his clique as their "friend" in an attempt to win recognition from the new-emerging nations and the socialist countries.

The dispatch of their troops to South Vietnam in the past and their assistance to the Israeli expansionists vividly showed that the South Korean puppet regime is the most faithful instrument for the implementation of the aggressive policy of the U.S. imperialists and the enemy of the peace-loving peoples in Asia and the rest of the world who are struggling for national independence and sovereignty.

As is known, at the 30th session of the U.N. General Assembly, the South Korean puppets seriously insulted the Third World countries including the non-aligned nations, saying: "The non-aligned countries are indulged in rudeness in the United Nations by force of numbers" and "the United Nations has been converted into a pandemonium of the non-aligned countries."

Small wonder that the non-aligned nations and other Third World countries gave South Korean puppets a flat refusal whenever they attempted to enter the U.N. The conference of the foreign ministers of the non-aligned countries held in Lima rejected the admission of the South Korean puppets into this movement and many countries in Asia and Africa successively took resolute steps of severing diplomatic relations with South Korean puppet regime.

Ours is an era of chajusong, when hundreds of millions of world people, once oppressed and maltreated, have become masters of their own destiny and embarked upon the road of building a new life. It is an intolerable shame of this century that there exists such a colony as South Korea on this globe today, end of the 20th century.

In reflection of the demand of the times, the South Korean people are waging a resolute anti-U.S. independence struggle to achieve national sovereignty, setting fire to the "American Cultural Centre" and the "Stars and Stripes", defying harsh repression. The peace-loving peoples the world over who treasure national sovereignty and independence condemn the U.S. imperialists for their occupation of South Korea and their colonial rule and lift up their voices demanding the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression troops from South Korea.

The government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the entire Korean people express heartfelt gratitude to the governments and peoples of the peace-loving countries of the world, international organizations and the international democratic organizations for their active support to and solidarity with the righteous cause to force the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops to withdraw from South Korea and achieve peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification.

The U.S. imperialists should not miscalculate that the South Korean people will tolerate the doom of colonial slaves forever, but discard their foolish dream that the Korean people will give up the cause of national reunification and accept "two Koreas". Unshakable is the will of the Korean people to drive out the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops from South Korea and build an independent new society, a reunified independent Korea with no outside forces and traitors in their land.

The U.S. imperialists should put off the helmets of "U.N. forces", get out of South Korea without delay, taking along all their aggressive armed forces, and take their hands of intervention off Korea as demanded by the Korean people and the peace-lovers the world over. Their occupation of South Korea and their interference in the internal affairs of our country is totally illegal and with nothing can they justify it.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan must discontinue his treacherous acts and step down from "power" as unanimously demanded by the people at home and abroad. While advocating "independence" he is on the rampage to join the Non-Aligned Movement and get recognition of the socialist countries and the newly-emerging nations. It is nothing but a ridiculous dream.

The machinations of the South Korean puppets to realize the "simultaneous admission into the U.N." and the "cross recognition" for the manufacture of "two Koreas" and join the Non-Aligned Movement will be unavoidably denounced and rejected by the socialist countries and the Third World countries including the non-aligned nations.

If the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops are withdrawn from South Korea and the interference of the U.S. imperialists in the internal affairs of our country is terminated, the Korean people can easily settle the national reunification problem independently and peacefully.

We have the most realistic and reasonable plan for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo which will enable us to reunify the country independently and peacefully on the principle of overall national unity. The plan of reunifying the divided country by way of establishing the DCRK incorporates the lofty idea and principles clarified in the July 4 North-South joint statement and the demands of the times for the independent and peaceful solution of Korea's reunification question. With the united efforts of the nation, the entire Korean people will force the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops out of South Korea and establish the DCRK, thereby realizing the historic cause of national reunification without fail.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and all the Korean people express the conviction that the governments and peoples of all countries of the world valuing justice, peace, sovereignty and independence will render unreserved support and solidarity to their righteous struggle to drive the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops out of South Korea, put an end to U.S. imperialist colonial rule, regain deprived national sovereignty and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

CPRF INDICTS U.S. 'OCCUPATION' OF SOUTH KOREA

Part I

SK111145 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1109 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 11 (KCNA) -- The Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] published an indictment on September 8 accusing to the whole world the U.S. imperialists of their never-to-be-condoned crimes committed in South Korea on the lapse of 37 years since their occupation of South Korea.

In the first part, "Occupation Forces in the Guise of Liberation," the indictment says: An emergency round-the-clock meeting of the coordinating committee of the state, army and navy departments continued for many days at the Pentagon from August 11, 1945, on the direct order of Truman.

A plot was woven at the meeting to occupy even a part of Korea under the pretext of the "line of disarming" the Japanese troops. The 38th parallel line bisecting the territory of Korea was thus drawn. To take over the colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists in toto, the U.S. imperialists let them take charge of "maintenance of public peace" in South Korea till the U.S. troops' occupation, even after their unconditional surrender.

Lieutenant General of the U.S. Army Harrison, who flew into South Korea leading 37 subordinates on an aggressive mission, at that time took over documents on property and administrative rule from persons concerned of the "government general" in Korea and informed them of the formal intention of the U.S. side that it will "leave South Korea under the 'government general' for the time being and the U.S. command will only manage and supervise." This was the background of the "disarmament" of the Japanese imperialists which the U.S. imperialists noisily advertised as a pretext for their occupation of South Korea.

On September 8 the U.S. imperialist aggression forces under the armed escort of the Japanese imperialist army and police landed in Inchon. This was the beginning of the criminal history of the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea. That day was another disgraceful day when the South Korean people were bound by the colonial chains of the heinous U.S. imperialists who took the place of the brutal Japanese imperialists.

From the first day of their occupation the guns of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces were levelled not at the defeated Japanese imperialist army but at the South Korean people. The gun report that sounded at the Inchon port on September 8 was a report of aggression announcing the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea and a report of crimes proclaiming the start of the colonial policy of the U.S. imperialist barbarians engrossed in murder, war and atrocity.

From that time people in South Korea shed blood with a deep rancor in all places under the jackboots of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces.

On September 9, students of the Yonhui College were shot dead by the Japanese imperialist police who were out for the "maintenance of public peace" in Songbuk and Yongsan districts of Seoul. Infuriated at this, students fought with the Japanese imperialist police. Several hundreds of U.S. imperialist aggression troops who rushed to the scene at an emergency report indiscriminately fired at students.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors, having occupied the whole area of South Korea by force of arms, proclaimed a military administration on September 11 and replaced the signboard of the "government general in Korea" of the Japanese imperialists with a U.S. military administration. In this way the U.S. imperialists' harsh military repressive rule surpassing the military rule of the Japanese imperialists was established and the people's committees set up by the people on their own initiative in all parts of South Korea were all dissolved.

Historical facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialist aggression forces who landed in South Korea were not a "liberator" but an occupationist and they acted as the enemy of the South Korean people from the first day of their occupation.

Part II

SK111705 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1543 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 11 (KCNA) -- On the lapse of 37 years since the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea, the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland made public an indictment accusing them to the whole world of their never-to-be-condoned crimes in South Korea.

In the second part, titled "Domination by Aggression Forces," the indictment says: The South Korean "regime" is nothing but a screen to veil the colonial rule of the United States. In the whole period of its existence from its emergence the South Korean puppet regime was framed up and has been maintained by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces.

The Syngman Rhee puppet government was not an independent power established in accordance with the will of the South Korean people. But it was a marionette regime rigged up by the U.S. imperialist aggression troops with their bayonets according to the necessity of the U.S. imperialists for their colonial rule. The successive puppet regimes which appeared in South Korea after the Syngman Rhee puppet government were all the same.

When the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists was faced with a crisis by the April 19 popular uprising, their occupation troops in South Korea engineered the "May 16 military coup" to frame up the Pak Chong-hui puppet regime. It was also the U.S. forces command in South Korea that gave birth to the Chon Tu-hwan puppet regime when at the end of the 1970's the traitor Pak Chong-hui was toppled by the resistance of the South Korean people for democracy and the colonial rule was faced with another crisis.

As the reality shows, the change of the "regimes" and selection of the puppet presidents in South Korea were decided by the White House and carried into effect with the military backing of the occupation troops in South Korea.

The U.S. forces command stationed in South Korea has such a big power because the U.S. imperialists lay main emphasis on the conversion of South Korea into a military base in their colonial rule over South Korea. First of all, the U.S. imperialists attach great importance to South Korea in military strategy. Hence, the U.S. imperialist aggression forces play a main role in the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists over South Korea.

The prerogative of supreme command over the South Korean puppet army is held in the hands of the commander of the U.S. forces. As the U.S. authorities themselves admitted, the puppet army is a "watchdog for protecting the domination of the United States over South Korea," "supplementary forces of the U.S. troops to be used as a tool in opposing the northern half of the DPRK" in accordance with the U.S. Korean strategy and a colonial mercenary army which, as could be seen at the time of the war in Southeast Asia, is used by the U.S. imperialists in their war.

There are no legal restrictions on the U.S. forces occupying South Korea. They have and exercise all powers in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists have more than 2,000 military bases all over the world and have concluded the "status of forces agreements" with over 40 countries. But there is no place in which the number of the occupation troops, their quarters and period of their occupation are not restricted as in South Korea.

The military "agreements" concluded between the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets put no restrictions on the period of occupation, the deployment of military facilities and military bases and the number of the occupation troops, their branches of arms and service and kinds of weapons introduced there. Under the "U.S. Status of Forces Agreement" the U.S. imperialist aggression forces occupying South Korea have the right to requisition land, buildings, facilities, and manpower at will, if they consider necessary for their occupation. The area of farm land requisitioned by the U.S. forces in South Korea amounts to 150,000 hectares.

Even foreign press reports, describing such master-servant relations, said: "The United States is not in South Korea. But, South Korea is in the United States."

Part III

SK111733 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1555 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 11 (KCNA) -- On the lapse of 37 years since the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland made public an indictment accusing them to the whole world of their never-to-be-condoned crimes in South Korea.

In the third part, titled "Barbarians of the 20th Century in Human Skin," the indictment says: The U.S. imperialists acted not as a "defender of democracy" but as its strangler from the first days of their occupation of South Korea.

In his letter to Hodges, commander of the occupation forces, Truman said that no danger is graver than allowing democracy in executing the U.S. South Korean policy. Hodges cooked up the "case of the Chongpansa forgery of notes" copying after Hitler's "Reichstag fire case" and outlawed the Communist Party in South Korea and, under "military government ordinance" Nos. 55, 72 and 88, disbanded democratic political parties and public organisations, closed down progressive newspapers and journals and suppressed freedom of the press, assembly and demonstration.

118,621 people including 14 "national assemblymen" were arrested and imprisoned in the one year of 1949 alone because they demanded democracy. Kim Ku, Yo Un-hyong, Cho Pong-am and other prominent South Korean nationalists and patriots were assassinated or murdered with the help of the U.S. imperialist occupation forces.

When the April 19 popular uprising broke out, Eisenhower ordered officials concerned to bring the South Korean situation under control at any cost. (UPI, April 13, 1960)

The "U.S. ambassador" in South Korea, who received action orders from the White House and Pentagon, instructed the traitor Syngman Rhee to form a "force to suppress the riot" and proclaim a "martial law," and the commander of the U.S. Armed Forces occupying South Korea moved the 15th Army Division under his command to Seoul from the Military Demarcation Line.

When the Syngman Rhee puppet regime was toppled, the U.S. imperialists set in motion the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency to engineer the "May 16 military coup" through the traitor Pak Chong-hui with the backing of their armed forces occupying South Korea. The South Korean "Central Intelligence Agency" was organised and the "anti-community law" and various other new fascist laws were cooked up, in addition to the "national security law." The press was brought under the control by the "government" and all assemblies indoor and outdoor were banned. In the "case of the national federation of youth and students for democracy," more than 4,000 personages were arrested and Kim Tae-chung and a large number of other democrats, youth and students detained or penalized.

The real nature of the U.S. imperialist occupation forces as the strangler of democracy was fully disclosed particularly during the massacre operation in Kwangju in May 1980.

When the people rose in uprising in Kwangju, Wickham, the then commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea, transferred to the traitor Chon Tu-hwan three divisions and an armoured unit of the puppet army under his command and ordered the traitor to brutally crack down upon the Kwangju popular uprising. It was owing to such suppression by the U.S. imperialists that Kwangju was plunged into a sea of blood, thousands of citizens were killed and the demand of the South Korean people for democracy was suppressed in cold blood. The fabrication of the military "regime" by the U.S. imperialists through the military hooligan Chon Tu-hwan brought about a period of military fascist rule darker than that of Pak Chong-Hui to South Korea.

In the period up to September 15, 1951, after the outbreak of the aggressive war in Korea the U.S. imperialist barbarians slaughtered more than one million guiltless people in South Korea alone for the mere reason that they gave support to our people's power and people's army.

After they started this war early in the 1950's, the U.S. imperialists, during their temporary occupation of Sinchon, South Hwanghae Province, slaughtered one-fourth of its population on the murderous order of occupation Army Commander Harrison to "throw everything living and moving into ashes." On October 24, 1950, the barbarous U.S. imperialist aggression forces carried prisoners of war of our side from Inchon port to Pusan port by their landing craft "L.S.T." and "Samnangjin" and several other transport ships, during which they stifled to death an average of more than 150 on each boat and threw them into the sea. Such outrage continued till December 10 of that year. The U.S. imperialist warship No 1091 which was discharging a special mission given by the Pentagon was anchoring in the sea off Koje Island where those who survived arrived. In the ship the POW's were injected with viruses of cholera, typhoid fever, pest and meningitis for the experiment of bacteriological warfare and atomic bomb radioactive experiment, gas weapon test, artificial freezing experiment, bone temporance operation for treatment and various other medical experiments and operations were conducted on them. Numbers were sealed on their bodies with a hot iron stamp according to different experiments. Experiments were conducted 3,000 times a day. The barbarians who shaved the hair of a woman, painted the lower part of her body and threw her out to the street for mere fun of it; lewd animals who rape women, be she a girl of 12, an old woman of 60 or a pregnant woman, along the street in the broad daylight; those who carry away girls to rape them in a group, take a photograph of their naked bodies and break into civilian houses to violate women and gouge out one of their eyes as a token -- these are the U.S. imperialist barbarians who boast of "civilization." The U.S. imperialist aggression troops are barbarians and robbers of the 20 century in human skin.

Part IV

SK111800 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1612 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 11 (KCNA) -- The indictment published by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland accusing the U.S. imperialist aggression forces occupying South Korea of their crimes says in the fourth part titled "Powder Magazine in the Far East": The strategical aim pursued by the U.S. imperialists in occupying South Korea was to dominate the whole of Korea and invade the Far East and Asia, taking it as a springboard.

MacArthur, who had been dreaming of becoming the "ruler of the Far East," openly ranted: "By occupying Korea we will be able to seize the whole area from Vladivostok to Singapore. Then nothing will be impossible for our strength."

The war of aggression provoked by the U.S. imperialists in Korea in 1950 was their first attempt to realise this aggressive ambition. The incidents of "Pueblo" and "EC-121" in the 1960's and the "Panmunjom incident" in the 1970's were their second and third dangerous provocations aimed to realise the aggressive ambition they failed to attain in the 1950's. But all their attempts miscarried miserably in face of the heroic Korean people. It is the nature of U.S. imperialists to run wild, while going downhill.

Today the U.S. economy is undergoing the worst difficulty ever since the end of the Second World War. Reflecting their crisis at home and abroad, the U.S. monopolies have set up the most bellicose government and are pursuing a cold war. In accordance with the U.S. imperialists' war policy the powder magazine of South Korea is being filled with mass destruction weapons including nuclear weapons.

The U.S. troops occupying South Korea are being reorganized and their combat equipment is replenished, reinforced and supplemented with the latest type equipment. The ground units of the U.S. occupation forces are being equipped with latest type guns, tanks and missiles which have not yet been supplied to any overseas units and the air force is supplied with latest type fighter-bombers capable of carrying nuclear weapons and close-support planes. The strength of naval force is being nearly doubled mostly with war-experienced personnel and the centre of the strategic deployment of the Seventh Fleet moved to the East Sea of Korea, while the Chinhae port of South Korea is being turned into its operational base.

War maniac Reagan has already hinted the possibility of "using nuclear weapons in the Far East." The U.S. imperialists plan to ship neutron bombs and field nuclear missiles into South Korea in addition to a large number of nuclear warheads already introduced there. To comply with the demand of the U.S. imperialists' war policy, the combat power of the puppet army over 700,000 strong is being reinforced, and more than 7.7 million young men were registered as eligible for compulsory military service and over 1.8 million people for wartime mobilization.

The military expenditures of the puppet government last year were 92 times the 1965 figures. The militarization of economy is being stepped up and munitions factories, strategic roads, harbors and airfields are being newly built or expanded in various parts.

Large-scale offensive operation exercises are being held in succession. The joint operational exercises of the U.S. forces and the puppet army staged by the U.S. imperialists every year are expanded in scale from 100,000 to 160,000 men in the number of participants, from one month to three months in the duration and into offensive exercises in nature, simulating on all-out armed attack on the northern half of the DPRK, into war exercises reminiscent of actual fighting in intensity.

Due to such reckless war maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists, South Korea has today turned into huge army barracks rare to be seen in any part of the world, into a dangerous touch-and-go nuclear base, and the dark clouds of war are permanently hovering over the Korean Peninsula and peace in Asia is gravely endangered.

37 years of the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea is a history of biggest crimes in the world in the 20th century. Under the occupation of the U.S. imperialists South Korea has turned into a showcase of neo-colonialism, a graveyard of democracy, a theatre of human slaughter and immorality and a powder magazine for war. Unless the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea is terminated, independence and democracy cannot be realised in South Korea nor can the peaceful reunification of the country be realised. It is only too natural that the South Korean people are today rising up valiantly in the struggle to drive the U.S. imperialist aggresssion forces out of South Korea and smash their colonial rule, holding aloft the banner of independence against U.S. imperialism. The South Korean people will hold still higher the banner of anti-U.S. struggle for independence they have already upheld and persistently struggle for independence, democracy and reunification.

The withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea is the unanimous demand of the entire Korean people and the world people who prize peace and progress. The U.S. imperialists must quit South Korea at once.

MAC SECRETARIES' MEETING 13 SEP REPORTED

SK131134 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1053 13 Sep 82

[Text] Kaesong, September 13 (KCNA) -- The 471st meeting of the secretaries of the Military Armistice Commission was held at Panmunjom today.

At the meeting secretary of our side Colonel Kim Yon-ki protested against military provocations incessantly committed by the enemy against us in the Demilitarized Zone in wanton violation of the armistice agreement and the agreed points between the two sides and called him to account.

According to the statement of the secretary of our side, the South Korean puppet army, encouraged by the U.S. imperialists, perpetrated an armed provocation on September 7 by firing automatic weapons into the area of our side in the central sector of the front and committed the criminal acts of bringing recoilless guns, machineguns and combat personnel into the Demilitarized Zone at several spots of the western and central sectors of the front.

Meanwhile, the U.S. imperialist aggressors brought a number of troops of their aggression forces armed with "M-16" automatic rifles to posts of the MAC headquarters area on August 4 and September 1. The cases of violation of the armistice agreement and agreed points by the enemy side from July 17 to September 10 numbered more than 3,200.

Noting that the military provocations of the enemy have rendered the situation in the DMZ more gruesome, the secretary of our side demanded the enemy side to take responsible measures so that such criminal acts might not be committed again. But the enemy failed to give assurances that they would meet our demand.

Pointing to the unjustifiable act of the enemy, Secretary Kim Yon-ki remarked: All the facts prove that the U.S. imperialist aggressors resort to premeditated acts to increase tension in our country and, furthermore, invent a pretext to provoke a new war. Declaring that, if the tension is to be eased and the danger of a war be removed in Korea, the U.S. imperialist aggression forces must be withdrawn from South Korea and war preparations of the United States be stopped, he warned that the enemy must look straight at the reality and stop running riot.

NODONG SINMUN CLAIMS CHON CREATES WAR ATMOSPHERE

[NODONG SINMUN 11 September commentary: "Those Digging Their Own Graves"]

[Text] At the third military academy of the puppet army on 9 September, traitor Chon Tu-hwan whipped up a war fever, babbling about making utmost efforts to seize power superiority and foster capabilities. On the same day, he showed up a puppet air force base and repeated the same remarks. He also waged a flight drill as a demonstration of power.

Accompanied by the bosses of the puppet army, Traitor Chon Tu-hwan appeared at various places and created a war atmosphere. This reflects the uncomfortable circumstances facing the puppets.

As soon as a new semester began, South Korean youths and students staged demonstrations against the treacherous maneuvers of the Chon Tu-hwan clique. Public opinion denouncing the puppet clique's fascist policies is rising at home and abroad. According to reports from foreign countries, there is a strong indication that the puppet military circles are showing their distrust of Chon Tu-hwan. It is said that the inner group of the ruling circles of the United States and Japan do not think that Chon Tu-hwan can cope with the unstable situation in South Korea. These developments are unfavorable to Chon Tu-hwan.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, which faces isolation at home and abroad, is attempting to extricate itself from the crisis by turning people's attention elsewhere. The military fascist clique is also committing maneuvers of bravado and bluster with the help of the U.S. masters and intensifying the anticommunist confrontation racket against us.

On that day, coming up with the rumor of southward invasion, traitor Chon Tu-hwan maliciously slandered us. Moreover, he sent up an airplane in the direction of the North and clamored about the deep significance of the flight. It goes without saying that such a provocative act followed the directive of the U.S. masters and exposed traitor Chon Tu-hwan's wild desire for northward invasion.

While paying lipservice to dialogue and reunification, the Chon Tu-hwan ring, in reality, is fanatically resorting to every means to step up preparations for war, causing North-South confrontation under the signboard of the strengthening of capabilities. This is a very serious development and an extremely reckless and dangerous act which can cause a military clash at any moment. We are watching this with vigilance.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's maneuvering to confront us with strength is a foolish act. The South Korean puppets should not view our sincere efforts concentrated on the maintenance and consolidation of peace in Korea and on a peaceful solution to the reunification question as an expression of weakness. Even though we treasure peace, we will not tolerate those who pounce with swords to harm us. The South Korean puppets should not miscalculate and act discreetly.

If the South Korean puppets lead the situation to a dangerous phase, bent on a reckless racket of playing with fire with the support of the U.S. imperialist masters, this will only bring about their digging their own graves.

ANOTHER FIRE AT PUSAN CULTURE CENTER REPORTED

SK100026 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2200 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 10 (KCNA) -- Another fire broke out at the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan on the afternoon of September 8, throwing the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique into panic, according to a report. The fire started in the reading room on the ground floor of the "American Cultural Centre" which was set on fire on March 18 by patriotic students and inhabitants of South Korea. The flame spread to various surrounding articles in a twinkling, causing a big commotion.

TEXT OF PAK SONG-CHOL NATIONAL DAY SPEECH

[Speech by Pak Song-chol, member of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and vice president of the DPRK, at Pyongyang central meeting marking the 34th anniversary of DPRK founding, held at the 8 February House of Culture on 8 September -- live]

[Text] Comrades: Thirty-four years have passed since the DPRK, our glorious fatherland, declared its founding to the world. Today, we are significantly commemorating with a high national confidence the 34th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK, under the magnificent circumstances in which the whole party, the entire country and all the people are unanimously turning out to the struggle to implement the decisions of the historic Hamhung plenum of the KWP Central Committee, new upsurges are being effected on all fronts of socialist construction, the anti-U.S. spirit for independence is growing and a struggle for the democratization of society and national reunification is being vigorously waged in South Korea. [applause]

On this historic day, by the authority of the great leader of our party and people Comrade Kim Il-song, I warmly congratulate, in the name of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and the government of the republic, all the people, including workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals, who have devotedly struggled for the prosperity and development of the republic and for the victory of the socialist and communist cause. [applause]

I send militant greetings to all the South Korean people, including the South Korean revolutionaries, youths, students and patriotic democratic figures who are tenaciously struggling to eradicate the colonial military fascist rule of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges and to achieve the democratization of society and national reunification, looking up to the republic as a beacon of hope. [applause]

Along with this, I send warm greetings to the 700,000 Korean compatriots in Japan and all overseas compatriots who are courageously fighting in alien lands for democratic national rights and the reunification of the fatherland, with lofty national pride as citizens of the republic. [applause]

I warmly welcome comrades and friends from foreign countries who are with us to celebrate the national festive day of our people. [applause]

Comrades, the DPRK is a great revolutionary gain won by our people through an arduous struggle. [applause]

Our republic is a power which has inherited the brilliant tradition of the building of the people's power established by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the flames of the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and a revolutionary power of a new type based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and relying upon the united front of the broad popular masses. [applause]

For the working popular masses, including the working class, to achieve complete national and class liberation and successfully fulfill the socialist and communist cause, the question of sovereignty, above all, should be correctly resolved. Based on his scientific analysis of the missions of our revolution and of the relations between society and class in the period of the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth lines for building a chuche-type power to meet the reality of our country, established at guerrilla bases the people's revolutionary government -- a power of a unique type -- and gained precious achievements and experiences. [applause]

The establishment of the people's government throughout the country after liberation, amid all the people's high revolutionary zeal, was the brilliant embodiment of the lines for building people's government which had been laid down by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and was a government directly inheriting the people's revolutionary government organized at the guerrilla bases. [applause]

Thanks to the precious achievements and rich experiences gained by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the building of the people's government in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, our people were able to creditably solve the question of power and successfully carry out democratic reforms in a short period, smashing all the obstructionist maneuvers of the enemies at home and abroad even under so complicated and confused a situation as that after liberation and, on this basis, finally accomplish the historic cause of founding the DPRK in September 1948. [applause]

The founding of the DPRK was a brilliant realization of the long-cherished desire of our people to achieve the sovereignty of the nation and the independence of the country and an event of epochal significance in the development of our revolution and in the life of our people. [applause]

With the founding of the republic, our people became the true masters of the state and society and a powerful and dignified people of an independent state which no one dare provoke, and they came to have a powerful weapon of the revolution and construction. Indeed, the founding of the DPRK marked the emergence of an independent people and the glorious birth of chuche Korea. [applause]

From the first day of its founding, under the wise guidance of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the DPRK took the great chuche idea as its firm guideline and thoroughly implemented the line of independence in all domains of state activity, thereby achieving a brilliant victory in revolutionary struggle and construction work and performing imperishable feats for the fatherland and the people. [applause]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our country, the color of which was once obliterated on the world map, is well known as an independent, socialist country all over the world and our people, who were suffering from maltreatment, are enjoying a rewarding life to their heart's content as the genuine masters of their destiny. This is the result of the thorough adherence of the government of the republic to the line of independence in all state activities.

The course which our republic has victoriously pioneered on the road of building a new society is one of glorious struggle and advance whereon the sovereignty of the country and the nation has been resolutely defended and made brilliant under the most difficult circumstances and a proud course along which has been ushered in the era of great national prosperity, unprecedented in the country's 5,000-year history. [applause]

In the initial period of its founding, the government of the republic attained great successes by vigorously waging the struggle to prepare for the socialist remodeling of production relations on the basis of the democratic revolution in the northern half of our country and to pave the way for the self-reliant national economy.

In the harsh period of ordeal of the war against brigandish armed aggression of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges, the government of the republic reorganized all systems to wartime footing under the slogan: "Everything for the victory in the war" and vigorously rallied all the people to the heroic struggle for defending the freedom and independence of the fatherland, thereby ensuring the great victory in the fatherland liberation war and honorably defending the independence of the country and the sovereignty of the nation. [applause]

Our people's historic victory in the fatherland liberation war fully demonstrated the boundless vitality and invincible might of our republic following the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and clearly showed that no imperialist aggressors can bring to their knees a people who defend a country's sovereignty as the masters. [applause]

In the postwar period, the government of the republic and our people were assigned the difficult and important tasks of pushing ahead with the socialist revolution and construction, while healing the scars of war.

Under the difficult circumstances of the postwar period, when everything had been destroyed by the war, the government of the republic, firmly adhering to the basic line for chuche-oriented socialist construction set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim-Il-song, successfully carried out vast tasks of rehabilitation construction in a brief period with the self-reliant revolutionary spirit, paved the way for the self-reliant national economy and rapidly stabilized and promoted the wretched lives of the people.

Reshaping the old production relationships into socialist ones in urban and rural communities constituted the basic content of the socialist revolution and was an inevitable demand for the development of society and economy in the northern half after the war.

By vigorously pushing ahead with work for reforming the old production relationships into socialist ones in accord with our party's policy for agricultural cooperation -- remodeling the type of economy into a socialist one prior to technical innovation -- and with the policy for reforming private commerce and industry into socialist forms, the government of the republic established unitary rule over socialist production relationships in a short period of only 4 to 5 years and built the most advanced socialist system on this land, where the root of exploitation and repression was permanently eradicated. [applause]

The establishment of a socialist system was a great social reform which completely realized the social and political sovereignty of the working masses in our country and a great victory which firmly consolidated the entire people's political and ideological unity, based on the worker-peasant alliance, on a new social and economic foundation on which the country's productivity could continuously develop in a rapid speed. [applause]

Relying on the established socialist system, the government of the republic accelerated the overall construction of socialism and successfully carried out the difficult task of industrialization in a short period of only 14 years by waging the vigorous struggle to complete socialist industrialization, thus converting our country into a socialist industrial state possessing modern industry and a developed rural economy. [applause]

Thanks to the realization of socialist industrialization, our country ultimately overcame economic and technological backwardness and joined the ranks of the world's advanced countries, and our people, who had been despised and humiliated by others due to the backward economy, permanently extricated themselves from such a status and appeared as a powerful and developed nation in the international arena, enjoying rights equal to those possessed by the world's big and small countries. [applause]

The three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture are the basic revolutionary contents which a nation of the working class should carry out after the socialist system is established and are the basic measures for socialist and communist construction.

In the new stage of revolutionary development, when the victory was won in socialist revolution and socialist industrialization was achieved, the government of the republic vigorously pushed ahead with the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture under the tested leadership of our party, assuming the chuche-orientation of entire society as its final target, and effected a great upsurge in all fields of socialist construction. [applause]

The struggle to reform all society in accord with the demands of chuche has been more intensely carried out than ever before while at the same time we have vigorously waged the technical and cultural revolutions, giving priority to the ideological revolution in accord with the party's policy. Thus, the three revolutions have firmly become a task of the masses themselves.

The three revolutions team movement has been strengthened in all domains of national economy, and the movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions has been actively carried out. In the course of this, the tasks of reforming men, society and nature were marked with ceaseless new renovations. [applause] As a result of the forward push of the ideological revolution, all workers are firmly armed with the chuche idea, our party's revolutionary ideology, and the entire society is filled with the chuche idea. All people are struggling with conviction along the road indicated by the chuche idea, entertaining burning loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious KWP and firmly rallying around the party and the leader.

Today, all our workers help and lead each other under the communist slogan "One for all and all for one", with common ideals and objectives. They are sincerely carrying out their tasks for the fatherland and people, society and groups, constantly making renovations and advances toward a brighter future for the fatherland with revolutionary zeal and vigor.

The policies for the economic and technical revolutions are being successfully implemented in all domains of the national economy, and the struggle for the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientification of national economy is being vigorously carried out. Thus, we have effected a great advance in liberating workers from arduous labor and improving their working conditions. The self-reliance of the national economy is being strengthened and the nation's economy has reached a higher technical and scientific foundation.

Today, our industry is constantly developing at a speedy pace, free from the worldwide economic crisis. [applause] Great productive upsurges have been effected in all domains of the national economy thanks to the heroic struggle of all workers to fulfill the magnificent programs for socialist construction put forward by the Sixth KWP Congress. [applause]

Production has rapidly developed on all fronts of socialist economic construction and a great number of monumental creations have been raised everywhere. Thus, the nation's economic strength has been further consolidated.

Socialist agricultural construction has been accelerated along the road shown by the socialist agricultural thesis. Constant upsurges have been effected in agricultural production by implementing the chuche agricultural method. Great innovations are taking place in land reclamation work and in projects to expand the nation's cultivated land.

The struggle to create the speed of the 80's with the spirit of the great Chollima upsurge era is being vigorously carried out on all fronts of socialist economic construction in our country, in accord with the party's appeal. Ceaseless innovative successes are being made in production and construction. [applause]

The government of the republic has marked great successes in the construction of socialist culture under the party's guidance. [applause] New progress has been made in the education of the people and in training the cadres of the nation along the road shown by the socialist education thesis. Our new generation receives a perfect middle-school-level education until they reach working age. They are growing as reliable reserve forces in communist construction with general knowledge at the middle-school-level and basic knowledge of modern science and technology. [applause]

With successful implementation of the party's policy for strengthening scientific research work through firm adherence to the chuche-type stand, significant scientific and technical inventions and successful research work have come about in economic construction and in the development of national culture.

Thanks to the brilliant embodiment of our party's chuche-type literary idea and unique policy for literature, our socialist literature and art are serving as a powerful weapon arming our people with chuche-type revolutionary traits and inspiring them to creative labor and heroic exploits. [applause]

Our nation's social system is developing more solidly everyday based on brilliant successes made in the course of carrying out the three revolutions, and the strength of the republic is constantly being enhanced and consolidated in all fields -- political, economic cultural and military. [applause]

The road of glorious struggle and victory along which our republic has traversed under the banner of the chuche idea has shown that our people's government is a genuine political organization representing the interests of all the workers in our country, including the working class, peasants, and working intellectuals, and is a mighty political weapon ensuring an independent and creative life for working people. [applause]

Our people's government has excellently fulfilled its mission and role as a representative of the people's independent rights and a skillful organizer of their creative life at every step and at all times in our revolution, as the leader assigned responsibility for their happy material and spiritual life and as the reliable protector of their independent and creative life. [applause]

Indeed, our republic is a genuine people's country and prosperous chuche fatherland ensuring genuine political freedom and rights for all our people and giving a happy, rewarding life to them. [applause]

With peerless superiority and brilliant achievements made for the fatherland and people, the government of our republic enjoys the absolute support and trust of the entire Korean people. [applause] Our people firmly believe through actual experience that only the government of the republic can ensure an independent and creative life for them. They foresee their happier future in the prosperity and development of the republic. [applause] All changes and turns marked in the development and growth of our republic as well as in the situation of our people are the consequences of the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the KWP and are the proud victory of the immortal chuche idea. [applause]

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward a unique line for building the people's government based on the chuche idea and established genuine state power for workers and peasants in our country by brilliantly embodying the line. Thus, our people came to firmly hold the position as the masters of the nation and society. We were able to victoriously pioneer the future of the fatherland and the people.

The leader indicated the chuche-type revolutionary lines and policy at every step and time in the development of revolution and in the consolidation of the social system in our country, and wisely led the people's government to constantly enhance its role and functions. Thus, the government of our republic could successfully carry out the difficult and gigantic tasks raised in socialist revolution and socialist construction. It has been strengthened and developed into a mighty political weapon with which we could excellently carry out the historic cause of the chuche-orientation of the entire society. [applause]

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious KWP, all the people in our country, regarding it as the highest honor and pride to live and carry out the revolution as the citizens of the endlessly prosperous republic, are now renewing their ardent determination to struggle, sacrificing everything for the defense of the government of the republic and further strengthening and developing the republic. [applause]

Our people, who are advancing under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea following the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and our party will achieve a greater victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction work, and our republic will prosper forever. [applause]

Comrades, to reunify the divided fatherland and realize complete national sovereignty throughout the nation is the paramount aspiration of the whole Korean people and the most urgent task facing us.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today, the government of the republic has the urgent task of completely achieving national sovereignty on a nationwide scale by forcing the withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea and reunifying the divided fatherland.

Our party and the government of the republic, assuming as its most important revolutionary duty from the day the country was divided the reunification of the fatherland, has been making every sincere effort possible for the realization of this duty.

Nonetheless, owing to the splittist maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges, the cause of national reunification has not yet been achieved and there are still grave obstacles to the future of reunification.

We cannot tolerate the division of the national territory and the violation of national sovereignty by foreign imperialists. The question of national reunification is an internal affair of the Korean people and a question lying within the province of our people's right to self-determination.

The Korean people are a proud people who are entitled to the sacred right of national self-determination and a wise people capable of steering their own fate with their own hands.

Outside forces have no reason or justification whatsoever to meddle in the question of Korea's national reunification.

The most important issue in achieving our country's reunification in an independent fashion is to force the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea and to end the U.S. imperialists' interference in the internal affairs of Korea. The occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists and their policy of aggression are the chief obstacles to our country's reunification and the key factors trampling the independence of the South Korean people.

Because of the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists, the tragedy of national division continues and South Korea has been turned into a complete colony and military base of the U.S. imperialists, and the South Korean people are now forced to suffer from tragic colonial slavery.

Though today the U.S. imperialists are trying to make South Korea appear an independent country, it is none but the U.S. imperialists who are de facto rulers of South Korea, exercising all real power, such as the prerogative of supreme military command, and are determining everything as they please.

The U.S. imperialists have totally subordinated South Korea in all fields -- political, economic, cultural and military -- to their aggressive aims and are persistently clinging to the two-Koreas plot, stepping up the colonial enslavement policy and the policy of war at an ever faster pace.

The U.S. imperialist war maniacs are further reinforcing the U.S. troops and the South Korean puppet army by incessantly bringing into South Korea all kinds of ultramodern destructive weapons and military equipment and are getting frantic in military provocations and war exercises directed against us, amassing large forces of aggression around the Korean Peninsula. As a result, a grave situation capable of igniting the flames of war at any moment is being created in the land of Korea.

All these facts clearly show that the danger of war cannot be eliminated and that the question of national reunification cannot be resolved independently as long as the U.S. imperialist forces of aggression remain in South Korea.

Under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the Japanese reactionaries are pushing ahead with overseas expansion and running wild to realize their dream of invading South Korea once again, while beautifying and embellishing the blood-stained sordid history of aggression of the Japanese imperialists. The reckless maneuvers of the Japanese reactionaries are a big obstacle to the independent reunification of Korea.

In order to achieve our fatherland's independent reunification, the military fascist clique in South Korea, which has entrusted South Korea to the U.S. imperialists for their colony and military base and is offering the country as sacrifice to the outside forces, should be eliminated. The so-called regime in South Korea, which has no real power and sovereignty, is an out-and-out puppet regime subordinated to the U.S. imperialists. It is a sordid, nation-selling regime which is executing the U.S. imperialists' policy of colonial subordination and war. The Chon Tu-hwan ring, which usurped power with guns and bayonets under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists, is barbarously oppressing and murdering the South Korea people struggling to oppose the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and to achieve the democratization of the society and the fatherland's reunification, while consolidating the treacherous policy of depending the outside forces and schemes to provoke a war.

All things national have been obliterated by villainous, flunkeyist nation-sellers in South Korea today, and South Korea has been placed under the double subordination of Japan and the United States. Under the fascist suppression of the outside forces and the puppets who have colluded with outside forces, South Korea has been turned into the most cruel human hell at the end of the 20th century where people's freedom and rights are mercilessly trampled underfoot.

In no way can the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique justify their policy of war, their splittist schemes and rackets of fascist oppression, nor can they quench the people's anti-U.S. and antigovernment spirit. [applause] In South Korea today, anti-U.S. struggle spirit is growing with each passing day. The flames of the anti-U.S. and pro-independence struggle, which are spreading throughout South Korea, are the inevitable result of the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and of their colonial rule and are an explosion of the pent-up fury and resentment of the South Korean people against the U.S. imperialists.

The South Korean people's anti-U.S., pro-independence struggle is a patriotic struggle aimed at saving the country and the nation and is a just struggle for democracy and reunification.

By forcing the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea, ending their colonial rule, overthrowing the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique and establishing an independent and democratic regime, further upholding the anti-U.S. and pro-independence banner, the South Korean people will defend national sovereignty and open up the road to independent reunification. [applause]

The U.S. imperialists should look squarely at the desires of all the Korean people toward the fatherland's reunification, the flames of the anti-U.S. struggle being set ablaze, and the trend of the times supporting Korea's independent reunification, thus ending their occupation of South Korea and their policy of war and withdrawing immediately from South Korea, taking along the aggression forces and lethal weapons. [applause]

The Japanese militarists should learn a due lesson from their past defeat suffered on the aggressive road for overseas expansion and should act with discretion.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should immediately stop the sordid policy of dependence on outside forces and the brutal suppression of the people and step down from power without delay.

If traitor Chon Tu-hwan continues to pursue fascism, division, confrontation and war schemes while making a habit of depending on outside forces and committing treacherous acts running counter to the people's aspirations, it will only result in accelerating his ruin.

The most realistic and reasonable way to achieve our country's reunification in an independent fashion is to reunify the fatherland by founding the DCRK, as elucidated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. [applause]

Today, the struggle to realize our new reunification proposal is being vigorously waged among the compatriots in the North, the South and abroad. The voices supporting the Korean people's just struggle to drive the U.S. imperialist aggression forces out of South Korea and to achieve the country's independent and peaceful reunification by founding the DCRK are rising higher among the world's progressive peoples.

Taking advantage of this opportunity, I extend deep gratitude to all governments, international organizations, international democratic organizations, progressive political parties, public organizations, struggle organizations and figures of all walks of life of various countries, and the world's peace-loving peoples that always extend active support and solidarity to our people's just cause. [applause]

For the realization of the proposal for founding the DCRK, newly elucidated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, all Korean compatriots in the North, the South and abroad should firmly unite under the banner of the fatherland's reunification, transcending differences in ideologies, systems, factions and political opinion. [applause]

If all compatriots in the North, the South and abroad seek unity and vigorously wage a reunification movement only on the basis of a common national ideology, they can frustrate any obstructionist schemes of the enemies, threby making it possible to advance the historic cause for the fatherland's reunification. [applause] Anyone who wholeheartedly wants the country's reunification and sets store in the future of the nation should vigorously turn out in the pannational struggle to force the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea and to realize the proposal for founding the DCRK, firmly rallying around grand national front reunification.

When the DCRK is founded and the 10-point political program for the reunified country is fulfilled, national sovereignty will be achieved on a nationwide scale and a dignified sovereign state, a reunified independent country which is not dependent on any outside forces and does not participate in any bloc, will emerge on the Korean Peninsula. [applause]

Many obstacles and difficulties exist on the road to the fatherland's reunification. This notwithstanding, the Korean people will overcome them with the united efforts of the entire nation and will certainly achieve the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification. [applause]

Our people's struggle for the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification is being waged in close connection with the struggle of the world's people against imperialism and for independence, which is being waged on an international scale. The imperialists, who are frightened at seeing that the people's revolutionary struggle against imperialism and for independence is being whipped up with each passing day, are endlessly committing maneuverings of aggression and provocation against the newly emerging nations, while desperately trying to maintain and expand their supremacy. They are oppressing militarily the oppressed people who have risen up in the righteous struggle for liberation.

Because they are in a difficult situation, the U.S. imperialists have openly professed the policy of strength and have given priority to strengthening the existing military blocs and military alliances for the realization of this policy. They are running amok to create new military blocs in various places of the world including Asia and the Pacific area and are further strengthening their schemes of aggression and war.

Because of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and other war maniacs, today the international situation is being further aggravated and the danger of new world war is growing with each passing day. Struggling to eliminate the danger of a new war and to defend the peace and security of the world is the most important task facing the peace-loving people of the world.

To eliminate the growing danger of a new world war and to achieve solid world peace, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's proposal for world independence must be implemented. The proposal for world independence is a firm banner enabling the complete liquidation of all kinds of domination and subjugation and the achievement of the complete independence of the world as a whole. [applause] The task for world independence calls for the countries and nations of the world to firmly maintain their independence and to further expand and develop the Nonaligned Movement.

As a prestigious member of the Nonaligned Movement, the DPRK is exercising complete independence in the international community and is making all efforts for the consolidation and development of the Nonaligned Movement. [applause]

Under the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and under the banner of independence, friendship and peace, the DPRK Government and the Korean people, as they have in the past, will more vigorously struggle in firm unity with the peoples of the socialist countries and the nonaligned countries and with all progressive peoples of the world to thwart and smash the imperialists' policy of aggression and war, to achieve the independence of all countries and nations and to accelerate the independence of the entire world. [applause]

Comrades, today, the government and people of our republic are facing the honorable task of securing the brilliant achievements we have won in revolution and construction and leading our revolution to a new higher stage in accordance with the revolutionary line and policy put forth by the historic Sixth KWP Congress.

In his historic policy speech at the joint meeting of the KWP Central Committee and the DPRK Supreme People's Assembly held last April, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, on the basis of scientific insight into the demands of our revolutionary development, which has entered a new higher stage, and the inevitability of the achievement of the communist cause, brilliantly delineated the path to be followed by our revolutionary government. [applause]

The policy speech of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a great militant program which has brilliantly delineated the way and method for the construction of a communist paradise in our country in which the complete independence of the people will be achieved by permeating the society with the chuche idea through vigorous acceleration of the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture. It is a banner of encouragement for the achievement of the complete independence of the country and the nation and for vigorously inspiring the people to the struggle for world independence. And it is an immortal classic document which has synthesized the theories of the chuche communist revolution and deepened and developed them to a new higher stage. [applause]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Communism is the three revolutions plus the people's government, the thorough implementation of the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture through the ceaseless consolidation of the people's government and the enhancement its function and role will bring the communist paradise where the complete independence of the people will be achieved.

We must uphold the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great program for the construction of communism, further consolidate our people's government and enhance its function and role. To do this, we must vigorously carry out the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture so as to build a communist paradise at an early date, in which the entire society will be permeated with the chuche idea. [applause]

With lofty pride and confidence in living and working under our most superior revolutionary government, all working people must vigorously advance to further consolidate and develop our republic, which was founded and is led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and to bring out new miracles and innovation in the fields of ideology, technology and culture. [applause]

All working people must more firmly arm themselves with the great chuche idea and maintain boundless loyalty to the party and the leader. In doing this, they must prepare themselves more properly as chuche-type communist revolutionaries devoting themselves under all circumstances to the struggle for the victory of the chuche idea. [applause]

We must further consolidate the unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks, which are based on the chuche idea, speed up the revolutionization and workingclassization of the society and defend from generation to generation and brilliantly embody the party's glorious revolutionary tradition, which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song created during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. [applause]

The attainment of the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule and successful attainment of the 10 great long-range goals of socialist economic construction of the 1980's via thorough implementation of the line of the chucheization, modernization and scientization of the national economy, which were called for by the historic Sixth KWP Congress, are important tasks facing us today.

Upholding the decision of the historic Hamhung plenary meeting of the KWP Central Committee, which was held recently, we must concentrate all our efforts on the attainment of the goal of 1.5 million tons of nonferrous metals. In so doing, we must vigorously struggle to bring about a new turn in the development of the machine industry. [applause]

The sectors and units of the national economy must fully display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle and meticulously plan economic guidance and organizational work. In so doing, they must unconditionally and thoroughly accomplish all economic tasks given by the party. [applause]

Upholding the militant appeal of the party, our functionaries and working people must vigorously wage the struggle for the creation of the speed of the 80's while closely meshing it with the movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples set by the unheralded heroes. In so doing, they must bring about new revolutionary upsurges in the sectors of the socialist economic construction and vigorously struggle for the consummation of the chuche revolutionary cause. [applause]

With an attitude worthy of the people in the era of the revolution and struggle, the working people must work and live their lives always with a mobilized and alert posture and in a militant manner and emulate the noble examples which the young communists set during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. In so doing, they must maintain the unyielding revolutionary spirit and persistently move forward along the road of revolution directed by the party and the leader. [applause]

Under the banner of the KWP winning 100 victories in 100 battles, our revolution is constantly developing to a new, higher stage and even more brilliant vista is opening for the future of our republic and people. [applause]

Let all of us vigorously march forward for the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, for the complete victory of socialism, for the eternal prosperity of the republic and for the ultimate consummation of the revolutionary cause of chuche, firmly rallying around the party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. [applause]

Long live the great leader of our party and people Comrade Kim Il-song! [shouts] Long live the glorious KWP -- the organizer and promoter of all victories of the Korea people! [shouts] Long live the DPRK -- the glorious fatherland of the Korean people! [shouts]

COLLECTION OF WORKS ON THREE REVOLUTIONS PUBLISHED

SK031505 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1458 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 3 (KCNA) -- The Foreign Languages Publishing House recently brought out in different languages "On the Three Revolutions," a collection of immortal classic works of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Contained in the book are 16 immortal classic works including reports to the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Congresses of the Workers Party of Korea on the work of the Central Committee (excerpts) delivered by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and "On Vigorously Carrying on the Three Revolutions, Ideological, Technical and Cultural, in the Domain of Industry," "Let Us Further Promote the Building of Socialism by Vigorously Carrying Out the Three Revolutions" and "Theses on Socialist Education."

Propounded in those works are the necessity and tasks of the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, and the ways of their fulfilment and introduced there are successes and experiences gained by our party and people in the struggle for implementing the line of the three revolutions.

In his historic report to the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea on the work of the Central Committee, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song expounds that the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions are a struggle for realizing chajusong (independence) of the masses of working people and a strategic task which a working class party in power must firmly maintain from the first days of its embarkation upon the road of building a new society.

The great leader defines the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, after the establishment of the socialist system as the main content of the revolution to be carried out by our party in the socialist society and as the task of continued revolution to be carried out till the building of communism and refers to shining successes registered in all domains, political, economic and cultural, by vigorously waging the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions.

NORTH REFUSES REQUEST FOR INTERVIEW WITH PFC WHITE

SK130436 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0400 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] The 471st meeting of the secretaries of the Military Armistice Commission was held at Panmunjom at 1100 today. At today's meeting, which was held at the request of the United Nations Command [UNC] side, the UNC side repeatedly requested an interview with PFC White, who was missing in action [siljong toeo] as of the 28th of last month and is being detained by the North Korean puppets.

Regarding this, the communist side rejected the UNC side's request by saying that the UNC side should refer to the report from the central news agency of the North Korean puppets dated 4 September that said that PFC White had sought political asylum. The UNC side, however, repeatedly requested a personal interview with PRC White, while noting that it cannot accept recorded film and other recorded material offered by the North Korean puppet side.

OFFICIAL HOPES NORTH WILL ATTEND '88 OLYMPICS

SK110145 Seoul YONHAP in English 0132 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Seoul, Sept. 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Sports Minister Yi Won-kyong said Friday that all member nations of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) will be invited to the 1988 Seoul Olympic games, adding that "we sincerely hope North Korea will participate." Appearing before the National Assembly's special committee for the Seoul Olympics, Yi said: "Free participation of all member countries has been promised to the IOC by the South Korean Government." Yi also revealed that the government plans to select 5,000 Olympic hopefuls from among six million students aged 10 to 19 by the end of this year.

FURTHER REPORTS ON JAPANESE TEXTBOOK CONTROVERSY

Foreign Minister's Remarks

SK110152 Seoul YONHAP in English 0051 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korea will deliver a request for the correction of distorted Japanese textbooks to Japan next week, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok said Friday. Yi said the contents of the request will include the immediate correction of modern history and gradual corrections of ancient history concerning Korea and Japan through joint research by scholars of the two countries. Yi made his remarks at a meeting of an ad hoc panel of the Seoul-side Korean-Japan Parliamentarians Union, which handles matters related to the Japanese textbooks. The special committee urged the government to firmly state Korea's position pertaining to the revision of Japanese screening principles for school textbooks and teaching guides.

Japanese Lawmakers To Visit

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 13 (YONHAP) -- A three-member delegation from an ad hoc committee of the Japanese side of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians Union, which is handling the disputed textbook issue, will arrive here Wednesday to discuss the correction of distorted Japanese textbooks with a Korean committee.

Spokesman for the Seoul-side of the parliamentary body Pak Kyong-sok said Monday the two special committees will try to work out measures for the prompt rectification of modern history and gradual corrections of ancient history concerning Korea and Japan through joint research.

TWO STUDENTS ARRESTED FOR CHUNGANG DEMONSTRATION

SK110521 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Sep 82 p 8

[Text] The police arrested two collegians yesterday for having distributed leaflets containing anti-government slogans and thus violating the law on assembly and demonstration, and requested arrest warrants for five others on similar charges. Arrested by the Noryangjin police are Yi Kun-won, 23, a junior in the department of literature at Chungang University, and Yim Chae-son, 23, junior in the athletics department of the same school. They were picked up by the police at around 11:55 a.m. last Thursday shortly after they scattered 300 flyers, titled "A Letter to My Fellow Students," from the rooftop of the school's library. They were also charged with attempting to stage an anti-government demonstration on the campus that day. The five others, whom the Sodaemun police requested arrest warrants for, are Yonsei students Ha Song-chan, 21, Yuk Song-chu, 20, Miss Kim Un-cha, 21, Miss Yi Mi-chong, 20, and Miss Pak Sun-chong, 21. According to the police, the five printed 500 leaflets, titled "Anti-Fascism: Declaration of a Struggle for Democratic Liberation," last May 4 and distributed them on the campus and in tearooms in the vicinity of the school on four occasions during the last semester. Ha Song-chan was additionally charged with allegedly having seditious materials while participating in "membership training" at the UNESCO students' association at the Yonsei University training camp in Togong-ni, Wabu-myon, Kyonggi-do, last Sept. 4.

DOMESTIC F-5F JET FIGHTER PUT INTO SERVICE

[Text] The first supersonic fighter aircraft manufactured in Korea was put into service yesterday after an impressive demonstration flight at a southern air base, marking a great step forward toward self-reliance in national defense.

The F-5F jet fighter, the latest model in the F-5 series which can fly 1.6 times the speed of sound, was produced by Korean Air Lines with the technical assistance of the U.S. Northrop Aircraft Co. Named "Chegong (Sky Conqueror) No 1," the aircraft was officially turned over to the Republic of Korea Air Force to assume the critical mission of defending the nation's air space.

President Chon Tu-hwan closely inspected the interior and exterior of the two-seat aircraft and observed with great satisfaction the entire process of its test flight. Accompanied by the first lady, the president also looked around the production facilities.

Defense Minister Yun Song-min and a number of other government, military and parliamentary leaders attended the dedication ceremony, which started at 11 a.m., along with U.S. Ambassador Richard L. Walker, Gen. Robert W. Sennewald, commander-in-chief of the Combined Forces Command, and representatives from Northrop Co.

With the commissioning of the F-5F, the Republic of Korea, which 32 years ago met North Korean aggression with only a few L-4 light planes, became the third nation in non-communist Asia to operate fighter aircraft of its own production.

When President Chon arrived at the ceremony site, 16 Korean and U.S. Air Force fighters made an aerial greeting with a fly-by over the air base, releasing colored smoke. As the president unveiled the aircraft bearing the "Taeguk" emblem on its formidable body, all participants in the ceremony loudly applauded.

Soon the aircraft, piloted by Lt. Col. Yu Song-yol, taxied to the runway and took off into the sky. After making high-speed passes over the air base, including various forms of aerial maneuvers, the plane landed at the runway and returned to the ceremony site.

"The test flight proved that this aircraft has superb maneuverability and excellent electronic detection capabilities that ensure victory in aerial fights. I'm proud to fly an aircraft built with our own hands," said Col. Yu.

A test pilot from Northrop Co. said the Korean personnel engaged in the production of the aircraft fully demonstrated their high level technological ability, comparable with those in any developed nation.

The local production of the fighter aircraft opened a new chapter in the continuing development of Korea's defense industry, which has already reached an advanced level in manufacturing ground and naval equipment. Started in full vigor in the latter half of the 1970's, the arms industry has entered mass production of various guns and ammunition and is continuously improving long-range missile systems. A combat destroyer was launched in 1980 and Korean Air Lines has been producing light helicopters with U.S. technical support.

Korea and the United States had agreed on the co-production of fighter aircraft in their annual security consultative meeting in 1979. It is aimed to bolster the air defense power of the republic as well as increasing its high-technology defense industry. Authorities of the two countries later chose F-5F as the initial type of aircraft to be produced in Korea as it was considered most suitable for the Korean defense situation and adequate for the economic and technological conditions in the country. The United States had begun supplying F-5A "freedom fighters" late in the 1960's as part of the Korean Armed Forces modernization program.

EXPORT GROWTH URGED TO IMPROVE ACCOUNT DEFICIT

SK030115 Seoul YONHAP in English 0057 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 3 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Traders Association (KTA) Friday called for export growth through technological innovation, improved overseas competitiveness and stepped-up marketing activities to improve the country's current account deficits.

In a report on the recent international payments position of South Korea, KTA said the country's current account deficits amounted to 833.2 million U.S. dollars as of the end of July this year, a drop of 2.4 billion dollars from the same period last year.

While only 8.5 percent (204 million dollars) of the current account improvement came from export growth, 57.6 percent (5.4 billion dollars) was due to decreased imports and 33.6 percent by the invisible trade sector, according to the report.

The improved current account situation through decreased imports not only hinders the country's future economic growth but also impairs the international competitiveness of Korean-made commodities, and it will further deteriorate in the event of price hikes of major raw materials in international markets and increased investment in production facilities, the KTA report said.

In order to rectify the current account deficits, enterprises should increase their exports through technological innovation, replacement of worn-out facilities, improved quality and overseas competitiveness, the report concluded.

SPECIAL ENVOY KONG KORM VISITS MOZAMBIQUE

BK101547 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] On 24 August, Comrade Kong Korm, deputy minister of foreign affairs and special envoy of Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin, arrived at Maputo, capital city of the People's Republic of Mozambique [PRM]. On hand to warmly greet the delegation at the airport were the minister of state in charge of foreign affairs, the head of the Socialist Directorate, cadres from it and other officials of the PRM Foreign Affairs Ministry. The comrade SRV ambassador and the Soviet acting charge d'affaires to the PRM were also present.

During his stay in the PRM, Comrade Kong Korm held cordial and friendly talks with Comrade Joaquim Alberto Chissano, minister of foreign affairs and minister of state of the PRM. Comrade Kong Korm talked about the real situation in the PRK since the historic 7 January 1979 victory day and about the victory of the Kampuchean people over the U.S. imperialists in 1975 -- a victory which was usurped by the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal gang which massacred 3 million Kampuchean people. The comrade also talked about the criminal maneuvers of the Chinese expansionist-hegemonists in collusion with U.S. imperialism who use the Sihanouk-Son Sann label to mask and defend the barbarous massacre committed by the Democratic Kampuchean regime.

The comrade stressed the various peace initiatives proposed at the sixth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers with the aim of making Southeast Asia a zone of peace, friendship and good cooperation.

Comrade Joaquim Alberto Chissano expressed his support for the PRK.

On 27 August, Comrade Kong Korm gave a press conference and answered in detail many questions relating to Kampuchea. Comrade Kong Korm's interview was given wide coverage by Mozambique and foreign newspapers and the Mozambique radio. In the evening of the same day, Comrade Kong Korm attended a reception hosted in his honor by the PRM minister of state.

On 28 August, Comrade Kong Korm held cordial talks with Comrade Samora Moises Machel, president of the PRM. During the talks, Comrade Kong Korm briefed Comrade Samora Moises Machel on the realities in the PRK. The comrade president said that he had met Comrade Heng Samrin at the very beginning. The PRM is very happy about the revival of the new Kampuchea which is progressing in every field. The PRM totally supports the peace proposals of the sixth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers. With a number of African countries, the comrade promised to expel Pol Pot's representative from the United Nations. Finally, Comrade Samora Moises Machel said that the enemies of the PRK are also the enemies of the PRM.

Apart from these talks, Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin's special envoy visited farms, cooperatives, factories and other big enterprises.

On 28 August, Comrade Kong Korm left the PRM for the Republic of Seychelles.

SPECIAL ENVOY HOR NAM HONG VISITS CAPE VERDE

BK111722 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0412 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Sep (SPK) -- During his stay in the Republic of Cape Verde from 19 to 20 August, Chairman Heng Samrin's special envoy Hor Nam Hong was warmly received by Cape Verde Prime Minister Pedro Pires.

Hor Nam Hong recalled that following the Kampuchean people's victory over the U.S. imperialists in 1975, the zealous lackeys of Beijing, Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan, seized control of the party and massacred 3 million Kampucheans.

Hor Nam Hong briefed his host on the real situation in Kampuchea and the revival of the Kampuchean people following their 7 January 1979 historic victory over the Pol Pot gang and on the peace proposals of the sixth Indochinese foreign ministers' conference in Ho Chi Minh City.

For his part, Pedro Pires declared total support for these proposals. He affirmed that the tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea with Sihanouk as its leader is an insignificant farce.

The Kampuchean diplomat also met with Silvina Manuel da Luz, Cape Verde minister of foreign affairs, and other cadres of the ministry.

Visits Benin

BK111730 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 11 Sep (SPK) -- During his visit to the People's Republic of Benin, Chairman Heng Samrin's special envoy, Hor Nam Hong, was received by Adjo Boco Ignace, acting president of the People's Republic of Binin and chairman of the National Assembly, in Cotonou on 25 August.

Hor Nam Hong handed over a letter from Chairman Heng Samrin and informed him of the real situation in Kampuchea since the 7 January 1979 historic victory, the wholesale massacre of the Kampuchean people by Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan hangmen after the victory over the U.S. imperialists in 1975, and the creation of the so-called tripartite coalition government of the reactionary Khmers. He also talked about the peace initiative put forward by the sixth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers.

Adjo Boco Ignace expressed the unchanging position of Benin in supporting the PRK Government which he affirmed is the authentic and legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people.

Hor Nam Hong also met with Girigissou Gado, chairman of Banin's People's Revolutionary Party Foreign Relations Committee and acting minister of foreign affairs. Hor Nam Hong left the People's Republic of Benin on 26 August after a 5-day visit.

SIHANOUK INTERVIEWED PRIOR TO GUINEA, N.Y. TRIPS

OW120427 Hong Kong AFP in English 1854 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept. 11 (AFP) -- The "deadly sickness" threatening Cambodia is the "Vietnamisation" of the country, Prince Norodom Sihanouk said today in an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE.

The former Cambodian head of state, now president of the tripartite anti-Vietnamese coalition, was in Paris for a two-day visit before leaving today for Guinea. He will return here Thursday before going to New York for the September 21 session of the United Nations General Assembly. In New York, Prince Sihanouk will give the main speech on the Democratic Kampuchean Government's delegation during debate as to who will hold the Cambodian seat at the U.N.

Prince Sihanouk said today that Cambodians were "chased from their land and marriages were forced upon them so as to give birth to a new race, more and more dominated by the Vietnamese whose aim was the political and ethnic Vietnamisation of Cambodia."

The ebullient prince said the agreement by himself and his former prime minister, Son Sann, to join forces with the Khmer Rouge came down to "choosing between the better of two evils." "I lost five children and 14 grandchildren at the hands of the Khmer Rouge, so I have no reason to like or cooperate with them," said the prince, "but since the Vietnamese refuse to recognise our independence we have a duty to fight."

According to the prince, "any political solution in Cambodia will come about through a resistance war as the Vietnamese only understand force." Though he admitted that the joint Khmer Rouge-nationalist resistance could not defeat the Vietnamese, he claimed "it could make their lives intolerable."

While in the United States Prince Sihanouk will meet with a number of U.S. leaders. He will again be in France in December when he said he would meet with French President Francois Mitterrand and French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson.

In the interview, Prince Sihanouk said Cambodians "were waiting for both military and financial aid from all its allies and friends." But, said the prince, whereas the Chinese give an unlimited supply of arms to the Khmer Rouge, they want him "to get a small packet of dollars from the Americans" so as to be able to buy their machineguns.

KHIEU SAMPHAN INTERVIEWED BY TANJUG CORRESPONDENT

AU091804 Belgrade POLITIKA in Serbo-Croatian 8 Sep 82 p 5

[Text] Phum Thmei, Kampuchea, 7 Sep (TANJUG) -- "Instead of partial withdrawal, Vietnam has continued to dispatch fresh troops to Kampuchea in order to make up for the daily losses inflicted on it by the armed forces of Democratic Kampuchea." This was stated by Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs of the coalition government, in his interview with Drago Tolp, TANJUG correspondent in Bangkok.

Strengthening Resistance

Khieu Samphan said that recently the Vietnamese occupation troops in Kampuchea received large new shipments of Soviet tanks and artillery weapons. However, he said that since 1979 the situation has been increasingly favorable for the resistance forces which have achieved noticeable progress on the military, political and diplomatic fronts. "The recent formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea reflects and has been influenced by the general situation and the strengthening of the broad national resistance against the Vietnamese aggressor," Samphan said.

"During our recent visit to Yugoslavia, we felt the deep sympathy for the struggle of the Khmer people and were able once again to convince ourselves of the support extended by Yugoslavia to the government of Democratic Kampuchea and the Khmer people in their struggle to achieve their legitimate rights," he added and stressed that great efforts were made to form the coalition and achieve the basic goal, which is the unification of all patriotic forces in the struggle against the Vietnamese aggressor, as a result of which the coalition must continue its activity and work straight through until the Vietnamese troops depart and even beyond. "For our part, we will adhere to this goal and respect the principles of the Kuala Lumpur declaration," Khieu Samphan said. It was he and the leaders of the other two fronts, Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Son Sann, who signed the document on the basic goals, framework and principles of the coalition.

Vietnam's Problems

Khieu Samphan said that out in the countryside they are engaged in constant political activity not only among those who supported them prior to 1979 but also among those who opposed the process of collectivization and the former authorities. The results achieved so far also would not have been possible without the support of the entire population. As he pointed out, cooperation has now also been established with the so-called "self-protection" forces which the Vietnamese organized in villages as well as with the Khmer soldiers who were forced to enlist in the army of the puppet regime. According to Samphan, Vietnam has problems not only in the military field but also in the political and economic fields because of difficulties in the supply, transportation and control of its own troops.

He believes that Hanoi continues to engage in diplomatic maneuvers, thereby demonstrating that it is not ready to accept the demands for the withdrawal of its troops. The vice president of Democratic Kampuchea emphasized that, until now, they have repeatedly expressed to Hanoi their readiness to sign a nonagression and friendship treaty between the two countries after the withdrawal of its troops.

According to Samphan, following the departure of the Vietnamese troops, independent, peace-loving, neutral and nonaligned Kampuchea will not demand any compensation for the destruction suffered during the aggression. As regards the international activity of the authorities of Democratic Kampuchea, Khieu Samphan said that their current goal is, at the forthcoming session of the UN General Assembly, to consolidate the seat of the coalition government and induce the General Assembly to clearly and firmly confirm the resolutions adopted at its past sessions which demand the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from the country. He also said that at the summit conference of nonaligned countries, Democratic Kampuchea will raise the question of fulfilling its right to once again be represented in the movement. On the eve of the session of the UN General Assembly, the members of the inner cabinet of the coalition government, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, will hold talks in New York about their future actions, and the session of all members of the coalition government is scheduled to be held in the middle of October.

KHIEU SAMPHAN RECEIVES U.S. JOURNALISTS

BK130540 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] On 4 September 1982, (Daniel Stephen) and (Grepeck), U.S. journalists, arrived in the western region of Democratic Kampuchea.

On the morning of 5 September, Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs, granted an interview to the American guests. Present on the occasion were Mrs Ieng Thirith and a number of Foreign Ministry cadres.

During their stay in the Democratic Kampuchea-controlled zone, the American guests visited a number of villages and interviewed our people who have returned from refugee camps in Thailand. The guests saw with their own eyes that our people are making every effort to increase production to support themselves and the frontline battlefield. They also noted our people's good impression of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas who are waging a struggle against the Vietnamese enemy agressors with great sacrifice.

The American guests filmed a group of Democratic Kampuchean combatants of the National Army and guerrillas who demonstrated guerrilla tactics and the use of modern weapons combined with primitive weapons. They also filmed a group of female guerrillas of the transport units and the transportation of foodstuffs and ammunition to the frontline battlefield.

PHOUMI VONGVICHIT INTERVIEWED BY LE MONDE

BK101322 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 10 Sep 82

[September 9 interview with Phoumi Vongvichit, deputy prime minister and member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP Central Committee, by LE MONDE correspondent Jacques de Barrin -- read by announcer]

[Text] [Question] Is there really a Chinese threat to Laos?

[Answer] Since early 1979, along with their aggression against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists have concentrated important military forces on the Laos-China frontier with the view to threaten Laos and to put pressure on Laos -- the latter with an aim to separate Laos from Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. The Beijing ruling circles have fed a certain number of exiled Lao traitors in their territory and use them in the subversive activities and provocation along the Laos-China border.

The Beijing ruling circles' aim consists of forcing the Lao, Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples to allow Beijing to use the latter group's territory as a springboard to extend their influence and their domination in the entire Southeast Asia. However, these dark schemes are being held in check because the Lao, Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples will more and more strengthen their solidarity so as to safeguard their territory and to maintain their policy of peace, independence, sovereignty, and regarding this matter no compromise will be allowed.

[Question] How has the integration of mountainous tribes been achieved and what are the problems involved?

[Answer] In Laos there are 68 ethnic groups which can be grouped into three main nationalities, and most ethnic groups of those three nationalities live in both mountainous and plains regions. Under their domination, the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists divided them up and cultivated sentiments of contradiction among the tribes on both ideology and the style of living so that the tribes would be in conflict with one another. All of these efforts were aimed at creating favourable conditions for the imperialists and their henchmen to be the master of Laos.

Right at the beginning of the revolution in 1945, we started to eradicate illiteracy among all people with the view to transform and create a basis of equality in all fields and we have progressively strengthened the national solidarity. All ethnic groups of all nationalities enjoy full rights as Lao citizen in all fields.

The efforts in the integration of the ethnic groups who were segregated for centuries by the reactionaries have met with lots of difficulties due to differences in their political consciousness, economic situation, lack of communication network -- all of which accentuate the difficulties. In addition, the international reactionaries and U.S. imperialists and their allies have increasingly intensified their psychological war to incite more and more people to leave the country and become their henchmen.

But during the past 7 years, thanks to political education, people understand more and more the party and government policy. Furthermore, thanks to the good rice harvest in various socialist production units, fewer people leave the country and more and more of the refugees these days decide to return home and, together with their countrymen, have participated in the construction of the fatherland in accordance with the party's and government's policy.

I am convinced that the time will come when the Lao people, appreciating the policy of the party and state, will create better conditions than ever before for the integration of various ethnic groups within one homogeneous population.

[Question] What is your opinion of the movements of various groups opposing your regime? What is your reaction to the recent formation of a coalition government?

[Answer] There are fewer and fewer people these days who can be enticed by the enemies and are willing to come back as henchmen to plunder Lao territory along the border and, upon having more appreciated the party's and government's policy which serves their interests, these people will come back home and will regret having served the enemies.

As far as the so-called "government coalition" is concerned, I think that it is only an unattainable sweet dream of a small group of reactionaries who are being manipulated by the enemies. They are being used as puppets in propaganda which aims to misguide the world opinion. Thus the so-called "formation of a government of coalition" is just a momentary cloud which will soon disintegrate by itself because the government which enjoys administrative power in the Lao People's Democratic Republic stands more firmly then ever on its feet and will continue to lead the people to build their country for a better future and thus none of the reactionaries will be able to mislead them from their targets.

[Question] What is your expectation with regard to the renewal of diplomatic relations with France?

[Answer] I am very glad that the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the French Republic have finally renewed their diplomatic relations. I hope these relations will make the French people understand the Lao people -- who always consider the French people as their good friends -- more. Thus the French Government and people will be in a better position to appreciate the needs of the Lao people, to study the possibility regarding necessary aid to Laos and what in return the French can sincerely expect from the Lao people, who will continually consolidate the solidarity between the peoples of the two countries.

[Question] Is the Lao army capable of containing the current Chinese threat? How much longer will the Vietnamese troops remain in Laos?

[Answer] We have time and again said that the Lao party and government depend on popular national defense. This means all three and a half million Lao people take part in the national defense and public security, having as a solid pillar the Lao People's Armed Forces which have scored victories step by step against the much stronger enemies.

Nowadays, the Lao army, being a solid pillar in our national defense forces, will be able to safeguard the national independence and sovereignty, as we realize that we are struggling for the just cause against the unjust external aggressions. In this regard, if it is needed, we have full rights to ask for aid from the Vietnamese armed forces or those of the other friendly countries which have concern for the security of Laos. Such troops will stay in Lao territory as long as there is external threat and they will only leave when the Lao Government and people judge for themselves that the enemies' threat has come to an end.

[Question] What is the aim of the present governmental reshuffle? How can the government stay close to the people it serves?

[Answer] The reshuffle of the government which is being carried out at present has as its target to best realize the party's policy and governmental plan. The approaching method is to create "rapprochment" between the government cadres and the masses. That means that cadres in all administrative sectors, having studied the party's and government's political lines, will organize the discussions among the masses in the country with the view to reaching unanimity in opinion from which the policy can be best implemented. The population must realize that the single aim of the party and government is to render satisfaction to them all.

Only by so doing will the masses have high regard for cadres and correctly appreciate the aspiration and purpose of the government; and through these cadres, they will be able to feed back suggestions to the government. Thus the government can solve problems in the interests of all.

[Question] When will the new constitution be adopted?

[Answer] The new constitution of our country is under study, keeping in mind it must be made more suitable to the new situation of the country. Once ready, it will be submitted to the People's Supreme Assembly for adoption and then it will officially become effective.

[Question] The government has admitted the existence of reeducation centers. When will such centers be closed down?

[Answer] We have never denied the existence of the centers for the purpose of reeducating officials and personnel of the old regime who must appreciate the policies of the party and government. The reason behind the establishment of the centers stems from the fact that under the colonialist French, these persons had learned and adopted on the whole repressive measures which for more than 60 years have been used against the people. The same is true in the 20-year period of the U.S. aggressive domination in Laos. Hence, there is a need to point to the Lao people to understand their right and wrong behavior and to redress their behavior in the interest of the Lao people.

As regards to this matter, it is evident that such reeducation efforts have been met with good results. These can be backed by the fact that a good number of people who have acquired a correct self-mastery attitude now have returned to work in various government institutions. However, there are yet some people whose concept of the situation is not at the best satisfactory level, and upon joining their families at the request of the latter are deceived by counterreactionary propaganda and escaped from their beloved country. Therefore, we hold that it is still necessary to maintain the centers. The date of their returning, however, depends on themselves.

[Question] I visited Vietnam and met with Nguyen Co Thach who said that Vietnam would withdraw its troops from Kampuchea only when China ceases its aggression and provocation against Vietnam and renegotiates and signs a mutual peaceful coexistence agreement with Vietnam. Would Laos lay similar conditions to that in establishing good relations with China?

[Answer] The conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers had issued a joint communique demanding that the Beijing ruling circles stop all military provocations against the three Indochinese countries and to solve all conflicts through peaceful negotiations.

As for Laos, we call for a halt to the massing of their troops along the Lao border which threatens the security of Laos. We also demand that they stop feeding and supporting the Lao gangs in exile stationed in Chinese territory who carry out provocations along the Laos-China border. Laos and China will coexist in peace if our demands are met.

SITTHI VISITS SINGAPORE, MALAYSIA FOR TALKS

Remarks on Departure

BK101638 Bangkok WORLD in English 10 Sep 82 p 3

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila this morning left for a two-day visit to Singapore and Malaysia for talks on the forthcoming United Nations conference due to be held in Bangkok. His first port of call will be Singapore. ACM Sitthi is scheduled to arrive back in Bangkok tomorrow at 5 p.m.

Speaking to reporters at Don Muang Airport before leaving this morning, ACM Sitthi was asked to comment on Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew's recent speech which suggested that it would be useful for all ASEAN member nations to hold joint military exercises to improve ASEAN defences against communist hegemonism in the region. The foreign minister said that he thought the suggestion came as a response to Lee's worries that the Soviet Union was expanding its influence in the region through Vietnam. ACM Sitthi said there were already bilateral agreements among ASEAN countries concerning military exercises and narcotics suppression activities and that any stepping up of military exercises might generate the impression that ASEAN was a military rather than an economic grouping.

Referring to the disagreements between Thai and Malaysian security forces over communist suppression methods and the general security situation along the Thai-Malaysian border, ACM Sitthi said the issue was like a disagreement between two family members, saying that it was only a small dispute that would easily be resolved.

Comments on Kampuchean Issue

BK110945 Hong Kong AFP in English 0807 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Kuala Lumpur, Sept. 11 (AFP) -- Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said here today there had been no sign of any withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, but he did not expect any major fighting on the Thai-Cambodian border during the current wet season. "According to our reports there has just been a rotation of troops and bringing in of new equipment," instead of any withdrawal as promised in the Ho Chi Minh communique of the three Indochinese foreign ministers in July this year, he said.

The Thai foreign minister, who flew in from Singapore today after talks on Cambodia with Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, on the Cambodian situation, had a two-hour meeting with his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie. He also called on Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed.

Talking to pressmen later, ACM Sitthi said that as chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, he had updated the Malaysian and Singapore leaders on the latest developments in Cambodia, with special reference to the strategy to be followed at the United Nations to ensure the continued seating of Democratic Kampuchea in the world body.

In reply to a question, ACM Sitthi said he was confident that Democratic Kampuchea, which is now headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, would retain its seat in the United Nations when the credentials issue comes up before the new General Assembly session which opens later this month. He expected the vote in favour of Democratic Kampuchea to be more or less the same as last year. "We may gain a little or lose a little," he said. Marshal Sitthi suggested the presence of Prince Sihanouk as head of the Cambodian delegation to the UN might help improve their position.

In reply to a question, the Thai foreign minister said he did not think there would be any "major engagement" by Vietnamese troops along the Thai-Cambodian border during the current rainy season. Asked about reports of recent clashes in the area, he said: "We have heard there was some fighting. It appears to be in small groups of twenties." He said that "if Vietnamese troops shoot across our border now, it would be more as part of reconnaissance than anything else."

Asked to comment on the reported statement of Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew in Jakarta earlier this week that it would be "ideal" for all ASEAN members to join in multilateral military exercises, Marshal Sitthi said this was not raised in his discussions in Singapore. He said it was a good idea to have bilateral or multilateral exercises. "Of course it will be useful for us, but we are not heading for any military pact," he added.

Marshal Sitthi, who was accompanied by Asa Sarasin, head of the Political Department of the Foreign Ministry, left for Bangkok soon after a lunch hosted by the Malaysian foreign minister.

News Conference Held on Return

BK121237 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Report on news conference by Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila on his return from Singapore and Malaysia at Bangkok airport on 11 September -- portions recorded]

[Text] [Begin Sitthi recording] Relations between Thailand and Malaysia are specially important. Malaysia and Thailand are close friends, and even with the new government of Malaysia, both countries intend to maintain their relations as such. Malaysia always treats Thai nationals and officials well. [end recording]

Regarding the Soviet military assistance to Vietnam, the foreign minister said: [begin recording] Vietnam has received new Soviet weapons. I told newsmen during an interview in Malaysia that I believe that Vietnam has not withdrawn its troops from Kampuchea. Vietnamese troops are still near our border. We believe that they are waiting for the dry season. We have to wait and see. Newsmen asked about reports of a Vietnamese incursion into Thailand. I told them that I have not heard anything about it. If true, it must be Vietnamese troops on a patrol mission. Fighting is limited to 10-20 soldiers during the rainy season. We cannot predict what will happen in the next dry season.

[Question] Did you tell them about the possible meeting between ASEAN foreign ministers and Nguyen Co Thach in New York?

[Answer] It depends on Nguyen Co Thach. We did not talk about a meeting between Nguyen Co Thach and foreign ministers of the five ASEAN countries. He has already met with me, Ghazali Shafie and Dhanabalan. It is unlikely that he would meet the five ASEAN foreign ministers in a single meeting. If he requests a meeting with me, I may meet with him again. But that is unlikely. Deputy Foreign Minister Arun and I have already talked with him and his deputy. [end recording]

Further on Remarks to Press

[Excerpts] Thailand and Malaysia are good neighbours and both countries intend to stay that way, Foreign Minister ACM Sitthi Sawetsila said last night on his return from a visit to Singapore and Malaysia.

He also quoted Singapore officials as saying that Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew had not been serious when he suggested joint ASEAN military exercises. ACM Sitthi's remarks on relations with Malaysia, made at Don Muang Airport, were seen as an attempt to downplay remarks by senior Thai officials that Malaysia was "not sincere" about wanting to tackle problems along the common border.

ACM Sitthi told reporters that Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed had left a party meeting to talk to him for an hour. "I told him that we considered Malaysia our good neighbour and he replied that Malaysia attaches special importance to Thailand as a neighbour and has never thought of changing this attitude," he said.

ACM Sitthi said he and Mahathir had discussed the problem of the Muslim minorities in the four southernmost Thai provinces, but declined to elaborate, saying he had to report to Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon first.

In Kuala Lumpur, Malaysian officials said ACM Sitthi, Mahathir and Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie had discussed the question of seating the newly-formed Kampuchean resistance coalition at the United Nations. In Singapore, from where ACM Sitthi flew to Kuala Lumpur yesterday, he discussed the same issue with Prime Minister Lee and Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan. Dhanabalan told reporters after the meeting that there was no problem in transferring the seat currently held by the Khmer Rouge to the new Democratic Kampuchea coalition.

In Bangkok, ACM Sitthi said he had not discussed his reported call for multilateral ASEAN military exercises when he met with Lee for an hour, but said Dhanabalan had told him that it had been only a passing remark by Lee, which was not intended to be taken too seriously.

FURTHER ON JOINT BORDER TALKS WITH MALAYSIA

Talks End 8 Sep

BK090716 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 9 Sep 82 p 5

[Text] The ninth meeting of the joint Tahiland-Malaysia land boundary committee ended yesterday with both sides expressing satisfaction over the outcome of the talks and the progress of work on border survey and demarcation.

The purpose of the three-day meeting which began on Monday was to review the progress of last year's survey and demarcation and to discuss future location and work.

Describing the meeting's atmosphere as friendly, Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon, who headed the Thai delegation, said that Thailand and Malaysia have come to a better understanding of their joint task along the common border.

A memorandum ratifying the eighth demarcation line -- 18.6 kilometres long -- established during August 1 last year until July 31 this year, was co-signed on Monday by Gen Saiyut and his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Datuk Arshad Ayab, under-secretary of the Malaysian Ministry of Land and Rural Development.

Since the beginning of this joint effort in 1973, 58 percent of the total length of the common border, or 335.6 km, has been demarcated. Gen Saiyut told reporters that the work should not be regarded as re-establishing the borderline but an improvement of the old demarcation done by Thailand and Great Britain. Asked about the 200-kilometre fence which Malaysia has put up near the Thai border recently, Gen Saiyut replied that it is Malaysia's domestic affairs, since the fence is in its territory. He also said that Thailand will soon put up a fence stretching from Sadao to Padang Besa in Songkhla Province and to Betong in Yala Province for narcotics and immigration control. Gen Saiyut said that Malaysia will host the next meeting in Kuala Lumpur next June.

["News in Perspective" feature]

[Excerpts] Thailand and Malaysia have completed the demarcation of about 335.6 km of the frontier between the two countries. The distance represents about 58 percent of the entire border line. This joint effort started in 1973 and has the objective to improve the old demarcation done by Thailand and Great Britain.

Early this month high-ranking officials of the two countries met in Bangkok to review the progress of last year's survey and demarcation and to discuss a future location and work. The Thai delegation was headed by Supreme Commander Saiyut Koetphon, while his Malaysian counterpart was the undersecretary of the Ministry of Land and Rural Development.

General Saiyut had said the officials involved in the demarcation faced no accidents and ambushes from terrorists during their operations.

THAI RAT Editorial

BK090734 Bangkok THAI RAT in Thai 5 Sep 82 p 3

[Editorial: "Thailand's Discontent"]

[Text] The commander of the 4th Army Region has stated in public that Malaysia has not given full cooperation in the suppression of the terrorists along the Thai-Malaysian border, particularly in the suppression of the terrorist bandit movement. Thai and Malaysian officials have met many times in the past to discuss border problems, but this is the first such utterance by a Thai officer who is in charge of security along the Malaysian border.

The 4th Army Region commander's frank remarks probably reflect the discontent of the suppression officials under him and he was bold enough to make them public probably because he wields some influence in the current government. At any rate, it would be beneficial for both the Thai and Malaysian Governments to look into their respective suppression machineries.

In the past, Malaysia has suspected Thailand of being a sanctuary for the Chinese communist guerrillas, but Thailand has denied this. Malaysian soldiers have on many occasions crossed the border to join Thai troops in joint suppression campaigns, and Thailand has not made an issue out of it. However, Thailand has noted that terrorist bandits would flee into Malaysia whenever it launched suppression campaigns.

In sum, both Thailand and Malaysia suspect each other, but they have not brought this matter up for discussion at their meetings. It seems that only cooperation was made public in their joint statements about the meetings. Now that the suppression side has made known its points, Thailand and Malaysia should take the opportunity to amend their various forms of cooperation so that they will yield mutual benefits. Thai-Malaysian cooperation at the government-to-government level seems good, but Malaysia appears to show considerable desire to please the parties which control the majority of votes in its northern region.

In the meantime, Thailand must show to Malaysia that it sincerely wants to bring peace to the areas near the common border and desires cooperation in which neither Malaysia nor Thailand takes advantage of the other. We hope that future meetings between the two countries will show progress on the border situation. We hope that Malaysia will show its sincerity by not exploiting its neighboring country for its domestic political interests. Malaysia's domestic political interests must be separated from interests of bilateral relations with Thailand; otherwise, mutual suspicion will never be resolved.

Thai-Malaysian border cooperation against both ordinary criminals and political terrorists will bring peace to the border. A dispute between countries having a contiguous border usually intensifies to open conflict; the Indochinese situation is a good example. We do not want such an occurrence on the Thai-Malaysian border.

PRIME MINISTER DISCUSSES ECONOMIC SITUATION

BK030450 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon, as chairman of the government-private sector consultative committee in charge of economic problems, delivered a speech at the reception held last night to mark the committee's first founding anniversary. He said: All parties are much concerned about the country's economic situation and wish to see the government solve the problems quickly. Our nation is like a big boat with both the government and private sectors as its crewmen. Once a problem arises, everyone must help to find the solution. Our economic problems are many and long-standing, but they are not insoluble, provided we establish mutual understanding and a common view of the real nature of our problems and seek solutions through joint efforts.

The economic troubles derive basically from two sources, namely, the instability of the world economy, and the fact that we have not prepared ourselves to meet it. However, the government has done its best to ensure economic growth. Many countries admire the way we are handling our economic affairs.

The prime minister continued: To solve our problems in the foreign sector, we must implement a policy that keeps us in step with the world. Under this policy, representatives of private institutions have been invited to accompany official teams to foreign countries. Thai ambassadors and officials of the Commerce Ministry and other agencies with offices abroad have been clearly instructed on the government's policies. The prime minister said he wishes to invite the private business sector to join the government sector in implementing its policy of keeping in step with the world to form a single economic team for the country.

The prime minister said: The weakness that threatens the survival of the nation in the future is rural poverty. He said that, throughout his military career, he had been in such close contact with the countryside that he could claim to know the life of the people in rural areas well. There are tens of millions of people who are now living in poverty and do not have enough to eat. This is a strategic problem which must be solved by the government in order to free these people from poverty. If we succeed, it means that we have solved the problems for the majority of the people.

Taxation, the prime minister said, is another issue concerning everyone. The government has mapped out measures to lighten heavy burdens of farmers, instead of filling its coffers. Meanwhile, an export refund law was passed to help the private business sector. Two investment service centers have been set up to process investors' applications for promotional privileges within 19 days for each case. Officials of the two centers who fail to carry out their duties properly will face disciplinary action. It is anticipated that this new policy will help create a better investment climate in the country.

VNA REJECTS PRC 'FABRICATION' ON AIR INTRUSION

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 -- The Chinese Foreign Ministry today sent a note to the Vietnamese Embassy in Beijing alleging that on September 10 two Vietnamese MIG-21 jet planes intruded into the air-space of Guangxi Province, China, for two minutes.

VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to categorically reject this fabrication. This is premeditated action of the Chinese authorities aimed at coping with Vietnam's proposal for cessation of all armed and other hostile activities along the Vietnamese-Chinese border on the occasion of the national days of the two countries, and at misleading public opinion, which is welcoming Vietnam's good will and expressing its wish for peace in the Vietnamese-Chinese border areas.

NOTE TO UN REJECTS THAI CHARGES OF INTRUSIONS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 11 -- The Vietnamese permanent mission to the United Nations has sent a note to UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, rejecting the fabrication contained in the note of August 16 sent by the Thai permanent mission to the secretary-general alleging that Vietnamese troops had intruded into Thai soil and territorial waters.

NHAN DAN COMMENTARY VIEWS 12TH CPC CONGRESS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 -- The 12th Congress of the Communist Party of China has legitimized Deng Xiaoping's line, remarks NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper says: In recent years, never has an official document of the Communist Party of China contained so many technical terms of Marxism-Leninism as the documents of the 12th congress. Obviously, they have taken pains to write them in such a way as to try to create an impression that that is a new jug containing new wine. Their hope is to fool the Chinese people and other people round the world into believing that the Beijing leaders are returning to the path they have abandoned.

However, at light touching, the thin Marxist-Leninist paint will go off and Maoism modernized to suit Deng Xiaoping's doctrine about the cat will be revealed in full. The core of this ideology is the selfish national interests. Deng's view is that all is for the national interests and that any doctrine that serves the national interests is good. This is pragmatism advocating complete reliance on capitalism and strategic cooperation with imperialism to gain capital and technology to carry out the four modernizations in order to create the material basis of Chinese expansionism and hegemonism.

NHAN DAN continues: At Deng's congress, they have also spoken of opposing imperialism and colonialism, but have endorsed full alignment with the U.S. and the imperialism camp to oppose the world socialist system.

The 12th congress has legitimized Deng Xiaoping's line and confirmed him as leader, although he has declared to pull back to the second line. However, he has, in fact, still seized key positions. Deng has basically made a revolution in the leadership, but this does not mean he has won complete victory. The power scramble is unfolding right amidst top circles.

One has to look at what Deng Xiaoping does, but not merely listen to what he says. He may have used all the terminology of Marxism-Leninism, but his heart is daily beating to the rhythm of imperialism against world socialism.

BACKGROUND TO POLICY TRENDS IN PRC REVIEWED

OW130233 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 4 Sep 82

[NHAN DAN 28 August article: "China in the 6 Years Since Mao Zedong," subtitled "Reviewing the Past Helps One Understand the Present"]

[Text] After repeated delays, the 12th CPC National Congress is scheduled to open on 1 September. A UPI dispatch from Beijing said that the congress would be a milestone in Deng Xiaoping's successful completion of a series of political maneuvers and that supporters of his views on modernizing China would take the place of (?dissident) veteran cadres within the CPC. This is not a groundless prediction, because U.S. journalists are quite familiar with the behavior of Deng Xiaoping, who used to call the United States a paper tiger and has now called himself a poor friend of the United States. As an old Chinese saying goes, reviewing the past helps one understand the present; that is, we can gain new insight through restudying old material. A review of the development of China in the past more than half a century indicates that, since the founding of the CPC in 1921, the revolutionary struggles of China and its people has always been carried out amidst life-and-death struggles among various factions within the CPC. It has been an incessant bloody struggle for power between the revolutionaries and the counterrevolutionaries, between the revolutionaries and the opportunists. The entire process of development is perpetuated in struggles between the revolutionary and counterrevolutionary roads. The former is represented by the Chinese working class, which has maintained close contact with the international working class and world revolution, while the latter is represented by nationalists and opportunists of various shades who, with ancient emperors' chauvinism and petty bourgeois and counterrevolutionary bourgeois ideologies, have been hostile to socialism and communism.

The CPC was founded with the assistance of the Comintern and the CPSU. It shouldered the historical task of leading the workers' revolution and revolutionary movements waged by other democratic patriotic forces in China. After six congresses, the CPC gradually defined the nature and content of the revolution in China, namely, it would be that of a nationalist revolution. Combining nationalism with the movement against imperialism and feudalism, the CPC solved the question of the (?course) of the Chinese revolution. Because of this, the CPC was able to lead penetrating and vigorous revolutionary movements in various parts of China in the 15 years from 1921 to 1935. With numerous heroic fighting chapters in its history, the CPC built itself into a proletarian, revolutionary political party which had glorious traditions and broad and deep support, winning the trust of the Chinese people and admiration from the progressive peoples of the world. From the time of heroic struggle against opportunist forces within the party, including the Chen Duxiu faction, until now, Maoism has always been the most dangerous and harmful thing to the CPC. Maoism, which was a new ideology developed from petty bourgeois nationalism and big-power chauvinism, called for the resurrection of the (?Heavenly Kingdom). After staging a coup d'etat and seizing the leadership at the Zunyi Conference, held at the end of the Long March, the Maoists, who called for sinicized Marxism and building Chinese-style Marxism, in fact followed a bourgeois nationalist revolutionary line. They rejected what they called the Russian version of Marxism. In order to impose their views and line on the party, Mao Zedong and his followers launched a rectification campaign and purged tens of thousands of people. They attacked those who repudiated the political program put forward at the Sixth CPC National Congress in 1928 as dogmatists who worshipped things foreign. The report delivered by Mao Zedong at the Seventh National Congress in 1945 concerning the coalition government explained his views on new nationalism and was aimed at affirming his leading position in the party. In this way, the first round of the power struggle, which started with the coup d'etat at the Zunyi Conference, lasted 10 years, bringing the number of victims to nearly a million, including countless deaths. During this period, Mao Zedong had already expressed his intention to betray the Soviet Union and tried his utmost to establish contacts with the United States, playing the trick of sitting on the top of a mountain to watch the tigers fight. However, he miscalculated in his intention. The year 1945 was not only the year in which Mao Zedong Thought and the nationalist line won initial victory within the CPC, but was also the year in which the Soviet Union and world revolution won a historic victory.

The great victory of the Soviet Union changed the balance of power in the world, promoted the revolution in China and, at the same time, disrupted Mao Zedong's strategic alliance.

As an ultra opportunist, Mao Zedong coasted along with the changing situation and solemnly declared his unreserved admiration for the Soviet Union, addressing it as big brother. The immense assistance given by the Soviet Union to China was one of the decisive factors in the victory of the Chinese revolution. The foundation of the People's Republic of China in 1949 was not only the great achievement of the Chinese people's revolutionary struggle, led by the CPC, but also a brilliant victory of the unity and friendship of proletarian internationalism. As a result of struggle waged by the genuine socialist forces in the CPC, the Eighth CPC National Congress in 1956 defeated Maoism and formulated a program on socialist revolution in China.

Just a year later, Mao Zedong launched a counterattack and (?mustered support) to impose his thesis on the three flags in a vain attempt to force China to make a great leap forward and become a superpower. This struggle lasted 10 years and Mao Zedong was once again defeated. In 1966, the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution was launched. Mao Zedong ordered the Red Guards to bombard the bourgeois leadership in the party. He relied on the army and 30 million Red Guards to stage the second coup d'etat to subvert the CPC and seize power. Nevertheless, he encountered strong resistance in the CPC and from Chinese society, causing a ruthless civil war, which destroyed the Chinese cultural legacy. Mao Zedong successively eliminated opponents, but failed to stop resistance.

After Mao Zedong Thought became the predominant force in the CPC in 1945, from 1966 to 1976, the decade of the second round of the power struggle, he tried, by hook or crook, to make Chinese society and the world situation develop according to his subjective wishes. It was also a decade of unprecedented growth in the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist community. The Vietnamese people won a brilliant victory over the No 1 imperialist aggressors. The three big revolutionary trends of the times overcame the obstacles caused by Mao Zedong Thought and vigorously surged ahead to mature in accordance with the law of historical development. Now, the Chinese expansionist hegemonists can no longer use Marxism-Leninism as their signboard and have, therefore, unabashedly colluded with U.S. imperialism in opposing the Soviet Union and betraying the Vietnamese people, carrying out the most sordid activities in the international arena. As a result, after the death of the great helmsman, China was on the verge of collapse. Although the method of struggle between the lines and for power has changed somewhat since Mao Zedong's death, its intensity and complexity are on a par with the life-and-death struggles in his lifetime.

If the history of the Communist Party of China is characterized by endless factional struggles, the path traversed by the CPC since Mao Zedong's death, especially in the 5 years between 11th and 12th congresses of the party, has been a (?stormy) one.

Even now, Deng Xiaoping and his faction are attending the congress as limited winners. Quite a few of their strong opponents are still seated together with them in the front row. Only the Jiang Qing and Wang Dongxing factions have been totally ousted.

The last telling blow dealt at Deng Xiaoping by Mao Zedong, through the gang of four, was in early April 1976. Just 15 months after Deng Xiaoping's rehabilitation, for which he had made self-criticism, admitted his guilt and again acknowledged Mao Zedong as his master, he was again brought down by the Jiang Qing faction.

On 9 September 1976, Mao Zedong died. Having suffered so much, the masses of the Chinese people all hoped for change. A new alignment of forces took shape among the various factions in power.

After the Red Guard faction was suppressed, Deng Xiaoping, together with the Hua and Ye factions, taking advantage of the masses' desire for a change, mounted an anti-Cultural Revolution campaign in order to muster their forces. At the same time, they put forward many reform slogans. The Hua and Ye factions, which were credited with the downfall of the gang of four, joined forces. Hua Guofeng inherited power from Mao Zedong. However, he felt unable to consolidate his position on his own. In July 1977, Deng Xiaoping was reinstated for a second time. Since then, an acute struggle has taken place between the Deng and Hua factions.

Political life in China in the past 5 years has been very complicated. There is the struggle of the masses for their livelihood rights and to safeguard the future of the country. There is the struggle of the true revolutionary forces against the reactionary domestic and foreign policies of those in power. But most conspicuous is the power struggle of the Deng faction against all other factions. The Deng faction tries to defeat and eliminate all other factions to arrogate all power to itself. However, the other factions are not reconciled to their defeat and, having lost one position after another, are doing their utmost to fight back.

After the Fourth Session of the Fifth NPC and a number of working conferences of the CPC Central Committee, and at the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee, the Hua and Ye factions found themselves in an increasingly inferior position, and the Deng faction gained control of many key departments. What does this change mean?

The Deng faction describes the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee as a great turning point of far-reaching significance in the party's history since the founding of the People's Republic. At that session, Deng Xiaoping put forward the four modernizations strategy, also known as the New Long March, aimed at building China into a modern, powerful socialist country beginning to (?stand on an equal footing) with the Soviet Union and the United States by the end of the century.

After the third plenary session, we saw some new things indeed taking place in China's economy. There were some improvements in economic work; some "left" guiding thoughts in economic construction were criticized; [words indistinct] sector of the economy was revived; economic plans were readjusted; individual farming was resumed; material incentives were used; and a policy of opening to the outside world, mainly to the developed countries of the West, was adopted. These pragmatic economic measures have brought some results and served the Deng faction's purposes of deceiving the masses and advertising his line. However, before long facts showed that Deng's strategy was no less adventurist than Mao Zedong's strategy of the three red banners.

Deng Xiaoping's war of aggression against Vietnam in early 1979 quickly exposed the nature and goals of his entire line and policies. While the Chinese leaders prepared and held the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee to shift the work emphasis to the four modernizations, they also stepped up preparations to teach Vietnam a lesson. At the same time, Deng Xiaoping visited the United States and Japan and asked the most reactionary imperialist and militarist forces to lend him a helping hand in his planned armed invasion of Vietnam.

The war of aggression against Vietnam in early 1979 not only constituted a terrible crime committed by Deng Xiaoping and his followers against a socialist country and exposed their betrayers' features, but caused them to suffer heavy losses militarily, politically, economically and spiritually.

Deng Xiaoping's theories are nothing but Mao Zedong's theories expressed in different ways and forms, that is, modern, pragmatic Maoism, which, in essence, is no different from the past.

The reactionary clique among the Chinese authorities has realized that the "left" adventurist line cannot succeed and that they must take another road -- the road of completely siding with imperialism in order to use its funds and technology to build China into the world's greatest industrial and military power within the shortest possible time. This amounts to further allying with imperialism to oppose the Soviet Union, the socialist community and world revolution.

However, the militarization of the national economy and alliance with imperialism against the socialist countries for the achievement of expansionist and hegemonist goals have become profound factors hindering national economic development and impoverishing China's working people.

Deng Xiaoping's four modernizations policy, like his foreign policy, runs counter to the Chinese people's interests and wishes. Its inherent contradictions are quickly revealed. In a short period, the four modernizations program has become deflated, like a balloon. At first, the program had an economic target totaling more than U.S. $600 billion. It has now been reduced by two-thirds and will later be further readjusted. Like Mao Zedong in the past, Deng Xiaoping has been, and is, faced with resistance from many quarters, including the armed forces, on which anyone who wants to hold power in China must rely. Like Mao Zedong, Deng Xiaoping and his followers have no choice but to mount one movement after another to get rid of dissidents.

At the end of 1981, the last of the 3 years of economic readjustment, Zhao Ziyang was forced to announce that another 5 years, or an even longer period, would be needed to carry out readjustment. The resolution of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee decided to embark on a New Long March to build China into a modern, powerful socialist country before the end of this century. Since the beginning of 1981, Beijing leaders including Deng Xiaoping have, time and again, indicated to foreign visitors that China only plans to attain a relatively comfortable standard of living by the end of this century.

A UPI commentary on 8 December 1981 pointed out that 1981 had been a year of political and economic trial for Deng Xiaoping. It is reported that until shortly before the convocation of the 12th CPC National Congress, the Deng faction had continued to suppress various forces opposed to it. What the Deng Xiaoping faction has to say at the 12th CPC National Congress will certainly remain the same. But it cannot be the only voice at the congress. At the 12th CPC National Congress, within the CPC, and in Chinese society, there are other voices, including the voices of justice from those who have fought bloody battles for the true revolutionary cause of the Chinese working class and the Chinese nation.

No matter what mantle it assumes and how unpredictable and modernized it is, the essence of Maoism is still big-nation expansionism and big-power hegemonism. Expansionist hegemonism is the political manifestation of the theory of the heavenly dynasty of a big nation and has become out of date against the background in which imperialism disintegrated and big and small nations, even small island nations, embark on the age of independence and freedom and become independent sovereign states.

Instructed by Mao Zedong in the past and again by the Deng Xiaoping faction today, the reactionary forces among the Chinese authorities have persistently carried out a policy hostile to the socialist community and the Soviet Union, citadel of peace and revolution in the world, and opposing Vietnam, which is upholding the banner of national independence and socialism. The Chinese policymakers have loudly attacked Soviet hegemonism and sworn that they will never seek hegemony. However, the criterion for verifying truth is not empty talk, but actual action. Mao Zedong and the present Chinese leaders share a common point in their ultimate goal. To achieve their hegemonist aim, they have committed various perverse acts just as the ancient emperors of the Qin, Chu, Qi and Han Dynasties did. They are different only in the methods for achieving their aim. The bayonet and the pen were the two primary tools of Mao Zedong, while the Deng Xiaoping faction has pursued a pragmatic policy. It is the policy of resorting to all means to lay the material foundation, as quickly as possible, for political strategy. However, the policy has failed to yield the results expected by the Deng Xiaoping faction. In allying with the imperialists, the Deng Xiaoping faction has gone further than Mao Zedong and, with its anti-Soviet policy, formed the counterrevolutionary alliance and antisocialist front which includes the United States.

Deng Xiaoping has openly called the Soviet Union the No 1 enemy and most dangerous power. He has urged the United States, Japan and other imperialist countries to step up the arms race and stir up international tension. He has opened China's door for Western capitalism and allowed the United States to set up a base in China for monitoring Soviet intelligence. Under arrangements by the Deng Xiaoping faction, China, the United States, Japan and NATO have carried out strategic cooperation in the political, military, economic and other fields. Although difficulties and contradictions remain, (?cooperation) has materialized.

Another example showing that the Deng Xiaoping faction has gone further than Mao Zedong is the destructive war in various fields against the Indochinese countries since the disastrous defeat in the war of aggression against Vietnam launched by China.

Maoism, since Mao Zedong's death, has rapidly exposed its true countenance and suffered one failure after another. First of all, the strategy of the four modernizations has been declared bankrupt. Although the economic situation is a little better than during the Cultural Revolution, the socio-economic crisis has continued to be aggravated. The target set earlier had to be abandoned. Second, the war of aggression against Vietnam encountered a total defeat and China withdrew from Kampuchea. Third, the remnants of the Hua Guofeng, Jiang Qing and Ye Jianying factions could not be restrained easily. Antagonist forces still exist in party, government and army organizations at various levels, notably at and below provincial level. Therefore, the Deng Xiaoping faction has been compelled to compromise with the various factions.

The situation in various fields in China is still chaotic and (?tense) and is not, as claimed by the Beijing propaganda machine, characterized by great order. The Deng Xiaoping faction may gain the upper hand at the 12th National CPC Congress, but will not be in a dominant position, as Mao Zedong was at the 7th and 9th CPC National Congresses. Mao Zedong was in an absolute dominant position at these congresses, but the development of the situation ultimately changed everything. In view of the Western mass media's speculation in the early 1970's concerning China after Mao Zedong's death, the Maoist faction said at that time that the Great Cultural Revolution would ensure that China retained its color tens of thousands of years from now. Mao Zedong designated his well-tested successor and told him: "With you in charge, I am at ease." Shortly after Mao Zedong died, the situation took a drastic change. The strategic arrangement of the great helmsman was wrong.

Deng Xiaoping has followed Mao Zedong's example in appointing a number of his confidants to key positions so that he can withdraw to the second line and be a backstage ruler. Deng Xiaoping will not feel at ease in his late years. The development of the situation in China in the next decade will be determined by the result of the next round in the power struggle.

BULGARIAN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DELEGATION VISITS

Greeting by Nguyen Huu Tho

NHAN DAN Welcomes Visit

BK110804 Hanoi Domestic Sercie in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 10 Sep 82

[NHAN DAN 11 September editorial: "Warmly Welcome the Distinguished Bulgarian Guests"]

[Text] Headed by Comrade Stanko Todorov, member of the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the National Assembly of the Bulgarian People's Republic, and a Bulgarian National Assembly delegation is due to arrive in Hanoi today to begin an official friendship visit to Vietnam at the invitation of our National Assembly.

Together with the compatriots in the capital, the people throughout our country are very glad to welcome these envoys of the fraternal Bulgarian people and are showing their great joy over this new development of the close friendship between Vietnam and Bulgaria.

The militant solidarity and the relations of cooperation between our two fraternal countries which were developed and strengthened by Comrade Ho Chi Minh and Comrade Georgi Dimitrov have gone through a long period of development. On the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, the friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Bulgaria have been strengthened constantly and have developed to the benefit of the two fraternal peoples and of the socialist community.

Our people admire the heroic revolution of the Bulgarian people and highly appraise the fruits of the labor of our Bulgarian friends in building socialism in their country. Seven 5-year plans have been carried out satisfactorily. The national economy has developed constantly at a high rate, thus advancing Bulgaria to the rank of developed countries in Europe as well as in the world. The Eighth 5-Year Plan (1981-85) is being carried out successfully. Developed socialism is advancing at a steady rate.

The many shining successes of socialim which have resulted from the implementation of the April guidelines and the new program of the Bulgarian Communist Party, under the leadership of Comrade Todor Zhivkov, reflect the intelligence and the diligent and courageous working spirit of the fraternal Bulgarian people. These successes, which contain many diverse experiences, have contributed to emphasizing the superiority of pragmatic socialism.

Pursuing a correct foreign policy, the Communist Party, the state and the people of Bulgaria have paid great attention to strengthening their alliance and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries of the socialist community, have actively supported the world revolution and progress, and have persisted in struggling to maintain peace and security in the world, including peace and security in Europe and the Balkan region.

In their relations with our country, the party, the state and the people of Bulgaria have always strongly supported our revolutionary undertaking. They have given our people their wholehearted, invaluable and effective assistance. These friends have heartily assisted us in building socialism and have resolutely sided with us in our anti-U.S. resistance for national salvation in the past as well as in our present struggle against the reactionary forces in the Beijing leadership which are working hand in glove with the U.S. imperialists. We sincerely thank the party, state and fraternal people of Bulgaria for their solidarity and valuable assistance.

With deep emotion, we remember a solemn assertion by Comrade Todor Zhivkov that Vietnam can always trust the fraternal support given by the communists and the entire working people of Bulgaria.

Thoroughly aware that international solidarity is a great source of strength and an important factor for victories, our people are very elated at the strengthening of relations of friendship and cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and other fraternal socialist countries.

Following our people's historic victory over the U.S. aggressors, these relations have entered a new developmental stage. The visit to Bulgaria of our state-party delegation led by Comrade Le Duan in October 1975, and the visit to Vietnam of the Bulgarian state-party delegation led by Comrade Todor Zhivkov from September to October 1979, were important events that marked a new page in the history of relations between the two fraternal countries. The effects of the treaty of friendship and cooperation have also been serving the revolutions in each country and the benefits of the common revolutionary cause.

We are convinced that this visit to our country of the Bulgarian National Assembly delegation will even further strengthen the militant solidarity and will further expand the relations of all-round cooperation between the two fraternal countries of Vietnam and Bulgaria.

With our warmest sentiments, we respectfully wish esteemed Comrade Stanko Todorov and other members of the Bulgarian National Assembly delegation fine success in their friendship visit to our country.

PHAM VAN DONG SENDS LETTER TO PROVINCIAL MEETING

BK070752 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] The Ministry of Finance recently organized a conference in Thanh Hoa Province to exchange experiences and initiatives in improving accounting work throughout the country. The conference was honored to receive a letter from Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong. In his letter, the chairman pointed out: This conference is important as far as the building and development of the economy is concerned. We cannot manage and operate all activities of the national economy effectively if accounting work is done poorly. Therefore, we must always think of and study ways to constantly improve accounting work at all echelons and in all sectors and establishments.

GROUP ON AGED FORMED; NGUYEN HUU THO REPORTS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 3 -- A national committee for the International Year of the Aged has been set up here. At its first meeting on August 31 the committee adopted a programme of action and an appeal, and heard reports on various aspects of the care of old people. One report was made by Nguyen Huu Tho, the committee's chairman, who hailed the International Year of the Aged as a cause of conscience in line with the tradition of the Vietnamese people. Nguyen Huu Tho also said that the number of old people was increasing, with nearly four million sexagenarians and older ones, or 7.4 percent of the population. This, Nguyen Huu Tho said, has posed a whole range of economic and social problems to be solved satisfactorily in order to ensure a comfortable life for the aged.

The committee's leading body includes five vice-chairmen: Doctor Dang Hoi Xuan, minister of public health; Nguyen Thi Xuyen, representative of the Women's Union; Pham Khac Hoe, representative of the Fatherland Front; Nguyen Kien, representative of the Ministry for Disabled Soldiers and Social Affairs; and Mai Van Muon, representative of the General Department for Physical Culture and Sports. It is assisted by a 14-member Secretariat under Doctor Nguyen Cong Thang.

MINISTER ON SUZUKI'S RESPONSE TO PRC AID REQUEST

OW140351 Tokyo KYODO in English 0329 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 14, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki intends to respond positively to a Chinese request for Japanese technical help in development of the Sanjian Plains in Heilongjiang Province, northeastern China, when he visits China from September 26. This was revealed Tuesday by Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa when he met the press after conferring with the prime minister to report the results of his China visit September 2-13.

He told Suzuki the Chinese Government wanted to discuss the problem at the forthcoming Japan-China summit meeting or at the scheduled bilateral ministerial meeting toward the end of the year. Suzuki showed great interest in the Chinese project, and Japanese and Chinese leaders will certainly consider it at their meeting scheduled for September 27, Tazawa said.

Japan has been carrying out a three-year development survey at a 40,000-hectare model area in the 10-million-hectare Sanjian Plains, most of it undeveloped, at a cost of yen 1 billion since last year at Chinese request for Japan's technical cooperation.

CUBAN FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES FOR WEEK'S VISIT

OW111213 Tokyo KYODO in English 1200 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Osaka, Sept 11, KYODO -- Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca arrived here Saturday on a week-long visit at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry. He is the first Cuban foreign minister to visit Japan. He is stopping here on his way home from official visits to Spain and the Philippines.

After visiting Kyoto Sunday and Hiroshima Tuesday, Malmierca will proceed to Tokyo Wednesday, where he will make a formal call on Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday. Meetings are also planned with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and Yoshihiro Inayama, president of the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren).

Cuba, hard hit by foreign currency shortages due to plunging prices for sugar, its mainstay export item, sought a 10-year moratorium on some dollar 3 billion in debts to Western consortium members, including Japan, on August 30. Malmierca's visit is aimed at seeking the Japanese Government's understanding and cooperation regarding the request. Visiting Cuban Minister of Foreign Trade, Ricardo Cabrizas, officially made a related request when he met his Japanese counterpart, Shintaro Abe, Friday.

However, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi is expected to reject any such request on the grounds that the issue should be discussed by all the creditor nations. The main focus of the talks between the two foreign ministers is expected to be the international situation. Sakurauchi will express the Japanese Government's opposition to Cuba's dispatch of troops to Africa and its intervention in Central American conflicts, Foreign Ministry officials said.

ZAIRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES 7 SEPTEMBER

OW070753 Tokyo KYODO in English 0707 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 7, KYODO -- Zaire's Foreign Minister Yoka Mangono arrived in Tokyo Tuesday for a four-day unofficial visit to Japan. The foreign minister will pay a call on Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday and is scheduled to meet with his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi Thursday to exchange views on promotion on bilateral ties, Foreign Ministry officials said.

The Central African Republic is rich in mineral resources such as cobalt and copper. Japan has provided Zaire with a yen loan totaling yen 34.5 billion, the highest amount given to a nation south of the Sahara, to help construct a bridge over the Zaire River.

ABE, GATT DIRECTOR GENERAL HOLD MEETING

OW140425 Tokyo KYODO in English 0407 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 14, KYODO -- The director general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) called on Japan Tuesday to take the initiative in making a projected GATT ministerial meeting successful, officials said. Arthur Dunkel also asked for Japanese help in maintaining free trade principles in a meeting with International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe.

A ministry spokesman said Dunkel called the weeks preceding the controversial GATT conference November 24-26 in Geneva "crucial" to its outcome. Despite requests for a delay in holding the meeting from some European countries, the director general said it will go on as scheduled, the spokesman said.

Abe raised the issue of European complaints about Japan's distribution networks and industrial structure saying it has no bearing on GATT Article 23. The ministry spokesman quoted Dunkel as saying he is closely watching developments.

Dunkel conferred with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi before his talks with Abe. He was to meet with Agriculture, Forestry, Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa and Economic Planning Agency Director General Toshio Komoto and pay a courtesy call on Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki before leaving for home later in the day.

DEFENSE OFFICIAL EXPLAINS SEALANES DEFENSE

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 14, (KYODO) -- A Defense Agency official told the Diet Tuesday the sealanes to be defended by Japan are not limited to those to the southeast and southwest, as previously stated by the agency. Haruo Natsume, head of the agency's Defense Bureau, made the remarks in answer to interpellations at the House of Councillors Audit Committee and Ad Hoc Committee on Security Affairs.

He said the sealanes to be defended are to be set up subject to conditions in an emergency and will be fixed in terms of sea areas, not of mere lines. This was regarded as widening the scope of sealanes to be defended up to 1,000 nautical miles off the Japanese shore to a sea area.

Natsume said the aim is to secure security for ocean traffic and that Japan will defend sealanes by a combination of antisubmarine patrols, defense of ports and key straits and securing of security of sealanes.

Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito also said Japan will participate in a Japan-U.S. joint study on defense of sealanes, agreed on at a bilateral security consultative meeting held in Honolulu earlier this month, within the limits of Japan's individual self-defense right, not from the viewpoint of collective security.

DEFENSE AGENCY ISSUES 1982 WHITE PAPER

OW140155 Tokyo KYODO in English 0115 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 14, KYODO -- The Defense Agency issued its annual report Tuesday declaring that a large-scale Soviet military buildup is a "serious challenge" to Western nations. At the same time, it said Japan must reinforce its defense capability, particularly its ability to defend sealanes for vital supplies.

The agency issued the report, the 1982 edition of its white paper on defense, after receiving approval of the Cabinet of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

The white paper said the Soviet Union's policy of expansion against the background of its large-scale military buildup is a "serious challenge to Western nations." It said that as a member of the West, "it is important for Japan to build up its defense capability," especially in the defense of sealanes.

The white paper also stresses the need to build up the patriotism of the Japanese people and awaken their interest in defense affairs. It asserts that every Japanese citizen has an important obligation to make utmost efforts in a national emergency to protect the homeland against invaders. Firm support by a patriotic public would enable the defense forces to defend the homeland effectively in an emergency the paper said.

The paper calls for creation of a nationwide divil defense system to cope with damage from a possible invasion. It urges thorough study of such an organization as soon as possible with the consensus of the people.

It said greater efforts should be made to maintain the nation's stockpiles of strategic defense materials to tide over the emergency. Specifying the key role to be played by the defense industry in the event of contingency, the white paper urged the government to take effective steps to nurture businesses related to weapons and defense equipment.

It also stressed that Japan has to play a key role for defense of the Western bloc because of its economic power. Japan now shares 10 percent of the world gross national product (GNP).

But the Defense Agency is not sure how far Japan can go in defending itself, according to the white paper. Though Japan has the right to collective defense under international law, the paper went on, the country is "regarded" as being unable to exercise it under the postwar peace constitution.

The white paper also said Japan's basic defense policy, which calls for U.S. military help only when the country cannot cope with external aggression alone, remains unchanged.

The Japan-U.S. security treaty has played as a deterrent against possible invasions of Japan, according to the white paper. But it added that the 1960 accord has also served to ensure U.S. national security.

The United States now stations about 45,000 troops in Japan, including 22,000 marines. The white paper said Japan has been doing its best to help reduce U.S. defense spending by accepting a larger share of the cost of maintaining the U.S. forces in the country.

The 1982 edition of the white paper was released following a Japan-U.S. security consultative meeting held in Honolulu earlier this month, in which the United States sought Japan's stepped up defense buildup. The three-day meeting made a major step in bilateral military cooperation with agreement to start joint study on defense of Japan's vital sealanes in the event of war.

The white paper was made public one day after the National Defense Council approved the agency's 1983-87 defense buildup program. By completing the five-year plan, the white paper said, Japan can achieve the level of defense capability set by the national defense program outline drawn up in 1976 at least in terms of quantity.

But some parliamentarians of Prime Minister Suzuki's Liberal-Democratic Party call the 1976 defense program "inadequate," saying it was a product of detente between the United States and Soviet Union.

The five-year plan has earmarked about yen 4.5 trillion (dollar 17 billion) for military hardware, including 75 F-15 jet fighters and 50 P-3C antisubmarine patrol planes. The Defense Agency also plans to purchase 373 tanks, many of them to be deployed in Hokkaido, the major northern island considered vulnerable to possible Soviet attack.

The white paper also called for greater Japan-U.S. cooperation in military technology and equipment exchanges, taking note of repeated U.S. requests for a two-way flow in the field instead of the present one-way traffic from the United States to Japan. Another form of Japan-U.S. cooperation involves joint military exercises which will be further promoted in the future to enable joint operations more "smoothly and effectively" in the event of emergencies, the white paper added.

Opposition Reaction

[Text] Tokyo, Sep 14, KYODO -- Japan's opposition political parties were divided Tuesday in their reaction to the latest defense report issued by the government.

The major opposition Japan Socialist Party charged that the report was designed to "justify" the country's defense buildup program. The party, which is opposed to the Japan-U.S. security treaty under which the U.S. is committed to provide Japan with the nuclear umbrella, said the report is also aimed at giving up the so-called "exclusive defense strategy" and openly switching to offensive "frontal defense" strategy.

The moderate opposition Democratic Socialist Party said it appreciated the report for giving more detailed analysis on the international situation, centering on the Soviet threat. However, the party said it was regrettable that the defense report confined itself to giving out only general principles and failed to provide the people with any clear "directions."

The Japan Communist Party said the "special characteristic" of the report is that it "incorporated" Japan into the concept of limited nuclear war. It said the report also "candidly" showed the government's plan to positively deal with the defense of sealanes stretching 1,000 nautical miles from the Japanese archipelago on the basis of the pledge Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki made in summit talks with U.S. President Ronald Reagan last year.

BRIEFS

TRADE MISSION TO PRC -- Tokyo, Aug 31, KYODO -- The Japan-China Association on Economy and Trade said Tuesday it will send a powerful economic mission to China late next month to explore the possibility of reinvigorating bilateral trade. An association official said the mission, to be made up of some 35 top executives of manufacturing, trading and financial companies, will meet with Premier Zhao Ziyang and other Chinese leaders during its September 21-25 stay in Beijing. They will discuss with the Chinese leaders such matters as promotion of bilateral trade, now not particularly active due to China's economic readjustment, and cooperation in factory modernization, he said. They will also exchange views on Japan's stepped-up imports of Chinese coal oil and extension of financial aid in the development of these resources, he added. The mission, led by association President Toshiwo Doko, was originally scheduled to Visit China starting September 1. But its departure has been postponed due to reasons on the part of China. NODONG SINMUN Editorial

SK102351 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2233 GMT 8 Sep 82

[NODONG SINMUN 9 September Editorial: "Let Us Vigorously Struggle To Realize the Modeling of the Whole Society on the Chuche Idea Under the Banner of the Republic"]

[Text] Already 34 years have passed since our people founded a true independent nation for the first time in their history and embarked on the road of building a new society under the banner of the DPRK -- the glorious fatherland. Our republic has energetically traversed the road of victory replete with glory. Today, our republic has arrived at a most glorious and brilliant era in the course of its development.

Under the leadership of the party, the republic's might and position are getting stronger than ever and an endlessly brilliant prospect is unfolding before it. Firmly convinced of the final victory in the revolution and bright future of the fatherland, our people, who are creating a great upsruge in the struggle to implement the militant tasks put forth in the great Leader Kim Il-song's report to the Sixth party congress and his policy speech, are marking the significant 34th anniversary of the founding of the republic.

Marking this historic national day, all the people in the nation are offering the highest form of honor and warmest gratitude to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has brought a fundamental change to the position of the fatherland and people and provided a brilliant future for them by founding and leading our republic.

The DPRK is a banner of freedom and independence for our people and a powerful weapon for the building of socialism and communism. The superiority and might of the government of our republic have been fully demonstrated in the victorious acceleration of the revolution and construction and in the defense and realization of the independence of the working masses and of the country and the nation. It is a great exploit performed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song to have built this great republic and the genuine power of the working class suited to the demand of the times and to have provided a guarantee for the accomplishment of the cause of communism in our country.

The founding of our republic 34 years ago was a brilliant fruition of the chuche-based idea of government construction and the energetic struggle of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who directed all his efforts to a correct solution of the question of power from the first day of his revolutionary activities in his early years.

In the darkest days, when the sufferings of our people who were robbed of their country by the Japanese imperialist aggressors were at a peak, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song organized and led the heroic armed struggle to liberate the fatherland and to establish power of the working class by taking the lead in the Korean revolution.

By defeating the strong Japanese imperialist aggressors in a protracted struggle under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the Korean communists and people opened a broad road for liberating the nation and building a new system and new life by themselves. It was a miracle and an event worth recording in the annals of world history that the people of a small and weak power defeated a savage imperialist enemy on the strength of the nation's chuche-based forces and then achieved the cause of national liberation.

In the course of the protracted and arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the brilliant revolutionary tradition -- the ever-lasting foundation of our revolution -- and a strong base for building the people's government was provided.

Thanks to such precious treasures, we were able to found the people's government without delay under the complicated circumstances that followed national liberation and we have been able to strengthen and develop the revolutionary government into an invincible one, as it is today.

The founding of the DPRK -- this was an important historic event epochally significant in the development of our revolution and the life of our people.

With the founding of the DPRK, our people became true masters of the state and society firmly seizing power in their hands and a powerful and dignified people whom no one dare provoke.

With the founding of the DPRK, our people came to more dynamically advance the revolution and construction, and our country which had been eclipsed on the world map for a long time, came to emerge proudly into the international arena as a full-fledged independent and sovereign state. Indeed, the founding of the DPRK was a great national jubilee and an undying landmark which gave birth to an independent, new Korea and fundamentally changed the position of our people.

Our republic is a mighty political organization which struggles to realize the revolutionary cause of chuche under the leadership of the party and leader.

Up to this day, since its founding, the government of the republic has successfully acquited itself of its noble missions and role, pulling through the storm of the rigorous class struggle and grandiose creation and change.

The whole course of the history of the republic is a chronicle of a heroic epic of struggles and exploits which have recorded immortal accomplishments in the history of the nation by energetically accelerating the revolution and construction under the banner of the chuche idea.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: By energetically accelerating the revolution and construction by leading the masses of people, the government of the republic has established a most advanced socialist system on this land which in the past was dominated by plundering and repression and turned our poor and backward country into an independent socialist country with strong self-reliant national economy, brilliant national culture and strong defense capability.

Some 30 years is not a long period in our long national history of more than 5,000 years. However, during this period our republic has done much for the freedom and happiness of the people and national prosperity. Under the banner of the republic, a creation of the world in the true meaning of the word has taken place in the land of the fatherland and all the aspirations that the people have long dreamed of and hoped for have blossomed into reality.

The course on which the government of the republic has led the revolution and construction has not been smooth. Under the leadership of the party and leader, the government of our republic and people, while overcoming all difficulties and trials doubly laid, have erected a most advanced socialist system on this land and turned our country into a wealthy and prosperous, powerful socialist country by carrying out the socialist revolution self reliantly, in our own way, and by achieving the cause of socialist industrialization.

By advancing following the banner of the republic, our people defeated the U.S. imperialists in the 3 years of the fatherland liberation war, honorably defended the nation's independence and, in the postwar period, safeguarded the revolutionary gains and national independence, overcoming endless aggressive maneuvers of the enemy.

Today, our republic is in the middle of an era of prosperity. In the midst of a march to imbue society with the chuche idea, overall development has been achieved in all fields -- politics, economy, culture and military -- a brillant communist future is being hastened and the might and position of the republic are growing to unlimited heights.

At no previous time has our fatherlands been prosperous and displayed its might in all aspects as today, when it is led by our republic. Indeed, the road of 34 years trodden by the republic has been a rewarding one which opened a shortcut to socialism and created a most superior and new socialist life under the wise leadership of the party and leader and is now shining with glorious course of exploring the untrodden path leading to socialism and oommunism.

Because of this great history and accomplishment, the republic is absolutely supported and trusted by all the people and is enjoying indestructible, high authority and dignity.

The whole course of the history of our republic is also a proud course in which the government of the republic has been strengthened and developed into a invincible revolutionary government capable of consummating the communist cause under the leadership of the party.

Today, work systems, order and discipline are firmly established in the institutions of our government to guarantee the leadership of the party and leader. Also firmly established are the revolutionary work method and popular work spirit. Thus, our people's government is smoothly carrying out its function and role as the representative of the independent rights of the working masses of people, organizer of the creative ability of the working masses of people, master of the house responsible for the people's livelihood and protector of the working masses of people for their creative and independent life.

It is a source of great happiness for our people to have a powerful revolutionary government with combat capabilities which always acts in accordance with the party's intentions and mass aspirations and firmly defends socialist gains under any circumstances.

All the victories achieved in the struggle for the strenghtening and development of our republic and its prosperity are a precious fruition of the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Shouldering all the burdens of state construction from the first days of the founding of the republic, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has energetically guided the struggle for the strengthening and development of the republic.

It is the fundamental principle constantly adhered to by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to firmly guarantee the leadership of the party and to thoroughly embody the chuche idea in state construction and state activities. Such leadership by him has been firm guarantee for the government of the republic's resolute defense of its character as a political weapon upholding our party's guidance and for successful implementation of the party's revolutionary line of independence, self-reliance and self-defence by organizing and mobilizing the entire people.

Thanks to the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has braved and overcome difficulties and trials with an ironclad will and matchless unswerving courage in the face of any storn and with a profound revolutionary activism, our republic and people have firmly maintained the lifeline of the Korean revolution and have continuously performed astounding miracles of the century.

Embodying the revolutionary idea and leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party is now wisely leading the government of the republic to discharge its mission and role as a weapon to imbue society with the chuche idea. Grasping the overall work of the state, our party has had the government of the republic steadily struggle to remodel nature, society and man in accordance with the demand of the chuche idea under the banner of the three revolutions.

Today, the entire country is overflowing with revolutionary zeal and with a militant spirit. Amid the flames of the speed battle, great monuments have been built, and the appearance of the fatherland has daily changed. This demonstrates the might and wise leadership of our party.

Without the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center, we could not imagine the glorious past and present and bright future of our republic. The authority and honor of our republic is the high authority and honor of the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song and the KWP. There is no greater pride for our people than to live and carry out the revolution in the great fatherland founded and led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and glorified by our party.

Today, the government of our republic and the people are assigned a historic duty of bringing about a decisive change in the struggle to finally complete the chuche cause by vigorously struggling to implement the instructions in the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's historic policy speech. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today, the KWP is assigned the glorious task of struggling to imbue society with the chuche idea by upholding the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress.

Imbuing society with the chuche idea is the general mission of our revolution and is the historic duty of the government of the republic. By building a paradise of communism in this land by vigorously struggling to imbue society with the chuche idea, the government of the republic should brilliantly accomplish its historic mission.

The people's government and the three revolutions are the great banner of building communism. Only by thoroughly carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- through continuously strengthening the people's government and by increasing its role can we build the paradise of communism in which the sovereignty of the people is completely achieved.

We should further strengthen the people's government to meet the requirements for the development of the revolution and should increase its militant role in various ways. In all sectors of state activities, the government of the republic should thoroughly materialize the chuche idea, should brilliantly implement mass lines and should further strengthen its centralized guidance of society.

The three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- are the general lines of our party in building socialism and communism. By correctly following the line of the three revolutions and by vigorously and equally carrying out the technical and cultural revolutions while placing priority on the ideological revolution, we should successfully carry out the work of remodeling man, society and nature.

With an attitude worthy of masters and with a lofty sense of responsibility, agencies and functionaries of the people's governments at all levels should continuously improve their guidance and management of economic construction and should bring about change in all sectors of cultural construction and service work. Functionaries of all government agencies should correctly carry out their work at any time and under all circumstances to meet the party's confidence and the people's expectation by thoroughly overcoming all timeworn work methods, such as bureaucratism and subjectism, by adopting a revolutionary work method and popular work style and by possessing high-level party-mindedness, the trait of the working class and popular nature.

All party members and workers should brilliantly implement the decision of the historic Hamhung plenary meeting and should create the speed of the 1980's -- a new advance speed -- by vigorously advancing with the spirit of the period of a Chollima upsurge in the postwar era, fully displaying endless loyalty to the party and the leader and the fighting revolutionary spirit of self-reliance. Thus, they should achieve a great victory in an all-out advance movement to complete the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule and the 10-point prospective goals for socialist economic construction and should once again demonstrate the honor of chuche Korea.

A key for strengthening the people's government and for functionaries of government agencies to accomplish their glorious duty is to follow the leadership of the party. Our party is a great guide who organizes and leads the struggle to complete the chuche revolutionary cause. The government of the republic is a most comprehensive political organization which embodies the leadership of the party. Without the leadership of the party, the people's government cannot advance even a step. Nor can it correctly accomplish the duty assigned it. Functionaries of government agencies at all levels should entrust the party with everything, should solve questions in state construction and activities to thoroughly meet the intent of the party center and should firmly establish the spirit of unconditionally and thoroughly implementing party lines and policies.

Our republic is a great gain which we have attained through the protracted, bloody struggle of the people and through their creative labor. All party members and workers should not forget how dear the price they have paid to build today's prosperous republic. They should passionately love their fatherland, defend and firmly consolidate the socialist system and the revolutionary government of workers and peasants even at the cost of their lives.

By strengthening socialist legal life, all sectors and units should help everyone willingly abide by legal norms and regulations with the lofty spirit of observing the law and fiercely struggle against the instances of violations of state laws and order. To this end, it is important for party administrative functionaries to set an example to the people.

Reunifying the divided fatherland is a supreme national duty assigned the government of the republic and our people. Although over 30 years have passed since the republic was founded in accordance with the consensus of all the Korean people, our fatherland has not been reunified. In contrast to the northern half of the republic, which has traversed the road of independence and prosperity, South Korea -- which has traversed the road of subjugation and decline -- has been degraded into a complete colony of the U.S. imperialists.

It is intolerable for our people -- who have lived for several thousand years in a single land as a homogeneous people -- to be divided and for the South Korean people to be unable to extricate themselves from a miserable life as colonial slaves.

Since the first day of national division, the government of the republic has advanced correct policies for the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification and other rational proposals and has made every effort to implement these policies and proposals. Due to the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to fabricate two Koreas, however, there is a great obstacle on the road to reunification, and the danger of perpetual division of the people has increased with each passing day.

Today, the U.S. imperialists are continuously shipping to South Korea mass destruction weapons, including nuclear weapons, and military equipment and have increased troops there. While continuously kicking up war exercise rackets against us, they have further heightened tension.

While clinging to the treacherous policy of relying on foreign forces and of dividing the people and to maneuvers to provoke a new war, traitor Chon Tu-hwan -- a thoroughgoing puppet of the U.S. imperialists -- is bestially suppressing the struggle of the South Korean people to achieve the democratization of society and the fatherland's reunification.

The situation shows that, without ending the U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea and the U.S. imperialists' interference in Korea, we can never solve the question of the fatherland's reunification. Holding aloft an anti-U.S. banner of independence, we, therefore, should resolutely struggle to achieve the cause for the fatherland's reunification.

The most rational and practical way to achieve the reunification of our country is to implement the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his report at the sixth party congress. All Korean compatriots in the north and south and overseas should achieve the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification by unanimously rising to thwart the maneuvers of the splittists through the united efforts of all the Korean people and by founding the DCRK at the earliest possible date.

Strengthening solidarity with international revolutionary forces is the consistent policy of the government of the republic. Just as we did in the past, we, holding aloft the banner of independence and uniting with the world's revolutionary people defending independence, will continuously and strenuously struggle to build a new independent, peaceful world free from imperialism, domination and subjugation and to achieve independence world wide.

The revolutionary cause of our people is just, and the future of the republic is endlessly bright. No force can block the advance of our people grasping sovereignty under the leadership of the great party and the leader.

Let us all firmly unite around the party Central Committee led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and vigorously struggle to achieve the fatherland's reunification, the complete victory of socialism and the endless prosperity of the republic, upholding the banner of the chuche idea.

RPR Greetings to Kim Il-song

SK110930 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Congratulatory message from the Central Committee of the RPR to Kim Il-song sent on 9 September on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK -- read by announcer]

[Text] To the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, founder and leader of the chuche fatherland:

We, who are accelerating the grand march against the United States and for independence, while looking up to the socialist fatherland of chuche, a beacon of hope and a land that endlessly prospers under the brilliant ray of glorious Kimilsongism, greet meaningfully the 34 anniversary of the founding of the DPRK.

On the occasion of the festive National Day, the Central Committee of the RPR extends respectfully the greatest glory and the warmest greetings of congratulations to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, founder and leader of the chuche fatherland, reflecting the boundless admiration and loyalty of the revolutionaries and patriotic masses in the south.

We, who are waging rigorous battles against the United States and for national liberation in order to construct a new independent society in the south, land of colonialism, recollect with deep emotion the glorious revolutionary activities of the great leader, who has set an example of an independent government for the first time in history and founded a prospering and flourishing chuche paradise. The RPR members, who look up to the northern sky, are filled with ardent admiration and the most sublime feelings toward the leader.

During the era of national sufferings, when the misfortune of losing national rights hung over the 3,000-li land, Comrade Kim Il-song, legendary hero, who took the lead in the revolution with great ambition and wisdom for the liberation of the fatherland, created the immortal chuche idea and started the revolution of the era of independence. Putting forth as the basic question of revolution the issues concerning sovereignty, he achieved the precious experiences and made brilliant achievements in founding an independent revolutionary government in the arduous and peerless flames of the anti-Japanese battles.

By founding the DPRK and by successfully resolving the sovereignty problem on the basis of the resplendent anti-Japanese tradition after liberation, the great leader, the sun of the revolution, brilliantly opened up the promising road of the new Korea.

The founding of the republic by the great leader was a historic declaration that announced that the first country of workers and peasants, which rose high on the colony of the East, was posed to make a grand march. It was the revolutionary event that declared the birth of chuche Korea illuminating to the whole world the ray of the brilliant chuche idea.

The great leader, a master of the art of leadership, has highly performed matchless exploits and made immortal achievements by endlessly creating the sensation of the unprecedented revolutionary changes and miracles in human history on the grand advance road for independence and socialism in leading the republic.

Because of the great leader's leadership, the republic determinedly overcame the rigorous ordeals of the fatherland liberation war and performed an epoch-making exploit of driving the Yankee aggressors downhill toward ruin. It is brilliantly shining as a paradise of people's welfare in which all people glorify the genuine human dignity and worth and enjoy the free and happy life to their heart's content by making ever-victorious strides as the socialist power of independence, self-reliance and self-defense by winning victories in the socialist revolution and socialist industrialization.

Today in the northern half of the fatherland, which is raising a gale and large waves in the creation of the new speed of the 1980's under the guidance of the glorious KWP, which is loyally upholding the ideology and leadership of the great leader and flying high the banner of the three revolutions, ideological, technological and cultural, the cause of modeling the whole society on the chuche idea has reached a high level, the people's economy is being fruitfully made chuche-oriented, modern and scientific and the 10-point prospective goals of the socialist economic construction are being successfully attained.

The republic, in which all people follow with loyalty the respected and beloved leader and the KWP, in which the leader, the party and the masses form an integral body, grandly celebrated this April the 70th birthday of the great leader, the founder and leader of the new Korea, as the greatest political festival of the nation. Thus, the republic has displayed more vigorously to the world an invincible unity and cohesion and embroidered the history of the chuche fatherland with the most brilliant chapter in its annals.

In the course of the practical struggle for successfully carrying out the revolution and construction under the wise leadership of the great leader and the glorious KWP, the republic has been strengthened and developed as the most independent socialist state, which independently delineates and resolves all lines and polices in a chuche-oriented fashion. The republic has also become more tested as the most powerful political weapon that thoroughly guarantees the independent rights and creative activities of the working masses.

Today there exist many countries, large and small, on the earth. But we clearly see that the DPRK, founded and led by the great leader, is the only man-centered country where man is placed in the center in all thinking and practice and the masses are the masters of the state and rulers of society, and is the only independent country that acts according to its own faith, not budging under the baton of any big power.

Because the republic marches forward under the banner of the KWP, upholding the leadership of the great leader, the sun of all people, the prestige of the republic has been enhanced more in every nook and corner of the world and the waves of support and solidarity to our country's cause for reunification are creating rougher waters each passing day. The wheels of the whole world's pro-independence movement, with the chuche Korea as its axle, is running forcefully in the chuche track toward the bright future.

In reality, because the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is leading the revolution of Korea and of the world to victory by indicating the orientation of history with the bright rays of chuche and leading the genuine independent government, the ul' nate consummation of the chuche cause and the bright future of a reunified and independent fatherland are firmly promised.

Because the great leader, the sun of the nation, stands (?on a grand peak) of the center of the era of independence and because the dazzling reality of the DPRK, which is resplendently shining along with the esteemed name of the leader, stimulates endless hope and courage, the revolutionaries and masses of all walks of life in the South gather faith in certain victory and indomitable fighting spirit even under the U.S. imperialists' colonial and fascist rule. This is lighting the conflagration against the United States and for independence.

The rapidly intensifying anti-U.S. resistance, as shown all over the country by the echoing of the angry outcry -- "Yankees, go away!", the burning of the U.S. imperialist aggressors' hangouts and by the tearing to pieces and burning of the blood-stained Stars and Stripes, is a demonstration of the firm will of the masses in the South, who are trying to escape from the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule that extorts blood and tears and who are trying to enjoy genuine freedom and happiness in an independent, new society.

Deeply realizing that the genuine way to enjoy lives of independence and creativity as the brothers in the North lies in waging a national liberation struggle to liquidate the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule under the anti-U.S. and pro-independence banner, our party and the masses of all walks of life will more vigorously wage the anti-U.S. and nation-saving resistance.

The road of revolution is still rugged and arduous. But, our party will end the U.S. imperialists' colonial, fascist rule and establish an independent government, pulling down the barrier of division and ushering in the bright morning of a reunified fatherland with the sun of chuche and its guiding star shining dazzlingly and the banner of invincible Kimilsongism flying in the van.

Reflecting the unanimous desires of the revolutionaries and patriotic masses in the South, for the victory of the revolution seeking reunification and the ultimate consummation of the chuche cause, for the prosperity of the chuche fatherland and the happiness of all the nation's future generations and for the victory of the world revolution and the prosperity and development of the era of Kim Il-song, the Central Committee of the RPR respectfully wishes long life and good health to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of the revolution, the lodestar of freedom and liberation and the sun of mankind.

[Signed] The Central Committee of the RPR, 9 September, 1982, Seoul

Beijing Embassy Reception

SK120956 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0700 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Chon Myong-su, ambassador of the DPRK to China, arranged a cocktail party on 9 September at his embassy in celebration of the 45th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK.

Invited to the party were Wan Li, member of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China [CPC] and vice chairman of the State Council; Yang Shangkun, vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Qiao Shi, head of the International Liaison Department of the CPC Central Committee; and other leading personages concerned. Diplomatic envoys of various countries to China were also invited there.

Toasts were made by the DPRK ambassador and Huang Hua.

In his toast, the ambassador noted: Inheriting the brillant revolutionary traditions of the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, organized and led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the DPRK was founded on 9 September in 1948.

He pointed out the resplendent course which the republic has traversed for the past 14 years under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader.

He said: Upholding the chuche banner under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center, the Korean people have established the most advanced socialist system on a land which was dominated by exploitation and repression and have converted the poor and backward country into a socialist country possessing a solid self-reliant national economy, brillant national culture and powerful defense capabilities.

He further said: The Korean people are effecting new upsurges to achieve the militant tasks assigned by the Sixth KWP Congress.

Expressing his firm belief that the 12th CPC Congress will be a historic event rallying the entire CPC members and Chinese people to new militant exploits, he noted: In the future, too, as in the past, the Korean people, in a firm unity with the fraternal Chinese people, will fight and win victory together with them on the single road of the common struggle against imperialism and for independence.

In his toast, Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs noted: Under the wise leadership of the KWP and their great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the heroic Korean people have attained brillant successes in all fields of socialist construction for the past 34 years by displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude.

He continued: The Chinese people ardently celebrate the successes attained by the Korean people and heartily hope that they will register greater successes and construct a more flourishing and beautiful country in the future.

He went on to say: The Chinese people will as always support the Korean people's just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland and resolutely oppose the two-Koreas plot of the United States and the Chon Tu-hwan clique.

The U.S. troops should withdraw from South Korea without fail [pandusi] and stop interfering in the internal affairs of Korea. The question of Korean reunification should be resolved by the Korean people themselves in accordance with the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, which was set forth by President Kim Il-song, without any outside interference. We firmly believe that the cause of the Korean people for the reunification of their fatherland will achieve final victory.

There exist very good relations between the parties and countries of China and Korea. These relations were established by Chairman Mao Zedong and Premier Zhou Enlai in their lifetime, together with President Kim Il-song, and they have been strengthened and developed through the protracted common struggle. In recent years, the meetings and exchanges of views in various ways between the leaders of the two countries have brought the traditional relations to a new stage. The Chinese people are greatly rejoiced over this and heartily hope that such friendly relations between the two parties and countries will continue to develop with each passing day.

The attendants toasted the continued consolidation and development of the great friendship and militant unity sealed in blood between the peoples of Korea and China, the good healthand long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, the good health and long life of esteemed Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and the good health and long life of esteemed Comrade Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

[Excerpt] Pyongyang, September 10 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, and Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Administration Council, received messages of greetings from the Chinese and Soviet party and state leaders on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK.

A message sent in joint name by Hu Yaobang, chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, Ye Jianying, chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress of the People's Republic of China, and Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, says:

Over the past 34 years the heroic Korean people under the wise leadership of the Workers Party of Korea, headed by Comrade Kim Il-song have achieved brilliant successes in the socialist revolution and construction and built their country into a developing and prosperous socialist state.

The government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is pursuing an independent foreign policy and adhering to the principle of proletarian internationalism and has made important contributions to the strengthening of the unity of the Non-Aligned Movement and the Third World countries.

The message stresses: We resolutely demand that the United States withdraw its troops from South Korea and stop interfering in the internal affairs of Korea.

We warmly support the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by President Kim Il-song and will extend firm support to the Korean People's just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification till the final victory.

We sincerely hope that the China-Korea friendship, fraternity and cooperation will grow stronger and develop with each passing day.

Greetings From USSR Leaders

SK101340 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] On the 34th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK, Soviet party and state leaders have sent a congratularoty message to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the KWP and president of the DPRK, and Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the State Administration Council. The congratulatory message reads as follows:

Pyongyang

Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the KWP and president of the DPRK; Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the State Administration Council of the DPRK:

On the 34th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK, we extend congratulations to you, the Central Committee of the KWP, the Central People's Committee of the DPRK, the State Administration Council of the DPRK and all Korean people in the name of the Central Committee of the CPSU, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Soviet Union, the Council of Ministers and the Soviet people.

In September 1948, for the first time in the land Korea, a genuine, independent and democratic state of workers and peasants was founded. This serves as a special historical event in the lives of the Korean people.

Under the leadership of the KWP, their vanguard unit, the workers of the DPRK have laid a firm foundation for the socialist change of the society and have made big strides in the development of industry, agriculture, culture, and scientific technology.

The DPRK's social and economic successes are positive proof of the superiority of the socialist system and are results of the DPRK's close cooperation with other socialist countries.

The Soviet people warmly congratulate the fraternal Korean people on these successes made in socialist construction. We are convinced that the friendly and cooperative relations between the Soviet Union and the DPRK based on Marxism-Leninism and on socialist internationalism will, in the future too, be endlessly consolidated and develop in the interest of the common struggle against imperialism and international reaction and to achieve peace and social advance as well as for the cause of our two peoples and universal world socialism.

We wish success to you and all workers of People's Korea in carrying out the tasks for further development of the economy and culture of the republic put forth by the Sixth KWP Congress and in achieving the fatherland's reunification -- the Korean people's long-cherished desire -- on the basis of a peaceful and democratic foundation.

FURTHER DETAILS OF 471ST MAC SECRETARIES MEETING

SK140203 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] The 471st secretaries meeting of the Military Armistice Commission [MAC] was held at Panmunjom on 13 September.

At the meeting, our side protested against military provocative acts ceaselessly committed against us in the Demilitarized Zone [DMZ] by wantonly violating the armistice agreement and bilateral agreement, calling the enemy side to account.

According to Senior Colonel Kim Yon-ki, our side's chief secretary, at around 2125 on 7 September, the South Korean puppet army committed an armed provocation by firing automatic weapons into our side of the area, across the site near a point 1,000 meters southeast of marker No. 0725 of the Military Demarcation Line [MDL] on the central front under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists. Prior to this, also at around 1205 on 7 August, the South Korean puppet army committed a similar armed provocation against our side's guard post across the site near a point 450 meters south of the marker No. 0630 of the MDL.

Also at around 1347 on 3 August, under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean puppet army committed a serious armed provocation of taking aim at and firing at our side's personnel with a large-caliber machinegun across the site near a point 950 meters southeast of the marker No. 0730 of the MDL.

At around 0950 on 20 August, the South Korean puppet army dragged in a 90-mm recoilless rifle into the site near a point 1,950 meters east of marker No. 0046 of the MDL on the western frontline and, at around 1625 on 19 August, introduced a machinegun into the site near a point 850 meters south of marker No. 1738 of the MDL on the central frontline.

The enemy side also conducted a military exercise by putting some 20 armed combatants into the site near a point 400 meters east of marker No 0233 of the MDL on the western frontline at around 1220 on 18 August. At around 0920 on 3 September, the enemy side set up combat positions by putting some 30 combatants into the site near a point 1,350 meters southeast of marker No 0503 of the MDL.

Meanwhile, the U.S. imperialist aggressors introduced several U.S. imperialist aggression troops armed with M-16 automatic rifles respectively into an (?unknown) hill guard post in (Songhyon-ri) near the southern area of the MAC Headquarters at around 0925 on 4 August and into the (Oryonggye) guard post at around 0700 on 1 September.

The number of violations of the armistice agreement and agreed matters by the enemy side during the period from 17 July to 10 September has reached some 3,200-odd cases.

Our side's chief secretary said that these facts showed that the enemies were committing military provocations against us continually and pertinaciously by gathering armed forces in the DMZ and mobilizing them. He said that, in this connection, the situation within the DMZ has been proving more serious. Strongly protesting to the enemy side for committing numerous violations of the armistice agreement against us, our side's chief secretary demanded that the enemy side take responsible measures so that such criminal acts are not committed again. However, the enemies did not guarantee to comply with our demand.

Pointing out the enemies' wrongful act, our side's chief secretary continued as follows: The military provocative acts ceaselessly committed against us by the enemies in the DMZ area are part of their schemes to provoke a new war. This is well corroborated by the enemies' recent ominous military move. Undisguisedly revealing their wicked attempt to sit astride all of Korea by all means, igniting a new aggressive war in Korea, the U.S. imperialists are even more pertinaciously adhering to the adventuristic schemes of war. The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean warmongers are discussing one war plot after another. So as to further prepare for provoking a war, they are building up their military strength and waging provocative war games. Along with this, the U.S. imperialists are frequently committing shooting incidents in the DMZ area by pushing the South Korean puppet army into it. All facts show clearly that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are further aggravating the tense situation in our country and, furthermore, are deliberately scheming to make an excuse for provoking a new war.

Our side's chief secretary said that in order to ease the tension in Korea and remove the danger of war, the U.S. imperialist aggression forces should withdraw from South Korea and the U.S. schemes for preparing a war should be stopped. He noted that the enemies should look squarely at the realities and should not behave indiscreetly. In conclusion, our side's chief secretary emphatically said that, should the enemies fail to heed our warning and continue to carry out military provocative acts against us, they will be fully responsible for all consequences arising therefrom.

SALE OF ELECTRIC BATONS TO SOUTH KOREA DENOUNCED

[NODONG SINMUN 14 September commentary: "Criminal Act Egging Puppets on to Fascism and War"]

[Text] According to a report, the U.S. imperialists are scheming to offer to the South Korean puppets about 500 electric shock sticks to be used in quelling resistance and military hardware and its parts at an estimated cost of $60 million.

News from foreign countries report that electric shock sticks are used not only in repressing the masses, but in torture and interrogation and that the supply of military equipment and parts will help the puppet army raise its operational readiness to the highest state.

The aid of the U.S. imperialists to the puppets is a criminal maneuver to strengthen the suppression of the people by arming the puppet police with updated suppressive means and to step up preparations for war by augmenting the military bases of the puppet army.

These facts clearly expose that peace and security, about which the U.S. imperialists and the puppets have babbled whenever they have opened their mouths, are nothing but tricks to hide their colonial fascist rule and mock public opinion at home and abroad. Grabbing South Korea as their permanent colonial military base, the U.S. imperialists are striving to dominate even the northern half of the republic. To this end, the U.S. imperialists are not only exercising the most atrocious and bestial colonial rule in South Korea through a treacherous betrayer like Chon To-hwan — their tainted stooge, fascist murderer and war maniac -- but are spurring preparations for war against us by arming the U.S. troops occupying South Korea and the puppet army with modern lethal weapons.

Since this year began, there have been murderous trials of youths, students and people from various strata, who have turned out to the anti-U.S. struggle for democracy, reunification and independence, frequent infiltrations by the U.S. espionage planes into the territorial airspace of the republic and powder-reeking military exercises in South Korea and in its sea areas. This shows that the suppressive maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the puppets and their preparations for war have reached a reckless stage.

South Korea -- a colony of the U.S. imperialists -- has been converted into a desolate land in which human and civil rights are not ensured and one the likes of which can be found nowhere in our era, a cursed human slaughterhouse and a dangerous powder magazine that may explode at any moment. The U.S. imperialists are rallying the puppets to murderous outrage and to preparations for war, offering more suppressive means and military equipment to them each passing day. This is linked to the fact that their colonial rule is faced by more serious crises than before.

The anti-U.S. spirit for independence is growing with an irresistable strength among the South Korean youths, students and people of all walks of life. Moreover, the popular masses' resentment against the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan clique is skyrocketing. For this reason and to maintain their colonial rule, the U.S. imperialists are further rallying traitor Chon Tu-hwan to the suppression of the people and war maneuvers. Clinging to the sleeves of the U.S. imperialist masters, traitor Chon Tu-hwan is desperately committing treacherous and nation-selling acts to maintain the rest of his life.

The U.S. imperialists' offer of electric shock sticks and military hardware to the puppets originates from that need. However, the ever-strengthening fascism and war maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique will result in them digging their own graves. As the developments in the situation in South Korea have shown, the South Korean people, who have struggled for the democratization of society and the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, upholding the anti-U.S. banner for independence, will never tolerate the criminal maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and their puppets.

LATE REPORT: KIM IL-SONG VISIT TO PRC ANNOUNCED

SK141030 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1023 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 14 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, will shortly pay an official state visit to the People's Republic of China on the invitation of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the State Council of the People's Republic of China.

UNEN ARTICLE LAUDS TSEDENBAL-BREZHNEV MEETING

OW111025 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1718 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 10 (MONTSAME) -- Communists and the working people of Mongolia see in the recent Crimea meeting of Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal with Leonid Brezhnev an outstanding event for the further development and deepening of the Leninist friendship and close cooperation of the Mongolian and Soviet peoples, B. Badarch, deputy chairman of the Central Council of the Mongolian-Soviet Friendship Society, writes in the newspaper UNEN. The fraternal Mongolian-Soviet friendship founded and bequeathed by Vladimir Ilich Lenin, the leader of the working people of the world, and Damdin Sukhe-Bator, the outstanding leader of the Mongolian people, has been and is an inexhaustible source and a reliable guarantee of the historic accomplishments of the Mongolian people, the author notes. The attentions of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and personally of Y. Tsedenbal and L. Brezhnev are always focused on the further development of this friendship.

B. Badarch writes that the signing of the treaty on friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance in 1966 during the official friendly visit to Mongolia by the party and government delegation of the Soviet Union, led by L. Brezhnev, and also official and friendly visits of the party and government delegations of the Soviet Union and Mongolia in 1974 and 1976 opened up breath-taking vistas of the development of the Mongolian-Soviet relations.

At present, ministries, departments, all aymags and large [word indistinct] of Mongolia maintain direct contacts with the related ministries, [word indistinct], autonomous republics and territories of the Soviet Union. All these are bearing fruit in the socialist construction of the Mongolian People's Republic.

The Mongolian-Soviet Friendship Society with a membership of more than 540,000 is bringing mighty contribution to the consolidation of fraternal friendship and all-round cooperation between the Mongolian and Soviet peoples, B. Badarch emphasizes. The society carries out large-scale measures on the popularization of the successes achieved by the Soviet people and on spreading the advanced Soviet experience among the working collectives of Mongolia.

The recent Crimea meeting of Comrades Y. Tsedenbal and L. Brezhnev has demonstrated the full determination of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Mongolian People's Republic and the Soviet Union to continue actively and purposefully working for peace the world over and for averting the threat of nuclear catstrophe, the article says.

PRC SOVEREIGNTY OVER TAIWAN RECOGNIZED

OW111731 Ulaabaatar MONTSAME in English 1706 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, September 11 (MONTSAME) -- The U.S. Taiwan policy is considered by the Peking leaders as an infringement upon China's sovereignty over Taiwan and as a striving of the U.S. administration to perpetuate their control over this island, the newspaper NOVOSTI MONGOLII writes. The newspaper underlines that the U.S.A. is not going to sacrifice this stronghold in Asia.

The M.P.R. fully agrees with the thesis on China put forward by L. Brezhnev in Tashkent, it was emphasized at the recent meeting between L. Brezhnev and Yu. Tsedenbal. Then the Soviet leader stated that the U.S.S.R. had never supported, nor did it support now, in any form the so-called concept of two Chinas and it always recognized and continues to recognize the P.R.C.'s sovereignty over the island of Taiwan, the organ of the MONTSAME news agency notes.

ACTIVITIES OF DAO TUNG-LED VNA DELEGATION REPORTED

Meeting With Bou Thang

BK131212 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1453 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 12 Sep (SPK) -- Today, Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, met with the delegation of the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY, VNA, led by its director general, Dao Tung. Em Saman, director general of the Kampuchean news agency SPK also attended this meeting.

Bou Thang praised the aid and support provided by VNA to the SPK and described them as "good acts contributing to the strengthening of the Kampuchean revolution's progress." He spoke about the extension of SPK's activities inside as well as outside the country and hoped that SPK and VNA would cooperate more closely.

On that occasion, Dao Tung spoke about the assistance provided by VNA to SPK, the building of SPK's technical bases and the relations of cooperation between the two agencies now and in the future.

Meeting With Chea Sim

BK140716 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 13 Sep (SPK) -- On Sunday 12 September, Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly, received in Phnom Penh the delegation of the Vietnamese news agency VNA led by its director general, Dao Tung. Em Saman, director general of the Kampuchean news agency SPK, was also present during the meeting.

Chea Sim talked about the successes during the past three years due to the untiring efforts of the Kampuchean people under the clearsighted leadership of the KPRP and aid and assistance of fraternal socialist countries, particularly Vietnam. Chairman Chea Sim highly praised the aid provided by VNA to SPK in the propaganda field during the past 3 years.

He emphasized that this visit will contribute to the consolidation of ties of friendship and cooperation in all fields between the two countries as well as the two agencies. He denounced and condemned sabotage activities of the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and Khmer reactionaries, notably the formation of the so-called "tripartite coalition government" -- the origin of tension in the region.

The head of the Vietnamese delegation affirmed VNA's consideration to intensify technical training for SPK cadres.

Technical Cooperation Protocol

THAI BORDER INCURSIONS DURING AUGUST REPORTED

BK120220 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 9 Sept 82

["Roundup of KPRAF activities during August 1982"]

[Excerpt] All the perfidious maneuvers and dreams of the genocidal Pol Pot hangmen have been dealt an even more crushing blow by our army and people, despite the fact that they are supplied with arms and material by Beijing expansionism, U.S. imperialism and the Thai ruling circles. Nonetheless, the remnants are continuing to frantically cross the border to carry out crimes against our people. Throughout last August, while sending small groups into our territory to loot and harass our people's peaceful existence, they also carried out sabotage activities to cause trouble for our people in a number of border regions. In particular, the Thai sent their reconnaissance aircraft, armed boats and artillery units to shell our territory around the clock.

Some sectors and points were hit every week, such as Hills 343, 199 and 172 of Koh Kong Province, the Smat Deng area of Pursat Province, Poipet, Nimit, Hill 505 and Pailin in Battambang Province and the sector around the Preah Vihear temples. Despite the cover of aircraft and artillery fire, the groups of bandits hiding in the jungles were attacked and soundly beaten by our revolutionary armed forces, such as in (Ta Sin) of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province's Anlung Veng area, where 10 enemy soldiers attempting to scout and plant mines along Route 69 were killed by our armed forces and militia and five weapons were seized.

On the preceding day, 10 August, a unit of Pol Pot remnants gathered at a point east of the Preah Vihear temples. Thanks to our high sense of vigilance and in coordination with the Vietnamese volunteer forces, our forces smashed this unit in time. The clash lasted from 0400 to 0530 and resulted in 50 enemy deaths, 4 prisoners, the capture of 35 weapons and a field radio and the destruction of 3 ammunition caches.

In Battambang, at Kop village 20 km south of Poipet, a group of 15 enemy soldiers were intercepted. Ten of them were killed and three weapons were seized. Later on, in Romiet commune of Thmar Puok District, our militiamen killed eight Pol Pot bandits on the spot when they were making contact to get foodstuffs. On 20 August, 20 Pol Pot remnants were sighted by the people in Kratie District. In cooperation with the Vietnamese volunteer forces, the regional forces surrounded and killed 15 of them and seized an assortment of 20 weapons.

During the last week of August, as in previous weeks, groups of enemy remnants were smashed by our armed forces in several areas even before they could commit sabotage attempts. For example, on 26 August a group of some 20 bandits was intercepted by the revolutionary armed forces in cooperation with the Vietnamese volunteer forces. Thirteen of them were killed and six others were wounded when they showed their faces in an attempt to loot our people's food in Sot Nikum District of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province. We also captured a number of weapons.

Later on August 27, the forces of Puok District in cooperation with the militia attacked a temporary troop rallying camp nearly 20 km north of Angkor temple. We killed 10 enemy soldiers and seized all their weapons.

VODK REPORTS DEFECTIONS BY HENG SAMRIN OFFICIALS

BK130605 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] The head of the Information Office of the Heng Samrin puppets -- running dogs of the Vietnamese enemy -- assigned to Stockholm in Sweden has stopped serving the Vietnamese aggressor administration in Phnom Penh and has absconded from the office with his wife and children and 88,000 French francs. Before fleeing, the official also sold his official car and the office equipment.

At the same time, another official of the Phnom Penh puppets who is head of the Information Office in New Delhi also stopped serving the Vietnamese aggressor administration and fled from his office.

These events show that apart from a handful of the Heng Samrin puppets no other Khmer people are willing to serve the Vietnamese enemy in killing their fellow countrymen. Every Khmer who is forced to serve the Vietnamese enemy is well aware of the Vietnamese aggressors' difficult situation and the trend toward their final defeat. This is why the Khmer have kept fleeing from the Vietnamese aggressors and joined the Kampuchean people's anti-Vietnamese struggle in order to quickly save their nation, people and race from being massacred and exterminated by the Vietnamese aggressors.

SPC ON SLOGAN, ARMY NAME, CABINET POST CHANGES

BK140306 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 14 Sep 82

[6 August 'communique' of the Supreme People's Council Standing Committee]

[Text] On 14, 15, 19, 20, 29 and 30 July 1982, the Supreme People's Council [SPC] Standing Committee held meetings under the chairmanship of SPC Chairman Souphanouvong. The following are decisions which were made on various important issues discussed during the meetings:

1. To change the slogan normally used in official functions. The new slogan reads: The peaceful, independent, unified and socialist LPDR. This is in order to be in conformity with the resolution of the Third LPRP Congress.

2. To change the name of the LPLA to the Lao People's Army.

3. To approve the law on the affairs of the LPDR Council of Ministers No 1/82/SPC, dated 20 July 1982, which has been changed to replace the law on the organization of the Council of Ministers of the LPDR No 100/SPC dated 30 July 1978.

4. To approve the proposal of the chairman of the Council of Ministers to change the positions of certain ministers and to appoint new ministers to replace old ones who have been transferred to other posts.

[Signed] Khamsouk Keola, vice chairman and secretary general of the SPC on behalf of the SPC Standing Committee.

SITTHI SPEAKS FURTHER ON SINGAPORE, MALAYSIA TRIP

BK131524 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila said after his 2-day visit to Singapore and Malaysia that he was optimistic that Democratic Kampuchea will win more votes than last year to retain its seat in the United Nations. He told reporters at Don Muang International Airport upon his return from Malaysia that all the reports coming in are positive. He said all the five ASEAN countries and their allies still continue to lobby support for the newly formed Kampuchean coalition led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk. Foreign Minsiter Sitthi Sawetsila of Thailand said the question of Kampuchea in the upcoming UN General Assembly was among major topics he discussed with Singapore Premier Lee Kuan Yew and Malaysian Premier Datuk Sri Mahathir during his visit to the two countries. He also met his counterparts, Dhanabalan of Singapore and Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie of Malaysia.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi quoted Dhanabalan as saying that Lee Kuan Yew's call for a joint military exercise of ASEAN was only a passing statement. It was not meant to be a serious statement. The Thai minister also said he had told Malaysian leaders that he believed Hanoi had no real intention of withdrawing its troops from Kampuchea. The Vietnamese have been pouring in more weapons while still maintaining a large number of troops along the Kampuchean border with Thailand. He said he also discussed with Malaysia and Singapore about the possibility of Prince Sihanouk addressing the meeting of the nonaligned countries. India, which might be the alternative venue for the meeting, had indicated that it would welcome Sihanouk to deliver a speech as a founder of the movement but not as a representative of Kampuchea.

On the question of a possible meeting with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach in New York, the Thai foreign minister said he is willing to meet him, but he does not think it is necessary. He said the Vietnamese foreign minister had already toured three of the ASEAN countries and his deputy has also met Deputy Foreign Minister Dr Arun Phanuphong of Thailand recently.

When later asked to comment on the present state of relations between Thailand and Malaysia, the Thai foreign minister said Thailand and Malaysia are good neighbors and both countries intend to stay that way. He told reporters that, during his visit to Malaysia, Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed had left a party meeting to talke to him for an hour. The foreign minister said that he told the Malaysian premier that Thailand considers Malaysia a good neighbor. The Malaysian premier replied that Malaysia attaches special importance to Thailand as a neighbor and has never thought of changing this attitude.

NATION CITES OPPOSITION TO ASEAN MILITARY ROLE

[Editorial: "Even a Hint of Military Bloc Is Self-Defeating"]

[Text] Foreign Minster Sitthi Sawetsila, being the country's top diplomat, brushed off a statement by Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew saying that Lee was concerned very much by the Soviet threat to this region. That was before he left for Singapore, but on his return Saturday night, he said that Lee was not quite serious in his suggestion that the five members of ASEAN should hold a joint military exercise. Even considering the diplomatic language used, we would not accept that explanation from Sitthi.

Our foreign minister must know, as everybody else does, that Lee can be cuttingly sarcastic, but he has never been known to be humourous or "unserious" in public. And Lee is not one of those kinds of politicians who let their tongue wag and who later retract statements -- Lee is always precise and clear.

What he said about the joint ASEAN military exercise was deliberate kite-flying -- an idea that he had formed and which he wanted to seek kicked around by other ASEAN leaders. He is aware, as every fellow-member of ASEAN, that anything to do with defence coordination is totally alien to the ASEAN charter. Despite its birth pangs, ASEAN has survived as a regional entity for 15 years and grown from strength to strength. Earlier Southeast Asian regional organizations, like Maphilindo [Malaysia, Philippines, Indonesia] and ASA [Association of Southeast Asia], suffered infant mortality. Primarily ASEAN was conceived as an economic entity which would benefit the noncommunist nations of the region. There were also cultural exchanges stipulated in the charter.

That ASEAN became a political force was more due to the fact that the role was being steadily thrust upon her by external forces. The debacle of 1975, when South Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos became communist states, heightened ASEAN's political role -- and actually this glued the organization further and made it stronger. The Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea amply demonstrated this fact, and by stoutly opposing Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea, ASEAN not only gained greater inner strength, but a whole lot of international prestige.

ASEAN has been accused several times of being a military alliance by Hanoi. Worse, the Vietnamese leaders have also implied that ASEAN as a military alliance is a stooge of the United States. But ASEAN does not have to defend herself against these snide accusations because the rest of the world does not attach any importance to the figments of imagination that emanate from Hanoi. It is because of this we take very strong exception to what Lee has said.

From another point of view, it does not matter whether Lee was being serious in suggesting the five-nation military exercise or was cracking a joke. The point is what he has said will provide ideal grist for Hanoi's propaganda machine. We cannot speak for other ASEAN members, but if our reading of the Thai leaders is correct, there is great opposition to turning ASEAN into a military bloc -- that is not what Lee said, but a joint military exercise could easily be interpreted that way.

PREM APPROVES DEPUTY SUPREME COMMANDER PLAN

BK140617 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] According to Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon, Gen Prem Tinsulanon has officially approved the proposal appointing commanders of the three armed forces concurrently as deputy supreme commanders in the interest of stability of the armed forces. He said a royal decree need not be issued for the appointments, which will become effective from 1 October. General Saiyut said job responsibilities will be delegated to the deputy supreme commanders after their appointments take effect. He said he is confident that the appointment of commanders of the armed forces as deputy supreme commanders will contribute to the efficiency and stability of the Thai Armed Forces, as well as saving money from the national budget.

CPT POSITION VIEWED IN WAKE OF UDOM SURRENDER

Prasong Comments

[Text] Pracha Thanyaphaibun, recently appointed secretary-general of the Communist Party of Thailand, does not exist, Secretary General of the National Security Council Prasong Sunsiri said yesterday.

Squadron Leader Prasong said that Udom Sisuwan, the Politburo member of the CPT who recently defected from the party, told him that because of internal party division, the CPT could not agree on who should be appointed to the post of the secretary general. "He (Udom) told me that Pracha Thanyaphaibun, the new secretary general of the CPT, exists only in name. The rift (between the pro-Chinese and the pro-Soviet groups) within the party made it necessary for the CPT to invent "Pracha Thanyaphaibun" to conceal the disunity within the party," Sqn Ldr Prasong told reporters.

Sources at the Internal Security Operations Command said they previously believed that Pracha Thanyaphaibun and another Politburo member, Prasit Taphianthong, were the same person.

Sqn Ldr Prasong said that Udom's information points to the fact that the CPT is at its worst since the party first announced their policy of armed struggle in 1965. "Only about five percent of the CPT leadership still hangs on to the armed struggle tactic. They are mostly old leaders who have been trained in China some 30 years ago," Prasong said. He estimated that there are no more than 7,000 armed CPT guerrillas at the moment and that the number would continue to decrease. Thus the CPT's effectiveness is now no more than what it was about 20 years ago. He said that Udom Sisuwan, one of the seven Politburo members and a former secretary of the northeastern branch of the CPT, had given himself up because he did not think that armed revolution would ever bring the CPT to victory in Thailand.

According to Sqn Ldr Prasong, Udom said that he gave himself up because he believed in the government policy to forgive former guerrillas, and that he now just wanted to live a quiet life like other people. Udom, who is 62 years old and suffering from tuberculosis, supposedly told Prasong that he got tired of living under the dictatorial whims of just a few people that control the CPT.

Asked if criminal charges will be filed against Udom, Sqn Ldr Prasong replied that the government policy is to use political methods to beat the CPT, so other measures and laws will be implemented to ensure the confidence and peace of mind of defectors. The present government policy is to pardon communist defectors as former members of the CPT, but criminal charges could be brought against them. Prasong also said that Udom's safety is ensured and that he has all the right other citizens have.

He also predicted that since Udom held a very important position in the party and was the secretary of the I-San (Northeast) branch of the CPT, other communists that have known or worked with him before will soon follow his trail out of the jungles.

Official Warns of Infiltration

[Text] The continuous flow of communist defectors is attributed to the new strategy of the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand adopted immediately after the April 1, 1981, abortive coup, Dr Somchai Rakwichit, an expert on communist insurgency, told the BANGKOK POST yesterday.

Dr Somchai, a former Internal Security Operations Command official, said that the CPT in fact tried to take advantage of the near-clash in Bangkok between the rebellious troops and government forces. The coupmakers failed to rally public support so the coup ended in a failure. Dr Somchai said it was likely that if there were communist infiltrators in the capital, they should have been able to create serious rifts between the confronting armed groups which could lead to a bloody civil war, all to the benefit of the communists. He said that the insurgents, after an urgent meeting held last November, reached a decision that such a group of infiltrators was needed in Bangkok, but its implementation was then still pending.

Dr Somohai said Politburo member Udon Sisuwan, an advocate of the "three-operational-zones-and-two-battle-fronts strategy" and "urban struggle strategy" lost his hold in the party leadership when his followers were demoted from key positions in the party and replaced by the supporters of Wirat Angkhathawon, another Politburo member who is a faithful follower of the Maoist line "jungle surrounding the city".

Such a rift, however, is relatively too minor to cause any critical confrontation within the party, particularly between Udom and Wirat, both of whom are profoundly loyal to China, where both were intensively trained, Dr Somchai argued, adding that the only obvious difference between them is their backgrounds. Udom was brought up in urban area while Wirat grew up in the countryside which to some extent determines their differences on the course of struggle. He contended that evidence showed that Udom actually came to Bangkok for treatment of his serious lung problem almost four months ago, and nearly got arrested in the process. The close call, he noted, might have prompted Udom to give himself up to the government by taking advantage of the government's amnesty offer. Should he be arrested, he will be in the same helpless situation as Damri Ruangsutham, another Politburo member arrested in Surat Thani last year. Damri is being tried in the military court on charges of communist activities, internal rebellion, endangering national security, carrying arms without a license, and resisting arrest.

By manipulating the situation, Dr Somchai believed, Udom would be able to pursue his advocated line that has been played down within the CPT and he could even regroup other disgruntled defectors who are now free in Bangkok to implement the new strategy derived from lessons of the April abortive coup.

Reiterating that the two communist factions will never fight each other, but rather let the other to pursue and prove its own advocated course, he cited: "The Chinese civil war is a very good example. When the CPC suffered from a series of losses to the KMT, Mao then defected from the Soviet-inspired group and adopted the "jungle surrounding the city" tactic which eventually led the CPC to total victory on the China mainland in 1949."

Dr Somchai warned that the amnesty offer is a double-edged sword which has to be wielded wisely and restrainedly. Only through a genuine democratic system under which people of different ideologies, including the communists, can participate under a decentralised economic system, can the government can deal effectively with the problem of communist insurgency, he concluded.

PLAN TO EVICT MONS IN KANCHANABURI DISCUSSED

[Excerpt] The National Security Council has told the Interior Ministry and the First Army Region to finalise plans to evict about 6,000 Mons who entered Kamchanaburi illegally from Burma. Mr Loet Hongphakdi, the out-going under-secretary of the Interior Ministry, told the BANGKOK POST yesterday that details of th eviction process will be worked out to include the Interior Ministry, the First Army Region and other government agencies at a meeting to be held at the Interior Ministry. The scheduled eviction of the Mons, who entered Thailand to work on a big plantation near the Thai-Burmese border, has been delayed due to the sensitive nature of the task, Mr Loet explained. He said that not all of these 6,000 Mons would be repatriated because some of them are claiming to hold Thai citizenship. In effect, this means that the authorities will have to consider each of them individually. Stressing that those who cannot provide proof of Thai citizenship will be evicted by troops from the First Army Region, the under-secretary disclosed that he was scheduled to inspect the plantation soon.

Mr Loet explained that the Thai authorities have no power to take any action against the reported collection of toll fees by these Mons from people traveling across the border because the toll booth is reported to be on the Burmese side of the border.

AAPSO PEACE, SECURITY CONFERENCE HELD IN HANOI

Arrival of Delegations

OW091628 Hanoi VNA in English 1603 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Sep 9 -- Foreign delegations have come here for a conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia, and a conference of the A.A.P.S.O. [Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization] Presidium Committee on Asian Security to open tomorrow.

These delegations represent the A.A.P.S.O. and national committees of India, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Afghanistan, Mongolia, Nepal, the Soviet Union, Laos, the People's Republic of Kampuchea, and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.

They were welcomed by Tran Hoai Nam, Presidium member of the Vietnam Committee for Afro-Asian People's Solidarity, and Pham Khac Quang, Presidium member of the same committee and director of the A.A.P.S.O. Information and Liaison Center for Asia.

Opening of Conference

OW111135 Hanoi VNA in English 0914 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 10 -- The conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia opened at the International Club in Hanoi tonight under the joint auspices of the Committee on Asian Security of the Presidium of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization and the A.A.P.S.O. Information and Liaison Centre for Asia.

Attending the conference are an A.A.P.S.O. delegation led by A.A.P.S.O. vice-president Abdul Aziz; a Vietnamese delegation led by Nguyen Thi Binh, A.A.P.S.O. vice-president, president of the A.A.P.S.O. Presidium Committee on Asian Security and Presidium member of the Vietnamese Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity; a Lao delegation led by Sinkapo Sikhotchounlamani, minister and president of the Lao Peace Committee; a Kampuchean delegation led by Chum Bun Rong, department head of the Foreign Ministry of the People's Republic of Kampuchea; a Soviet delegation led by I.V. Gorsuyev, editor-in-chief of the Planeta Publishing House and vice-president of the Soviet Committee for Support to Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea; an Indian delegation led by Kalim Bahudiran, professor of Jawaharlal Nehru University; a Philippine delegation led by Jose D. Logarto Jr., chemical engineer; a Thai delegation led by [name indistinct], journalist; an Afghan delegation led by [name indistinct] Karim Mohammad, who is responsible for task of developed capitalist countries and developing countries in the International Department of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan; a Sri Lankan delegation led by Abdul Aziz, general secretary of the Sri Lankan Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity; and a Yemeni delegation led by Sa'id Salim al-Memba, chairman of the Financial Supervision Commission of the Central Committee of the Yemeni Socialist Party. Also present at the opening session were representatives of public offices and mass organizations in Hanoi.

In his opening, Abdul Aziz, vice-president of AAPSO, said: "Permit me at the outset to welcome you to this historic meeting which is being held at a time of immense tension in our region. We are meeting at a period in which vast and meaningful changes are taking place on our continent. These changes are being resisted by the reactionary imperialist forces aided by their old and new allies. This is the cause of these tensions. There is the leader of the imperialist world, the United States of America, whose central point of policy is to obstruct the path of history by using its mighty superpower force to prevent humanity on our continent and in the world from going on the road of a socialist life. In this nefarious task, it is growingly aided by Japan, which is utilizing its vast industrial power to help in designs of the U.S.A. These forces have acquired now for some time a new ally, viz, China. Thrown into these imperialist activities are the various smaller nations in the region.

"In the centre of these reactionary forces stands Vietnam, facing the onslaught of reaction against itself and against the people of Kampuchea and Laos. Vietnam, inspired by its own progressive and socialist ideologies and policies and aided by the world of socialism under the leadership of the great Soviet Union, is facing the challenge that imperialism is posing to it, so as to destroy it. It is therefore in fitness of things that our historic meeting is taking place in Hanoi, the beautiful capital of a beautiful country. Though ravaged first by the war of liberation and then by wars of attrition from the United States of America and China, Vietnam has stood up like a rock and is facing all their powerful enemies at the one and the same time. Vietnam has performed its duties to the cause of socialism and humanitarianism and for sovereignty and liberation to a degree that its struggle would go down in the annals of history in the letters of gold.

"People of Vietnam, you have not only liberated your own land with the sweat and blood of your people by fighting against the world's strong superpower, the United States of America, but you have also fought wars against China and, above all, in fulfillment of your humanitarian duty, rescued the people of Kampuchea from the mass-murderer Pol Pot's most hated regime. A.A.P.S.O. and I salute you in our humble homage to your services in the cause of humanitarianism. We salute you as heroes not only in the fight for your own people and your socialist ideologies, but also for the cause of socialism on the continent of Asia. We salute your dedication and pay your respects in a homage to your unparalleled struggle."

A. Aziz continued: "In our deliberations, we shall have to decide the questions as to from where does come the threat to security in Asia. It is not difficult to identify what those forces are. They are the United States of America, Japan, their new ally, China, and of course their other allies in the region."

After dealing with developments in Kampuchea, Afghanistan and Palestine, the A.A.P.S.O. vice-president said: "Cooperation between the countries of Asia is a long-felt need for achieving the goal of peace and security in Asia. To thwart the attempts of imperialists who wish to destroy peace and security in Asia, cooperation between the Asian countries in all fields is a vital and essential necessity. Exchanges and contacts, bilateral and multilateral, in the fields of education, culture, technology, on problems of environment, development of resources, communications and a host of other questions, has to be developed. Above all, the vital need for economic cooperation in the matter of industrial, agricultural and technological development has to be greatly emphasized."

"If the continent of Asia succeeds in achieving these goals, this will be a sufficient guarantee against imperialist onslaught on our continent," A. Aziz said in conclusion.

In her speech, Mrs Nguyen Thi Binh, president of the Committee on Asian Security of the AAPSO Presidium, reviewed the urgent issues arising from the world and Asian situation. She resolutely condemned the collusion between U.S. imperialism, Japanese militarism and the reactionary forces in the Beijing ruling circles, which, she said, seriously threatens peace and security of the Asian peoples. She exalted the victories of the Asian peoples in their struggle against U.S. imperialism and international reaction. Nguyen Thi Binh emphasized the need and possibilities of comprehensive cooperation between all political forces in Asia in fulfilling the common tasks, namely, defending peace and security, consolidating national independence and achieving socio-economic development.

In their welcome speeches, foreign delegates thanked the host country for helping in organizing this conference.

NHAN DAN Welcomes Meeting

BK111601 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 10 Sep 82

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 11 September 1982]

[Text] NHAN DAN today carries on page 4 a commentary entitled "For the Sake of Peace, Security and Cooperation in Asia." The commentary reads in part as follows:

At present, the adventurist policy pursued by Washington and the Beijing hegemonists is posing a grave threat to various nations in Asia. Therefore, carrying out the struggle for peace and security is truly a task of paramount importance and a prerequisite for the development of cooperation among various countries in the region in order to build a prosperous Asia.

It is clear that only by resolutely struggling against sinister schemes of the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese hegemonists can the Asian people firmly maintain peace and stability, protect national independence and promote cooperation among various countries in the region. This struggle must be closely linked with the world people's struggle for peace and disarmament.

The AAPSO-sponsored international conference, which opened yesterday in Hanoi, is aimed primarily at discussing the grave situation now facing the region and at studying and coming up with a joint activity program for the present and long-term plan with the purpose of boosting all-round cooperation among all the political and social forces in Asia in order to achieve common targets, namely, safeguarding peace and security, consolidating political independence, strengthening economic independence, and struggling to achieve the establishment of a new international economic order.

Nguyen Thi Binh Address

OW111245 Hanoi VNA in English 0933 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 10 -- Safeguarding peace and security in Asia as a precondition for promoting cooperation among countries in the region with a view to building a prosperous Asia [word indistinct] Mrs Nguyen Thi Binh, president of AAPSO Presidium Committee on Asian Security, at the opening session of the conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia held here this evening.

On the Asian situation, Nguyen Thi Binh said: "First of all, I would like to draw your attention to the gravity of the threat of war presently hanging over the world as a result of the adventurous and war-like policy pursued by the U.S. ruling circles, especially since early 1981.

"Since coming to power, President Reagan has adopted an extremely dangerous foreign policy with the 'direct confrontation' strategy as the mainstay and using military strength including nuclear weapons as an instrument for realizing it. The danger of extermination by nuclear war is posing a serious challenge to all mankind. The U.S. strategy of 'direct confrontation' with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries is at the same time being fiercely directed at the national liberation movement.

"All countries taking [word indistinct] party of independent development in Asia, Africa and Latin America, together with the Soviet Union and the socialist community, have become the common object of the Reagan administration's policy of war and aggression.

"I am all the more conscious of the fact that the struggle of the Asian people to defend their national independence is (?linked more) closely than ever with that of the world people for peace and disarmament.

"The biggest scheme nurtured by the U.S. in Asia is to (?see) a de facto trilateral military alliance between the U.S., Japan and China. As the political situation does not permit the formal establishment of trilateral military alliance, the U.S. has created a type of triangular alliance comprising three bilateral alliances: U.S.-Japan, Japan-China and U.S.-China.

"The U.S. and China have divided their zones of influence in Asia, according to which the U.S. not only approves, but even encourages and lends a hand to China in realizing its hegemonist policy against the neighbour countries on the Asian continent, especially in Southeast Asia, primarily the Indochinese countries; for its part, China supports the U.S. 'presence' in Asia and the Pacific, its maintenance of troops in South Korea, thus hindering the peaceful reunification of Korea.

"The collusion between U.S. imperialism and Beijing expansionism and hegemonism in their 'parallel actions' to realize their 'common objectives' in all regions is a permanent factor endangering world peace, particularly the peace and security of the Asian nations, primarily in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

"These 'parallel actions' gravely undermine the trend of independence, peace and centrality that has developed vigorously in Southeast Asia following the glorious victory of the Vietnam, Lao and Kampuchean peoples in their anti-U.S. resistance war for national salvation. Realistic-minded elements in the Southeast Asian ruling circles have clearly acknowledged and rejoiced at this tendency.

"The people of Southeast Asia (and of Asia as a whole) rejoiced at the developing cooperation on many planes between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and the five ASEAN countries from the mid-1970's till the end of the decade. The results of this cooperation have had an advantageous impact on the exploitation of the abundant potentialities of these countries, contribution to the development of their economic power, strengthening their political independence, and for the building of Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, independence, cooperation and prosperity.

"But this situation ran counter to the will for the imperialist and reactionary forces, notably the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists. It is for this reason that they have been conspiring together to sabotage this positive trend, provoking division and confrontation between the countries of Indochina and those of ASEAN, creating destabilisation in the Southeast Asian region to have the opportunity to interfere in the internal affairs of these countries and realize their aggressive and expansionist schemes.

"We know that the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists have long been coveting the riches of Southeast Asian countries. Mao Zedong affirmed at a meeting of the Politburo of the Chinese Communist Party in August 1965: 'By all means, we must have a firm hold on Southeast Asia, including South Vietnam, Thailand, Burma, Malaysia, Singapore. This region is abundant in resources and worth the price we have to pay. After having a hold on Southeast Asia, we can strengthen our power in the region. And we will have sufficient force to enter into confrontation with the Soviet-East European bloc. The Eastern wind will blow off the Western wind'.

"As for the U.S., it advocates 'reestablishment of the United States' leadership in Southeast Asia and in the whole of Asia with the their 'Reagan doctrine'.

"There are the 'common objectives' of the Beijing hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists in Southeast Asia. There 'common objectives' have pushed the U.S. to support by diverse means China's hostile activities against the countries of Indochina.

"The spearhead of the expansionists' and hegemonists' attack is aimed at Vietnam, for they consider a socialist, unified and independent Vietnam an insurmountable obstacle on their path of expansion into Southeast Asia.

"After their defeat in their war of aggression against Vietnam in February-March 1975, they have not given up their scheme to annex our country. At present, they are conducting a type of special war of destruction against our country in many aspects in order to weaken us and at the same time to prepare the conditions to launch a large-scale war to invade our country.

"In Kampuchea, they are feverishly conducting their 'special war' from the Thai territory, using Pol Pot remnant troops, conspiring with Khmer exiled reactionary factions to carry out commando acts, sabotage and terrorism aimed at preventing the revival of their Kampuchean people; they have colluded with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to set up the so-called 'unified fronts' and the 'tripartite coalition government' of the reactionary Khmer regime, hoping (?for) staving off the complete decomposition of the genocidal 'Democratic Kampuchea' corpse.

"As regards Laos, they have resorted to many perfidious manoeuvres, such as infiltrating agents to carry out sabotage from within, rallying Lao reactionary elements, establishing counterrevolutionary bases, conducting commando and sabotage activities and inflicting armed conflicts on the Lao-Thailand border. At the same time, they have massed Chinese troops along the Sino-Lao border, threatening aggression against Laos. They have also stepped up psychological war and slander activities with a view to lowering the prestige of the Lao Government, sowing division among different Lao ethnic groups, plotting to prop up a separatist state labeled 'Meo Kingdom' in northern Laos.

"Vis-a-vis the five ASEAN countries Beijing has on the one hand sought to draw them to its side and on the other hand secretly fostered local Maoist elements to carry out subversions against the (?loyal) governments. Burma, which has been following a neutral policy in Southeast Asia, is also victim of Chinese expansionism. In east Asia, the People's Republic of Mongolia has to confront the permanent threat of aggression from China.

"In southwestern Asia, the Chinese authorities are conspiring with the U.S. to use Pakistan as a base for their 'undeclared war' against the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan.

"In south Asia, the Beijing hegemonists keep pursuing their goals of aggression and expansion against India while professing their 'willingness to restore the traditional friendship with India.'"

Mrs Nguyen Thi Binh went on: "Threats of war and aggression cannot intimidate the Asian peoples (?who) are proud of the fact that whenever there are threats and challenges by the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing hegemonists, the people have given due responses to them whether in Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea, Mongolia or Afghanistan, India or Lebanon.

"Over the past few years, the Indochinese peoples managed a continuous and multiform struggle against the expansionist policies of the Beijing authorities in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other forces of reaction and have inflicted heavy setbacks upon them.

"The defeats suffered by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in their war of aggression against Vietnam and in their schemes of annexing Kampuchea and Laos are the heaviest in this phase of overt expansionism in Southeast Asia.

"But these defeats have another unfavourable political consequence for the prospects of Beijing hegemonism: They have laid bare the reactionary bellicose nature of the present Chinese authorities and impel the Asian and world people to heighten their vigilance and step up their struggle. A growing number of persons in the ASEAN region circles have become aware of the danger of Beijing expansionism and hegemonism for their own countries.

"The Vietnamese people, right from the days of their resistance war against U.S. aggression, have clearly realized the wicked design of the Chinese authorities in collusion with the U.S. imperialists against the liberation of South Vietnam from the U.S. neocolonialist yoke. While they are determined to wage an uncompromising struggle against all schemes of aggression and domination by the Beijing hegemonists, the Vietnamese people always treasure friendship with the Chinese people which we regard as precious common property of the peoples of the two countries. We always stand for promoting friendly relations with the Chinese people on the basis of mutual respect for independence and sovereignty and of negotiations to solve problems left by history and other questions under contention. This consistent policy has been expressed many times in official Vietnamese documents, in statements by Vietnamese party and state leaders, and in Vietnam's constructive proposals and practical deeds, such as the proposals for resuming talks between Vietnam and China to solve problems of relationships between the two countries. That consistent policy has been reiterated in the July 7, 1982 appeal by the foreign ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the People's Democratic Republic of Laos and the People's Republic of Kampuchea demanding that the People's Republic of China give a positive response to the prevous proposals by the three foreign ministers on the signing of bilateral or multilateral treaties to guarantee the peaceful coexistence between Laos, Kampuchea, Vietnam and China.

"As regards ASEAN, we wish to promote relations of cooperation in multiple aspects because we are sure that this cooperation will contribute to the common struggle of the Asian peoples to strengthen their political independence, economic and social development, and to building Asia into a zone of peace, security and prosperity, thus contributing to the defense of world peace and security. Between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries there are no contradictions of interests. On the contrary, there is a common interest, namely to defend their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity against the threat by their common enemy: Beijing expansionism and hegemonism. We acclaim the statement on concord adopted by the ASEAN conference held in Bali in February 1976, which expressed the desire to 'create favourable conditions for the establishment and development of peaceful cooperation between Southeast Asian countries on the basis of mutual respect and benefit.'

"We wish that the governments of the ASEAN countries will respond positively to the three Indochinese countries' proposals on commencing an international conference on Southeast Asia with the participation of the Indochinese and ASEAN countries, Burma, the Soviet Union, China, the U.S., Great Britain, France, India and the U.N. secretary general. We are certain that this conference will create conditions for promoting mutual understanding between the two groups of Indochinese and ASEAN countries and for foiling the enemies' schemes of division and confrontation between these two groups in order to facilitate their interference in the internal affairs of (?Southeast) Asian countries, thus harming our legitimate interests.

"We highly value our Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's visit to Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand and Burma. This visit has contributed to promoting the trend toward dialogue, stepping up cooperation beneficial to peace and stability in the Southeast Asian (?region)."

Concerning regional cooperation, Mrs. Binh said: "Unity makes strength; that is an age-old proverb of all nations, that is the fundamental principle, the raison d'etre of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Movement as well as the Non-Aligned Movement.

"To confront this diabolical alliance of all forces opposed to peace, freedom and progress in Asia and the world, we invite our conference to focus on the formulation of an immediate common programme of action and a long-term plan aimed at promoting multi-form cooperation between all Asian political and social forces to fulfill our common task, that is, to defend peace and security to strengthen our political and economic independence, develop our economy and society, and to struggle for the establishment on a new international economic order.

"It is our view that in the political field, the struggle against the schemes and acts of sabotage, war and aggression of our common enemy have created a broad basis for our cooperation. Each initiative aimed at safeguarding peace, security and stability in Asia and the world gives rise to new possibilities for promoting our cooperation. For that reason, we warmly acclaim the peace programme for the 80's set forth by the 26th Congress of the C.P.S.U., particularly the statement by President L.I. Brezhnev to the effect that the Soviet Union unilaterally pledged not to be the first to employ nuclear weapons. We warmly support the proposal advanced by the People's Republic of Mongolia on the signing of a treaty of 'non-aggression and non-use of force in the relations among countries in Asia and the Pacific', support the good will proposals of the Afghan people aimed at normalizing relations with their neighbouring countries, acclaim the positive foreign policy of India for the defense of peace in Asia and the world, warmly hail the initiative taken by the nonaligned countries aimed at turning the Indian Ocean into a zone of peace, as well as that taken by Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea aimed at striving to make Southeast Asia a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. In the economic and cultural fields, there are also broad bases for cooperation among the Asian countries.

"We have similar objectives in the task of liquidating the consequences of centuries-old colonialist domination in our respective countries.

"We can have cooperation and exchange experiences in solving such problems as restoring and developing the previous legacies of our national cultures threatened with decay as a result of cultural oppression by imperialism, and preserving the purity of our national languages. We also have similar objectives in applying a correct strategy of economic and social development.

"We can have cooperation and exchange experiences in solving numerous questions like carrying out industrialization, developing agriculture, solving food problems, carrying out democratic reforms, ensuring ever broader participation of the working people in the political life and in economic and social development. We have common objectives in the struggle against multinational corporations and for a new international economic order.

"We can plan diverse efficient actions to realize the combination in the struggles on such fundamental problems as the defence of the right to mastery as regards natural resources; the transformation of the international trade structure in order to guarantee the developing countries' interests; the reorganization of the international financial and banking system, in order to heighten the developing countries' position in solving problems of capital investment; the formulation of a code and regulations on the activities of multinationals in order to oppose their control over the developing countries' economy.

"We gladly acknowledge the active role of the socialist countries in the struggle of the developing countries for an independent economy and a new international economic order.

"We can look out together for various possibilities and forms on cooperation with the socialist countries in solving such problems as the development of trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit, the exchange of techniques through bilateral cooperation with the socialist countries' companies, or (?multilateral) cooperation with the participation of capitalist firms.

"Naturally, the economic and social cooperation between Asian countries in the solving of the above mentioned problems must be carried out on a governmental basis. Yet, mass organizations including solidarity committees, friendship associations, can contribute to promoting their cooperation by such forms of action as to exchange visits, to [words indistinct] on economic and social achievements in friendly countries, to organize seminars on the four above-mentioned questions, to ensure a regular exchange of research documents and to make reports on these activities, to submit collective proposals on the basis of collective research to the governments of countries concerned for consideration.

"We think that the AAPSO Information and Liaison Center for Asia can efficiently carry out its task of coordinating the activities of mass organizations in the Asian countries, primarily the solidarity committees and friendship associations, contributions to the cooperation that we all desire".

Meeting Of Liaison Center

OW121754 Hanoi VNA in English 1159 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 -- The conference of the AAPSO Information and Liaison Centre for Asia was held in Hanoi this morning.

In his opening speech in the capacity as president of the centre, Abdul Aziz, vice-president of AAPSO, made known that several centres had been created (one in Geneva, one in Vienna and one in Nicosia), and that today an information and liaison centre was officially opened in Hanoi.

Professor Khac Khao Quang, director of the AAPSO Information and Liaison Centre for Asia in Hanoi, then introduced the main tasks and programme of activities of the centre. The centre, he said, would help in materializing contacts among Afro-Asian solidarity committees in Asia, and between these committees and broad public opinion, mass-media organizations, and develop activities of AAPSO in Asia in the field of information and propaganda.

Attending today's conference of the centre were delegates of AAPSO from Afghanistan, India, Kampuchea, Laos, Mongolia, Philippines, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Vietnam, the USSR and the PDRY.

Late in the afternoon, the AAPSO Information and Liaison Centre for Asia was officially inaugurated at its head office (105 Quan Thanh Street) in Hanoi.

Pham Van Dong Meets Delegates

OW121742 Hanoi VNA in English 1613 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 -- Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, received at the presidential palace here this afternoon the delegates to the conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia and the conference of the Information and Liaison Centre of AAPSO for Asia.

He expressed his joy over and his high appreciation of the fine result of the conference, and said that that result marked a new important development in the promotion of the solidarity of Asian people.

Chairman Pham Van Dong stressed: "The Asian peoples and other peoples in the world need peace, security and cooperation. We must strive for these noble goals, because they are the aspiration, the will and also the interests of all peoples on our continent. The present situation in Asia and the world is very criticial due to the fact that the U.S. and other reactionary forces are colluding with one another to undermine peace and detente, accelerating the arms race and preparing for a nuclear war. However, the peoples and progressive organizations in Asia and the world are determined to unite together and persist in their struggle to foil all plots of the war-mongers. In the world today, those who make history and who are determined to fight and to win are the people, but not imperialism and its henchmen".

On behalf of the Vietnamese Government and people, Chairman Pham Van Dong sincerely thanked AAPSO and other peoples for their fine sentiments and warm and precious support to the Vietnamese people in their socialist construction and national defence.

A.A.P.S.O. Vice-President Abdul Aziz and other delegates said it was an honour for them to come and attend the conference held in the homeland of the great President Ho Chi Minh. They said that A.A.P.S.O. and Asian and African people highly respect the Vietnamese people and that this respect stemmed from their admiration for the Vietnamese people's fight for independence and freedom. They also said that this fight not only liberated the Vietnamese people from the colonialist and imperialist domination, but also boosted the struggle of other peoples for liberation and social progress.

Vice-President Abdul Aziz and other delegates denounced the U.S. imperialists for colluding with Japan and the Chinese expansionists to undermine peace, security and cooperation in Asia. They reaffirmed the Asian people's determination to persist in the struggle for peace, security and cooperation on this continent and laid stress on A.A.P.S.O and the Asian people's firm support for the Vietnamese people's just cause.

The reception took place in a very cordial and friendly atmosphere.

Communique Issued

OW120801 Hanoi VNA in English 0722 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 -- The conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia issued in Hanoi today the following communique:

The conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia as convened by the Committee on Asian Security of the A.A.P.S.O. Presidium held its sessions in Hanoi, capital city of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, on September 10-12, 1982. Participating in the conference were representatives from Afghanistan, India, Mongolia, Sri Lanka, Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea, P.D.R.Y., Philippines, Thailand, the Soviet Union.

With a high sense of responsibility for peace and security of the Asian peoples, the conference seriously examined and discussed the urgent issues arising from the world and Asian situation.

The conference observed with deep concern that since the Second World War, never has the world situation become so critical as it is today. The Reagan administration has been pursuing an extremely dangerous foreign policy of stepping up the arms race, gaining military supremacy, resorting to the direct confrontation strategy and conducting the cold war with a view to reverting the process of international detente; the danger of a nuclear war is ever increasing with the Pentagon's limited nuclear war and prolonged nuclear war strategies. The world peace is thus being seriously threatened.

This situation has directly affected peace and security in Asia, where the United States once conducted the most brutal war of aggression in history and is now trying by every means to maintain its control as part of the U.S. global strategy.

The U.S. military bases extending from the Gulf region to the Western Pacific, making an arc of bases from the United States through South-East Asia, Diego Garcia and the Horn of Africa, linking them with the U.S. fleets in the Pacific Ocean, the Indian Ocean and the Gulf region, and the Rapid Deployment Forces always standing ready to defend the so-called U.S. vital interests zones, not only pose a direct threat to the Asian peoples, but also constitute U.S. important strategic bases in its world war strategy.

On the other hand, the hot spots as constantly created by the U.S. have endangered peace and security in the region and at any time could become the scenes of international conflicts. The U.S.-abetted Israeli aggression against the peoples of Palestine and Lebanon; the undeclared war waged by the United States and other reactionary forces against the Afghan people; the tense situation on the Indian continent as a consequence of U.S. intensive arming of Pakistan which threatens stability in the region; the constant threat of aggression against the Soviet Republic of Vietnam and the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the nurturing of Pol Pot remnants against the Kampuchean people's resurrection and the provocations against the People's Democratic Republic of Korea are all clear proofs of the schemes hatched by the United States and its agents and international reactionary forces against the liberation movement, threatening the independence, sovereignty, security and territorial integrity of countries.

Particularly dangerous is the ever closer collusion between U.S. imperialism, Japanese militarism and the reactionary forces in the Beijing ruling circles who have nurtured their ambitions of expansion and hegemony, thereby seriously threatening peace and security of the Asian peoples and increasing the danger of war in the region and elsewhere.

The conference resolutely condemns the United States and international reactionary forces for their bellicose policy of threatening peace, security, independence and territorial integrity of the Asian countries and demands that U.S. military bases be dismantled and U.S.-created hotbeds of war be eliminated to ensure that the Asian peoples might live in an atmosphere of peace, independence and freedom.

The conference strongly condemns the Israeli and U.S. aggression in Lebanon and expresses its utmost admiration for the Palestinian people and liberation fighters and the Lebanese progressive forces in their undaunted struggle against the brutal Israeli and U.S. aggression aimed at physically destroying the Palestinian people. The conference strongly supports the struggle of the Palestinian people for their inalienable national right and an independent state under the leadership of P.L.O., the sole representative of the people of Palestine.

The conference vehemently condemns the schemes by the U.S. imperialists, the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles and other reactionary forces against the resurrection of the Kampuchean people and the national reconstruction of the peoples of Vietnam and Laos. The conference declares that the so-called tripartite coalition is merely a farce aimed at camouflaging the genocidal Polpotists. The conference demands the expulsion from the United Nations of the Pot Pol clique. The conference demands the restitution of the legitimate position of the Kampuchean people's Republic in the United Nations as well as in the Non-Aligned Movement.

The conference strongly condemns the undeclared war waged by the U.S., China and other reactionary regimes who are supplying ammunitions and equipment to the reactionaries in an attempt to subvert peace, independence and territorial integrity of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan; the conference expresses its hope that the problems relating to Afghanistan will be settled through peaceful dialogue as proposed by the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan on 24 August, 1981.

The conference notes with satisfaction that in spite of feverish activities of the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionary forces, the calm voice to defend peace and the practical proposals aimed at reducing the tense situation in the world as well as in Asia is gaining an ever echoing response among the peoples.

The conference appreciates the Soviet policy for the defence of peace in the world and in Asia as advocated in the speech by L.I. Brezhnev, president of the Supreme Soviet, in Tashkent last March, and especially hails and supports the recent declaration of the Soviet Union to pledge not to be the first country to use nuclear weapons.

The conference welcomes the proposal of the People's Republic of Mongolia for signing a convention of non-aggression and non-use of force in the relations between the countries in Asia and the Pacific Ocean. It acclaims and supports the proposals of good will by the Afghan Government for the normalization of relations with the neighbouring countries. It supports the appeal by the non-aligned countries for turning the Indian Ocean into a zone of peace. It welcomes India's constructive foreign policy for the defence of peace in Asia and the world over.

The conference supports the Japanese people's struggle against the U.S.-Japan security treaty, the revival of Japanese militarism and U.S. military bases and nuclear weapons on their territory and for a peaceful, democratic and neutral Japan.

The conference condemns the occupation by the U.S. troops of South Korea, the violation of human rights by the dictatorial Chon Tu-hwan, and supports the proposals of the People's Democratic Republic of Korea for peaceful national reunification.

The conference especially acclaims the consistent policy of peace and friendship of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea which aims at normalizing the relations with China and the resuming of Sino-Vietnamese talks. It hails their proposal to convert Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation. The proposals of the 6th conference of foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos, and Kampuchea and Vietnam's agreement with Kampuchea to withdraw a part of Vietnamese troops for home constitute important initiatives and practical deeds which express clearly the good will of the three Indochinese countries in the peaceful settlement of the regional problems.

The participants in the conference are happy to witness the strengthening of brotherly friendship and cooperation between the Vietnamese, Laotian and Kampuchean peoples.

AAPSO supports the solidarity of three countries that have put forward several initiatives aimed at establishing good neighbourhood relations with Southeast Asia.

Friendship and cooperation between the Asian countries are important factors to ensure peace in the region. The Bandung principles which originated from the soil of Asia and have been accepted by the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization (AAPSO) as guiding principles in its activities, once carried out fully, will help to ensure that the developing countries could live in independence, peace, friendship, cooperation.

The conference wishes that there are certain encouraging developments in the settlement of the contesting problems in the region. The dialogue between India and Pakistan, between Afghanistan and Pakistan, Vietnam's proposals to sign with China an agreement for the normalization of relations, the new steps in the dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries, to which the recent visit by Foreign Minister of Vietnam Nguyen Co Thach has made an important contribution -- all these are fresh airs blowing over hot points. Let peace, friendship and stability in Asia be consolidated.

The basis for peace and friendship among the countries is cooperation in economic, cultural and other aspects of social life.

Asia is a vast continent with abundant natural resources and manpower, but it is also a continent wherein there are many underdeveloped countries as a result of colonialist and imperialist exploitation for centuries.

On the [words indistinct] economic and social development and improvement of the people's livelihood, equal and mutually beneficial cooperation and reciprocal assistance for development between the countries in the region are of great importance and necessity.

The conference wholly approves the appeal by the non-aligned summit conference in Havana for the promotion of collective self-reliance between the developing countries.

Peace and security in Asia are first and foremost the responsibilities of the Asian peoples. To strive for the building of relations of peace and friendship between countries to promote economic, social and cultural cooperation, to foil all schemes of imperialist and reactionary forces, constitute the way to defend peace and security in Asia, contributing to the consolidation of world peace, the way leading the peoples of Asia to a bright future.

The conference is of the opinion that the forthcoming meeting of the AAPSO Presidium in Tashkent could be an important political manifestation contributing to the unity of the Afro-Asian solidarity movement.

The conference appreciates the efforts of the Afro-Asian Peoples Solidarity Organization (AAPSO) and its national committees in Asia which have been ceaselessly working for noble objectives and considers that it is necessary for us to work with ever more perseverance and patience, to mobilise all peoples of good will and all peace- and justice-loving forces to create a powerful mass movement for peace, security and cooperation in Asia.

The conference welcomes the setting up of the AAPSO Information and Liaison Center for Asia with its head office in Hanoi and calls upon the AAPSO national committees in Asia for cooperation in making their own contributions to the effective operation of the center.

The conference expresses its sincere thanks to the Vietnam Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity for creating every favourable condition to make the conference successful and wishes the Vietnamese people ever more victories in the defence and reconstruction of their beloved fatherland.

Closing of Conference

OW120831 Hanoi VNA in English 0802 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, September 12 — The conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia held in Hanoi under the joint auspices of the Committee on Asian Security of the Presidium of the Afro-Asian Peoples Solidarity Organization and the A.A.P.S.O. Information and Liaison Centre for Asia closed with success this morning.

In their speeches, delegates from Afghanistan, India, Mongolia, Sri Lanka, Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea, P.D.R.Y., Philippines, Thailand and the Soviet Union seriously examined and discussed the urgent issues arisen from the world and Asian situation. The participants expressed their deep concern over the critical situation in the world today and vehemently condemned the collusion between U.S. imperialism, Japanese militarism and the reactionary forces in the Beijing ruling circles. All the delegates laid particular stress on the necessity to promote friendship and cooperation between the Asian countries which they considered as an important factor to ensure peace and security in the region.

At its closing session today, the conference adopted a number of documents relating to burning questions in Asia.

The conference has decided to send a telegramme to the secretary general of the United Nations, saying: The conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia strongly feels that the representation of Kampuchea at the United Nations by the Pol Pot clique brings shame to the community of nations. The people of Kampuchea have rid themselves of the genocidal regime of Pol Pot and have embarked on the new road of rebuilding their society and life under the leadership of the government headed by Heng Samrin. The conference demands the expulsion of the Pol Pot representative and the seating of the representative of the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

In a telegramme to Fidel Castro, president of the Non-Aligned Movement, the conference on peace, security and cooperation in Asia strongly feels that the representative of the government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea led by Heng Samrin be admitted to the Non-Aligned Movement as the genuine representative of the Kampuchean people who are new engaged in building a new life and society. The Heng Samrin government in its foreign policy pursues sincerely the spirit and principles of the Non-Aligned Movement and enjoys full confidence and support of the entire Kampuchean people, the message noted.

In a message addressed to the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and the Palestinian people, the conference reasserted the solidarity and total support of the Asian peoples and the A.A.P.S.O. national committees in Asia to the just and immortal cause of the Arab Palestinian people to achieve their inviolable national rights, including the right to establish an independent and sovereign state of Palestine on their sacred territory. The participants came out strongly against the Israeli aggressors' blatant acts and demanded the latter to immediately withdraw their troops from Lebanon and Beirut capital.

The conference also adopted a programme of actions for the Committee on Asian Security of the A.A.P.S.O. Presidium, including the launching of an urgent campaign of solidarity with the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples.

A resolution on the Gulf region, the Arab sub-continent (Peninsula) and the Red Sea was adopted unanimously, remarking that the military presence and aggression of U.S. imperialism is threatening the security, sovereignty and stability of the peoples in the region, jeopardizing international security and peace. The conference has set out political tasks aimed at materializing security and peace of the peoples in the region.

In its resolution on Afghanistan, the conference strongly condemns the undeclared war waged by imperialism led by U.S. imperialism, hegemonist Beijing regime and other reactionary regimes of the region who give moral and material help to counter revolution and organize infiltration from across the border into Afghanistan to interfere in its international affairs. This conference believes that imperialism and reactionaries are hindering the restoration of peace and consolidation of independence and national sovereignty of the D.R.A., the resolution said, adding: This conference fully supports the peaceful proposals of the D.R.A., relating to the situation around Afghanistan, and desires the problems of the region will be settled through peaceful and political negotiations as proposed on May 14, 1981 and August 24, 1981 by the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan.

In a message to the people of Vietnam, the conference wrote: The conference wholeheartedly supports constructive measures and practical acts taken by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for the consolidation of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, such as the proposals for resuming talks between Vietnam and China to solve the problems of relationship between the two countries as well as for the promotion of mutual cooperation and relationship between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries.

In this connection, the conference warmly acclaims the constant policy of Vietnam as once again expressed in the communique adopted by the July 7, 1982 conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries, and considers S.R.V. Foreign Minister Nugyen Co Thach's recent visit to Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand and Burma as an active step to promote dialogue and cooperation beneficial to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and in the whole of Asia.

The conference salutes the heroic Vietnamese people in their efforts for national reconstruction and defense and wished them greater successes in their struggle for freedom and independence.

MARCOS' ITINERARY FOR U.S. VISIT DETAILED

HK140014 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Excerpts] President Marcos is all set to leave for the United States tonight to start his second historic state visit at the invitation of American President Ronald Reagan. The president will make a stopover in Honolulu en route to Washington to officially start his American tour on September 15, Washington time. While in the United States, Mr Marcos will be accompanied by the first lady, Imelda Romualdez Marcos, along with other Cabinet Ministers and senior officials. The chief executive will hold talks with President Reagan and other ranking American officials and representatives of the private sector. The Marcos-Reagan talks will deal with bilateral relations and security matters concerning Asia and the Philippines. From the Honolulu stopover, the president will proceed to Andrews Air Force base near Washington.

On the eve of his departure, President Marcos told newsmen at Malacanang that his official American visit would reiterate the friendly and cooperative relations between the Philippines and the United States. He said that it will replenish the reservoir of good will the Philippines has for Americans.

The presidential party will include Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, Trade and Industry Minister Roberto Ongpin, Agriculture Minister Arturo Tanco, and other high-ranking government officials. Prime Minister Cesar Virata, who is attending an IMF-World Bank meeting in Toronto, Canada, will join the presidential party in Washington.

The itinerary of President Marcos includes a visit to the United Nations as guest of the General Assembly, a meeting with UN Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar and with the Council for Foreign relations. President Marcos is also scheduled to address the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce in New York, to be interviewed by the WASHINGTON POST and NEW YORK TIMES editorial boards, and appear on the "Meet the Press" television program.

These interviews by the U.S. media will afford the president the opportunity to correct the misconceptions and biased attitudes of the American media toward the Philippines.

PROBLEMS WITH U.S. IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS AIRED

HK140135 Manila TIMES JOURNAL in English 13 Sep 82 p 4

[Editorial: "U.S. Immigration Men Still Discriminating"]

[Text] There is something mystifying about the way U.S. immigration officials continue to reject Filipino visitors to the United States despite the issuance here of valid visas by the office of the American consul general.

The latest of these series of incidents involved two Filipinas who were not only refused entry to Seattle, Washington State, but were also jailed for three days in the city jail. An American lawyer effected their release through the district court; but the judge ordered the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service to hold their passports and return airline tickets until the women leave the country.

What was most embarrassing for the Filipinas was that they held valid passports and legitimate five-year business travel visas issued by the Manila office of the American consulate. These acts of discrimination continue to remain a thorny and sensitive area by both governments to resolve them once and for all.

What bothers many would-be visitors to the United States is the unreliability of visas issued by the American consul general's office in Manila. This has been admitted by some of the past officials of the consul general's office. If this were so, it would mean that officials and agents of the U.S. Immirgration and Naturalization Office can and do without further evaluation reject the validity of visas issued by the U.S. Embassy here for reasons which the local embassy must know but does not, for if it did, it would have never issued such visas in the first place. Or is there just a subtle move to restrain Filipinos from entering the U.S.?

It is hoped that President Marcos takes up this ticklish matter with U.S. President Reagan during his state visit. There is no better time than now to clarify all irritants that could affect future Philippine-American friendship.

DETAILS OF PHILIPPINE-CUBAN AGREEMENT REPORTED

HK110207 Manila BULLETIN TODAY in English 10 Sep 82 pp 1, 12

[Text] President Marcos said yesterday the signing of technological and scientific agreement between Cuba and the Philippines was an auspicious start in transfer of technology between Third World countries.

He said this was vital because of the failure of advanced countries to transfer their technology to developing nations: "It is now necessary that those in the Third World who have acquired new knowledge and progress through their dedication and specialization spread these to the developing countries."

"Politics has nothing to do with science, development, and economic progress," Mr. Marcos said, adding that if Cuba and the Philippines were getting closer to each other, this was in accordance with Third World policy.

The first lady, Minister of Human Settlements Imelda R. Marcos, joined the president in thanking Cuban President Fidel Castro and the people of Cuba for the technological transfer.

Mrs. Marcos and Cuban Foreign Minister Isidora Malmierca Peoli signed the agreement.

Minister Peoli said he hoped this would be the first step in the broadening of relations between the two countries. He brought the first couple a personal message from President Castro.

The agreement stipulates an exchange of technology aa well as experts, scientists and consultants.

Cuba would help in propagating a new breed of dairy cattle producing 110 liters of milk a day. Local cows produce only five to 10 liters.

In an earlier agreement between the Cuban Government and the Philippine Dairy Corp, it was agreed that Filipino dairy men would be trained in Cuba and that Cuba would supply the semen from its cattle to the Philippines for artificial insemination. Cuba would also donate high-yield dairy cattle to the Philippines, to be raised in three dairy genetic farms in Los Banos, Masbate, and Bukidnon. The Philippines would give Cuba technology on mildew-resistant corn, high-yield soya beans, and advanced fishery.

VER: ARMY ALERT LIFTED; SITUATION UNDER CONTROL

HK110018 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] On national security, Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fabian Ver said the situation across the country is now under control and the subversive terror conspiracy has been negated. In view of this, General Ver said the alert order to all armed forces and police units throughout the nation has been lifted. General Ver also said the total number of persons arrested in connection with the terror conspiracy stands at 33. He also said the list of wanted persons in connection with the plot does not include any members of the clergy or newspapermen. Thirty-four others are being hunted by the authorities for involvement in the plot.

ASEAN NEWS AGENCIES MEET IN INDONESIA

BK101159 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0739 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Jakarta, Sept 10 (ANTARA/OANA) -- The ASEAN news agencies have adopted a resolution reaffirming the need for the government of the respective countries to implement the practice of channeling foreign news in the country through the national news agencies. The resolution was passed at the four-day sixth annual meeting ending here Thursday of four ASEAN news agencies -- ANTARA of Indonesia, BERNAMA of Malaysia, PNA of the Philippines and TNA of Thailand.

The meeting has also adopted another resolution calling for a lower telecommunication tariff for the national news agencies. It appealed to the United Nations specialised agencies to help finance studies on computerisation of news exchange networks. The representatives recommended members of news agencies to each undertake a study on the feasibility of launching a photo service in their respective countries to step up and complement the news exchange among them. A common style book compiled by Malaysia's BERNAMA was adopted by the meeting, which also approved eleven project proposals to widen their scope of cooperation.

The meeting was also attended by observers from India's PTI and South Korea's YONHAP which have a link-up with ASEAN news exchange networks. Singapore, which has no national news agency, was also represented at the meeting. Information Minister Ali Murtopo, who gave a key-note address, emphasized that the news agencies were one of the main vehicles to bring to reality the proposed new international information and communication order which is a vital support for the realization of the new international economic order demanded by Third World countries.

Cabinet secretary concurrently chairman [as received] of the supervisory board of ANTARA news agency noted with satisfaction that cooperation among the ASEAN news agencies has grown to become the most advanced in the ASEAN cooperation in the field of information. He said the progress is bound to have a significant bearing on development in ASEAN countries. The representatives at the meeting agreed that they should enhance their cooperative efforts toward fostering a sense of regional identity, solidarity and fellowship.

An exchange of views and discussions were held with representatives of mass media end-users toward realising the ultimate goal of the ASEAN news exchange network. They shared the views that governments of the respective countries should pay greater attention to the financial needs of the news agencies. It was agreed that an expanded meeting between news agencies of the ASEAN countries and media end-users of the region is to be held in Manila, tentatively scheduled for January next year.

JAPAN-FRANCE JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEE TO BE SET UP

OW150119 Tokyo KYODO in English 0053 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept 15, KYODO -- Japan and France have agreed to set up a joint committee to study ways to promote bilateral economic cooperation. The agreement was reached during the three-day second meeting of the so-called "Japan-France Wisemen's Group," held here Monday through Wednesday.

Japan was represented by Yoshihiro Nakayama, former ambassador to France, novelist Yasushi Inoue, Haruo Suzuki, chairman of Showa Denko K.K., and Tadanobu Usami, president of the Japanese Confederation of Labor (Domei).

The Japanese delegation notified the French side that five business leaders will be named members of the joint committee. They are Akio Morita, chairman of Sony Corp., Takashi Ishihara, president of Nissan Motor Co., Ryoichi Kawai, president of Komatsu Ltd., Seiji Tsutsumi, president of Seibu Department Store, and Toshihiro Tajima, adviser to the Industrial Bank of Japan.

During the meeting, the two countries also agreed to promote cultural interchanges in such forms as translation of Japanese novels and poems into French. The next meeting of the Wisemen's Group will be held in Tokyo late next January.

SUZUKI TAKES BLAME FOR RECONSTRUCTION FAILURE

OW160823 Tokyo KYODO in English 0813 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 16, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki apologized to the nation Thursday for failing to live up to his pledge of reconstruct the deficit-ridden government finances on schedule but denied responsibility for economic mismanagement.

Declaring that public finances are in a "state of emergency," Suzuki conceded it has become impossible to phase out the flotation of deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1984, as he had repeatedly pledged earlier. "I have no excuse to make for failure in pushing the financial reconstruction program as scheduled," Suzuki told a press conference.

The government had a yen 2.5 trillion (dollar 9.5 billion) revenue shortage in fiscal 1981, ended last March 31, and is expected to run another yen 5-6 trillion (dollar 19-23 billion) shortfall in the current fiscal year, most of it to be covered by additional bond flotation. Suzuki blamed the unprecedentedly large revenue shortage on the protracted global economic slump in the wake of the two oil crises that resulted in Japan's growth slowdown.

But the Japanese economy showed relatively favorable performance regarding growth, employment and inflation control compared with the economies of other industrial countries, he said. "I think our economic policy has had no major failure" when internationally compared, he said. Suzuki indicated Japan's financial difficulties resulted from unexpected economic developments such as the oil crunch rather than from failure in economic policy.

Suzuki said he will not abandon the fiscal 1984 goal of financial rehabilitation because it could invite a "go-it-easy" attitude. But he did not show any prospect of early financial reconstruction, simply pledging redoubled efforts to cope with problems in the coming year for the present.

Suzuki said the government will float additional bonds worth more than yen 3 trillion (dollar 11 billion) to help cover the fiscal 1982 deficit -- a move running counter to the financial reconstruction program. The additional bond flotation will be carried out as an emergency measure on top of other deficit-covering measures such as spending cuts, he added.

KOMEITO CHAIRMAN RAPS GOVERNMENT DEFENSE POLICY

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Sept 16, KYODO -- The second major opposition party Komeito expressed a warning Thursday that the current government defense policy may put Japan on a track toward renewed military power.

Singling out the Defense Agency's plan to defend Japan's two vital sealanes off the Japanese coast, Komeito Chairman Yoshikatsu Takeiri said it is an attempt to scrap the country's policy limiting Japan's military action to self-defense. "(The sealane defense plan) is an extremely dangerous option," Takeiri said in an address to a Komeito Central Committee meeting.

He also said the government of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki should hold Japan's defense spending below 1 percent of the gross national product (GNP) "at any cost."

"The people are beginning to feel dangers that Japan is making its first step toward military power," Takeiri said at the meeting.

BRIEFS

FOOD AID FOR KAMPUCHEANS -- Tokyo, 10 Sep KYODO -- Japan will supply yen 550 million (dollar 2.1 million) worth of canned fish in fiscal 1982 through the World Food Program (WFP) for relief of Kampuchean refugees in Thailand, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi told the Cabinet Friday. The foreign minister said the canned fish is being supplied from the standpoint of assisting Thailand which is suffering from a heavy financial burden because of the influx of the refugees. Japan has extended medical and food aid totaling yen 37.8 billion (dollar 145 million) since fiscal 1979 for relief of the refugees through the WFP and other international organizations from a humanitarian standpoint. NTT SYSTEMS DIGITALIZATION -- Tokyo, Aug 25, KYODO -- The governmental Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corp (NTT) has decided to install 256-kilobit dynamic RAM (random access memory) chips in its information processing and digital switching systems for the first time in the world, it was announced Wednesday. An NTT spokesman said the systems, equipped with 256-kilobit dynamic RAMS -- very large scale integrated circuits (VLSI) -- would be installed starting in fiscal 1983 beginning next April. The spokesman said the adoption of the systems represents a major step toward digitalization and a marked functional improvement of NTT's information system which the corporation is aiming to achieve early in the 21st century. NTT developed a 256-kilobit dynamic RAM in 1979 for installation in information processing and digital switching system processors. The super RAM then had a pattern width of 1 micron. The 256-kilobit dynamic RAM just developed by NTT for practical application has an access time of 150 nanoseconds (1 nanosecond equals one billion of a second), and a pattern width of 1.5 to 2 microns. The spokesman said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0803 GMT 25 Aug 82 OW]

MITI PUBLIC RELATIONS DIVISION -- Tokyo, 13 Sep KYODO -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry is prepared to set up an overseas public relations division to coordinate the coverage of Japanese economic activities by foreign journalists, it was revealed Monday. Ministry officials are currently negotiating with Administrative Management Agency officials on the upgrading of the Overseas Public Relations Office to a new division, said Hidehiro Konno, the office director. The division whose establishment is subject to government ordinance will have a stall of 11, including the office's 5 ministry officials, Konno said. He predicted that the division will start work in April at the earliest or by October at the latest. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0346 GMT 13 Sep 82 OW]

KIM IL-SONG STOPS AT DANDONG EN ROUTE TO BEIJING

SK152232 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2211 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] Dandong, September 15 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, passed through Sinuiju and arrived in Dandong, a border city of China, on the afternoon of September 15 by special train for an official state visit to the People's Republic of China at the invitation of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the State Council of the People's Republic of China.

The Dandong railway station was decorated in welcome attire and crowded with working people of all strata and school children and youth in the city who came out with flowers and balloons in their hands. The national flags of our country and the People's Republic of China were flying over the railway station.

Making a trip to Dandong from Beijing to warmly greet the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song were Qiao Shi, alternate member of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and head of the International Liaison Department of the CPC Central Committee; Han Nianlong, advisor to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and Zong Kewen, PRC ambassador to our country.

Also present at the Dandong railway station to welcome the great leader were Li Huang, permanent secretary of the Liaoning provincial party committee; Zhang Tiejun, member of the Standing Committee of the Liaoning provincial party committee and deputy governor of Liaoning Province; Zhang Wu, deputy political commissar of Shenyang units of the Chinese People's Liberation Army; Li Shishan, member of the Liaoning provincial party committee and secretary of the Dandong city party committee; and Xing Xiwen, secretary of the Dandong City party committee and mayor of Dandong.

When the special train carrying the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song pulled into the station, the crowds warmly welcomed him, waving bunches of flowers and balloons, dancing and raising the cheers of "hurrah!"

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song alighted from the train and shook hands with cadres who made a trip from Beijing to greet him and leading personnel of the local party and government organs. Flowers were presented to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song by young pioneers. After having a brief rest, talking with cadres who came out to greet him, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song took the special train and headed for Beijing amid the enthusiastic cheers of the crowds.

Arrival in Beijing

SK160928 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0851 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Beijing, September 16 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, arrived in Beijing, the capital of the People's Republic of China, today by special train for an official state visit to the PRC upon the invitation of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the State Council of the PRC.

Arriving in company with him were Comrade O Chin-u, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and minister of People's Armed Forces; Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the WPK Central Committee; Comrade So Yun-Sok, member of the political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee and chief secretary of the Pyongyang Municipal Committee of the WPK; and Comrade Ho Tam, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee, vice-premier and foreign minister.

He was also accompanied by Comrades Hyon Chun-kuk and Yi Chang-son, members and vice-directors of department of the WPK Central Committee, and Kim Chae-suk, vice-minister of foreign affairs.

Also arriving with him were Comrade Qiao Shi, member and alternate member of the Secretariat of the CPC Central Committee and head of the International Liaison Department of the CPC Central Committee, Comrade Han Nianlong, member of the Central Advisory Commission of the CPC and advisor to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Comrade Zong Kewen, PRC ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the DPRK, who had greeted the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in Dandong, a border city of China.

DPRK Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the PRC, Chon Myong-su, alternate member of the WPK Central Committee, also accompanied the great leader from Dandong.

The Beijing citizens enthusiastically welcomed the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Festive mood pervaded the city of Beijing which was beautifully decorated in his honour. Flags hanging from strings were fluttering everywhere and the flags of the two countries symbolizing the blood-sealed, traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between the Korean and Chinese peoples were flying on the flagpoles of the railway station plaza.

The railway station compound and its adjoining plaza were packed to overflowing with working people, students and school boys and girls, lovely children and women in national costumes. Waiting for the arrival of the special train, they sang and danced with boundless respect and reverence for the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and warm sentiments of friendship with the Korean people.

Present at the compound of Beijing railway station to greet the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song were Comrade Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China; Comrade Deng Xiaoping, member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee, chairman of the Military Commission of the Party Central Committee and chairman of the Central Advisory Commission of the party; Comrade Zhao Ziyang, member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee and premier of the State Council of the PRC; Comrade Deng Yingchao, member of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee and vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; Comrade Wan Li, member of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee, member of the Secretariat of the party Central Committee and vice-premier of the State Council; Comrade Yang Shangkun, member of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress and vice-chairman of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee; Comrade Chen Muhua, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee, state councillor and minister of foreign economic relations and trade; Comrade Geng Biao, member of the Standing Committee of the Central Advisory Commission of the CPC, state councillor and minister of national defense; Comrade Ji Pengfei, member of the Standing Committee of the Central Advisory Commission of the CPC and state councillor; Comrade Huang Hua, member of the CPC Central Committee, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; and leading personnel of the party and power bodies and the army. Also present at the station were Korean Embassy officials and diplomatic envoys of various countries to China.

The special train slowly pulled in Beijing railway station at 11 a.m. (Pyongyang time). That moment stormy cheers of "Hurrah!" and "Warm welcome!" and the sound of drums and gongs shock heaven and earth and a sea of flowers surged over the welcoming crowds in waves. The crowds burst into shouts of "Hurrah!" waving flags and bouquets high above their heads and lovely children and women danced graceful dances, their faces bright with joy.

When the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song alighted from the train, acknowledging the enthusiastic cheers of the crowd, Comrades Hu Yaobang, Deng Xiaoping, Zhao Ziyang and other party and state leading personnel of China exchanged warm greetings with him. Children presented bouquets of flowers to him.

A grand function welcoming the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, was held in the station compound. National anthems of our country and the People's Republic of China were played.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in company with Comrades Hu Yaobang and Zhao Ziyang, reviewed the guard of honor of the three services of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. When the welcome function was over cheers burst forth again. Women of the DPRK Embassy in Beijing presented bouquets of flowers to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to Comrades Hu Yaobang, Deng Xiaoping and Zhao Ziyang.

Waving to the cheering crowds, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song walked into the railway station plaza through the station building. The welcoming crowds setting waves rolling on the sea of flowers overflowing the wide plaza, raised cheers at the top of their voices, overjoyed and excited at greeting respected Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people and intimate friend of the Chinese people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, accompanied by Comrade Hu Yaobang and Comrade Zhao Ziyang, headed for the guest house after heartily responding to the warm welcome of the enthusiastically cheering crowds, passing before them.

'STATIONARY SPYRING CASE' CALLED FABRICATION

SK150541 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0414 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] Pyongyang, September 15 (KCNA) -- The South Korean puppet Security Planning Board recently invented a new drama called "stationary spyring case" which is allegedly formed of relatives of Song Chang-sop and his wife Han Kyong-hui, the couple playing the leading part.

Commenting on this, NODONG SINMUN Wednesday brands it as a base fabrication of the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to prolong their days by clinging to the coattails of their U.S. imperialist master bent on maintaining and reinforcing the colonial rule in South Korea.

The signed commentary captioned "Base Fabrication To Prolong Their Days" says: To make this fantastic "case" appear plausible, the puppets spread the lies that they had received a fabulous amount of operative fund from the North, run camouflaged enterprises in black-market dealing in dollar and taxi business, and had wireless contacts several times, and so forth. They even cooked up code-numbers of individuals such as "Songnisan" No. so and so and "Hangnag" No. so and so. Indeed, it is a ridiculous fabrication befitting the puppet Security Planning Board.

The falsity of this "case" faked up by the puppets is well illustrated by the fact that they linked with this "case" in a far-fetched way Han Kyong-hui, who had died a few years ago while engaged in black-market dealings in dollar, as they themselves announced, and made her "spyring chief." It is nothing but a ruse to conceal the falsity of the "case" to present a dollar dealer who died a long time ago as the chief of the so-called "spyring."

The fabrication of this "case" indicates that the colonial military fascist rule of the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique in South Korea is facing an acute crisis and they feel serious unrest.

In this new drama the U.S. imperialists and their stooges seek to divert the people's attention elsewhere, appease the people's sentiments, threaten the students who have risen up in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and, furthermore, suppress the intellectuals and old politicians. And they intend to incite by this fabrication the spirit of anti-communist confrontation among the South Korean people and justify their war preparations against the northern half of the republic.

Those who resort to lies and fabrications will get nothing from them but will only precipitate their own isolation.

NODONG SINMUN VIEWS CONSTRUCTION OF COMMUNISM

[NODONG SINMUN 14 September special article: "The People's Government and the Three Revolutions Are the Great Banner of the Construction of Communism" -- KCNA identifies this as an editorial article]

[Text] Regarding the program set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song for building communism, our people are now victoriously accelerating the cause of socialism and communism. Communism is materialized in the supreme, ideal sociality of mankind. It is the rule of the development of history that all countries and peoples advance toward socialism and communism.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's illumination of the road toward communism through the setting forth of a great chuche program for building communism shines as a great revolutionary achievement he has attained for the contemporary age and for mankind. In his historic policy speech on the task of the people's government in imbuing society with the chuche idea, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song newly developed and integrated a revolutionary theory on communism. The respected and beloved leader's work is an immortal classic document brightly illuminating the future path of communism with a new ideology, theory and principle.

What occupies the most important position in the new ideas and theories the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song expounded in his work is the theory that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions. The development of this great principle is, indeed, of great significance in developing the revolutionary theory on communism and in achieving the revolutionary cause of the working class.

1. The principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions -- the principle the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song expounded in his work on the task of the people's government in imbuing society with the chuche idea -- is a great, unique, profound and rich program for building communism. The respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions. When we thoroughly carry out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- by continuously strengthening the people's government and by increasing its role, we can build the paradise of communism, in which the sovereignty of the people is completely achieved.

The essence of the principle set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song says that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions and that, to build a communist society, in which the sovereignty of the people is completely achieved, the party of the working class should continuously strengthen the people's government and should continuously and vigorously forge ahead with the three revolutions. This most clearly indicates the road toward accomplishing the cause of communism without deviation.

Communist society is a society in which every social member is totally developed, in which the social and political sovereignty of the people is completely achieved and in which material demands are fully met. When we forge ahead equally with the work of remodeling all members of society into communist-type men and the work of developing production capacity to make distribution according to demand, we can successfully build such a communist society. Accordingly, continuously strengthening the people's government and thoroughly carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical, and cultural -- using them as a political weapon, is the most correct way to build communism.

The theory that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions is a theory based on the great chuche idea and which proceeds from this idea. The chuche idea is the most scientific and revolutionary world outlook in our era and is an immortal banner which leads the people's revolutionary cause to victory. The chuche idea is a correct ideological and theoretical basis for developing all revolutionary theories on communism to meet the nature of social movements. Since this principle is based on the chuche idea, it is great, unique and creative.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's principle is great because it has standardized the program for building communism with the working people as the core.

By developing the revolutionary theory of communism with the working people as a core, we mean to expound the principle of building communism and the lawful nature of this principle. Developing the revolutionary theory on communism with the working people as a core is the lawful demand of the revolutionary movement and is an important yardstick showing the justness and greatness of the revolutionary theory.

All revolutionary and social movements are projects designed to achieve the sovereignty of the people. The people exist at the center of the revolutionary movement in our era. Those who demand communism are the working people. Those who directly build communism are also the working people. Without the working people -- the main force of history -- we cannot imagine the victorious advance and completion of the communist cause. Therefore, all principles and theories on communism should be developed and expounded with the working people as a core. This is the basic requirement for comprehensively systematizing and completing scientific theory on communism in our era.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's principle that adding the three revolutions to the people's government will lead toward achieving communism expounds the lawful nature of building communism based on the principle of society and history that the people are the main force of history.

The people's government -- a major component of the principle -- is a political organization which represents the interests of the working people and which comprehensively provides the people with an independent and creative life. The three revolutions are carried out only by the broad strata of the people. These revolutions are designed to finally liberate them from all legacies of the old society.

The situation shows that, without a chuche-type understanding of the people, we cannot explain the essence of the communist society, the lawful nature of the work of building this society, the nature and duty of the people's government, the contents of the three revolutions and the method of carrying out these revolutions.

The principle overflows with the idea of building the communist society by increasing the position and role of the people, taking them as the core. This shows that the principle is a unique program for building communism, correctly reflecting the desire of the people of our era and the characteristics of the revolutionary movement.

The greatness and unique nature of the principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions rest with the fact that this principle most correctly and comprehensively reflects the principle of building communism and with the lawful nature of this principle.

Communist society is a society in which the sovereignty of the working people is achieved on the highest level and in which this sovereignty is comprehensively guaranteed. To accomplish the communist cause, we, therefore, should carry out the movement to achieve the sovereignty of the working people in all sectors of social life. What is most important in this regard is to strengthen the government to meet the lawful demand for building communism and to correctly solve the question of continuing the revolution.

The principle set forth by the respected and beloved leader gives a perfect solution to this question. The principle expounds that the people's government has become the most powerful weapon to build communism in view of its nature, duty and role. In general, governments of the working class have in common representing the interests of the working people and struggling for them. However, these governments differ in terms of their class foundations and in how they deal with the question of comprehensively providing the people with an independent and creative life.

Just as the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught, the people's government is based on the league of workers and peasants led by the working class and resorts to the united front of the broad strata of the people. This government is a new type revolutionary government. Because of this, the people's government is a most comprehensive political organization representing the interests of all the people. This government is a political weapon to comprehensively provide the working people with an independent and creative life.

Hence its function and role as the representative of the working people's right to independence, the organizer of the creativity of the working masses, the master responsible for the people's livelihood and the protector of the people's independent and creative life.

This clearly shows that the people's government, in its character, mission, function and role, is in accord with the inherent demand of communist construction and that it is a most superior revolutionary government capable of wonderfully serving the working masses to achieve independence as a whole.

The cause of socialism and communism is to be advanced and consummated through protracted class struggle and economic and cultural construction. This being the case, in order to achieve victory for this cause, the government of a state should strengthen its function and role in all fields for realizing the working people's independence, along with suppression of the antagonistic class. This is an indispensable requirement for building a government during the period when the construction of communism is being completed.

Our people's government can most smoothly carry out its mission, as a political weapon, of organizing and leading every aspect of people's life, class struggle and economic and cultural construction and its mission of guaranteeing the people's independent and creative life as a whole.

Starting from this point, the principle clearly elucidates the idea that socialist and communist construction can be completed only when the people's government is strengthened. The principle also newly indicates the conditions for the accomplishment of the cause of communism by formulating the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture as the basic way of building communism.

Correctly elucidating the basic way of building communism is a key factor necessary for leading the communist cause to victory.

Only when this problem is correctly solved can we successfully build communism without deviation. The most important problem in correctly elucidating the basic method of building communism is to determine what kind of revolution we should carry out, in what manner, at every phase of the revolution, especially after the construction of socialism. Success and the fate of socialist and communist construction depends on how to solve this problem.

The principle clearly elucidates ways to realize the working people's independence most rapidly and as a whole by defining the three revolutions as the basic way of building communism. The three revolutions are the basic way of building communism, because they are a firm guarantee for solving most smoothly all the problems arising in the building of communist society.

Communist society is one in which all the members have been remodelled as communist men equipped with revolutionary ideas and consciousness and a high degree of culture and a most advanced society whose conditions for material and cultural life have reached a high enough state to guarantee the working people an independent and creative life.

In order to build such a communist society, we should occupy the ideological and material fortresses of communism by continuing the revolution in the domains of remodelling man, society and nature.

If we direct our efforts mainly to economic construction and neglect work of remolding man, we can neither train the people to be communist men nor carry out economic construction smoothly.

The practical experiences of our era clearly tell us that providing material and technological foundations alone are not enough for building communist society, but we must capture the ideological and material fortresses of communism together.

The three revolutions are themselves a struggle to eradicate the remnants of the old society in the ideological, technical and cultural spheres and to create new communist ideology, technology and culture; this is the content of the continuous revolution in a socialist society. And the three revolutions are a revolutionary way conforming to the nature of the socialist system and the will of the popular masses.

Only when the three revolutions are powerfully pushed ahead can the work of remolding man, transforming society and remaking nature be successfully carried out to capture the ideological and material fortresses of communism and can the complete social equality of the working people be realized. For this, the three revolutions are the essential way of building communism.

This is an original theory which has been discovered through practical experience in communist construction in our era and corroborated by reality. This is a guiding principle to which we should firmly adhere all the time until we construct a communist society in which the independence is completely realized.

The greatness and originality of the proposition that communism means the people's government plus the three revolutions also lie in that it emerged on the basis of the demand of the times and rich practical experiences of our revolution.

All theories and propositions are born, reflecting the demands of the times and experiences of the revolutionary struggle. Thus, the greatness and originality of any revolutionary theory are significantly connected with circumstances of the times and on what premises the theory emerges.

Only theories and propositions which reflect most correctly and widely the demand of the times and the experiences and lessons of the revolutionary struggle and whose justness is corroborated in revolutionary practice will display the boundless and invincible vitality in the people's carrying out the revolutionary cause.

The proposition that communism means the people's government plus the three revolutions is a great idea and theory because it emerged on the basis of the practical demand of our era, in which socialist and communist construction is the order of the day, and the experiences of our revolution in hewing a short-cut to communism.

A long time has passed since the theory of the working class was born, and the revolutionary movement has advanced far. The struggle for socialism and communism in our era is being vigorously waged on a world wide scale. Many countries regard socialist and communist construction as a pressing practical task, not as an ideal of the distant future.

The realities of today demand that revolutionary theory be consummated to the end by strenuously advancing the socialist and communist cause. Possession of such a theory was necessary in order for the party of working class to map out correct struggle lines, tactics and strategies and to lead the people with conviction to the bright communist future.

The proposition, which the respected and beloved leader has recently standardized and put forward, is a new scientific, revolutionary theory which gives the most perfect answer to the demand of the times of our era and to revolutionary practice.

The proposition that communism means the people's government plus the three revolutions is a great one because in particular, it has emerged on the basis of the rich practical experiences of our revolution.

The road along which our people have (?advanced) the socialist and communist cause under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been a glorious path along which we have achieved great victories by vigorously struggling, holding up the banner of the people's government and the three revolutions.

Our people, who made a first step toward the construction of a new society while empty-handed, have reached a very high level, where the complete victory of socialism is near at hand.

Totally because the respected and beloved leader has energetically led us to strengthen the people's government at all times and at every stage and to strengthen the people's government and to vigorously carry out the three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- by using this government as a weapon, our people have achieved such a great victory in their struggle to build socialism and communism.

Earlier, during the days of the anti-Japanese struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had already discovered the form of people's government -- the new-style revolutionary government -- thus setting up the people's revolutionary government at the guerrilla bases. With the people's government as a weapon, he thoroughly carried out the democratic revolution and socialist revolution on the liberated fatherland.

Since the first day of construction of a new society, the respected and beloved leader has had our party and people's government carry out the revolution in the ideological, technological and cultural sectors. After the victory of socialist revolution, he put forth the three revolutions as the basic revolutionary tasks.

Because of such wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader, our people could always firmly defend the gains of revolution under difficult and complicated circumstances and could unfold the new era of prosperity of today, by effecting a fundamental turn in all sectors -- economic, political and cultural.

The proposition that the people's government plus the three revolutions means communism is the theoretical sum total of the historical struggle of our revolution which has advanced victoriously under the banner of the people's government and the three revolutions and is an original revolutionary theory discovered in the practical struggle of our people in socialist and communist construction.

The proposition that communism means the people's government plus the three revolutions is a complete program for communist construction which is entirely new and original in all aspects -- in its ideological and theoretical basis and content and the condition and circumstances of the times in which it emerged.

Historically, there has never before existed a greater theoretical proposition than the proposition that communism means the people's government plus the three revolutions, which contains extraordinarily rich contents and ideas expressed concisely and clearly. The proposition could be standardized and put forth only by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the great thinker and theoretician and man of deeds, who created the theory of communist construction in our era and in endlessly developing and enriching the theory.

2. The great program advanced by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song that communism is the people's government plus the three revolutions carries great significance in carrying out the communist cause to the end.

It is all the people's ardent desire to construct a communist society in which the independent and creative lives of the working masses are completely guaranteed. Indicating the road for people to realize such a desire was the historical task presented by our era. That he has developed and enriched the revolutionary theory of communism by advancing this new program now is an epochal event giving a correct answer to the theoretical and practical problems raised by the times and advancing the socialist and communist cause.

The significance of the presentation of the proposition lies, above all, in that it brightly indicates a clear road along which a party of the working class and people can accomplish the socialist and communist cause without deviation.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught as follows: The people's government and the three revolutions are great banner for communist construction. When we march forward, holding high the banner of the people's government and the three revolutions, we can achieve the complete victory of socialism and advance the bright future of communism.

In order to construct communism -- the grand cause to completely achieve the independence of the popular masses -- we should possess a weapon which we can consistently hold. Furthermore, today's reality, in which the struggle for socialism and communism has reached a new, higher level and the demands of the popular masses aspiring for independence are unprecedented, earnestly demands that the bright road for communist construction be clearly indicated.

This urgent task of our era was brilliantly achieved when the respected and beloved leader set forth a great program that communism was the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions. The road indicated by the principle set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most correct one for building a communist society -- in which the sovereignty of the people is completely achieved -- without deviation.

The struggle to achieve the sovereignty of the people is now being waged by individual countries, and the destiny of the people is being pioneered by individual nations. This being the case, to achieve sovereignty and to successfully build socialism and communism, communists and peoples in individual countries should found and continuously strengthen governments which are firmly based on broad strata of people and should completely liberate people from the yoke of nature and society and all forms of timeworn ideologies and culture by continuing the revolution. Under circumstances in which imperialists and all reactionary forces are desperately running amok to exterminate the people's cause for independence and to block their progress toward socialism and communism, we cannot protect or successfully pioneer the destinies of the working people, the country and the people without strengthening the government of the state and without continuing the revolution.

The work of the party and people of the working class in preserving a victorious revolution and in completing the communist cause depends on how successfully they grasp their states government and how thoroughly they carry out the revolution by resorting to this government.

The principle set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song enables the party and people of the working class to continue the communist revolution to the end without the slightest deviation, twists and turns, stalemate or stagnation by carrying out the work of strengthening the people's government -- a political organization representing the interest of the people -- and by raising the basic demand for grasping the three revolutions in the context of continuing the revolution. Accordingly, when we uphold the people's government and the banner of the three revolutions as indicated by this principle, we can successfully build a communist society by firmly defending the sovereignty of the country and the people and by achieving a great victory in remodeling man, society and nature.

Since the principle set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song reflects the desire of the people for dignity and since it has immortal truth, it has attracted the people and has become an immortal banner accelerating the revolutionary change of the era of independence. With the appearance of this great principle, the people, including the working class, have come to possess a powerful weapon to build a communist society under a correct banner. Thus, with firm confidence and lofty revolutionary zeal, they have been able to vigorously accelerate a worthwhile advance movement along a straight road to build the paradise of the people.

The significance of the principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions lies in the fact that, by comprehensively describing the appearance of the future communist society, it has further developed and enriched the revolutionary chuche theory on communism.

The important issue in establishing the theory on communism is to clear up questions concerning the future communist society in a scientific manner. With the correct solution of this issue, the people can willingly build a communist society with a clear aim, hope and confidence.

By setting forth the principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has integrated all principles and theories on communism and developed them into one having new contents.

The important feature of the principle put forward by the respected and beloved leader is that it gives a perfect solution to the politics and factors of social development in a communist society based on a scientific analysis of the features of the communist society of the future and the sociopolitical relationships to be established there.

Giving a correct answer to the politics and the factors of social development in the future communist society is of very great significance in comprehensively understanding communist society. With a correct solution to this question, the party and state of the working class can set a clear goal and vigorously forge ahead with the struggle to achieve it.

In his work, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught that politics exist in all societies. By this, he meant that in a communist society politics exist along with political organizations, bodies designed to conduct politics. The great leader then expounded that in a scientific manner, after the construction of communism, the struggle to abandon timeworn things aid to create new things will continue in the ideological and technical sectors because the work of training and indoctrinating men, of reforming social relations and of conquering nature should continue and that, through this struggle, society will continuously develop. This is a scientific solution to a question of theory which has not previously been clarified and is a pioneering event in the development of the theory of communism.

Since the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has most correctly solved the question concerning politics and the factor of social development in communist society, the chuche-based revolutionary theory on communism has been further developed and enriched, and the people have come to have a clearer idea of the future of communism. Thus, they have been able to more resolutely rise in the struggle to build an ideal society in which sovereignty is completely achieved, having a clear view not only of the present and but also of the future of communism. Because of this, the principle has become a powerful ideological and theoretical weapon helping the people become confident and encouraging their struggle not only in the present era but also throughout the entire period of building socialism and communism.

Indeed, the principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions is a bright lighthouse vigorously encouraging the struggle of the people to achieve socialism and communism and leading them to a great victory. The respected and beloved leader's setting forth of this great principle is another immortal contribution to the development of the revolutionary theory on communism and to the achievement of the cause for sovereignty.

The respected and beloved leader's great achievements while devoting his lifetime to the struggle to lead the cause of the people for independence to victory with profound wisdom and great revolutionary activism will shine forever with the victorious advance of the communist cause, and the significance of the principle will become greater with each passing day.

3. Brilliantly implementing the great program that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions is the most important revolution duty assigned our party and people today. The struggle to materialize the principle set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a very vast and sacred historic task of building the paradise of communism in which the sovereignty of the people is completely achieved. The struggle to accomplish this cause is by no means simple. The road of achieving this cause will face many difficult and complicated tasks. However, our people have a firm conviction that they can readily implement the program for building communism set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Such a conviction held by our people has been unswervingly strengthened through the protracted, ordeal-ridden practical struggle over the course of our revolution.

Because our glorious party has led the Korean revolution along a single, victorious road, our people have the firm conviction that they can brilliantly implement the program for building communism set forth by respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The chuche revolutionary cause has traversed a victorious, glorious and proud road in our country under the leadership of our party, and this cause can be finally completed only under the leadership of our party.

Our party is assigned a weighty, historic task of implementing to the end the program for building communism set forth by the respected and beloved leader. It has invincible might to successfully accomplish this task. The greatness and invincible might of our party in brilliantly implementing the program of communism rests with the fact that, regarding the chuche idea as the leading guideline, it has vigorously struggled to achieve the final victory of this idea.

The work of adding the people's government to the three revolutions is basically the struggle to accomplish the cause of communism under the banner of the chuche idea. Only when we uphold the banner of the chuche idea, therefore, can we brilliantly carry out this work.

Based on the lawful nature of the construction of communism and on the historic experience of our revolution, our party has set forth the revolutionary slogan for imbuing society with the chuche idea and has led the struggle to achieve this end. All the ideological and theoretical activities of our party in building socialism and communism consistently proceed from the chuche idea and aim at achieving the overall victory of the chuche idea.

In carrying out its activities, our party has always assumed a chuche-type stand and has solved in our style all theoretical and practical questions in building the government and in carrying out the three revolutions to meet the situation in our country and the desire of our people. Thanks to the positive activities of our party, the chuche idea has been brilliantly materialized in building the government and in all sectors of social life, and the independent, creative life of the working people has blossomed as a whole.

Such chuche-type leadership on the part of our party is a firm guarantee for implementing the great program for building communism. The greatness and invincible might of our party in brilliantly implementing the program for building communism rests with the fact that it has been strengthened and tested in grim struggles and that it has attained rich experiences and achievements. Emerging from the deep and strong roots of the anti-Japanese revolution, our party has victoriously led our revolution, overcoming all difficulties and trials under immeasurably difficult and complicated circumstances.

Because of its accuracy and consistency in formulating lines and policies and because of its boldness and persistence in the struggle to implement these lines and policies, our party has become a most powerful party for which no task is impossible. In particular, as the guiding force of the proletarian dictatorial system, our party has firmly guaranteed the party's leadership of the people's government and has assisted in making an epochal advance in carrying out the three revolutions.

The experiences and achievements our party has attained in strengthening the people's government and in accelerating the three revolutions are very great. They are precious assets which are of immortal significance in accomplishing the communist cause.

Led by our party, which is endlessly loyal to the revolutionary cause of the working class and which has tested leadership, our people will brilliantly implement the program for building communism, overcoming all storms and trials.

Upholding the great program set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and vigorously struggling following the leadership of the party center, we should accelerate the revolution and construction and should surely build the paradise of communism in the fatherland.

The most important thing in implementing the chuche-based program for building communism under the leadership of the party is to more firmly consolidate the people's government and increase its role in various ways.

Just as the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has made clear, our people's government not only is the government which met the stage of the democratic and socialist revolutions but also is a most superior government which suits the period of building socialism and communism today. By having the pride to possess this revolutionary government and by continuously strengthening the people's government, we would help this government further demonstrate its might and vitality.

Thoroughly implementing the line of our party for the three revolutions is an important requirement for brilliantly implementing the chuche-based program for building communism. The three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural -- are the general line for building communism and a strategic policy consistently pursued by our party.

Only when we firmly grasp and thoroughly implement the line for the three revolutions, just as we did in the past, can we achieve a great victory in revolution and construction and expedite the final victory of the chuche cause. Upholding the line of the party for the three revolutions, we should devote everything to the struggle to implement this line. In particular, we should develop the three revolutions team movement and the movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions, initiated and led by our party.

The principle that communism is the sum of the people's government and the three revolutions is a great revolutionary program for accomplishing the cause of communism under the banner of the chuche idea. It is a source of matchless honor and happiness of our people to take the lead in pioneering the bright future of communism, following the road indicated by this great principle. We will brilliantly accomplish the cause of communism by firmly uniting around the party Central Committee led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and by continuously and strenuously advancing under the banner of the people's government and the three revolutions.

HERALD SPECULATES ON KIM IL-SONG'S BEIJING VISIT

SK160123 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 16 Sep 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Kim Il-song's Beijing Visit"]

[Text] North Korea's Kim Il-song is reportedly embarking on a trip to Beijing today. Timed to closely follow the 12th Congress of the Chinese Communist Party that ended last weekend, Kim's visit with the new Chinese leadership carries many political implications for the shifting tangle of relationships among communist governments in Northeast Asia.

With few specifics of his visit with his big brother available to us, it is hard to determine exactly what led to the current trip, the first since seven years ago (in April 1975) when he talked with the two late ideological and revolutionary meteors -- Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai. It will not, however, be too wild to guess that three things are heavy on the mind of the North Korean boss while crossing the Yalu River.

The first is how to bring the "revisionist" and increasingly liberal leaders in Beijing to approve, at least tacitly, of his attempt at effecting a hereditary succession of power through his son, Kim Chong-il. Open blessings are hard to come by; yet, quiet connivance may be successfully sought after.

Theoretically Beijing would find it difficult to support Pyongyang's bid for dynastic succession to perpetuate the reign of the Kim clan now that the former has abolished the exalted post of party chairman to prevent one-man rule by a despot and ensure a sort of collective leadership. The Chinese obviously moved to forestall the recurrence of a personality cult and the despotism of a supreme leader like the late Mao.

As a matter of practice, however, China cannot force its version of liberalized one-party government upon Pyongyang lest such action should antagonize and estrange that spoiled and wayward little brother. Beijing lost Vietnam to the Russians and it is anxious to keep North Korea in its fold even at the price of some coddling.

As for Kim, he is in vital need of Chinese consent to his unpopular heirship in order to placate and subdue internal opposition to his leadership. Winning China over to its side would also make it easier to reduce possible pressure from the Soviet Union. Appeals for more economic and military aid and political support to recover from diplomatic setbacks are two other main objectives of Kim's journey to Beijing. The shattered economy of North Korea is in need of a shot in the arm. It also wants modern military hardware to replenish its aggressive war machine.

The successful diplomatic tour of President Chon Tu-hwan through many parts of the world and Seoul's impressive rise in international stature as evidenced by the hosting of the 1988 Olympics got on Kim's nerves. Thus, he is groping for a way out by making a trip to Beijing to beg for help and inspiration.

China has its hands full with the task of economic modernization and possibly mending its fences with Moscow. It can hardly afford to involve itself much in succoring or emboldening Kim Il-song. Encouraging his militarism and aberrance would only destabilize Northeast Asia.

NORTH KOREAN DEFECTOR HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE

SK160309 Seoul YONHAP in English 0220 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 16 (YONHAP) -- Life in North Korea is a nightmare for its residents who are subjected to over 15 hours of forced labor a day, a defector from North Korea divulged Thursday.

Speaking at a news conference here, Yi Hyon-chu, 19, a former coal miner in North Korea, also said that the communist country is busy with war preparations, conducting preliminary shooting exercises at homes. Yi said North Korea has seen suffering from a growing shortage of food and consumer goods since 1979 and that this has led to frequent thefts in northern society. Yi defected to South Korea Aug. 19 by crossing a river with the aid of an empty plastic oil container.

Yi said top priority in the education of North Korean youths is the idolatry of Kim Il-song, ruler of the country since 1945. He told reporters that his dream has been to "full my stomach and travel where I want to go," indicating that North Koreans are not allowed to travel without getting permission from the authorities. Yi also spoke of anti-Americanism in North Korea, citing an elementary school math problem which asks, "How many would remain if seven of 10 Americans were killed by a hand grenade." Young North Koreans are also learning antagonism against Americans and South Koreans through educational films whose titles include "We Accuse American Imperialists" and "Homeland Liberation War" (Korean war).

Looking at thriving apartment complexes in Seoul and a variety of commodities displayed at downtown department stores, he said, "I feel I was betrayed by North Korean authorities."

ROK, FRENCH TRADE MINISTERS DISCUSS COOPERATION

SK140121 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 14 Sep 82 p 2

[Text] Visiting French Minister of External Trade Michel Jobert yesterday met with his Korean counterpart Kim Tong-hui to discuss in detail matters of mutual concern pending between Korea and France in the fields of trade and economic cooperation.

The french minister, who flew into Seoul Sunday for a three-day official visit at the invitation of Minister of Commerce and Industry Kim, was reported to have expressed the French Government's willingness to participate in Korea's proposed development projects including nuclear power plants, tidal water power stations and a Seoul-Pusan express railway system, among other things.

Among other projects to which the French Government expressed a growing interest in the meeting are the construction of Korea's second integrated steel mill, the Seoul and Pusan subway system and Seoul sewage disposal terminal, according to the ministry sources. The Korean-side, meanwhile, asked France to ease its trade protectionist measures against Korean-made textile goods, footwear and TV sets, among others, during the bilateral commerce ministerial meeting, the sources said.

Following the two-hour meeting with Minister Kim, French Minister Jobert had a working luncheon with Kim during which more frank views on ways to promote two-way trade and economic cooperation between Korea and France were discussed.

Minister Kim, welcoming Minister Jobert and his party to Korea, said in his luncheon speech that the future of Franco-Korean economic collaboration is brighter than ever before. "For centuries France has played a leading and progressive role in world affairs. Among the developing nations in particular, France commands a degree of influence and respect perhaps unmatched by any other country," he said. He then asked the French Republic to "be a worthy example in this time of world recession" expressing his confidence that the spirit of French statesmanship will rise above temporary concerns and help lead the world toward a stronger and more stable international trading partners.

In the meantime, Minister Jobert had a meeting with French expatriate businessmen in Seoul late in the evening at the French Embassy. He is scheduled to pay a series of visits to the ministers of foreign affairs and transportation and other leading figures today before leaving here late in the afternoon.

Members of the official delegation include Gabriel Peronner, special sdvisor to the minister; Bertrand Schneiter, deputy director general of external trade relations of the Ministry of Economy and Finance; Christian Charret, technical advisor; Edouard Valensi, advisor; and Jacques Mouton, assistant director of the Department of International Affairs of the Ministry of Industry.

Departure Comments

SK141214 Seoul YONHAP in English 1035 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 14 (YONHAP) -- French External Trade Minister Michel Jobert said here Tuesday that French industry is willing to undertake French-South Korean joint ventures for the manufacture of French-licensed equipment in Korea, especially for export to third countries.

Speaking at a news conference prior to his departure following a two-day official visit, Jobert cited sewage processing, production of Renault (state-owned French automobile manufacturer) trucks, and bullet trains as potential areas for joint ventures.

France has been vying with Japan for the sale of bullet trains for South Korea's projected fast-speed railway between Seoul and Taejon, 165 kilometers south of Seoul, with the Korean Government's decision still pending. Jobert's proposal of technology transfer is considered a fresh incentive for Korea's decision makers, local observers said.

Jobert, one of the four senior ministers in the French Cabinet and former foreign minister under President George Pompidou, recalled his first visit to Korea in 1977 as a private citizen, saying that the opening of a French school in Seoul attests to the growing cooperation between Korea and France. "French-Korean exchanges these days are quite different from those of five years ago. French industry is increasingly attracted by Korea's potential," Jobert said.

Responding to a reporter's question, the French minister refused to commit himself to supporting Korea during the forthcoming negotiations at the European Economic Community headquarters in Brussels on new textile export quotas for Korea, saying that France cannot override EEC rules by importing more textiles from Korea than other EEC nations.

Jobert noted that South Korea's atomic power plants Nos. 9 and 10, which use French models, will be inaugurated within a few weeks, and said the share of Korean industry participation in the project is 30 percent, compared with an average of five percent in the country's other nuclear power plants using either American or Canadian technology.

Jobert said his current visit will not have any decisive bearing on President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Korea already planned for next year, but said he hoped that the proposed exchange of visits between South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan and his French counterpart will be realized at an early date.

Jobert, who met with President Chon, Commerce and Industry Minister Kim Tong-hui, and other senior officials of the Korean Government, left Seoul Tuesday afternoon.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER MEETS MALAYSIA'S MUSA HITAM

SK160155 Seoul YONHAP in English 0122 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 16 (YONHAP) -- Korea and Malaysia have agreed on the need for a barter system to increase two-way trade. Korean Deputy Premier Kim and his Malaysian counterpart Musa Hitam also agreed in a meeting Wednesday to conclude pacts concerning binational aviation at an early date and to step up technological exchanges. In addition, the Malaysian official asked for Seoul's cooperation in the inauguration of thrice-weekly flights by the Malaysian Airline System (MAS) on the Seoul-Kuala Lumpur route to which Kim pledged sympathetic consideration.

During the meeting at Kim's office, the Korean deputy premier asked for the Malaysian Government's cooperation to rectify Seoul's ever-increasing trade deficit with Kuala Lumpur. The Malaysian official responded favorably to the request, saying that the growing number of Korean workers in Malaysia and the imports of Korean-made construction equipment will help balance two-way trade.

The Malaysian official arrived in Seoul earlier in the day for a five-day visit at Kim's invitation.

TECHNOLOGICAL COOPERATION WITH MALAYSIA SOUGHT

SK160632 Seoul YONHAP in English 0616 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 16 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government is seeking concrete ways to cooperate with Malaysia in technological fields in an effort to boost bilateral ties as expressed in the Southeast Asian nation's "look East" policy. Government sources said Thursday that consultations were under way among pertinent ministries to select institutes that would receive Malaysian trainees in shipbuilding, construction, energy and small and medium industry fields.

The consultations came after the Malaysian Government has expressed the hope that Korea could accept a group of 60 Malaysians for training in those sectors, according to the sources.

Also under consideration by the government are the dispatch of Korean-language instructors to Kuala Lumpur, establishing of a technology training center in a Malaysian college of engineering and on-the-job training for Malaysians for the construction of the projected Penang bridge, they said.

COURT UPHOLDS 1-YEAR PRISON TERM ON DISSIDENT

SK160328 Seoul YONHAP in English 0320 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 16 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's Supreme Court Thursday turned down an appeal by a former dissident editor of a monthly magazine and upheld the original sentence of one year in prison.

Kim Sung-kyun, 43, a staff editor of now-defunct SASANGGYE, was indicated in June 1970 on a charge of printing an anti-government poem in the magazine's May issue. Also indicted were two other staff members and the writer of the poem, Kim Chi-ha, 41. The poem, "Ochok" (Five Thieves), satirically condemned the corruptness and luxury of "high class" people at the era.

Kim, released on bail in September 1970, was put to prison again in January 1978 and sentenced to one year in prison with a stay of execution for two years.

PAPER URGES 'PROGRESSIVE CHANGES' IN LEGISLATURE

SK100824 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 8 Sep 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Lively Parliamentary Activities and Mutual Complement -- Citizens' Expectation on Preparations for the Coming National Assembly Session by the Ruling and Opposition Parties"]

[Text] The season of politics is drawing near. The 90-day regular session of the National Assembly will begin from 20 September. Accordingly, the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], the Democratic Korea Party [DKP], and the Korea National Party [KNP] are now reportedly in full swing preparing for the coming session.

In the operation of the coming National Assembly regular session, we may see some changes from its operations last year. We hope that the National Assembly will make some progressive changes, not backward ones, and that it will reflect people's opinion in a more refined manner. As for the last regular session, it was the first one which was held after the inauguration of the 5th republic and opened with representatives, 80 percent of whom were elected as lawmakers for the first time. However, we believe all of them have now gained experience in politics and have had enough self-examination by now.

It is in these circumstances that President Chon Tu-hwan, who is DJP President, on the afternoon of 6 September invited all DJP lawmakers to Chongwadae and hosted a tea party for them. On the occasion, President Chon reportedly had a friendly conversation with those present at the party. It has been reported that he made many remarks on the political posture that the party should adopt in making preparations for the coming National Assembly session. Saying that the DJP must have acquired a full understanding of the posture and tactics of the ruling party and of the role of its individual members, President Chon reportedly emphasized that there must be no creation of factions or disintegration.

As to the relations between the ruling party and opposition parties, he reportedly urged that trivial issues not be made a political issue, that there not be extremes in confrontation and that there be no repetition of such bad practices of the past era as all-or-nothing confrontation. In addition, he reportedly said that trying to win popularity through statements at the National Assembly session is an evil practice of the former politicians. In the former part of his remarks, we think he stressed the complementary relations between the ruling party and opposition parties and meant that national interest, not the interest of political parties, must come first. His remarks on lawmakers trying to win popularity remind us of his determination for a single-term presidency. We think that he implicitly emphasized the principle that the politics of democracy is politics by the people's opinion.

We can say that, when the lawmakers of the ruling party make a firm determination for single-term service by upholding the intent of the president of their party and consider the future of the nation as more important than their popularity, we will see clear progress in the work of improving the political atmosphere. To this end, the ruling party, we have learned, has decided to actively seek legislation on lawmakers at the coming National Assembly session. In this regard, we expect bold and progressive legislative activities at the forthcoming National Assembly session.

For instance, in the revision of the family court procedures act, which should be accomplished for the promotion of the social status of women and to meet the demands of the trend of the times, lawmakers must not fear insignificant opposition of those who elected them. Instead, they must demonstrate their futuristic and guiding role. We think it is entirely appropriate that the ruling party is trying to prevent imprudent legislation and to guarantee sincerity in the activities of the Standing Committees of the National Assembly.

Meanwhile, the DKP is reportedly going to make concentrated efforts at the forthcoming session to galvanize politics and to give priority to political legislation. At the same time, it will reportedly urge the government to stop coming out with rash economic measures and will seek policies aimed at protecting the livelihood of the common citizens.

As for the KNP, it will reportedly struggle to keep the government budget for the next year at the level of this year and, as follow-up measures to the Chongwadae talks held last 16 June, will seek the formation of a special committee for political development, a special committee for emergency economic measures and an investigative committee for the improvement of elections systems.

We think it is entirely appropriate that the opposition parties are seeking to galvanize politics and to attach importance to the economy. However, while concentrating on political legislation, they must not handle the deliberation of the government budget rashly or enact any imprudent legislation. We think it is inevitable to consider the limits in National Assembly operations and to consider its efficient operation at the same time.

Finally, we think that there should be an epochal improvement in the government attitude at the National Assembly interpellations. The government has voluntarily informed the National Assembly of follow-up steps taken by the ministries concerned for matters dealt with at the interpellations of the National Assembly extraordinary session held last 7 July. At the forthcoming National Assembly session, too, the government must show its sincerity toward the legislative body.

We hope that the ruling party and the opposition parties, and the legislative branch and the executive branch establish complementary relations in which they respect and understand each other. This is because we believe that affirmative new practice in this regard will contribute to the Koreanization of democracy.

ASPECTS OF PROPOSED 1983 BUDGET BILL DISCUSSED

SK130315 Seoul YONHAP in English 0258 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] Seoul, Sep 13 (YONHAP) -- The government hopes to spend 3.5 trillion won (4.7 billion U.S. dollars) or 32.8 percent of the budget total of 10.5 trillion won, in fiscal 1983 on defense. A budget bill for next year released Monday showed that the budget, which is an increase of 9.8 percent from this year, will be derived from 10 trillion won in tax revenues and 500 billion won from the issuance of national bonds. (One U.S. dollar is currently worth about 740 won.)

Next year's per capita tax burden will rise by 5,000 won from this year's 260,200 won to 265,200 won. Nearly 1.8 trillion won will be spent on economic development projects, up 5.7 percent from this year, and 649.4 billion won will be spent on social development projects, up 8.1 percent.

While domestic tax revenues next year are estimated to increase by seven percent to nearly six trillion won, customs duties and defense taxes will drop by 2.5 and 8.3 percent, respectively, to 1.3 trillion won each. This is necessary because of the limited tax revenue sources caused by the government's price stabilization policy, an Economic Planning Board official explained.

According to the official, next year's budget was worked out on the assumption that wholesale prices across the country would rise by five percent, commodity shipments overseas would reach 25 to 25.5 billion dollars, Korea's international payments deficits would amount to 1.5 billion dollars and the national economy would grow by 7.5 percent.

The budget bill will be submitted to the National Assembly early next month for approval after consultations between the government and the ruling Democratic Justice Party.

KOREA TIMES Editorial

SK140117 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 14 Sep 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Belt-Tightening Budget"]

[Text] The government has fixed a general budget bill for next year which reflects a stringent tight-financing policy and accordingly features retrenchment in several respects.

The budget scale is set to surpass the 10 trillion won level, the largest in the nation's history. But then, its increase rate over the previous year's scale is the lowest since 1973. The 9.8 percent increase envisioned for next year marks only about a half of the current year's, which itself registered a low for years. Moreover, it will be the first deficit budget in more than two decades, with national bonds amounting to 550 billion won set to be issued to cover the red ink, an expedient which many past spending bills deliberately shunned despite their obvious deficit-causing factors.

What is notable about these aspects is that they underline the realistic and straightforward approach the government is taking to tide over pressing economic hardships, primarily attributable to recessions on both the domestic and global scenes, by leading the van in a national drive for austerity and thrift.

A budget deficit or tight financing is not an isolated phenomenon in today's international community. Advanced countries like the United States and Japan -- and for that matter a number of smaller countries -- are stricken by serious fiscal problems in one form or another, particularly revenue short-falls due to the prolonging recession. Under the prevailing circumstances, belt tightening is unavoidable and indeed imperative. In this regard, the 1983 budget bill may be taken as an inevitable choice to sustain economic stability.

Based on the assumption that next year will see an economic growth rate of 7.5 percent and wholesale price hikes will be pegged at 5 percent, with exports amounting to $25 billion or a little more, the bill is clearly in pursuance of less growth and low inflation. Besides the slackening tax revenues, which in the aggregate are to increase by only 3.6 percent over this year, the bill includes other sizable constraints lessening flexibility in its management.

That is, over 70 percent of the total expenditures is bound to be channeled to "sanctuaries" -- about one-third or 6 percent of the gross national product to national defense and the rest earmarked either as subsidies for education and provincial administrations or as wages for public servants.

For all its restraints, the spending bill, compiled for the first time according to the so-called "zero base" budgeting formula, envisages due investments on a selective basis. Outstanding among them are spendings on social development programs including social welfare, public health and environmental improvement schemes -- a highlight that underscores one of the government's pronounced targets of building a welfare state.

In the economic development sector, emphasis is placed on public projects designed to effect "balanced development" among provinces, ranging from the expansion of infrastructures to renovation of agro-fishery industries.

In addition to the two policy goals, the bill is also aimed, directly or indirectly, at reinvigorating business and economic performance, maximizing investment effects, keeping a tight lid on public utility rates and thus achieving moderate yet viable economic growth based on stability, especially that of commodity prices.

Nonetheless, the budget bill appears to contain some potential drawbacks -- for instance, what would happen should the national economic growth next year fall short of the projected 7.5 percent -- and room for a realignment of the investment priority order as well as for further cuts in spending. These and other problems are hoped to be properly dealt with and settled in the forthcoming deliberation by the National Assembly, to which the bill will be submitted shortly.

KUFNCD MEETING WELCOMES AAPSO DELEGATION

BK151514 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] At 1430 on 15 September the KUFNCD National Council organized a grand meeting at the Bassac riverfront theater hall to welcome the visiting AAPSO delegation led by Vice Chairman Abdul Aziz.

On the presidium of the meeting were, among others, Comrade Men Chhan, acting secretary general of the Council of State and vice chairman of the KUFNCD National Council; Comrade Heng Teav, member of the Council of State and vice chairman of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions; Comrade Min Khin, acting secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council; Comrade Phat Phanu, vice chairman of the Kampuchean AAPSO Committee; and representatives of Sri Lanka, Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union, India, Mongolia, Afghanistan, South Yemen, Thailand and the Philippines. A large crowd of cadres, personnel and workers form various central ministries and offices and representatives of ethnic groups, the Buddhist clergy and local population attended the meeting. Also present were members of the diplomatic corps from friendly countries accredited to Kampuchea.

In his speech at the meeting, Comrade Men Chhan, acting secretary general of the Council of State, warmly greeted the AAPSO delegation, which is visiting the PRK while bringing along its warm support for the just cause of the Kampuchean people. Comrade Men Chhan also reiterated the crimes of genocide committed by the Pol Pot traitors -- lackeys of Beijing expansionism -- against the Kampuchean people for more than 3 years. He also talked about the revival of the Kampuchean people under the correct leadership of the party and government of the PRK -- the sole authentic and legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people.

Afterwards, the meeting participants attentively listened to the speeches by the representatives of the Sri Lankan, Vietnamese, Lao, Soviet, Indian, Mongolian Afghan, South Yemeni, Philippine and Thai delegations. In all these speeches, full support was expressed for the just struggle of the Kampuchean people in restoring and building their nation. The speakers also expressed support for the peace proposals of the three Indochinese countries put forward at the sixth Indochinese foreign minsiters conference. Before concluding their speeches, the speakers invariably condemned the traitorous Pol Pot gang, Beijing expanionists and U.S. imperialists and promised to do their best to demand that the United Nations expel Pol Pot and hand over the Kampuchean seat to the PRK.

In conclusion, head of the delegation Abdul Aziz read the communique of AAPSO, the main points of which deal with support for the PRK.

CHEA SIM GREETS BULGARIAN LIBERATION DAY

BK120726 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Greetings message from Chea Sim, chairman of the KUFNCD National Council, to Pencho Kubadinski, chairman of the Bulgarian Fatherland Front, on the 38th anniversary of Bulgaria's liberation day -- date not given]

[Text] For the past 38 years, the valiant and courageous Bulgarian people have strived successfully to surmount all difficulties. They have now entered a socialist era which is developing in all fields, thus enabling their prestige to soar even higher in the international arena.

The Kampuchean people enthusiastically welcome all victories scored by the Bulgarian people. They constitute a great impetus for our movement to rebuild and make our nation develop vigorously after suffering the great destruction caused by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, lackey of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists. By adhering firmly to the spirit of socialist proletarian internationalism, the Bulgarian people are continuing to give mental and material support to the Kampuchean people.

On this occasion, I would like to express sincere and most profound thanks to the Bulgarian party, front and people.
